In central Europe, masses of displaced persons present grave problems, along with the transfer of large numbers from one zone of Germany to another, and from Austria and Czechoslovakia to Germany.

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is helping military authorities with this problem and in the Balkans, Poland, Italy and Greece the full U.N.R.R.A. program is being carried out to prevent starvation and aid recovery.

As Europe struggles with its economic and political legacies of war, the major Nazi war criminals, indicted in unprecedented fashion by Britain, the United States, Russia and France, are on trial for their lives before the International Military Tribunal.

The criminals of Belsen concentration camp have been convicted and war trials go on at various levels, bringing the Nazis and their accomplices to justice.

NO TURKEY DINNERS FOR GERMAN CAPTIVES

Lethbridge, Alta., Dec. 18 — (CP)— German captives at the large prisoner of war camp here are not going to feast on turkey dinners and other luxuries on Christmas Day this year as they have been doing every Christmas since the first prisoners of war were brought to Canada in the summer of 1940, camp authorities told the Lethbridge Herald yesterday.

Authorities said this Christmas the captives will receive exactly the same reduced rations they have been receiving for months and will not be permitted to purchase through their canteen any foodstuffs or goods unless these are in surplus supply on the civilian market.

"They very definitely will not be permitted to buy any turkeys," but may be permitted to buy some geese with part of their canteen profits, provided there is a surplus."

BRITISH TORIES TAKE OFFENSIVE AGAINST LABOR

Foresee Political Excitement at New High During 1946 as Conservatives Try Comeback

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—The Conservative party, thoroughly trounced by Labor in the July general election, is on the offensive again. Around Whitehall they say the political excitement of 1946 will be at a pitch unequalled for many years.

On the morrow of a crowning victory in war, the electorate turned out of office the Conservative "caretaker" administration and replaced it with a Labor government secure in a majority such as the party never enjoyed before.

Winston Churchill, left with 196 members in a Commons of 640 members, had been the symbol of British unity and will-to-win during the war. Even some Labor supporters after the election admitted their regret that he had to take a secondary role in the world reconstruction.

The 393 Labor members of the new house were under the leadership of Clement R. Attlee, a bald, studious, careful man — in almost every way a contrast to colorful Churchill for whom he was deputy prime minister in a coalition government which served in the darkest days of the war. Their parting came May 23 when, after five years in power, the Conservative-dominated coalition ended and the "caretaker" government was formed to carry on without Labor or Liberal support.

On May 18 Mr. Churchill suggested to leaders of the other parties that the coalition continue until the war with Japan ended. But the Labor party said it could not agree. Mr. Churchill gave his resignation to the King May 23.

Gained 209 Seats

On June 25 1,683 candidates were nominated, the government having 626 and Labor 603, the greatest number it ever placed before the electorate. The Liberal party, which had 18 members in the House, named 307 candidates.

The three major parties were agreed on vigorous prosecution of the war against Japan, collaboration with the United States and Russia, maintenance of the unity of the British Commonwealth and Empire, and early implementation of social security measures.

Labor, however, advocated nationalization of coal, gas and electrical industries, iron and steel, inland transport and the Bank of England. Conservative candidates spoke for freedom of enterprise and Mr. Churchill said Britain's greatness was built "on character and daring, not a docility to a state machine."

When the 25,037,107 votes were counted Labor had made a net gain of 209 Commons seats and the Conservatives had lost 172. Four cabinet ministers — D. S. Amery, secretary of state for India; Sir James Grigg, secretary for war; Brendan Bracken, First Lord of the Admiralty and Harold Macmillan, secretary for air — were defeated although Mr. Bracken and Mr. Macmillan were returned at subsequent by-elections.

Mr. Attlee, who at once supplanted Mr. Churchill as Britain's spokesman at the Berlin "Big Three" conference with President Truman and Generalissimo Stalin, chose his cabinet from men with long parliamentary experience. Among the most prominent were Ernest Bevin, made foreign secretary; Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council; Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade; A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty; and Hugh Dalton Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mr. Churchill's deputy on the opposition benches is Anthony Eden his former foreign secretary.

Parliament Studied International, Domestic Problems of Transition Period in Three Months Session

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 19 — (CP)—With some misgivings, the 20th Parliament of Canada at its first session put the country solidly into the network of agencies for permanent international co-operation being built up under the auspices of the United Nations.

The first post-war session of Canada's first post-war Parliament lasted approximately 14 weeks and while debates on domestic problems occupied a great portion of the time a large part of the serious attention of members was directed to international questions and their bearing on Canada.

International agreements ratified included the United Nations Charter from the San Francisco Conference; the monetary agreements for creation of a currency stabilization fund and an international bank for reconstruction and development from the Bretton Woods Conference, civil aviation agreements from the Chicago Conference and the food and agriculture agreement from the Hot Springs Conference.

There was no lack of support for the ideal of international co-operation in the maintenance of peace and the promotion of economic conditions which make for peace, the ideals of the proposed international organizations. There was a good deal of doubt about the perfection of the proposed organizations and about the ability and intentions of the nations to make them work.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, reporting on his trip overseas, discussions with President Truman and general aspects of Canada's external relations, said it had been made clear to other countries that the Dominion expected to be regarded as one of the principals in peace settlements.

While it had not been decided whether it would be advisable for Canada to join the proposed Pacific Regional Council, the joint Canada-United States defence board which came into being during the war was to be continued.

On the whole, except for an end-of-session demonstration by the Social Credit party against the monetary agreements, parliament accepted all the agreements as steps in the right direction and as the best that could be obtained under present conditions.

Since it was a new parliament there was a new speaker and the choice fell on Dr. Gaspard Fauteux (L—Montreal—St. Mary's). There also was a new leader of the official opposition, John Bracken, who took his seat in the House for the first time at the head of a strengthened Progressive Conservative Party.

C.C.F. Stronger

The C.C.F. party was stronger than ever, but under the leadership of M. J. Coldwell who headed it in the previous parliament. The Social Credit party, slightly stronger than in the last parliament, had a new leader, Solon Low, new to parliament but trained in a provincial legislature.

The strengthened opposition, performance of some able new men, particularly war veterans, and the government's narrow over-all majority marked the new parliament and those of the last 10 years and gave new interest to debates.

Despite its narrow majority the government was never in serious danger of votes of which there were many during the session. Usually some independents and all or some of the members of one or more opposition groups voted with the Liberals.

Two major debates occupied most of the time of the session—the Speech from the Throne which lasted nearly a month, and the war expenditures and demobilization bill which lasted with many interruptions from Sept. 28 to Nov. 23.

House Kept Informed

Two conditions in the country, labor unrest and the housing shortage frequently reflected themselves in the House debates. During the greater part of the session the Fork strike at Windsor was in progress. Labor Minister Mitchell was questioned frequently and kept the House informed on efforts to settle the strike.

The housing question came up on estimates from time-to-time and on amendments to housing legislation, particularly an act to create a central mortgage and housing corporation to administer the housing legislation and carry on mortgage rediscount operations.

Opposition demands for an end to wartime regimentation and the government's powers to make sweeping regulations by Order-in-Council were vigorous.

They were presented at intervals throughout the session and particularly on the emergency powers bill designed to carry on special powers after the War Measures Act goes out of operation. Following severe criticism of the measure it was extensively redrafted by the government with a view to confining the powers more specifically to certain subjects.

Ask For Credit

Parliament enlarged the government's lending powers so far as financing sale of Canadian products abroad under the Export Credits Insurance Act were concerned and heard from the government that it will be asked at the next session to approve a substantial credit to Britain.

Two important questions on the sessional program were left over until next session because of lack of time. They were the selection of a distinctive flag and revision of the law or citizenship and nationality.

Both the House of Commons and the Senate adopted a resolution approving a distinctive flag in principle. They set up a joint committee, but the committee did not get down to work in time and the matter was left over.

The item of most direct personal interest to members was the provision of an extra allowance of $2,000 to enable them to meet their expenses. For the private members of the Commons the allowance was tax-free, but for Senators, cabinet ministers and the leader of the opposition it is subject to income tax.

V.O.N. Holds Monthly Meeting

The December board meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held Tuesday night in the Chamber of Commerce. The president, Mr. Norman Edwards, presided.

The nurse's report was given by Miss V. Adair, the nurse-in-charge who stated that 482 visits had been made to all patients during the month: 216 to mothers and babies, 29 visits to expectant mothers, 119 to medical and surgical cases, 70 visits to the chronically ill and 67 visits to various types of nursing service. Sixty-three new patients were admitted in the month.

Five Child Health Conferences were held with a total attendance of 114 babies; one toxoid clinic with 147 children present. Miss Adair stated that they felt that this was a very important phase of their work at present as there have been numerous cases of diphtheria in other centres and a number of deaths have occurred. None of the children who died had received toxoid. The next toxoid clinic here is to be held December 20th at 3:30 p. m., in the Kiwanis Centre, Dundas Street, with Dr. Cronk in attendance. Dr. J. Marshall has also consented to be present and to examine the teeth of all the pre-school children. The mothers were being asked to bring these children between one year and five years at 2:30 p.m. All mothers are welcome to bring their children to see the dentist whether the children are to receive diphtheria toxoid or not.

Following the nurse's report considerable business was discussed.

Only Healthy Teeth Sparkle

Paula Kelly, songstress, knows the value of a shining smile.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Penny wire and pound foolish is the woman who flings coin of the realm on expensive dry goods, stints on professional care for her teeth. Trouble may be brewing among her white pearls, and she may be unaware of it. A twice-yearly examination will catch caries when they are young. One is saved pain and extra expense.

As a matter of self respect, there should be due regard for oral hygiene, and this is saying nothing at all about the important matter of health conservation. Defective teeth mean that the first processes of digestion are not normal. Infections can be carried to other parts of the body.

Teeth Clean

Teeth must always be clean. Yet there are thousands of women who carefully scour the kitchen sink a dozen times a day, give their teeth a few whisks of the brush in the morning, let it go at that.

Certain it is that teeth will be likely to decay if particles of food are not removed promptly. Certain food elements, especially sugar, change in character within a few hours, create conditions that may bring on decay. The digging of a hole in the tooth structure is done by a process that is both chemical and parasitic.

After Meals

The rule is to brush your teeth after each meal, groom them until they shine.

Scour outer and inner and side surface, then brush the biting ends.

Even with the best of care tartar may form at the bases of the teeth, push up under the gums, causing them to recede. The dentist will scrape these deposits away with his little instruments.

After brushing the teeth, a mouth wash should be used to flood away any particles of food that the bristles may have dislodged. A salt solution is considered excellent.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Tinsel Philosophy

Lucky the girl whose sweetheart will get here by December 25! You may be able to pull along on your own for 364 days of the year — but on Christmas Day, the Man of your Life must be around to make it seem authentic!

Love and happiness are so closely allied that when one dies, the other just automatically expires.

The oftener a man falls in love the more easily, lightly and gracefully he does it; as with athletics, there is nothing so good as constant exercise and practice to keep the heart (which is a muscle) in perfect training.

A man's jealousy is a red light which makes a girl slow down and think; but a woman's jealousy is a green light which makes a man rush out—and drink!

Nothing makes a more welcome and charming Christmas gift than a handsome bottle of good perfume. Yet the names of most perfumes are so sultry and erotic, these days, that it requires genius for a man to select one that will compliment the girl without making her suspect his motives.

There is no difficulty in "escaping" the so-called "wolf". The difficulty consists in waking him off of his lethargy of self-complacency long enough to make him pursue you with a little flattering ardour.

Some bridegrooms at a big show wedding manage to look cheerful; but most of them have that trapped expression of a Boston terrier being put through the ordeal of his weekly bath.

To a man, love is like Christmas gifts. He gets very little satisfaction out of it: because he is always either wanting some girl he can't get or getting some girl he doesn't want.

Love is one kind of fever that, once it is completely cured, never has a relapse.

ORGANIZED CLUBS REAL FACTORS IN YOUTH TRAINING

Noted Boys' Work Leader Believes They Are the Answer to Modern Delinquent Tendencies

Toronto (CP)—Taylor Statten, retiring at the year-end after 40 years as a leader in boys' work, believes the "dynamic of religion should be supported by the revelations of science" if the dream of a society "dominated by Christian ideals of equality of opportunity in the pursuit of happiness" is to be fulfilled.

"Religion should be the best ally science has," said Mr. Statten after the announcement of his retirement from the general secretaryship of the Toronto Young Men's Christian Association. "The root of true religion and the root of true science are the same—an obedience to ascertain law."

Drawing on his long experience, he outlined his philosophy of boys' work and stressed the value of the small, neighboring "Y" club and the well-organized summer camp as the constructive answers to the "destructive and delinquent tendencies" evident in youth today.

"The essential facts about the boy, his social setting and the psychological laws which govern his growth in knowledge, skill and character, indicate that the natural group of playmates, with a friendly adult to act as counsellor, is the basis for the most effective type of work with boys."

In both club and camp it was important for leaders to know that a "socially desirable Christian character is produced through a demonstration of the democratic process, in which the religious significance of many decisions is clearly revealed."

Need Skilled Leaders

Boys could never be taught this lesson in "organizations where the rules, procedures and standards are all set by adults." They should be given the opportunity to learn the essentials of democracy through practice, with skilled leaders endeavoring to bring concrete Christian principles to bear on the choices they make "in the detailed specific situations of their lives."

Mr. Statten was born in Erindale, Ont., in 1882 and educated there and at Streetsville High School. He came to Toronto in 1900 and in 1905 started his career as boys' work secretary of Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. At present he holds the post of chairman of the World's Alliance Y.M.C.A. Boys' Work Committee which has its headquarters in Geneva.

Mr. Statten developed the Canadian standard efficiency tests for boys, which later became the Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers program of the National Boys' Work Board. During the First Great War he was director of "Soldiers of the Soil" for the Canada Food Board.

After retiring, he will devote all his energy to training leaders for the well-known summer camps—Ahmek for boys and Wapomeo for girls—which he organized in 1921 at Canoe Lake in Algonquin Park.

A news story breaking in London can be transmitted to a Vancouver newspaper office by Canadian Press in about 10 minutes.

Glamour at the Waistline

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IF YOU ARE one of the lucky ones with a well preserved waistline. . . .my! . . .how you must love the new fashions! Unable to get the fabric, or use it legally, which would make a changed silhouette and fake a small waist, designers have simply tightened the waistline, focused interest on it, to get a more-fabric effect.

This means, of course, that belts return to high fashion favor, and the double model of black suede, shadow piped with gold kid, is a typical new design.

Giving Shower Although Wedding Date Isn't Set

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My cousin's fiance has just returned from overseas. They are to be married just as soon as my cousin's brother returns from the Navy. Do you think it would be all right if a shower were given for her now, in a week or two, even though her wedding date is not definite?

S. N.

Yes, I see no reason why the shower shouldn't be given now. And I think it might well be more convenient to have it now rather than later when, after her brother's return, her days will probably be filled with hurried plans for the wedding. The fact that her wedding date isn't definitely set needn't make any difference in the shower-plans.

Wedding at the Fiance's Home

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter's fiance, recently discharged from the Navy, has returned to his home in a distant Western state. At present she is visiting his family. Because of the great distance and of travel difficulties, and since their future residence will be there in his home city, it has been decided to have the wedding at his home. So my husband and I will go there for the wedding.

1.—Since the wedding will be at Christmastide what would you suggest as an appropriate gift for me to take to his mother? Would it be proper for me to give her money to buy whatever she wishes with it?

2.—Is it my place or his mother's place to write the first letter regarding the engagement and wedding plans? We have never met or corresponded with his parents.

3—Whose responsibility is it for the purchase of the bride's wedding outfit?

A. N.

1.—It would be completely out-of-order for you to give the mother money for a gift. Please don't consider doing this. You might take her a purse, either one for general use or one suitable for afternoon wear, or an evening bag; some especially lovely, sheer white handkerchiefs; a vanity case or powder box; a corsage ornament; a travelling clock; comb in case for her purse or evening bag; a pin or brooch or clip-brooch combination. Perhaps it would be a good idea to take her a purse now since this would probably be the easiest item to choose for a woman you don't know, and later, when you write her your thanks for the visit with her, send her something for herself or her home, when you know her taste better.

2.—It is the social duty of the fiance's parents, or at least his mother, to write you, about their happiness in the engagement. And in your circumstance, this would be particularly true, since they should be writing you about the wedding plans and the details of your visit with them. However, you might properly write his mother a note now, a mother-to-mother letter about the engagement, mentioning the plans your daughter has written about the wedding.

3—Either the bride's family or the bride herself buys all the details of the bridal costume and the going-away costume.

Fashion Flashes

PRACTICAL AND PRETTY clothes for afternoon wear are tops this year. High on the list is the well-cut suit-dress of silk, so easy under a fur coat. Sapphire blue, brocaded satin makes a handsome suit-dress with smooth shoulders, short sleeves and a peplum that flares at the front.

Things have happened to wool, and now it goes places. Some of the smartest afternoon frocks in town are of woollen fabric. Black wool jersey makes a pretty dress that sparkles all over with tiny gilt nailheads. Massed nailheads form the tiny club collar and edge the short sleeves.

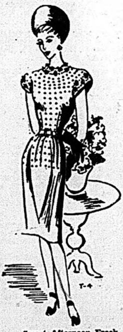
We asked the shoe shops what type of shoe was going best, now that sales are unrestricted. The demand seems to be for the perfectly cut and fitted step-in pump of suede or reptile skin, with the sling pump and sandal trailing.

The picturesque dinner dress or evening frock always attracts attention when it is worn by the right type. A singularly lovely frock is of deep blue chiffon, the deep-rounded neckline, bare shoulders and twice-puffed short sleeves making for a lovely bodice. The full-rippingly skirt is composed of wide, shirred bands set on narrow bands of sequin-sprinkled net.

Real care has been lavished on furs in the moderate price range, to make them as beautiful and luxurious as possible. Thus we have a coat of American processed broadtail, which is lamb, handled on smart, slender lines, but with a waistlength cape in lieu of sleeves.

Bows take a bow as the bow-trimmed hat gains in importance for late Winter and early Spring A charming, forward-perched hat combines countless little bows of beige satin and brown velvet. Beautiful with brown furs.

Sparkling Wool



Smart Afternoon Frock

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

WOOL HAS gone in for the bright life now that it is all dressed up and sparkling with the sort of treatment usually accorded to silk fabrics, Heaven blue wool takes nicely to the idea of the matching sequins that are dotted all over the bodice and hip section. The shining motif is emphasized further in a richer design at neckline and sleeves. There are gathers from the waist that suggest the new "barrel" silhouette, a line that is making a bid for fashion favor.

Shining Success

By ALICE ALDEN

LUSTROUS black satin is at home at all smart afternoon events and is a frequent choice for informal evening wear, especially when it is beautifully draped. One of New York's most popular designers, Maurice Rentner, makes this frock of black satin fashioned with a polonaise drape, a shaped square neck, slim waistline, widened shoulders and cap sleeves, a well-planned figure flatterer.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No Longer Thinks Her Husband is a Genius

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My family were all practical people. My father had a wood and coal yard, and though we were well-to-do, my mother did all her own work and home was delightful. How often I've thought regretfully about it.

"When I went to the big city and lived in a settlement house, I met an entirely new type of person. All of them seemed to be hanging on one of the arts. They painted, they played various musical instruments, they wrote, and claimed they were unsuccessful because their stuff was too good for the critics. I fell in love with a man who wrote.

"Full of hope in those early days, I agreed to work to support my husband and myself until he was appreciated by the public. We've been married fifteen years. In that time he has sold not more than a half dozen things.

"Now I know he's never going to amount to anything. He has no initiative, no pep, no faculty for getting along with people. He has seen me wade through snow in winter, almost pass out with the heat in summer, pay all the household bills, and always he is complaining. The world is too crude to appreciate him. I'm too dumb to appreciate him. His friends are too jealous to appreciate him.

"There's no other man in my life, nor on the horizon, but I want a home to myself and not hear any more about unappreciated genius. Your column impresses me as having plenty of common sense. What would you do?

As you recognize the fact your husband will never be able to earn his salt by writing, the sooner you adjust your life to this conclusion, the better for you; also, the better for him. Perhaps he could turn his attention to something more profitable than writing a half dozen things, which have been accepted, in fifteen years. And it will be good for his morale to have to learn to stand on his own feet.

When a woman finds herself married to a man who has been chronically unsuccessful in some of the arts, it would be better for him, and for the community, considering the manpower shortage, if he would apply himself to something practical. He could then continue to write in his leisure.

First carefully analyze the hair. For it may be too oily, too dry, too soft, too hard and brittle—it may be spongy and porous—the cuticle may be damaged. Broadway Shows Booming; Visitors Can Take Their Pick and Try to Get In

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 18 — (CP) — Six shopping days remain for Canadian theatre-goers who plan a holiday visit to New York to snap up seats for Broadway's current offerings.

Brokers report a bustling market in pasteboards and box-office attendants have the "S.R.O." signs at hand, but if you have an influential uncle or a harassed in-law in Manhattan — or the inside track with the headwaiter at the Algonquin — you still might be able to get tickets to Christmas-week attractions.

At this writing, the lineup includes four musicals and 11 plays of this season and eight musicals and seven plays held over from 1944-45 or previous years. Here's a thumbnail review of the new ones:

Musicals—

"Are You With It?": Rowdy, fast revue with Joan Roberts, Lew Parker. Pleasant but ordinary.

"Polonaise"; Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth in a stilted, period-piece operetta with Chopin music, poor dancing and excellent singing.

"The Day Before Spring": — Light-hearted and melodious vehicle for Irene Manning that remains a bit short on comedy.

"The Red Mill"; Victor Herbert's 1906 hit, revived by the ebullient antics of Eddie Foy, Jr., and Michael Shea. The way this revival caught on was the surprise of the season.

Plays—

"Brighten the Corner"; Charlie Butterworth is a farce which certainly needs brightening.

"Deep Are the Roots": Racial-problem play about the return of a Negro officer from the war. Sincere and nearly-successful drama with some excellent acting by relative unknowns.

"Dream Girl": Elmer Rice's first play in several seasons, starring Mrs. (Betty Field) Rice in a long, difficult role full of well-handled dream sequences. Good, imaginative theatre.

"Hamlet"; Maurice Evans appearing in his seventh version of the Elsinore Follies, this time in semi-modern dress and without benefit of gravediggers. Mr. Evans is a vigorous, articulate, sometimes over-simplified gloomy Dane in his neatly-staged, spottily-supported production.

"State of the Union"; Literate, telling satire on United States politics, featuring Ralph Bellamy, Ruth Hussey. Best of this year's dramas.

"Strange Fruit": Lilian Smith's transplanted novel, staged and dramatized extremely ineffectively.

"The French Touch": Brian Aherne struts through a confused comedy of the German occupation of Paris with considerable aplomb.

"The Mermaids Singing": John Van Druten's latest — and not his best; Walter Abel has the lead in this conversation piece which lags in a dull third act.

"The Rugged Path": Spencer Tracy holds a poor play together admirably.

"Therese"; the acting tidbit of the season, starring Dame May Whitty in one of her most able performances well backed by Victor Jory and Eva Le Gallienne. The play itself is just fair.

"You Touched Me": Edmund Gwenn as an alcoholic eccentric in a Tennessee Williams play which seems equally confused.

In addition to these, of course, are the old Broadway stand-bys such as Oklahoma, Bloomer Girl, Dear Ruth, Harvey, Life with Father, The Glass Menagerie, The Voice of the Turtle, and other seemingly perennial favorites.

CHURCHILL TO VISIT U.S.

London, Dec. 19 (Reuters) — Winston Churchill, former British prime minister, is to make a brief visit to the United States in January, it was learned.

It is expected his visit will be a short, private one, enabling him to return to Britain in time for the reassembly of parliament a month from now.

An official statement on Mr. Churchill's trip is expected.

By an overwhelming vote of GIs all over the globe, model Patricia Venlver has been nominated the No. 1 pin-up of the year. Over a million pin-up photos of famed models were sent to servicemen following requests during the year and Pat's picture topped all.

SUNBEAM MISSION BAND

White's District.—The December meeting of the Sunbeam Mission Band was held at Quinte View school on Friday afternoon with Milton Saylor as president and Betty Westfall as secretary. The meeting opened with Jingle Bells by the school. Lauraine Elder read the Scripture telling of the birth of Jesus.

The Christmas Story was dramatized with Betty Westfall as Mary, Ernest Reid as Joseph, Joan Meyers and Sheila Moore as Angels, Douglas Westfall, Douglas Forth and Milton Saylor as Shepherds and several of the smaller boys as "Wise Men", who brought the White Gifts forward. These are to be sent to Miss Elsie Hunt, Reg.N., stationed in a Manitoba hospital. Edna Malcolm read the synopsis of the Second Chapter of "Nyanga's Two Villages". Mrs. Young continued the story of life in Angola telling of the family's plans to spend some time in their old non-Christian village, where the father was to be teacher and missionary. Christmas hymns were sung and collections for the year were $21.39; expenses $1.25

Controversy Over Race Horse Doping Rules Headed for What Is Believed First Court Hearing

Owners and Trainers Suspended Seek to Have Commission's Rule Declared Invalid

Baltimore, Dec. 19 — (AP) — The controversy between horsemen and racing commission officials over the enforcement of rules against the stimulation of thoroughbreds was slated today for what is believed will be its first civil court airing in the United States.

Two horsemen and their trainers, suspended by the Maryland Commission on charges of stimulating horses which ran under their silks, filed a suit in circuit court yesterday seeking to have the commission's rule against "doping" declared invalid.

The suit also seeks to bar the racing commission from holding further hearings on the stimulation charges except by court order.

It was filed by W. L. Brann and Sylvester W. Labrot, Jr., owners, and E. A. Christmas and Clay Sutphin, their respective trainers.

Hearings for Christmas, Sutphin and three other trainers were held last week after chemists reported that saliva tests taken from six horses which ran at Pimlico in November showed presence of morphine. They were continued for a week.

Judge Joseph Sherbow signed an order giving George P. Mahoney, Commission chairman, and H. Courtney Jenifer and Frank Small, Jr., and other members, until Sunday to show cause why the complainants' petition should not be granted.

The rule against the use of stimulants reads, in part, that "the fact that the analysis shows the presence of a drug shall be conclusive evidence either that there was knowledge of the fact on the part of the trainer or that he was guilty of carelessness in permitting it to be administered."

The four complainants contended in the petition that the rule "adopts a conclusive presumption of guilt," is unconstitutional, and that it permits a trainer to be punished even though he proves himself innocent and that the horse was drugged by some other person.

The trainers and owners entered an express denial that they had administered or permitted anyone else to administer "any drug" to their horses "or any other horse in any way at any time within 48 hours of the time of any race."

No Bid Received For Golf Tourney

Winnipeg, Dec. 19 (CP)—W. C. (Bill) McCallum, Winnipeg sportsman said last night he is prepared to underwrite expenses of a $10,000 Open golf championship in Winnipeg next July if sanction can be obtained from the Canadian Professional Golfers Association.

McCallum said he has been negotiating for the championship since last August but that no definite word has been received from the C.P.G.A.

(In Toronto last night, tournament manager Earl Morris of the C.P.G.A. said the association "has not even received" a bid from Winnipeg for the championship).

McCallum said he was misquoted in a Canadian Press Dispatch from Winnipeg Monday night which said the Manitoba city would be the scene of a $10,000 Open championship next July.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, Dec. 19 — (AP) — Capt. James J. Braddock probably should be listened to when he picks Billy Conn to outpoint Joe Louis easily in their second meeting next June. He thinks that Joe, at 32, will have gone over the hill. He warns, however, that "if Billy tries to outpunch Joe he will run into trouble." . . . Col. Edward R. Bradley, who observed his 86th birthday last week, is reported ready to quit the racing game because of ill health and to have placed his famous Idle Hour farm in Kentucky on the block.

Arch Ward, who promoted the new All-America Football Conference from a faint idea in his own noggin to its present opulent state, declared that the mere formation of the circuit already has cost the rival National League more than $100,000 in additional salaries to its players as insurance against their jumping the traces. Arch concedes it's going to be a tough war, but he is cool and confident. "Any one of several of our teams has more money behind it than the entire National League," he says serenely, brushing a couple of million out of his trouser cuff.

When advised that his pitcher Hugh Casey had ballooned up to 247 pounds while in the service, Leo Durocher was supposed to have exclaimed "Boy, I'll have to sell him by the pound." . . Something has come over the ladies. Just as Busher was named the horse of the year in the U.S., another filly, Plucky Flag, has won that distinction in Mexico by winning six of her nine starts.

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The Lid Off.

Kingston Locos, at one time dubbed the "Canadiens" of the Van Horne series till they ran into the nasty Bruins from Barriefield will be the ice lane guests of the Redmen at the Hume Arena on Friday eventide. The Locos are rated sum pumkins by one Mike Rodden who fancies them as the team which will tote the trophy home to their hockey mammas. At that the Locos are no set-up and even with the moral disadvantage of playing on foreign ice should extend our fast-skating Reddies to the limit. Game starts at 8.30. Better be on hand.

• • •

Tonight the moguls of the Big Four Intermediate "A" O.H.A. group go into a round table talk at the Queen's Hotel. Frank Buckland, Peterborough, is the convener and representatives of his home bailiwick Oshawa, Belleville and Kingston will be present to draw up a schedule, discuss business matters and perhaps indulge in a few social amenities. Grapevine has it that the boys don't intend losing any time and will likely get the group started in the first week in January.

• • •

Those knowledge knibblers down Queen's way threw a goshamighty scare into our budding aspirants for the Van Horne trophy the other night. The big huskies from the halls of learning trotted out on the ice ready and willing to die for their Alma Mamma and their determination netted them exactly four markers in the first two periods with one a lone comeback from the Redshirts from the wigwams of the Moira River.

• • •

In the third period with the battle looking like a lost cause, big Vernon Goyer moved his elephantine bulk majestically down the ice, brushed aside a couple of would-be checkers, glided more or less gracefully in and around the Studes' defence and rammed home the pellet after speedy Don Barrett had placed it on his stick. Not to be outdone brother Leo slipped a lengthy pass to Clare Williamson and the slim defenceman made no mistake. Spurred on by this change in the affairs of hockey skate, Leo sprinted away on a rink-length dash aided and abetted by Al. Meagher and fired the shot that was heard around the rink to tie up the entertainment. The Reds swarmed to the attack, but a thoroughly alarmed and desperate Queen's defence held off their sallies until the ice bosuns piped the signal for the cessation of hostilities.

• • •

Lieut. Bruce Ward of the Canadian Army Dental Corps who turned out the first time for the Reds, and who incidentally had his skates on for the first time this winter shaped up like a veteran hockey player. 'Tis said, the molar extractor piloted the Big Red team of McGill along the intercollegiate ice lanes during his collitch days, and his performance the other night easily proved that the big defenceman knows the answers to a lot of hockey questions when out there doing ice battle. He'll do, was the consensus.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP) —Art Ross, who helped make hockey a big business proposition in the United States, insists the fame is still in knee-pants.

He visualizes an expanded National League of 10 to 16 teams within two or three years.

"It won't be long before the set-up in hockey is similar to that in baseball," the N.H.L.'s foremost man of ideas told CP colleague Fred Kerner. "There are thousands of kids in the United States who are taking to hockey just as Canadians have taken to the game for years."

Button-holed at the recent N. H. L. meeting in Toronto Ross picked up President Mervyn (Red) Dutton's statement that "we've just scratched the surface of hockey" and went on from there.

Expansion to include 10 or more teams would involve dividing the league into two or three divisions, including one of the Pacific coast. With 14 or 16 clubs a possibility, air travel would be used, rosters swelled to 25 men and schedules extended to 75 or 100 games a season.

"Hockey fans in the United States are multiplying rapidly," says the man who put hockey on a bigtime basis in Boston 21 years ago after 13 seasons as a player with Montreal Wanderers. "They are becoming so discriminating they won't want to look at some of the hockey the minor professional leagues offer."

Boston would see 50,000 crowds if the Garden could hold that many. (The present capacity is 13,900.)

"There is only one drawback to baseball-size crowds for hockey. The puck is just a couple of inches in size and can only be seen from a limited distance. Considering that, I don't think new arenas should be built to hold more than 30,000 people."

As manager of Boston Bruins, he could certify the club is "all set" for air travel. Bruins had used planes for one or two trips and "I even have two pilots ready to handle the chauffeuring job."

He referred to his sons, Arthur, Jr., recently entrusted with some of Boston's managerial responsibilities, and young Howard, both discharged from the R.C.A.F.

"With the recent developments in radar, we feel flying is perfectly safe and we're ready to hop back and forth across the continent to fulfill our schedule."

Hockey in Maritimes Entering a New Era

Halifax, Dec. 19—(CP)—Hockey in the Maritimes enters a new era this season with the accent on native talent, and although early season indications do not show any team strong enough to go far along the Allan cup trail, the fans are assured of a thrilling season from a competitive standpoint.

Five senior leagues, the Cape Breton Colliery league, the Antigonish-Pictou-Colchester league, the Amherst - Moncton - Saint John league, and the Halifax and Charlottetown city leagues, make up the Maritime senior hockey picture. There is a possibility that two more leagues may operate, an Annapolis Valley league and a Northern New Brunswick circuit.

The Halifax league has yet to produce hockey of an outstanding calibre, and Haligonians are finding the slower proceedings slightly dull after the star-studded displays of last season. Navy and air force are the best in the league at present, while army, under the wing of Gordon Drillon, former Toronto Leaf star, shows signs of becoming a serious contender.

Notre Dame Defeat In Last Game Greatest Surprise

(By The Canadian Press)

In a poll of the Associated Press among 76 sports writers on the greatest surprise of 1945 in the United States, top selection with 57 points was the 39-7 defeat of Notre Dame by Great Lakes Naval Training Station in the final football match of the college season. Indiana's victory in the Big Ten Conference rated second place with 46 points while the sale of Hank Borowy by New York Yankees to Chicago Cubs and the showing of Washington Senators in the American League race were regarded as important surprises.

The winning of the National League pennant by Chicago Cubs was also rated a surprise to the extent of 27 points.

With St. Louis Cardinals overweighted with high-class playing material with at least 50 tossers of big-league calibre, almost all of the other major clubs were reported last night to be hounding president Sam Breadon for deals. Chicago Cubs were said to have offered $200,000 for shortstop Marty Marion but he is not on the possible sales list.

Gordie Drillon, former star right winger of Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens, says he likes his job coaching the army entry in the Halifax senior league and finds the calibre of Maritime hockey "surprisingly good." Drillon told The Canadian Press he is through with big-league hockey and will return to civilian life next June. He picks Detroit to win the Stanley Cup this season.

Julius G. Reeder, racing secretary of Fair Grounds track, said at New Orleans yesterday he had received information transport planes would be available to fly horses to various races. The planes would carry six horses, attendants and equipment.

Job Dean Jessop, 19-year-old rider from Utah, is in line for the honor of leading jockey of the year in the United States. Now at Miami with 12 more racing days to go, he has 281 victories and needs only 20 more to tie Jackie Westrope's 1933 record of 301 wins. Ted Atkinson from Toronto rode 287 winners last year.

Highest-Scoring Team Meets League Leader

(By The Canadian Press)

The highest-scoring team in the National Hockey league meets the perennial overlords of that circuit tonight in the most important of two scheduled N.H.L. contests.

Chicago Black Hawks, sporting a seasonal scoring average of 4.9 goals a game, entertain Montreal Canadiens while the third - place Boston Bruins are at home to the run-down New York Rangers.

Canadiens, leaders of the NHL through most of the last two seasons and in front since the first three weeks of the current campaign, now hold a two-point edge over the challenging Hawks and must gain at least a point tonight to remain in undisputed leadership.

A Chicago victory would leave Hawks and Canadiens tied for first place, but defeat for the Hawks would endanger their runner-up role. By defeating the tail-end Rangers, Boston could move on even terms with Chicago in second place.

Bruins are a point ahead of 4th place Detroit Red Wings who shade Toronto Maple Leafs by 4 points. Rangers are another five points behind Toronto.

ORANGES FOR YULETIDE IN BRITAIN

London, Dec. 19 — (Reuters)— Sir Ben Smith, British Food Minister, who will visit the United States for food talks after parliament recesses for Christmas, Tuesday announced arrival in Britain of 25,000 half cases of oranges for the Yule season.

He added that the oranges will provide only one third of the fruit allocation. Another third is expected Thursday, with the remainder expected soon afterwards.

KANSAS CITY MAINTAINS LEAD

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City maintained its lead in the United States hockey league and Saint Paul wrested second position from the Omaha Knights in Tuesday night's meetings and St. Paul's Joe Shack held his place as league-leading scorer.

The Pla-Mors came within a minute and odd seconds of handing Omaha its first shutout of the season as they downed the Knights 5-1 on Omaha's home ice. Nelson Podolsky scored the lone Omaha goal after Kansas city's wingy Johnson had scored two in the first period, and Andy Chakowski two in the final frame and Johnny Jackson a single in the middle period.

Tulsa Oilers climbed into fourth position in the league with a 12-1 victory over Minneapolis Millers. Fort Worth Rangers finished the evening in a tie with Tulsa for fourth spot after they had been trounced 3-1 by St. Paul's Veterans Saints. The Saints and the Rangers had fought a scoreless first period before Maher, for Fort Worth, and Shack for the Saints, made it a 1-1 deadlock. St. Paul's Norm Burns broke the tie in the final period and Alex Sandalack scored the cincher at 19:13.

Tulsa meeting was a scoring free-for-all for the Oilers with Nick Nott the star of the evening scoring three goals and assisting in one. John Morrow and Bill Wilson each scored three markets also and George Agar bagged the lone Minneapolis count.

Wednesday night's games will see St. Paul at Dallas and Minneapolis at Kansas City.

Police Hope In Shooting For Early Arrests

Montreal, Dec. 19 — (CP) — Police said today they hoped for early arrests in the murder of Edmond Boisvert, 69-year-old tavern proprietor who was shot thru the heart last night on the staircase of his north-end Montreal home.

They sought four men whom eyewitnesses said had been hanging about the tavern earlier in the evening and who fled from the scene immediately after the shooting at 10.45 p.m. A police cordon surrounded the district and all island bridges were guarded.

Robbery was believed the motive for the attack for a few minutes before the shooting Ulderic Dunville, the tavern manager, had brought the days receipts to Boisvert who lived upstairs. The assailant, however, got nothing.

Boisvert, his wife, daughter and a family friend were sitting in their apartment when the doorbell rang, Mrs. Boisvert told police. The aged proprietor pressed the buzzer which opened the lower door to the duplex. The stairway was lighted.

As her husband started down stairs, Mrs. Boisvert said, "a short young man" entered below and shouted in English: "Hands up and don't move."

Boisvert ignored the command and dashed toward the gunman who fired.

Pickets Scuffle Police at Plant

Toronto, Dec. 19 — (CP)—Pickets scuffled with police yesterday outside the Brown's Bread, Ltd., plant where about 400 of the 750 workers went on strike 25 days ago in a bid by two unions affiliated with the A.F.L. to enforce demands for a union shop, a dues checkoff and wage increases.

The violence flared as the unions, Local 264, bread and confectionery workers, and Local 847, bread wagon drivers, defied a police order forbidding mass picketing.

Up to Monday night, not more than 16 pickets at one time had been stationed at the various entrances of the plant.

Union officials said the return to work of 17 striking drivers was partly responsible for the decision to conduct mass picketing.

During the day, Albert Hearn, a union official, protested to Controller Stewart Smith about the scuffles on the picket lines.

"The police grabbed our pickets and threw them around like criminals," he charged.

In the forenoon police arrested Ralph Mabley, an 18-year-old picket, of Dumbarton, Ont., on a charge of obstructing a police officer. Mabley fell into the hands of police when he allegedly staged a fist fight with a worker who was on his way into the plant and Police Inspector William Evans broke up the encounter. Later Mabley appeared before Magistrate Tupper Bigelow, who remanded him until Jan. 8.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 869
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bids that do not turn out right intrigue me. I like to dig into them to see why they go wrong. And as a rule, it is discovered that somewhere along the line some player has avoided rule.

By mail comes this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠K Q 9 8
♥A K Q 10
♦K
♣K Q 8 7

NORTH
♥9
♣6 5 2

It seems that they reached a slam contract in spades and were, of course, defeated by two opponent aces. Come to find out, one of the players had bid four no-trump, the ace and king asker.

This is how the bidding should go:

SOUTH	NORTH
2 S	3 D
3 H	3 S
4 C	4 S

With the south hand counting ten tricks, there is no excuse for any opening except the forcing-to-game two bid. The player who does not expect to go to a game with that hand should take up rummy.

The fact that north does not respond at once with two no-trump signals a sure trick. Therefore, south is encouraged at once to expect a slam. There usually is with a positive response.

You see, if one player has enough for an opening bid of two and partner has a sure trick, a slam is probable. But it is not always positive. There must be enough aces or void suits.

That is why the Horse Sense system requires a player to have two aces and a king to bid four no-trump. Because if neither partner has two aces, both partners will not have three.

So, partners keep exchanging information, each hoping the other can bid four no-trump. And if neither has the two aces, there should be no four no-trump bid. And with no four no-trump bid, stop at game.

No use bucking your head against a stone wall.

CAN MOVE IF NECESSARY

Washington, Dec. 19 — (AP)—The State Department made public orders regarding movement of Nationalist troops in China. Issued at a press conference, the statement "directed" the War Department that Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedmeyer could transport Chinese Nationalist troops to Manchuria when he deemed it necessary.

Mrs. Mahommed Diah, the former Herewati Latip, a Marnard College graduate, once a New York resident, who is now being held in Java, the Dutch East Indies, by British authorities who refuse to give details of the charges against her. Although it is known she broadcast over the radio during the Jap occupation, she is said to have read prepared scripts as an announcer and did not broadcast her own opinion. Her husband denied that she was pro-Nazi or pro-Jap and declared her only crime was that she was "anti-Dutch."

RECOVERY GOOD

To date his recovery has been satisfactory.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, William, my mind is made up and my foot is put down, I mean this year we're not going to give each other a Chrissmas present, and I mean absilutely.

Let's even make it positively, pop said, and ma said, With all the shopping that's really unavoidable, I mean gifts for all the children on both sides of the family and the presents to counteract the presents that we know we're going to receeve, it would be just too silly to go through the annual ordeal of wondering whether we've bought each other something really nice enough, I mean absilutely.

Positively, pop said. We go through this same routine every year and then we weaken. Now let's stick to our guns and not fire a single present at each other, he said, and ma said, I'm willing if you are.

Then it's a go, pop said. It's a bargain. It's a pact, he said, and ma said, It's all settled, and I must say it's a load off my shoulders and a weight off my mind.

I'd go so far as to say it's a relief, pop said, and ma said, But naturelly we dont have to let the spirit of the season slip entirely through our fingers. I mean I could get you a box of real Havanna cigars if you specify the exact brand and size. That wouldn't actually be a present, because there wouldn't be any element of surprise, she said.

More important than that, there wouldn't be any element of doubt, pop said, and ma said, And I could pick myself out a nice filmy negligee, I mean something that I wouldn't ordinarily be extravagant enough to buy for myself, and have it sent home to me with your card in it, and the same principal would prevail, wouldn't it, William?

Positively, pop said.

Being the end of the subject and they both looked as if they felt better instead of worse.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 19 (AP)—Hollywood's officialdom gathered Monday night to accept Canada's homage for its help in the war effort. A blue-ribbon crowd heard L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to Washington, thank movie personalities for their assistance in the Canadian war effort.

Three hundred guests including Ronald Colman, Greer Garson, Shirley Temple, Mary Pickford, James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Walter Pidgeon, gathered at the Beverly Hills hotel for a dinner which included five wines, east coast oysters, Nova Scotia sole and Manitoba buffalo steak. It was the first soup-and-fish event in Hollywood movie circles since Pearl Harbor. James Cagney admitted to me it was the first time he has used his dinner jacket since 1940, and other guests seemed similarly cramped.

The United States is a place where a $40-a-week crooner can become a million-dollar industry within a few years.

That's what happened to Dick Haymes, star of 20th-Fox. His phonograph records sell in the millions and he has a regular radio show. Whenever he needs spending money he can play a theatre engagement. He did so recently and earned $28,000 in one week.

Now he is branching out into other enterprises. He is sponsoring some proteges in show business. He has founded a music publishing house. He is starting to breed saddle horses. And he is going to foster a playhouse to train actors.

The income from Haymes' activities has amounted to $300,000 in the first 10 months of this year. That's not bad for a guy who was making peanuts while singing for bands less than three years ago.

Dick recalls vividly the not-so-long-ago when he was singing for Harry James at $40 a week. "And then Harry was usually broke and borrowed it back," Dick said.

And does Dick yearn for the return of those gay, carefree days? "Hell, no."

The flu bug is making the rounds and throwing a wrench into shooting schedules. Among those afflicted are Myrna Loy, Rex Harrison, Victor Francen, Marjorie Main, Peter Lawford, Hedy Lamarr, Mary Livingston Benny, Jeanne Crain, Jimmy Durante and John Hodiak .. Is there any significance in the fact that Van Johnson showed up at the Clark Gable preview wearing a black turtle-neck sweater?... Add flu news: Love scenes between Robert Young and Sylvia Sidney in "The Searching Wind" were postponed because of it.. Kay Kyser's band is giving him a washing machine for Christmas.

Tribute Paid to Wright Bros.

Kitty Hawk, N. C., Dec. 19 — (AP)—Planes roared a 1,000,000-horse-power salute to the Wright brothers Monday in observance of the 42nd anniversary of man's first flight. Just 42 years ago, Orville Wright and his brother, the late Wilbur Wright, saw their awkward craft, powered with a tiny 12-horsepower motor, lift into the air over nearby Kill Devil Hill to open the era of flight. Witnesses to the homage of the great aerial armada included Orville Wright, now 74.

MISSING GIRL RETURNS

Vancouver, Dec. 19—(CP) — Ruth Alice Watson, 19, missing from her home for seven days, has returned "unharmed," police said yesterday they had been informed by the girl's mother, Mrs. Alice Watson.

Police added no further details were given by Mrs. Watson in connection with the reappearance last night of her daughter, object of a search since she left her home Dec. 10, a few hours after getting her discharge from the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Miss Watson, a corporal in the C.W.A.C., was reported to have had $100 in her purse when last seen and her family expressed fears that Ruth had "disappeared through no fault of her own."

NEXT AT THE BELLE — Leon Errol in one of the man hilarious scenes in "Mama Loves Papa," his latest fun-packed screen hit. Nils Asther and Helen Walker are co-starred in "The Man in Half-Moon Street," the major feature attraction on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL — It's Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, in one of the many hilarious episodes from their new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring film, "Lost in a Harem," which takes them to a mythical kingdom in mystic East—as Hollywood talent scouts. The picture, which features Marilyn Maxwell, John Conte, Douglas Dumbrille and Jimmy Dorsey and his band, opens next at the Capitol Theatre. The added feature, "Oath of Vengeance," stars Buster Crabbe and Al St. John.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 19

"But we can't get along without you!" he said, really troubled.

"Oh yes, you can. Only I am glad you want me. I've been four years with Fordyce and Sawyer, and of course I feel at home there. But I really would like—I'd like awfully to go to my aunt's for a few days."

"I think you should. I think you've a holiday coming to you, putting in a New Year's Day like yesterday. But if you'll be in the office a week from today we can settle everything then."

"You weren't going before that?"

"If I was, I'll wait." He said it with so significant and friendly a smile that Jocelyn felt her pulses respond again to some breath-taking emotion.

"Shall I say good-bye to your mother?" she asked. "To Norma?"

"No, because I hope it isn't good-bye. I'll explain to them that you are very considerately clearing the tracks for Sandy, and I'll see you, positively, on Wednesday."

"Wednesday, then."

"They are having such a powwow in there," he said, with an annoyed glance in the direction of his mother's bedroom door, "that I suppose the cooler we keep the whole thing—the less complicated, the better for everyone. It's all worked out very differently from what I thought it would. I wish to goodness I could be more with the kid. I liked the way—it sort of broke me up, the way she came over to me this morning! Lord," he said with a weary sigh, "what a mess!"

Silence hung for a moment between them; they looked at each other almost in inquiry. What was not being said? Then they both laughed.

"Incidentally," Philip said, ending the pause, "if it interests you, I thought I would just mention that Mrs. Verrinder's kindly plans to marry me and move in here do not seem to appeal to me."

Jocelyn laughed outright. But afterward, when she was packing her bags, when she was leaving Hill Acres and on her way by train and boat and streetcar to Sausalito, she did not smile at the memory of this and of other things he had said.

Instead they gave her a strange feeling of richness, of warmness at her heart. Her last talk with Philip, rather than making her feel cut away from the Fordyce interests, had seemed to draw her nearer to them. He was the most important member of the group, after all. He was Norma's official guardian and had the last word in everything that concerned her, no matter how her mother, grandmother, how she herself, and Sandy, and fondly interested friends might argue and plan. And he had included Jocelyn in his problem.

"We'll pop her and Sandy into school for a week," he had said, "and see where that gets us." And the pronouns had meant Jocelyn and himself; his expression had left her in no doubt of that.

He felt now that Jocelyn was his adviser and conspirator where Norma was concerned. "We can't get along without you," he had said. "I hope it isn't good-bye . . . You've a holiday coming to you." And then at the end of those few words about Mrs. Verrinder, mischievously added, with Philip's own careless air of dominating a conversation or a situation, of not caring very much what anyone thought of him or the varied predicaments in which he found himself. It was a hard manner to define; Jocelyn found it infinitely fascinating. There was something generous, definitely male, pre-eminently sophisticated about it.

Her aunt, meeting her enthusiastically at the side doorway of "Maple Den," observed that she had never seen Jocelyn looking better.

"The change," said Aunt Nell, "has done you good."

"Something," said Jocelyn joyfully, "has done me good!"

Jocelyn had often thought that her aunt's way of calming any particular confusing domestic situation, or simplifying any too complicated home program, was to propose fresh confusions and complications, and in some mysterious fashion whose secret was known only to herself, to thereby straighten everything out into pleasantness and peace. Therefore it was no particular surprise to her to discover that with a houseful of daughters, babies and son-in-laws, with wet weather making all out-of-doors one great mud problem, and with Tots burdened with the dual responsibilities of a job in the bank and an approaching wedding, they should have decided on a Sunday picnic.

Nobody who could possibly be included in one ever avoided a picnic with the Partridges. Charles Rossiter and Peter Smith, who had married Jane and Jossy respectively some years earlier, were now ring-leaders in preparation, and Jocelyn noted that even quiet Rusty Livermore, who was so soon to assume responsibility for Tots, was showing a dawning enthusiasm for the whole crazy plan.

Various disreputable utensils and familiar burdens gradually were assembled in the laundry, a basket whose contents were covered with a piece of dark green oilcloth, a large blackened coffee pot with a swing handle, long forks, tin cups strung on a cord. Dr. Partridge appeared in full picnic regalia; a weather-beaten topee on his gray hair, an old leather jacket buttoned snugly about his neck, high boots into which old jeans had been stuffed. On his hands were shabby gauntlets; he buckled a canteen about him, picked up a stout walking stick, and was ready to start.

The girls wore caps, raincoats, old sweaters, old plaid skirts. each member of the expedition carried something; Jocelyn found herself let off easily with the coffee pot, which, with only the coffee grounds sewed into a cheesecloth bag within it, was manageable and light. Two of the young men had taken the basket, whose handles had been ingeniously altered by the doctor to swing in balance from a pole, when Bam came out to the side yard to announce to Jocelyn that Kent Dunham was there to see her.

Jocelyn's face flushed brightly as she turned to go into the house, but when she reached the large shabby room that was the parlor she was pale. As they met she did not smile; she looked strained and anxious. Kent did not smile. He looked nervous and anxious too, she thought, looking at him in cool, strange detachment, that the romantic appeal of her beauty was all the more marked for that. He was eight years older than Jocelyn, but this morning she felt herself the older. She put down her coffee pot, and he gripped both her hands in his and stood half bending above her, for he was tall, and looking down at her with pain and pleading in his eyes.

"Jocelyn, it's been two weeks! I've not seen you since before Christmas. I had to come! I've been in Portland, you know. I only got down here yesterday, and telephoned the Fordyce house and they said you were here. You're not going to be there any more?"

But he did not wait for an answer. He rushed on, too full of his own misery to stop once he had begun.

"All these days," he said, "ever since before Christmas—we had Christmas with Lilian's family—I've been counting the minutes until I could come down again and see you. You've got to talk to me darling; this is my one chance. You're not going out in this rain?"

"It's not raining now." Jocelyn was conscious of feeling sorry for him. He was unhappy; anyone could see that. And he was growing unhappier every minute, for naturally she could not pretend that she was as excited as he. In fact she could not awaken any emotion in her heart.

"But where are you going?"

She indicated the coffee pot. "Picnic."

"In this weather?"

"Well, rain's the best time. It's not so hot walking. It's fun."

"But we have to talk!"

Jocelyn spoke gently, sympathetically. "No; we don't have to talk, Kent. We've only to say that we liked each other too much for our own peace of mind for a while, and now it's — it's over."

"Too much for our own peace of mind!" he echoed, angry and aghast.

"It's all like a dream," Jocelyn said, in a tone that was like a dream.

"Like a dream! You can't talk that way! I've broken up my whole life for you. I've told Lilian. Ah, Jocelyn, don't be like this! Don't dear. You loved me once. You're not the kind that changes. I've said that to myself a thousand times—that you don't change. Won't you give up your picnic and let me take you somewhere to lunch so we can talk?"

"I couldn't let my uncle down." Jocelyn reasoned, dutifully. Making excuses to get away from Kent! It all became more and more unreal. She, who had hungered to see him, to have him telephone, stop in at the office, send her some word or sign that he thought of her, to be wishing that this interview were over, that he would go!

He looked at her a moment, puzzled. Then he said quite gently: "What changed you, Jocelyn?"

"Why—why—" she began stammeringly, and stopped. When she spoke it was in a lower tone, and slowly, as if she were formulating her idea for herself as well as for him. "Don't things sometimes change that way?" she asked simply. "That afternoon, before Thanksgiving, you know, when I went over to Covey's house. I was tired—I was tired of wanting to see you. My heart was—just tired. I'd hoped so long, waiting for telephones or for you to come in; I'd wanted you so horribly. And then suddenly, that night over at the cabin, it just—wasn't there. There was a blank. It had burned itself out, as I suppose it always does if it isn't right."

"How do you mean, 'if it isn't right'?"

"Well, that it wasn't. Not with us. If it can be an engagement and kitchen showers and a wedding and all that, it leads—don't you think so?—to a different kind of feeling. But ours wouldn't have."

"Ours can now," he said firmly. "Lilian is considering it. Of course her family doesn't want it. They're the sort who hate that kind of thing. But it's only a few weeks of unpleasantness, and then we are free. And Jocelyn, if that meant for you and me spring over there in Covey's cabin, and afterward work together somewhere in some other place that would mean happiness to you, wouldn't it, dear?"

She looked at him wonderingly, kindly. "But don't you see, Kent, it's—just dropped. When you came into the office that day to see me, when you said that you had made up your mind to stop it, that this was the end, how did you feel? Didn't you feel that the glow—the joy had gone out of it? That we were carrying on a dead affair?"

"No, never. Not for a minute!" he protested. She knew that he believed it. "I was thinking only of you," he said, "that I would be in Portland, and that you were too fine to be thinking of me, that some other man had a right to love you since I couldn't."

"And you don't think that now?" she asked simply.

"Now that we're talking of divorce, that changes it. Unless—is there anyone else?"

"No," Jocelyn said quickly. But her color rushed up.

"Then I am going to get my divorce," he said firmly, "and follow you wherever you are, and win you back again."

"Kent, I do ask you not to do that! You know how it is when a thing stops."

"It will come back. I thought it had stopped, too, when I talked to you that first day before Thanksgiving. It hadn't stopped. It was just that I was confused; I didn't know how to work it out. But when you came to me that night, Joy——"

"Jocelyn!" shouted a dozen voices somewhere out of sight toward the rear of the house. "Come on! We're starting!"

"I have to go," she said. "You wouldn't want to go along? It may be wettish."

"No, I'll not go along. When can I see you again?" he asked, shortly; deeply hurt.

Bing Visits Lad in Iron Lung

New York, Dec. 19 (AP) —An unassuming man entered a New York hospital Monday and asked to see Michael Lennon, 12-year-old poliomyelitis victim who has spent most of the last six months in an iron lung. "Hiyha, Mike," said the visitor as he entered the room. "Gee," the lad exclaimed, "hiyah, Bing." And then Bing Crosby and Michael talked for 15 minutes—mostly about horses and dogs.

FEWER TURKEYS ON HAND

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP)—Toronto has Christmas turkey problems. More turkeys have been shipped from the west this year than last, Ontario production is up, but wholesalers and retailers have only about half as many turkeys on hand as they had in 1944.

Storm Trooper Terrorism Told to Tribunal

By WES GALLAGHER

Nuernberg, Dec. 19 —(AP)— One brigade of Hitler's brown-shirted Storm Troopers alone blew up or burned 35 synagogues in a two-day outbreak of anti-Jewish terrorism, the prosecution told the International Military Tribunal today.

Evidence of violence and terror from the Storm Troopers' own records was presented to the tribunal in the prosecution's effort to place war crimes convictions against thousands of lesser Nazis, as well as the score of Hitler's top henchmen sitting in the courtroom prisoners box.

The prosecution said the Storm Troopers, also known as the S.A., were organized before Hitler's rise to power "to beat up and terrorize all political opponents."

The S.A. is the third Nazi organization to have its secrets laid bare before the court. The prosecution contends that six organizations should be convicted as criminal groups and that their members should automatically be held guilty of war crimes in varying degrees.

Evidence already has been presented against the Nazi Leadership Corps and the Reich Cabinet. Still remaining to have their day in court are the Elite Guard (S.S.), the German High Command and the Gestapo.

German records were produced in an effort to prove that the S.A., with the knowledge and consent of its members, was used:

1. To spread Nazi fanaticism;
2. To beat down political opposition by force;
3. To lead the campaign against the church, trade unions, and Jews; and
4. To build up the armed forces of Germany in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

The prosecution's contention that hundreds of thousands of minor Nazis should be automatically convicted of war crimes at the Nuernberg trial confronted the tribunal with the necessity of making a ruling on whether the proceedings will be dragged out by hearing from any member of accused organizations who wants to speak.

Already filed with the court are more than 30,000 applications from individual Nazis belonging to the accused organizations who are asking for permission to appear to defend themselves.

Western Union Employees To Strike January 7

New York, Dec. 19 — (AP) — Another country-wide walkout of union workers in support of demands for higher wages, involving 48,000 A.F.L. employees of Western Union, today was on the January calendar of scheduled strikes in the United States.

In accordance with a strike vote last Dec. 1, the general committee of the A.F.L. Western Union Commercial Telegraphers' Union ordered a strike for Jan. 7. The only employees of the communications system not to be affected are C.I.O.-affiliated workers in New York.

The Federal Conciliation Service failed to settle the dispute between the union and company on 13 issues, including union demands for a 25-per-cent wage-rate boost. Union officials cautioned all locals against any unauthorized strikes.

Other country-wide walkouts scheduled next month include the strike call of some 700,000 C.I.O. United Steelworkers for Jan. 14. The union is demanding a $2-a-day wage hike. The C.I.O. United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers Union also has announced a strike some time after Jan. 1 by its estimated 200,000 workers in 75 plants of General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors. Like the steelworkers, the electrical workers are demanding a $2-a-day hike and took a strike vote last week, approving a work stoppage.

Three Girls Meet With Strange Coincidence

Halifax, Dec. 19 — (CP)—The strange coincidence of how three Canadian girls married three English airmen while they were training in Canada, went overseas on the same ship to join their husbands, became widowed while in England, and then returned to Canada on the same ship became known here today.

The three women, Mrs. Elaine Ballantyne, Truro, N.S., Mrs. Dorothy Insley, Norwood, Man., and Mrs. Averil Barber, Toronto, returned to Canada a few days ago on the Monarch of Bermuda. They went overseas in July 1944 and became friends while sharing the same dormitory on the ship.

Mrs. Ballantyne had her first disappointment when the boat docked. Her husband, FO. Alex Ballantyne was on operations and unable to meet her. Six weeks later, without having a reunion with his wife he was killed.

Mrs. Insley and Mrs. Barber were not so unfortunate. Their husbands were on hand to greet them and take them to their new homes in a strange country.

The next of the three to meet death was Flt. Sgt. Howard Insley. He was killed with the rest of his crew when their bomber crashed deep in Germany in January of this year. Mrs. Insley had spent but one 18-day leave with her husband.

Warrant Officer Ron Barber, the third to meet death, was killed in a plane crash in England. Five months later a son, David, was born to 19-year-old Mrs. Barber.

During the 1½ years the three spent overseas they had no contact with each other. Each was anxious to return to her home in Canada, and little more than a week ago they met again — in the immigration office of Liverpool where they were sailing to Canada on the Monarch of Bermuda.

MERCHANTS REPORT LIGHT SHOPPING

There was not the usual surge of Wednesday morning shoppers in Belleville today. Merchants reported fairly light shopping in spite of the fact that Christmas is less than a week away. This was apparently due to the fact that the Belleville merchants cancelled their usual Wednesday afternoon holiday to accommodate Christmas shoppers.

Liquor store business was light due to a definite shortage of the better brands.

Electrical Interference Cause Of Much Annoyance to Radio Owners

With radio interference in many parts of the city becoming gradually worse, an increasing number of complaints from set owners in the affected areas are going in to the department of Transport, at Ottawa, according to radio repairmen in the city. Both East and West Hill districts are affected by many kinds of interference in radio reception, it was stated.

So bad is the interference in certain areas of the city that repairmen state they are out "all the time" checking imaginary radio ills when the trouble is only noise or interference of some nature. One radio repair shop owner stated that one out of five trouble calls received turned out to be noise for which there was no immediate remedy.

Prior to the war the department of Transport as a service to radio owners periodically checked through various centres for possible radio interference but for the past number of years their radio "trouble" car had not visited this district.

In the opinion of servicemen much of the interference troubling local set users could be eliminated by the installation of the proper type of shields on troublesome electrical equipment. Also tracing of the interference was stated to be a simple job, only time and the proper sensitized equipment being necessary.

One of the most troublesome types of interference to contend with however was that caused by fluorescent lighting, a type of lighting which is becoming more popular for business and industrial lighting.

The voice of the newly organized radio servicemen's organization in this city will shortly be added to the number of individual complaints which are going to the Department of Transport and it was considered if enough weight could be brought to bear o. the government department, some action would be taken regarding unsatisfactory radio reception in the city.

New Superbomber Outdoes B-29's

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The United States Army Air Force disclosed today some additional details of its coming superbomber, the Consolidated-Vultee XB-36. It said in a monthly publication, Air Force, that the huge plane was "about to take to the air."

A drawing of the bomber showed it with lines resembling those of the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, except that the six engines are set into the after part of the wing and the propellers push rather than pull.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the AAF, discussing the new weapon recently said it would weigh more than 250,000 pounds and have an operating radius of 5,000 miles. This compares with a peak gross weight of 140,000 pounds and about 1,600-mile radius for the B-29.

Air Force gave these general facts about the XB-36, being built at Fort Worth, Texas.

The fuselage is 163 feet long and 150 inches in diameter. The tail rises 46 feet 7 inches above the ground. Its fore and aft compartments are linked by a pressurized tunnel as in the B-29. The crew will total 17, including relief crew members. These will be sleeping accommodations and a galley to prepare hot meals. It will operate at more than 30,000 feet altitude and can make non-stop flights from Tokyo to New York as "a matter of course."

The engines will be Pratt & Whitney Majors, the four-bank radial, air-cooled monsters recently announced as having an emergency power rating of more than 3,650 horsepower each. Cooling will be by air taken in through ducts in the leading edge of the wing.

The wheels are 110 inches (nearly 10 feet) in diameter, and one tire weighs 1,500 pounds. The bomber will have a tricycle landing gear, with double main wheels and a single nose wheel.

INFANTS HURLED AGAINST WALLS SAY WITNESSES AT TRIALS

Moscow, Dec. 19—(AP)—Infants snatched from their mothers were hurled against stone walls and killed, and Germans, twice weekly during one period of the occupation carried on systematic shootings of large groups of men, women and children, witnesses testified yesterday as the Smolensk war crimes trial of 10 Germans entered its third day.

Napanee Discusses Temporary Repairs On Condemned Bridge

Napanee, Dec. 19 (CP)—Possibility of effecting temporary repairs to the condemned Napanee river bridge was discussed by the town council Monday night.

G. C. Wright, civil engineer of Kingston on whose decision the bridge was closed five months ago, was interviewed by town treasurer M. P. Graham by telephone during the council meeting and he refused to authorize use of the bridge or any temporary repairs declaring the steel work was unsafe.

Council then passed a motion to have a Toronto engineering firm make an inspection to see if emergency repairs could be proceeded with that would permit its temporary use. One of the main traffic arteries through the town is linked by the bridge and residents of south Napanee have been handicapped since it was closed.

Pamphlet Reveals Heroes of Blitz

London (CP)—How people in narrow, tumbledown streets fought back at—and sometimes laughed at—the bombing of Bethnal Green, north London, is told in a small paper-covered pamphlet.

Tucked away in its chronologically arranged facts and figures about bombs is the story of the tube station disaster in 1941 in which 173 people were killed. Their names are recorded in a big leather-covered book in the coroner's court.

Among all the tragedy and death appears the story of a Cockney woman:

Rescue workers had at last tunnelled their way through the debris of the last demolished house in a small street. An old lady and her daughter were trapped inside. After working eight or nine hours they managed to drag first the daughter and then the mother from under a table.

The mother's first words on emerging were: "I always said that was a good table."

Throughout Bethnal Green's blitz, which began in September 1940 and ended when the last V-2 fell in March this year, there were 269 major incidents in the area. More than 80 tons of bombs—including 11,00 incendiaries—were dropped causing more than 2,000 casualties.

MAKE THIS A Happy Christmas
FOR THE VETERANS

HELP THEM FIND A PLACE TO LIVE

Six years ago this month Canada's First Division landed in England. On the 25th of December, 1939 they spent their first Christmas away from home. This year thousands of them returned. December 25, 1945, will see them reunited with their families for their first Christmas since 1938.

It is a day they have looked forward to for many years, but for thousands of them it won't be a real Christmas. They will be spending it in one room. They will be eating Christmas dinner in restaurants. It will not be the Christmas they expected.

You Canadians who have unused space in your homes, however, can help. You can make this unused space available to a veteran. You can provide them with a place where they can be together with their wives and their children.

There is provision under Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations for short-term leases of five months or less in which the non-eviction regulations do not apply. Accommodation for five months or less would see many veterans over the winter period and would give them an opportunity to find more permanent accommodation.

There is provision also under which a large portion of the money received for rent of rooms can be exempt from income tax if the revenue is designated as the income of the wife or blood relative. Two-thirds of this income may be deducted as expense.

Canada's veterans need accommodation and need it badly in every section of the Dominion. They are looking to Canadians who can assist them in this emergency. Won't you be a good neighbour and rent to a veteran?

If you have space which you can make available, list it with the Citizens' Rehabilitation Committee, the local branch of the Canadian Legion, or Rooms Registry, 19 Campbell St., Phone 2738, advertise it in the newspapers or list it with a real estate agent.. Inquire at the nearest Rentals Office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board about five months or less rental agreements.. These are exempt from normal Wartime Prices and Trade Board non-eviction regulations, and five months tenancy will help many veterans through the winter.

ELECTRONIC DEVICE AIDS BLIND

Inventor Byron Brown, of Santa Monica, Calif., demonstrates a new electronic device to aid the blind. His mother is the "patient." Wearers can "feel" light, he says. The device is an eye glass equipped with light-sensitive selenium which transmits sound to the head-bone behind the ear when an obstruction comes between it and the light. Wearers must be educated to its use, however.

Nazi Elite Guard Surgeons Fired Poisoned Bullets Into Concentration Camp Prisoners

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 20 — (AP) — Nazi Elite Guard (S.S.) surgeons fired poisoned bullets into concentration camp prisoners and carefully recorded the symptoms accompanying slow death for the victims, German documents disclosed today at the war crimes trial on a score of Hitler's highest leaders.

Details of the notorious activities of the black-shirted Elite Guard were unfolded before the International Military Tribunal by Allied prosecutors to support their charges that the S.S. and five other once-powerful Nazi organizations should be convicted as criminal groups.

The poisoned bullet experiments resulted in the deaths of three of five prisoners selected, S. S. records disclosed.

The prosecution also recounted the experiments, previously reported at the Dachau war crimes trial, in which women prisoners were used to rewarm frozen men with the heat of their naked bodies.

The scientists eventually reported that the experiments, conducted for the air force and navy, disclosed that the practice of rewarming with women's bodies was inferior to "rapid rewarming" by artificial means.

As the court session headed toward a Christmas fortnight adjournment late today, only 20 of the accused Nazi leaders were in the prisoners' box.

Security Police Chief Ernst Kaltenbrunner, suffering from a recurrence of a cranial hemorrhage, was reported in somewhat improved condition but army hospital physicians were still concerned for his life. The 22nd defendant, Martinn Bormann, is still missing and is being tried in absentia.

Human beings used in the deadly experiments by the S.S. should be selected from the "mentally sick," said an order by Heinrich Himmler, Chief of the S. S. and Gestapo, read to the court. "Bedridden prisoners are to be drafted for desirable work which they can perform in bed," Himmler decreed.

S. S. men, according to another Himmler order, were enjoined to sire children — legitimate or otherwise at every opportunity.

Nationalization Bank of England Passed by House

London, Dec. 20 (CP)—Nationalization of the 250-year-old Bank of England won final approval in the Commons last night 306 to 126 and the measure was sent to the House of Lords.

Described by Labor Party members as "a great charter of freedom for the English people", the bill transfers the historic financial institution to public ownership, with administration by a governor, deputy governor and court of 10 directors appointed by The King.

The capital of the private bank was £14,953,000 ($64,760,850), it has paid 12 per cent dividends annually since 1923. Shareholders will be compensated with government stocks bearing three per cent interest.

Earlier today, Fuel Minister Shinwell presented the government bill providing for nationalization of the coal industry.

The measure, one of the key points in the Labor government program, was given formal first reading without division. Second and third readings will provide opportunity for debate and a vote and will not take place before the end of the Christmas recess Jan. 22.

Labor members cheered when it was read in the House. It would establish public ownership and control of the coal industry and would centralize its subsidiary organizations.

It was understood that Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who represents Glengarry County in parliament, would be at Cornwall to take part in welcoming ceremonies for the unit.

Three Children and Mother Leap Safely into Arms of Fireman

New York, Dec. 20 —(AP)— John Hoffmayer, 31, a fireman, saved three children and a mother when they leaped from the window of their blazing second storey apartment safely into his arms.

Hoffmayer had just returned from work, yesterday when he saw flames pouring out of the house next door. He knew his wife, away on a shopping trip, had left their child, John, 4, with Mrs. Frances Doyle, mother of two children, who occupied the top floor of the burning building.

Driven off by smoke and flames, he ran to the front of the building and called to Mrs. Doyle to drop the children.

Down came his son, then the Doyle children, Mary, two, and Walter, five, and then Mrs. Doyle, 41 — all landing safely in Hoffmayer's arms.

The children suffered only slight bruises and Mrs. Doyle shock.

MEYER IS QUERIED ON GERMAN PLAN IN CAEN BATTLE

Declares His Plan To Drive to Sea Had To be Given up Since Opposition too Strong

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 20 (CP Cable)—The alleged murder by German troops of 65 Canadian prisoners of war not included in the original 48 known to have been killed after their capture, was disclosed here today by Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor in the trial of S. S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer.

Meyer is charged with responsibility in the deaths of the original 48. He commanded a Panzer Grenadier regiment which fought the 3rd Canadian Division during the early stages of the invasion of Normandy in June, 1944.

Col. MacDonald, concluding his cross-examination of the accused in a stormy final hour, said that 65 more Canadian prisoners had been killed by the 12th S. S. Division, the unit which contained Meyer's regiment and which later was commanded by the 33-year-old German officer.

German Tactics.

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 20 — (CP Cable)— German tactics during the key Normandy battle of Caen in June, 1944, were the focal point of the prosecution's cross-examination of Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, former S. S. commander, here today.

Meyer, accused of responsibility in the murder of 48 Canadian prisoners of war captured and shot by the Germans shortly after the Allied invasion of Normandy, is on trial before a Canadian military court headed by Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax.

The German officer commanded a panzer grenadier regiment operating out of Caen which faced the 3rd Canadian Division when it was driving toward the French sea-port.

Today, Meyer and Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, sparred over details of the battle. Meyer said he had intended to drive through to the sea in the early days after the invasion but took up a defensive position June 7, a half-hour after his attack and recapture of Authie. The Canadians had taken Authie the day before.

Forces Opposing "Too Strong."

Meyer said the forces opposing him were "too strong in artillery, air forces and naval guns and therefore my plan had to be abandoned."

Confronted with several discrepancies between his account today of the alleged discovery that German prisoners of the Canadians had been murdered and an earlier statement, Meyer said:

"These are not two stories. when my earlier reference was made, it was given voluntarily. I did not consider it an interrogation."

The discrepancies centre around whether Maj.-Gen. Fritz Witt, commander of the German division in which Meyer commanded a regiment, was or was not with Meyer, as to whether bullet wounds were all in the heads of the Germans and whether there were four to five or seven to 10 bodies.

Meyer maintained he was right in saying the actual discovery of the bodies June 9 was the first he had seen or heard of "such a thing," since he considered rumors mentioned to him by a runner June 7, a fabrication which could not be supported by definite evidence. He therefore forbade their spread, he testified today.

Meyer said he gathered from the fact that the shot had resulted in head and chest wounds,

Konoye Says Emperor Took No Positive Steps To Control Militarists

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 20 — (AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye, who took poison rather than be tried for his diplomatic blunders, said in his memoirs that only Emperor Hirohito could have controlled the hell-bent-for-war militarists — but the Emperor took no positive steps.

Looking back on his long but futile peace negotiations with the United States, the former premier said the Emperor's hands-off policy not only with the army and navy but also with diplomats and members of government "was felt deeply."

Konoye said, however, there was no doubt of the Emperor's sincere wish for peace at all times. The memoirs were obtained by the Associated Press three days before Konoye committed suicide.

While Konoye's factual account of his second and third cabinets was not an attempt to fix blame for his failures, he condemned Japan's system of government which allowed the arms to have a free rein.

Konoye said that in the tense days following September, 1941, Hagashi-Kuni asked the Emperor why he remained aloof and that if he thought the situation was bad why didn't he come out and say so?

Konoye sought to explain "the fact the Emperor rarely voiced an opinion, to the degree in which it might be thought he was too hesitant."

He said the late Prince Saionju, an elder statesman, and Count Makino, former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, had influenced the Emperor to the point where the Mikado attempted to emulate the position of the King of England.

Konoye wrote, however, that the Japanese constitution differs from the British constitution in that it is built around personal rule of the Emperor.

MINISTERS MAKE STEADY PROGRESS IN MOSCOW TALKS

Indications Are Conference Will Not be Finished Before Christmas

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 20 — (AP)—The foreign ministers of Russia, Britain and the United States were reported making steady progress as they went into the fifth day of their conference today, but there were indications they did not expect to finish by Christmas.

First intimation that the meeting might go over into next week and possibly continue after Christmas was a disclosure by informed quarters that State Secretary Byrnes planned to attend the annual Christmas Eve dinner of the United States colony here Monday.

So far there has been no official estimate as to how long the conference will last, but observers pointed out that the ministers had before them a multiplicity of problems, some of which were extremely complicated, and that disposition of these issues would require time.

It also was pointed out that 3 plane-loads of Foreign Secretary Bevin's technical experts and advisors were delayed in Berlin, where they were grounded by bad weather. Weather also delayed the dispatch of conference documents to London by plane.

Short Session Wednesday

Messrs. Byrnes and Bevin conferred with Foreign Commissar Molotov only an hour and 15 minutes yesterday and today's meeting, scheduled to start at 4 p. m. (9 a.m. E.S.T.) also was expected to be short because of a reception which Mr. Molotov planned for 6 p.m.

There was no definite information as to which of the numerous problems on the agenda had been under discussion or just how far the ministers had gone toward disposing of any of them. Strict secrecy continued to surround the discussions.

Observers said, however, that the talks were proceeding smoothly and in an atmosphere of cordiality and good humor. This spirit was reflected yesterday at a luncheon which Mr. Molotov gave for his two guests and their advisors.

A good deal of joking was said to have gone on and Mr. Molotov toasted both Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Bevin, while they in turn toasted the Foreign Commissar. Toasts also were proposed to Premier Stalin, President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee.

Premier Stalin, just returned to Moscow after a 68-day vacation, received both Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Bevin yesterday and the Russian leader was reported looking "well and rested."

Letter Demands Turkey Yield Border Areas

Moscow, Dec. 20. (AP)—Leading Russian newspapers today published a 4,000-word letter from two Georgian Republic leaders who demanded that Turkey give up areas near the Turkish-Soviet frontier.

"We appeal to world opinion about the situation of our ancient land taken by Turkey," said the letter written by S. Djanashia and N. Berdzenishvili, both members of the Academy Oxmaeeilence of the Georgian Soviet Socialist republic.

"We are not talking about some small territorial dispute," the writers continued. "This concerns the seized cradle of our people—a crime which has cut in two our living national body. The people must get back their land."

SAYS M'ARTHUR AND RUSSIANS HAVE DISAGREED

Larry Tighe Reports Occupation of Jap Islands in Question

San Francisco, Dec. 20 — (AP) —Larry Tighe, American Broadcasting Company correspondent, reported today from Tokyo that Gen. MacArthur and the Russians had disagreed over which of the Japanese home islands Soviet forces would occupy, and that as a result Russians will not participate in the occupation at all.

Furthermore, Tighe said, Gen. MacArthur is reported to have told the American State Department yesterday that if he were not let alone, and if Russia were allowed any further participation in occupation affairs, he would resign.

"First the Russians wanted to bring an army over here," the correspondent said. "MacArthur said no. He would permit them to bring one division. But they insisted that they be allowed to occupy Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands. MacArthur again said no, with the implication that if the Russians ever got into Hokkaido they'd never be dislodged.

"MacArthur offered instead to let the Russians into southernmost Kyushu, which would put American troops between the (Russian) homeland and the occupying force. Then the Russians said no. MacArthur's answer to that amounted to 'All right, don't send an occupation force; we don't need it anyway.' "

Strike May End Before Christmas

Toronto, Dec. 20—(CP)—Hope that the 26-day old strike of about 400 workers at Brown's Bread, Ltd., would be ended by Christmas gathered today following Board of Control's authorization yesterday for Mayor R. H. Saunders to attempt a settlement.

Two A.F.L. unions, local 847 of the bakery wagon drivers and local 264 of the Bakery and Confectionary Workers, called the strike Nov. 25 in a bid to enforce demands for a union shop.

A delegation of more than 100 striking union men, three of them masquerading as Santa Claus appeared before the Board of Control to protest what they termed "police interference" at the picket line where violence has flared as strikers defied a police order not to engage in mass picketing.

Strikers booed and hissed as Controller D. A. Balfour said:

"The police are not there to hurt you fellows, but are only doing their duty. I am for the police when they are maintaining law and order."

As boos and catcalls drowned out the controller, Mayor Saunders intervened.

"Your deputation wasn't interrupted when your representation was made," the mayor told the noisemakers. "Please don't interrupt the controller again."

The scene around the bread plant was quiet yesterday in contrast to clashes between pickets and police Monday and Tuesday over the union's mass picketing.

Fifty men and a half dozen girls were passed through the picket line yesterday for the day shift amid strikers' jeers of "go home, scab."

The only woman news correspondent present at the signing of peace terms at Rheims that brought the European war to a close was Margaret Ecker of The Canadian Press.

PRISONER TELLS HOW MUSSOLINI WAS KIDNAPPED

Little Resistance Was Given by Italian Officer in Charge Says Witness

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 20 — (AP) — Details of the Mussolini kidnapping were disclosed today by Lt.-Col. Otto Skorzeny, Gestapo hatchetman who was assigned personally by Hitler to abduct his Axis partner from the forces of Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

Skorzeny, a six-foot-four-inch giant, who is a prisoner here and may be a defence witness at the war crimes trial, told Allied interrogators he was "very much surprised" when he was given the assignment.

Fifty paratroopers were assigned to him and they took off from Rome Sept. 12, 1943, in a number of planes during an Allied air attack. Three of the planes were lost because of the bombing attack, he said.

Their destination was the Sports Hotel, 6,500 feet above sea level, on Gran Sasso Mountain, highest peak in the Appennines, where Il Duce was being held prisoner.

"A parachute jump from such heights on such a small target seemed not feasible," Skorzeny said. " . . . although this was against strict orders . . . we decided that a crash landing was the only possible solution. We landed, partly damaged, 15 metres from the hotel. Two more planes followed our example.

"The guards were overcome. More of our planes landed, with the loss of two lives and several wounded. A few shots were fired, but the Italian colonel in command realized our numerical superiority and did not put up much resistance."

Mussolini was taken to a nearby airport, Skorzeny said, and they took off in a plane which had been sent to pick them up.

He added that the next day he took Il Duce to Hitler's headquarters and "my task was completed."

Bowmanville Rejects Proposal For Liquor Store

Bowmanville, Dec. 20 (CP)—By a vote of 1,097 to 813, Bowmanville residents yesterday, in an Ontario Liquor Control Act local option vote, rejected a proposal for establishment of a liquor store in the town.

ANNOUNCEMENTS MADE

Toronto, Dec. 20. (CP)—The Liquor Authority Control Board of Ontario today announced the reinstatement of one hotel beer and wine sale authority and the suspension of two other licences. The Russell House at Russell was reinstated after being suspended since Dec. 4. The Troubador Club at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was suspended because of a police conviction and the Dominion Hotel at Chesterville was suspended because of unsatisfactory police reports.

'Blue' Baby Treatment Making Revolutionary Strides at Baltimore

By JAMES E. HAGUE

Baltimore, Dec 20 (AP)—"Heretofore there has been no satisfactory treatment for pulmonary stenosis and pulmonary atresia. A 'Blue' baby with a malfored heart was considered beyond the reach of surgical aid."

Those words of a medical journal, meant one year ago, only one fate—early death—was in store for those children whose insufficiently-oxygenated blood gave their lips and fingernails a tell-tale blue.

The two persons who put the "heretofore" in the medical journal paragraph are Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig.

Dr. Blalock is professor of Surgery at the Johns Hopkins hospital. Dr. Taussig is chief of the Cardiac clinic at the Harriet Lane home for invalid children, the pediatrics division of Hopkins.

Today word of their genius has spread across a continent and across the seas. Letters, telegrams and cards from parents, grasping at any chance, beseech their help for the "blue" babies.

Two-year-old Gail Mitchell of Long Branch, Toronto suburb, is awaiting word from Hopkins as to whether her life can be saved by an operation there. The village council has established a "Gail Mitchell Fund" in an effort to raise $1,000—estimated cost of the operation.

The family physician, Dr. A. E. Noble, has expressed the opinion that the girl will not live past adolescence unless treatment can correct the heart condition which turns her color bluish.

Doctors say nothing can be done to save nine-months-old Sandra Reid, of Mimico, another Toronto suburb. The infant suffered from an enlarged heart, is a "mottled blue" in color due to respiratory difficulties. Doctors estimated at the child's birth that she could not live much longer than a year. Her case, too, has been referred to Hopkins.

The Hopkins team never asks the size of the families' bank accounts, but unfortunately, all can't be aided. The operation helps only those "blue" babies who fall into a certain category, technically known as the teralogy of Fallot.

Ford Strikers Vote To Return to Work, Arbitrate Dispute

Findings of the Arbitrator To be Binding on Both Sides

Ottawa, Dec. 20 —(CP)— Labor Minister Mitchell today announced the appointment of Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada as arbitrator in the dispute between the Ford Motor Co. at Windsor, Ont., and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

Windsor, Dec. 20 (CP)—The Ford Motor Company, following up the announcement that United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) voted in favor of the plan to end the 14-week-old union security strike, today issued a directive calling back preparatory shifts to get its plant ready to resume operations.

The company announced that all employees in steam, labor and plant protection departments are to return to work on regular shifts tomorrow. Office employees prevented from returning to work since the day after Local 200 called the walkout Sept. 12, are to report Dec. 26.

The company directive announced that production workers, forming the bulk of the 10,000 employees involved in the dispute, will be taken back as promptly as circumstances admit. There was no indication when this may be.

The move followed a two-day union-conducted ballot which union officials announced last night showed union members voted 72 to 28 per cent in favor of accepting a federal government plan to end the 99-day-old strike.

Previously the Ford strikers, seeking a Union shop and a dues check-off among other things, turned down the government settlement proposal by a 52 to 48 percentage vote. That was Nov. 29. But for the voting announced last night it was estimated that, of the Local's 8,500 members, perhaps as many as 25 per cent more voted than previously cast ballots.

The government plans call for appointment of an arbitrator who will deal with points in dispute after a period of negotiations between Union and Company. He will be named from among members of the Supreme Court of Canada and his decisions will be final and binding on both parties in this longest and most serious strike in the history of the Canadian automobile industry.

22 Points in Dispute

A total of 22 points are in dispute. But the most important are the Union's demands for a Union shop and a check-off system of dues payments. Other points deal with overtime pay, vacations with pay, seniority regulations and grievance procedure.

ON HIS WAY

Nottingham, Eng., Dec. 20 — (AP) — Pretty, dark-haired, Rita Blankley, whose father told an American paratrooper suitor to "come and see me after the war" last night heard that Dominick Casciara of New Canaan, Conn., was on his way.

"I am so excited I don't know what I'm doing," she said shyly.

Fear of Heavy Snowstorms Diminishes

Toronto, Dec. 20—(CP)—Fears of violent snowstorms in southern Ontario east and west of Toronto diminished today as only the Niagara Peninsula reported heavy snowfall.

At Niagara Falls and Fort Erie the snow continued to pile up imposing drifts as a wind shift from southwest to due east whipped up a violent storm. Across the Niagara River Buffalo has been paralyzed by snow conditions since Saturday.

Today's forecast called for scattered flurries in the Toronto and Georgian Bay areas and light snow along Lake Superior.

The Ontario Department of Highways announced today that all its traffic arteries are open for traffic today. Last night motorists were warned against night travel on highways between Toronto and Niagara Falls, Ont., but snowplows cleared out the snow barrier during the night.

"All highways are in good condition today," said a spokesman.

At St. Thomas, loaded freight cars jammed Pere Marquette Talbot yards last night as the second consecutive day passed without a single train moving eastward over normally busy lines. Nearly six feet of snow clogged Buffalo yards and trains were held here until traffic could be resumed.

Roomer Dies Of Asphyxiation

Toronto, Dec. 20 —(CP)— A middle-aged roomer died of asphyxiation and 33 other persons, mostly university students, fled into the icy streets early today when a fire swept the top storey of a three-storey rooming house in midtown and threatened an adjoining rooming house. Dense smoke filled both dwellings.

Two firemen suffered slight injuries fighting the blaze, during which the body of James Hollinger, 56, was found in his bed in his fire-charred rear attic room on St. Joseph Street.

Firemen said position of the body indicated Hollinger had attempted to escape but had been overcome by the smoke fumes. The fire was believed to have started in his room from live tobacco ashes dropped on a chesterfield.

Fifteen persons fled the house in which the fire started and 18 were forced out of the adjoining residence. Some personal belongings were ruined by smoke and water.

Those forced out, some half of them in night attire, were accommodated overnight in nearby residences.

PROTEST BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENT

SOCIAL CREDIT PARTY TO HELL WITH BRETTON WOODS

Trafalgar Square, London, Eng., was the scene of an original demonstration against the Bretton Woods agreement. A policeman is shown asking demonstrators their names. The man, who gave his name as W. Graham, is dressed to represent a dollar magnate with a huge cigar and a silk topper decorated with a dollar sign. He is accompanied by a woman chained to him by several yards of heavy "golden" chain, representing the "gold standard." The lady carries a banner expressing her sentiments regarding the Bretton Woods agreement.

Great Charm of Manner Possessed By 'Little Old Lady' of 90 Years

She is in a literal sense of the words, a "little old lady".

But her physical appearance and mental facilities belie the fact that she has seen four score years and ten.

Add to this an amazing vitality, a personality that years have failed to rob of its charm, and a sense of humor that time has not affected and you have a picture of Mrs. George Bush who resides with her daughter-in-law Mrs. Ross Bush, at 12 Pine Street.

This smiling lady, who first saw the light of day in the "roaring fifties," whose eyes twinkle with unexpressed mirth at modern witticisms, and whose keen mind is still as alert as it was twenty years ago, celebrated her ninetieth birthday last Monday.

And had her husband been living, she would have joined him on Tuesday in the celebration of their 63rd wedding anniversary.

She defied social etiquette and tradition by being the "life of the party" at an afternoon tea and evening celebration tendered her by a large number of friends on Monday evening.

Retentive Memory

Yesterday she reminisced with newspapermen. A retentive mind brought back many episodes of her yesteryear. She is not bromidic in her reasons for living to such a ripe old age.

"I've been good all my life," she smiled, "and never expected to live past eighty. Of course I've lived a good life, but didn't think it was so good as to cause me to live this long."

And Mrs. Bush spent several years of her life "in jail". Not in the general acceptance of the phrase, for her late husband was governor of the Lincoln County jail for a number of years.

"Sure, I've been in jail, and it was a pleasant experience," she commented.

Another amazing feature of this remarkable lady is the fact that with the exception of the birth of her children and a slight accident a few years ago, she has never required the services of a doctor.

She was born in Beamsville, in 1855 and lived in that district for a number of years. Her husband conducted a large fruit farm prior to his appointment as jail governor. Later she moved to Belleville where she has resided for the past twenty-four years.

Enjoys Young People

Mrs. Bush is a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, and up until a few years ago took an active interest in all its women's organizations. She is a lover of young people and even to this day is delighted to have them with her.

Three children were born to the family. The late Ross Bush, 12 Pine Street, a C.N.R. conductor who died a few years ago, Clare, a daughter and registered nurse, who was a victim of the 'flu epidemic of 1918, and Howard, who at present is living in St. Catharines.

One of the happiest moments of her life occurred this week, when a grandson, Corporal William Bush, Wooler, returned from lengthy service overseas. The soldier made a special trip to see his grandmother and the reunion added to the happiness that was already hers on the occasion of her birthday and anniversary.

She has two grandsons and one great-grandson.

MRS. ELLA (CASKEY) REID

Mrs. Ella Reid, widow of Robert Reid, formerly of Stirling, and late residence, 83 West Bridge Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday afternoon after an illness of one week's duration.

Stirling Motorist Has Narrow Escape From Electrocution

Carl A. Phillips, 24, of Stirling, escaped possible death by electrocution only by inches following a highway accident on Highway No. 33, Wednesday night when his car went out of control to crash into a hydro pole bringing high tension wires to within inches of his auto.

Proceeding south towards Trenton, Phillips' auto left the highway approximately five miles north of Trenton and crashed into a hydro pole in the west ditch. The pole broke allowing the high tension wires to descend to within inches of the car. Grass near the auto was burned to a crisp beneath a light covering of snow when the current laden wires came into contact with the ground.

Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell investigated the accident and stated that charges would be laid against Phillips. Although no one was injured as result of the accident the car was badly damaged in addition to the pole being broken, it was stated.

COUNTY COURT

With Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan indicating his unwillingness to accept a summary of the evidence from police officers following a plea of "not guilty" by Ralph Leavens on a charge of careless driving, county court was of short duration today as the above case was the only one presented for trial.

Three other traffic cases involving charges of operating a motor vehicle without a permit, of careless driving and of failing to report an accident, were enlarged until next week at the request of the Crown. Four charges of assault against two Shannonville youths were also enlarged when counsel for the accused was late in appearing at court.

"I've tried to educate traffic officers that a summary of the evidence can be taken only when a plea of guilty is entered," commented Crown Attorney Donnan, following the plea of "not guilty" by Leavens on the careless driving count. "When a plea of not guilty is entered, in fairness to the accused party all witnesses must be called."

Magistrate T. Y. Wills complained of the apparent little interest being taken by complainants following the lay of non-support charges. Three such cases were listed for trial at the morning's court but only in one instance was the complainant present.

"The apparent little interest being shown by the complainant in these cases might indicate that the charges not be entertained," commented the magistrate as all three cases were enlarged.

POLICE REPORT LOOT STOLEN FROM BANK RECOVERED IN FULL

Montreal, Dec. 20 — (CP) — Provincial Police said last night that two men were arrested at St. Roch de L'Achigan, 30 miles north of Montreal, two hours after they had allegedly held up the branch of the Banque Provinciale du Canada in St. Roch. Police did not release the names of the men, but said the $4,500 stolen from the bank was recovered in full.

BALLOT REMAINS SAME

North Bay, Ont., Dec. 20—(CP) —A scrutiny, made at the request of the North Bay Daily Nugget, of ballots cast in the Dec. 3 by-law vote on a $20,000 city grant towards a Canadian Legion Memorial Hall yesterday showed the by-law was defeated 897-861, more decisively than previous results had indicated.

Rebuild Purifier At Gas Plant

It was decided at the last meeting of the year of the Public Utilities Commission held on Tuesday to rebuild the purifier at the gas plant in order to eliminate the obnoxious odor that has been prevalent in some places where gas is used. The Commission members were unanimous in this decision and relief can be expected in a short time. Mayor Follwell inquired as to why city water used by the firemen to flood the B.C.I. rink was not available and Mr. Scott informed the Commissioner there were no cushions erected and it would be useless to put on a great quantity of water at one time because it would all run away.

The Commission was unanimous that every assistance would be given the Corbin Lock Company with respect to water and conveniences when their new plant was erected. The manager was authorized to request of Mr. McLean, the resident manager, a set of plans of the proposed building. Mayor Follwell inquired if any sprinkler systems in the city were metered and he was answered in the affirmative and was also told that the Utilities buys the meters.

Lights all Repaired.

It was reported by the Manager that all the street decoration lights were repaired and working at the present time. Mr. Scott stated that some of these lights were damaged when they were pulled from their moorings during VJ-Day celebration. Mayor Follwell stated that he had enjoyed his first year as Commissioner and thanked the manager and other members of the Commission along with the entire staff for the courtesy and co-operation shown him. Chairman Wotten passed on the vote of thanks to the Manager and staff and stated that the Commission or manager was always ready to inform the hydro consumers on all matters. "If the facts were obtained there would be less friction," stated the chairman.

Mr. Morley Duff stated he did not know of a year when the work was carried on so harmoniously as this year. Mr. Scott thanked the Commission for their vote of thanks and stated it was a great assistance to carry on the work when the Commission supported the effort.

BLUE BABY

The artery which pumps blood to the lungs is defective in babies in this group.

Yet both doctors knew that to clear the obstructed passageway to the lungs by operating on the main pulmonary artery had one fatal drawback. The artery would have to be stopped off for the operation. If that were done more than a few minutes, death would follow.

That is why surgical history was made in an amphitheatre at Hopkins, Nov. 29, 1944.

The bright lights burned down on an unconscious little girl whose initials were E. M. S. Dr. Blalock drew his scalpel across the left side of her chest, and exposed the two branches of the main pulmonary artery, fuel line to the lungs.

Then he cut clear another artery, one of the branches of the aorta, the great vessel which carries blood to all the body but the lungs. He severed this branch artery. He stopped the flow of blood in the left pulmonary artery. While it would have been fatal to occlude the main pulmonary channel, it was possible to stop one of its branches.

He opened the left artery to the lung and sewed the mouth of the severed subclavian artery to it.

Thus, he had bypassed the defective blood vessel and provided an auxiliary supply of blood, via the subclavian detour, for the lungs. The part of the body usually served by the severed artery was deprived for a time of its normal blood supply. But nature can handle things like that by setting up substitute arterial pathways. Only when nature doesn't get enough life-essential oxygen is she stumped for an answer.

Since then, Dr. Blalock has performed 65 such operations. each takes up to three hours and the surgical feat is now known as the "Blalock operation."

Dr. Taussig does the preliminary work. She makes the first decision after patients are referred to her by private doctors. (Patients are not accepted directly. If that decision is favorable, the child is brought to Hopkins where an intensive examination and, finally, a Blalock-Taussig conference determines whether or not the case is operable.)

The operation can fail, and parents are so warned.

Only a few days ago Simcoe said he preferred hanging to life imprisonment.

Election Stands as Majority is Increased by 5 to 6 in Recount

Picton, Dec. 20—Election of Dwight O. Reynolds as deputy reeve of Hollowell was confirmed as a result of a recount held at the county building before Judge W. S. Lane, Tuesday. Earlier returns gave Reynolds a majority of five over the present deputy reeve, Burton Pearsoll. In the recount the majority was increased to six. There were a number of ballots spoiled in voting for councillors, but this did not affect the votes for deputy reeve candidates whose names appeared on the same ballot.

EVER SEE A SETTER SETTEN' PRETTY?

This Irish setter of high degree has no use for weather of low degree, so when the temperature got as cold as eight degrees above zero in New York, he did something about his bodily comfort. The master's old hunting cap and muffler came in mighty handy to stave off the bite and augment the pooch's home-grown fur coat.

6 TEAMS ENTER INTERMEDIATE 'A' GROUPS OF O.H.A.

Single Schedule Will be Played and Winner Must be Declared by March 8

Six teams of the district will operate in the Intermediate "A" Group 1, it was learned at a meeting of teams' representatives held here Wednesday night, under the converership of Frank Buckland, Peterborough.

The teams include, Belleville Redmen; Kingston Locos; Oshawa Red Raiders; Oshawa Legion; Peterborough, and Whitby.

The surprise package of the meeting, and as it afterwards proved, a welcome one, was the last minute entry into the group of a second Oshawa squad and the puckists from Whitby.

Legion will play their home games at the Uxbridge rink with the exception of one which will be played here, while the Petes will use Omemee ice as their home stamping grounds.

A single schedule was adopted after lengthy discussion which saw a proposed double schedule vetoed due to finances and distance. It was felt that a single list of games would alleviate these problems to a certain extent and at the same time provide extra time for playoffs.

Playoffs Arranged

First and third and second and fourth teams will enter the playoffs, in a three-of-five series while finalists will also play the same number of games if necessary. March 8 is the date of announcement of a group winner, thanks to a time extension on the part of the O.H.A.

Playoffs are due to start Feb. 13, with finals tabbed for Feb. 27 to the 8 or 9 of March. Open dates have been provided to allow for weather or other phases of postponement.

The question of referees started a more or less lively debate with the majority of the representatives favoring the home-town arbiters and the remainder O.H.A. appointments, during the regular schedule. Outside officials, however, will act in the playoff series. It was finaly decided to use home referees and a list was submitted to the convener.

Referees Chosen

These include, Bill Morrison, Oshawa; Peg Hurst, Whitby; Yip Radley, Bill Watts, Mike Rodden, Kingston; "Toots" and "Bouncer" Holway Belleville; Jim Ellis, Peterborough, and Max Reesor, Markham.

In the final playoff series, Convener Buckland pointed out the team finishing the highest will be given the privilege of the third home game if the series goes to five, but the gates will be split with the visitors. In other words, if the third place team defeats the first placers and is drawn against the second place team in the finals, the latter gets the third home game of the series.

Representatives at the meeting included, "Dingo" Haynes, Kingston; Frank Butler, Speedy St. Louis, Belleville; J. Childerhouse, Oshawa Red Raiders; W. Moore, Whitby; Art. Leal, Peterborough, and E. Kennedy, Oshawa Legion.

In the opening games of the loop, Oshawa Legion goes to Peterborough on Jan 4; Oshawa Raiders will meet Whitby at Whitby on the 7, and Belleville will journey to Kingston, Jan. 5.

The official schedule is published elsewhere in this edition.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 20 (AP)—Picture of a guy going home for Christmas—Jimmy Stewart.

For the first time in seven years Jimmy will be back home in Indiana, Pa., for the yule season.

"Gee, it ought to be great," the lanky ex-Colonel said, "although I guess it will be a little cramped. My two sisters and their husbands and one child will be there too and the house wasn't built for that kind of crowd."

Jimmy won't start work on the Frank Capra picture, "It's A Wonderful World," until February and by that time he will have had four months of vacation since his return from overseas with the United States Army Air Force.

Jim finds Hollywood has changed very little. A few new faces, but otherwise the town is pretty much the same. He is slightly concerned about going to work again. "There are lots of tricks to acting in front of a camera and a guy is liable to forget them in five years."

Director John Ford wants Tyrone Power to play the lead in a picture to be titled "My Darling Clementine"... Ty will probably do it after the filming of Somerset Maugham's best-selling "The Razor's Edge"... Trumpet King Harry James will take a six-week vacation starting next week... Gluesome twosomes: Singer Lena Romay and British Peter Lawford night-clubbing; Diana Lynn and Charles Victor at Monday's dinner given by the Canadian government in appreciation of Hollywood aid in the Dominion's war effort... Rod Cameron and Vancouver's Yvonne De Carlo at the same event — but his engagement to Janice Paige was announced the same day... Veteran Richard Dix says he's going to build a boxing and wrestling arena in the film capital... And Penny Singleton of the "Blondie" series is another flu casualty.

My favorite statistician comes up with the startling news that six of the players in "Three Wise Fools" can boast a total of 189 years of acting experience. Here's how they add up: Lionel Barrymore, 62 years; Lewis Stone, 45; Edward Arnold, 34; Jane Darwell, 27; Thomas Mitchell, 18. It's the other cast member who brings the average down — Margaret O'Brien can supply only three years' experience.

Receipt of Fags Helps So Much To Maintain Morale

The days of waiting for repatriation back to Canada are long for thousands of Canadian service personnel still overseas, but receipts of parcels and cigarettes from home do much to maintain morale.

Just this is repeatedly emphasized in letters of appreciation received by the local Kinsmen Club from soldiers, airmen and sailors still overseas who claim that regular parcels of cigarettes received from the Belleville club do much to help pass the time while waiting for repatriation.

A fine example of this is the letter recently received from Sgt. R. H. Adams who assured he can never thank Kinsmen enough for kindness shown while he has been overseas. "I expect to be home about the second or third week in January and it sure will be good to see the old home town. Only when you go too far away for too long do you realize half the meaning of home."

At Christmas time is a splendid opportunity for Belleville residents to assist in assuring that cigarettes will still continue to go overseas, just so long as Belleville boys are away from home. A nickel, a dime or a quarter dropped into any Kinsmen Fag Fund box will do much to keep the "smokes" going across.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund:

G. C. Allison, A. E. Angel, Ed. Aylesworth, R. C. Brown, C. E. Buker, W. G. Bush, J. W. Clarke, F. A. Douglas, Thos. Draddy, R. Finkle, John Gardner, Wm. Green, E. Halpin, W. L. Hayes, A. S. Kalman, R. L. Keegan, J. J. Kerby, J. Lazenby, A. W. Marner, Doris Matthews, H. McDougall, J. McCabe, W. Preston, E. Salter, C. Schaefer, G. C. Scott, W. E. Taylor, C. Webb, G. Whalen, V. Whiteley, J. Anton, G. Harrow, J. Bone, L. Boudeau, W. Bradshaw, J. Bulman, R. G. Butler, G. E. Cross, R. E. Gold, P. J. Hart, D. S. Hill, M. Maracle, A. Masters, O. Moore, G. Morran, W. Murray, B. McCann, T. Neal, R. Panter, T. Pearson, N. Pomeroy, G. W. Reid, T. E. Reid, E. Roberts, W. N. Scott, F. H. Smith, F. M. Sprague, H. Theobald, D. Windsor, Tom Mason.

Christmas cards were received by Kinsmen Club from the following: H. McDougall, B. Brown, Jack Mills, W. E. Worrell, Alf Cooper, Burt Boyle, D. P. Burley, S. S. Valleau, M. Maracle, C. H. Austin and N. Luscombe.

FORD STRIKE

Voting on the government's arbitration formula started Tuesday and ballots called for a straight "yes" or "no" acceptance or rejection of the plan. Some 6,000-odd Union members were estimated as having voted.

Windsor received the news joyfully but calmly. Immediately the vote was known pickets were given the word to leave the lines they held about the widespread Ford properties since Sept. 12 when the strike started.

In many ways the strike caused a tie-up of the city's normal living habits. Not only were the four plants of Ford Company affected but many feeder plants were indirectly hit as were automobile and industrial type companies in other parts of Canada.

Police to Leave City

Special squads of Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Ontario Provincial Police, sent into Windsor early in November with orders to maintain law and order, were expected to leave the city almost immediately. They were never called into action.

It appeared improbable that any great number of men would be called back to work before the new year although plans called for their return as speedily as possible. Cleaning squads received the first back-to-work call.

This second vote on the government formula was agreed upon when a slight change in the plan was suggested by the Union. The 100 or so men at Union headquarters took the vote news quietly and sent word to the company at once.

Up To Arbitration Now

"It's up to arbitration now," said one rugged picket as he came off the line, where, back on Nov 5, it had looked as though violent developments were to come.

It was then that the famous "automobile barricade" was formed in front of a section of the plant property, coincident with the arrival in Windsor of special police. The aim was to form a barricade through which police would not be able to pass in any attempt to break the picket line. Many strikers used their own cars but many private automobiles also were directed into the tangled mass of traffic, to be released later by Union men.

The alteration called for by the Union in the original government plan was the setting of a five-day time limit, if possible, on arbitration of points which cannot be settled by negotiation. Earlier, after rejecting the government-sponsored plan, the Union suggested a 24-hour-time limit on arbitration—a point the Company said it could not accept together with the suggestion that workers remain on strike while the arbiter went to work.

This strike marked the peak of four years of troubled relations between Company and Union, involving four major work stoppages. And this walkout stemmed back to a walkout in April-May, 1944, when 14,000 men were idle in a dispute over interpretation of grievance procedure in the bargaining contact.

When the 1945 strike started office workers remained at their jobs the first day but from Sept. 13 picket lines barred their entry and finally halted entry of Ford security police.

Canada's Record Loan

Canada raised $2,022,473,800 in the Ninth Victory Loan, the greatest financial achievement in the Dominion's history. This total, just announced, shows first of all the Canadian people's devotion to the cause of their country and the maintenance of her freedom and their "gratitude for victory" and "faith in the future," to use the words of Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley.

Canada is a young and virile nation, one of the nations of the earth that has found her place high in the ranks of world powers. She feels intense gratitude for her association with Britain and the British Commonwealth in the cause of freedom. She is rich in natural resources and her people can point with pride and also with with gratitude to what they were able to do in the hour of danger and in the time of victory and they are grateful that their means were such that they could draw upon them so freely and support the recent loan. Those who were unable to serve in the forces realize their great debt to the men who served and the men who served lent their willing aid in no uncertain form when they poured in their subscriptions to the loan so that the full fruits of victory might be gathered.

Even since the war closed and the momentous discussions have been going on in conferences and the press and revelations have been made of the sinister plots of the enemy, the people of Canada have seen more and more how much it mattered that they were able to do so much to win since the enemy stands exposed as the most evil and enslaving power of aggression mankind has ever known. In the years of war no one doubted the great strength and the evil force that the aggressors commanded but that knowledge is amplified today by revelations of the satanic nature of Nazism and Japanese imperialism. No wonder then that Canadians supported the latest loan with their enthusiasm and resources. It was what a responsible and grateful people would do that Canada did do in going far beyond the loan's nominal objective.

It is therefore not to be wondered at that Canadians everywhere heard the appeal and felt their obligation to their country to do their utmost.

With thanksgiving they realize that their country was untouched by the foe, because Britain and the rest of the United Nations put up so successful a struggle that the enemy could not strike the Empire nations beyond the seas.

By liberally supporting the loan the people have made secure the future, both for the returned men and for those who were unable to proceed overseas and carried on the fight in the industrial and other fields. By taking money out of their savings accounts or by pledging themselves to save for another year in order to buy the most bonds they could they have done something that will help to prevent inflation. In that they have helped their country and also every Canadian.

The loyal support of the loan proves that the people like to have a financial part to play in the Canada of the future and of the Canada to which returning service folk have come and are coming to be rehabilitated and re-established into civilian life.

The loan is a great national task steadfastly carried out. Those who participated besides showing their loyal support of this necessary undertaking have proven their wisdom in investment in the best of securities.

Canada has appeared before the world as a nation possessed of great resources of the spirit which her sons revealed so clearly in many a battle on the Continent of Europe, on the sea and in the air and of great natural resources which went into the making of the Allied war effort. To those triumphs she has added the triumph of her financial strength as shown in the response to the latest loan.

From the Continent

Canadian forces, all but occupation forces, will be off the Continent or leave the Continent by the end of January, it was announced Wednesday.

A very great task will soon be completed. Since the summer there has been a steady flow of service men and service women from overseas to their homes in Canada.

The movement has been carried out with expedition to the satisfaction of the forces which were abroad and to the people of Canada. Since the return of the troops began, possibly not a single day passed but in some part or corner of Canada one or more local receptions welcomed those back from the wars in Northwestern Europe, in Italy and in other parts of the world. Many scores of thousands who last year were in Northern Europe and Italy for Christmas will celebrate the festival at their firesides in Canada, thousands of miles from the scenes of conflict of a year ago.

Anti-Alger

By a single paragraph taken from its columns of 50 years ago The New York Law Journal destroys the faith of all old gaffers in the realism of Horatio Alger, Jr. Thus the extract:

"John Knecht stopped a runaway horse belonging to Edward Michel, Jr., a livery stable keeper at 433 East Twelfth Street, on December 23, 1892, and, while endeavoring to find the owner, was arrested on a charge of stealing, preferred by Michel's foreman. After being imprisoned for several days, he was discharged. He brought suit for false imprisonment against Michel, and yesterday, on the trial of the case in city court, it was dismissed by Judge Newburger, it being shown that the charge of stealing was the unauthorized act of an employee."

In the case of the standard Alger hero, stopping a runaway horse was invariably the prelude to winning the hand of the banker's beautiful daughter. In real life in New York a half-century ago, it appears it was the sure way to spend Christmas in jail.

Fundy Trail

Potentially one of the richest, but actually one of the least developed, tourist regions in the Province of Nova Scotia is the Bay of Fundy shore from Blomidon to Digby, says The Halifax Herald. Picturesque, in places overlooking the rich Annapolis Valley, in others the sweeping ocean-tides (among the highest in the world), it is not served adequately with roads. In fact, the very presence of navigable waters accounts for the absence of a highway for six miles in a place a dozen or so miles, as the gull flies, from the oldest white settlement in North America.

What was good enough for the pioneer settlers, whether farmers or fishermen, is not adequate to today's needs, however.

That is why a delegation has called upon the Government of Nova Scotia to improve what is hoped will become known as the Fundy Trail.

Lake Ontario is at Work

(Hamilton Spectator)

If the desire is to own a boathouse, cottagers who live along Lake Ontario east of the city are in a fair way to getting what they want. At one point erosion is said to have wiped out a depth of 131 feet of land within twenty-three years, which is an average loss of about five and a half feet a year. Old Lake Ontario will soon be back to the Niagara escarpment at that rate.

What promises to be a fast and exciting game of hockey will be played at the local rink on Christmas night when a team from Peterboro will stack up against the local O.H.A. bunch. There will surely be something doing and it will be a good chance to get a line on the lads who will represent Belleville in the O.H.A. this season. Canadian Army Has Helped In Recovery of the Netherlands

By WILLIAM BOSS
C. P. War Correspondent

Amsterdam (CP)—Six years after the first Canadian troops crossed the Atlantic, almost all Canadian army personnel have left the Continent for home and virtually all but the one-division Canadian Army Occupation Force will be in Canada in March.

To the 3rd Infantry Division will be left the task of teaching the people of northwest Germany that, this time, their armies were soundly beaten in the field.

In the first half of 1945 Gen. H. D. G. Crerar's 1st Canadian Army—disbanded July 31 with its commander's return to Canada—had surged with other Allied forces across the Rhine to force unconditional surrender of Germany. Heavy bombers of the R.C.A.F. helped pave the way for the land victory, and Canadian fighter planes swept the roads and railways clear of German transport. Canadian navy craft, convoying merchantmen across the Atlantic, kept open the vital supply lines to the arsenal of North America.

Once Germany fell, the "demilitarization" of the Canadian soldier began. Military training was stopped; weapons and equipment turned in; and parades were reduced to the minimum required for fitness and military smartness.

Study Organized

In their place appeared lectures on current affairs, rehabilitation, housing and land legislation. Discussion groups were organized and the troops began to think of themselves again as individuals. Entertainment was organized on a vast scale to make more bearable the time until repatriation.

The restoration of life, personal and public, along democratic lines was begun among the civilian population. German service personnel were kept penned up north of the Ems-Jada Canal until discharged and the area was stripped of every vestige of military installations.

Memorable 1945 began with winter patrolling north of Nijmegen in the Northwest Europe theatre; and with the advance to the Senio and the clearing of the Vale di Comacchio in Italy. Then, while troops of the 1st Canadian Army pressed through the Reichswald and Hochwald and invested Cleve, Calcar and Zanten, the 1st Canadian Corps secretly packed up and moved from the Mediterranean to Belgium and Holland in the war's longest movement by a fully-equipped corps.

The Rhine crossed, Canadian soldiers fought at Emmerich one of the bitterest engagements encountered by any troops across the river, and then kept forth in a two-pronged offensive. The 2nd Canadian Corps headed north into Germany with Moppen, Kusten Canal, Bad Zwischenahn, Oldenburg and Varal among its last battles. The 1st Canadian Corps sped west beyond the Ijssel River and knifed north from Arnhem to the Zuider Zee. Apeldoorn liberated, it squared up to the Grebbe Line.

Rehabilitation Aided

Even before the war ended Canadian food, trucks, and medical teams rushed through No-Man's-Land to aid hungry Holland and Canadian military government officials helped the country take up anew the management of her own affairs.

Holland went wild at its liberation but the exuberance diminished as improved conditions reduced the first extravagant appreciation of the liberators. Dutchmen disliked the Canadians' failure to invite them when their own womenfolk were being entertained in military clubs, restaurants and theatres. There were some disturbances but ultimately harmony was developed. Canadian units turned rehabilitation training into constructive channels, benefitting not only the soldier-students but entire Dutch communities.

Meantime, the Canadian repatriation scheme gained momentum. Early criticism by the troops was largely dissipated. Now all five divisions are off the continent and of Army troops, headquarters personnel, and lines and communications setups, it is estimated only 10,000 officers and men will be waiting Jan. 1 for evacuation to England.

Parties are being held at Christmas for Dutch children but Canadians in Germany cannot treat local youngsters as they have done in other countries. Children's parties remain among the few social diversions on the forbidden list.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 20 (AP)—Britain's august House of Lords has averted an extremely dangerous crisis for itself by bowing to the will of the Labor government and voting for the United States loan.

It is possible—though it must remain a matter of speculation—that the Lords might have destroyed themselves had they defied the government. The British press had published the blunt, though unofficial, warning that a revolt on the part of the peers would spell their end as a legislative body.

The House of Lords lost most of its authority back in 1911 when Liberal Prime Minister Asquith jammed through so-called parliament act which deprived the Lords of their veto power over the House of Commons. He achieved this through one of the most dramatic coups in British political history.

Mr. Asquith first carried the issue to the country in a general election which returned his government to power, thus giving him the mandate to act. With that, the Commons passed the act depriving the Lords of their veto, and the measure then came before the upper chamber itself.

Naturally the peers revolted against committing hara-kari and it was then that Mr. Asquith made an unprecedented move. He threatened that if the Lords did not accept the act he would advise the King to create a sufficient number of Liberal peers to ensure its passage—advice which the King was bound to accept.

The Lords bowed to the inevitable.

Under the parliamentary act the House of Commons has to pass and repass a measure through three separate sessions of parliament to nullify opposition to the Lords. Thus the upper house can delay legislation heavily, although it cannot make its veto stick.

It was because of the danger of delay in the matter of the loan that the old Asquith threat was revived in the press.

The intimation was that the government would advise the King to create enough Labor peers to dominate the position. There has been no official confirmation of such intention, however, and I doubt whether Prime Minister Attlee would make such a move without holding another general election to place the issue before the country.

Because the Lords have been shorn of their main powers, and because few of the 800 or more members turn out for the sessions—the attendance generally ranges from 50 to 70—the impression has spread abroad that the upper house is mainly a display room for ermine and coronets. That is an erroneous idea, for the Lords perform a most useful service.

It should be remembered that most, or at least many, of the peers are created because of distinguished public service.

Thus the active part of the House of Lords comprises men of all walks—doctors, lawyers, surgeons, economists and many members not from the aristocracy. Obviously such a body of men comprise an invaluable advisory board for the House of Commons, and their debates have great influence on legislation in the lower house. Lord Keynes, for example, could not have appeared in the Commons to give details of the loan negotiations and express his personal convictions. But the Commons and the country got his views through the House of Lords.

Snow-Loader Works Well in Owen Sound

Owen Sound, Dec. 20 (CP)—Owen Sounders raised an eyebrow at reports of 68 inches of snow at Buffalo, shrugged their shoulders, and went busily about their business of Christmas shopping, little affected by the knowledge that they had the somewhat dubious honor of sharing with the Buffalo area the distinction of being the weekend storm centre.

Snowfall here, while over two feet, never stopped traffic. Highways and streets were open. A solid wall of snow did accumulate down the centre of the business section, pushed there by plows, but Wednesday morning a mechanical snow-loader was hired by the works department and ate into this ridge at the rate of four yards a minute.

This equipment was a new departure here. The storm itself which lasted four days, was not an abnormally heavy one for this area and was not accompanied by high winds. Today the weather was bright and clear.

THE IODIN RATION AND REJUVENATION

Old George Cheyne attained the ripe old age of 72 years—a notable achievement in his day (1671 to 1743). At thirty George weighed more than 32 stone (448 lbs.) and, believe it or not, he was lethargic, listless and short of breath.

Just how did this global spectacle manage to chalk up such a record? Well, listen, you with the young corporation or the built-in bustle, here's how George did it.

At thirty, weighing nearly 450 pounds, George Cheyne began dieting on milk and vegetables and taking considerable exercise. Dieting like that is bad enough, but exercising is even more dreadful to contemplate, eh? George stuck to this regimen and reduced to 150 pounds. That his reducing regimen was physiological, sound and actually healthful, rather than destructive to health as so many "Hollywood" and "steenteen day" reducing methods are, is evident from the results. George recovered his strength and lived to the age of 72, writing an essay on health and long life.

Poor old Ponce de Leon himself back in early 16th century was just a young fellow, as we'd say today, when he turned up his toes—barely 60. But sixty in his day was comparatively as old as 85 today. If the legend of his quest had an element of truth in it, how sad it seems that his letter went astray or perhaps he failed to inclose a properly stamped self addressed envelope and so the poor chap never received my pamphlet "The Iodin Ration."

No wonder George Cheyne was lethargic and listless—wouldn't you be if you had to drag a couple other fellows around with you every time you moved? It is not so easy to see why a great many people who are little, if at all, overweight are lethargic, listless, apt to doze or drop asleep as any time, dull or downright moody and noticeably poor of memory. But if you ask me —no no, don't ask me, for I shall not answer—but what such manifestations suggest to me is iodine deficiency. No matter whether the affected individual is a woman in the fourth decade or an adolescent boy or girl, the effect of proper correction of this nutritional deficiency is as pleasing a picture of rejuvenation as I have ever seen outside of a story book.

Now, please, don't be silly about this. No monkey business is implied by the term rejuvenation. Webster says rejuvenate means to render young or youthful again; to reinvigorate; to impart renewed vitality to. That's it—vite. For years I've been trying to tell you that you must get enough iodine, even though the daily requirement is only 100 micrograms (approximately 1/500th of a grain), if you want to stay young.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Gullible Girls

Many women in this neighborhood are drinking a tea made of sasafras root for reducing flesh. The formula was printed in a household vegetarian health magazine. (W.L.J.)

Answer—The sasafras would be harmless, but I'll bet a complete set of the works of the conductor of this column against a clipping of the recipe that it calls for at least one ingredient the sucker has to buy at the drugstore for a fancy price. Whether that ingredient is harmful or not, I do not know.

Caught Gathering Wool

—You said in your article on Undulant Fever that when there is reason to question the purity of milk the milk "should be boiled for five minutes, or scalded (brought to a boil for one minute) or pasteurized (heated to 150 degrees F. for half an hour)". Please explain why any one should boil milk five minutes if boiling only a minute is enough to make it safe? (H.D.L.)

Answer—All right. Don't shoot. I'll come quietly. I suppose I had one-half of my mind on the bowling green and the other half on germ-killing when I wrote that "Scalding", or bringing the milk up to boiling point even for just a few seconds, would make any milk perfectly safe for any infant, child or adult, in my judgment. Likewise I believe any milk that is pasteurized is perfectly safe for any one.

What United States minister to China became Chinese minister to the United States.

Anson Burlingame, who was born in New Berlin, N.Y., in 1820, and who represented a Massachusettes district in the U. S. House of Representatives for three terms, was appointed United States minister to China by President Lincoln in 1861.

He became such a favorite with Chinese officials at Peking that when he resigned November 21, 1867, and announced his intention to return to America, Prince Kung, Regent of China, immediately appointed him Chinese minister plenipotentiary to the United States and the principal powers of Europe.

Burlingame arrived in the United States in 1868 with two Chinese colleagues and concluded at Washington a series of articles supplementing the treaty between China and the United States negotiated by William Bradford Reed in 1858.

The Reed Treaty, with the supplementary articles of 1868, later became known as the Burlingame Treaty.

One clause of the part of the treaty agreed upon by Burlingame and Secretary of State William H. Seward was a virtual invitation to Chinese laborers to immigrate to the United States, where the demand for cheap labor was then acute.

This clause which resulted in considerable friction between China and the United States read:

"The subjects of China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities and exemptions in respect to travel and residence as may be enjoyed by the citizens and subjects of the most favored nation."

Burlingame then proceeded to attempt to negotiate similar agreements on behalf of China with England, France, Prussia and Russia.

While negotiating with Russia at St. Petersburg early in 1870 he suddenly died of pneumonia.

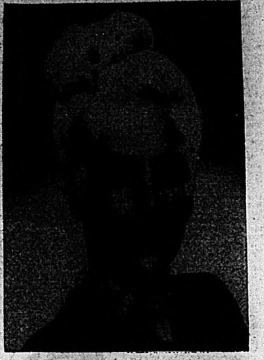
Sleep Well—Awake Refreshed



By HELEN FOLLETT

PHYSICIANS are stressing the need of long hours of sleep for patients who are suffering from nervous exhaustion. And who is not after these dreadful years of strain and anxiety? Even healthy individuals need plenty.

Loss of sleep is a cause of facial furrows. It robs the complexion of coloring. It causes dark circles to appear under the eyes. The woman who goes to bed at the last possible moment, when she can't drag herself around any longer, should ponder the subject.

Days's Activities

When you become sleepy, it is because the body feels the wear and tear of the day's activities and the circulation of the blood is picking up toxins that are created by fatigue. The tired body demands that it have a chance to recharge nerve batteries, to restore vitality to every cell. It is not safe to disregard this appeal for relaxation.

If you do it repeatedly, the star shine will go out of your eyes, your skin will be grey, your hair will lack luster, you'll develop into a grouch. That ought to scare the night prowlers. Evidently they don't care a hang about their health. But every woman cares a lot about keeping young.

The best and most refreshing sleep is dreamless. Frightening dreams, from which one awakens with a thumping heart, usually signify that there is some digestive disturbance present. Then one should have one's heartiest meal in the middle of the day, eat lightly at dinner time.

A healthy individual will fall to sleep quickly, as a baby goes to sleep. Only a silly woman will review her cares and worries while awaiting the arrival of the sand man. Did we hear the gentle reader say that worries stick right by one? Maybe so. But there is a way to dispel unpleasant thoughts. Chase them out by bidding nice ones to come to you.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Young Man is Always Ready With a Compliment

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Before his enlistment in the Navy I went with a young man who is several years older than I am. He had a very liberal education and always seemed to consider himself better than the average young man in our crowd. While he was in the service we corresponded, but I understand he started to go "steady" with a girl he met in another city.

I always liked this young man a great deal. Whenever we'd meet, no matter where it was, he had a compliment ready. If I had on a new hat or new dress he'd be sure to notice it. Since he has come home he has been over to the house occasionally, and seems fond of me, but I don't know if he's really in love with me or the other girl.

I've gone with others, but he seems uppermost in my thoughts. Here's my question—I've been invited to a party at a friend's home and have been asked to bring a young man. Would it be correct for me to ask him?

Judith

By all means ask him to the party. Look your very best and give him an opportunity to pay his usual compliments with interest. My best wishes to you both.

Seems to Have a Touch of Adult Infantilism

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What do you think of a husband like mine? He never notices when I wear a new dress or fix my hair a new way, he never gives me a compliment. He helps me with the dishes sometimes of his own accord, but if I ask him he pretends that he didn't hear me. He isn't interested in anything I say and even falls asleep when I'm talking. But he doesn't do that when friends come to visit us, he gives them all his attention and he finds plenty to talk about.

Desperate

Lots of the small-boy and a good deal of the show-off are still to be found in that husband of yours. Sometimes he'll do the dishes, but not if you ask him. That's a throwback to the time his mother used to say to him, "do this or that and be quick about it". You're being punished for his mother's tactless way of demanding things.

When friends come to visit and he becomes the life of the party, he's just showing off a bit. The winning card in your hand is not to show that these little-boy tricks annoy you. Read plenty of newspapers, know what's going on, so when you talk you'll be able to hold your own. Some men never pay their wives compliments and never realize what they're losing in the countless pleasant little attentions they might otherwise have from these disregarded women.

TWEED

25th Anniversary Is Celebrated

On December 15, 1920, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Countryman were married by Rev. A. E. Smart at St. James' Anglican Church, at Tweed. On Friday they celebrated their 25th anniversary at their home, which was prettily decorated with flowers and evergreens. During the afternoon and evening they received many friends who called with messages of congratulations and many beautiful gifts. Mrs. John Kingston and Mrs. S. B. Rollins poured tea in the afternoon, and Mrs. A. Wallace and Mrs. S. B. McGee in the evening. Serving the guests were Mrs. John Blakely, Mrs. Harold Foster, Mrs. F. Rashotte, Mrs. George Geraldi, Mrs. H. Emerson and Mrs. Miller Johns. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Countryman were Mrs. W. Moon and Mrs. T. C. Graham. Guests from Madoc were Mrs. Countryman's father, Mr. Frank Taylor, her brother, Harold, and her aunt, Mrs. C. Henderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Countryman have two sons, Frank and Alec, and one daughter, Marilyn.

A CONVICT'S GREETING

Indianapolis, Dec. 20—(AP)— Capt. Robert O'Neal, Chief of State Police Detectives, doesn't know how to interpret a Christmas greeting he received from a convict at Indiana prison. O'Neil's investigation of a burglary last summer led to a sentence of 10 to 20 years for the man. Written in ink on a conventional Yule card was: "Thinking of you this Christmas. Wish you were here."

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. The "pain cry" should have instant attention. For the feverish distress due to gas on stomach or bowels or those common digestive upsets, give Baby's Own Tablets at once. Mrs. May Mundy, of Toronto, finds they work every time.

"I am the mother of nine children, three of them prize babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."

Equally effective for constipation, upset stomach, teething troubles and other minor ailments of babies.

Quickly effective. Sweet-tasting — easily crushed to a powder, if desired. No "sleepy" stuff — no dulling effect. Get a package today. Sickness often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

GOOD MANNERS

Thanking an Employer For a Christmas Money-Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For several years I have worked for a doctor who for Christmas always gives me a gift of money. In the past I have used variations of the following form for my thank-you note to him:

"How good you were to plan such happiness for my Christmas. I thank you for your kind thought of me, and for your generous gift.

Best wishes for your New Year

Sincerely yours,"

This year I would like to word my note differently, and I thank you for any suggestions.

E. S.

I feel very humble in suggesting another form for your thank-you note, for the general form you have used is so very good and so very appropriate . . . your gracious and dignified emphasis on your employer's kind thought, as well as your thanks for the generous gift. However, this might be a possible variation:

Dear Doctor Roberts,

Your Christmas thought of me was most kind, and I am deeply and ever grateful to you for your thoughtfulness and goodness to me. Your expression of your good wishes, in your so-generous gift, made me very happy, and now I am high-heartedly planning to spend your gift to buy something that will always mean to me your kind thought for me.

Every good wish to you for your happiness in the New Year

Sincerely yours,

Christmas Plans After the Mother's Recent Death

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our mother passed away the last of September. My father is still living, and my brothers, sisters and I are all married and have children ranging in age from three to eighteen years of age. At Christmas-time we were accustomed to exchanging gifts, cards, and visits. Now we are at a loss as to what is the right thing to do, and we would appreciate it if you will please advise us.

S. B.

What you and the other members of your family do about observing Christmas depends entirely on your and their feelings. Certainly it would not be necessary or expected that the adult members take on the task this year of planning Christmas presents for one another or exchanging cards, but it would be kind and fitting to give Christmas remembrances to the children, particularly the younger children. I believe you would all find comfort and pleasure in exchanging the customary family visits including of course, in all of them your father, who will have deep need of these hours of loving diversion with his daughters, sons, and grandchildren.

Send Wedding Gift Before the Wedding Date

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been invited to a house wedding and reception. What is the proper time for us to give the bride our wedding gift. . . say a day or two before the wedding or should we wait to give it to her when we go to the wedding?

L. M.

Send your wedding gift as soon as possible now. . . . addressed to the bride-to-be at her home. Don't wait to take it with you to the wedding.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

A Safe and Sane Christmas

There are more dollars and cents in our bank accounts and our purses, this Christmas, than there have been in years. And, perhaps, there is more of the giving spirit in our hearts— more spontaneous amity, joy and benevolence.

Yet, discretion is the better part of generosity; and here are a few points to guide the thoughtless.

This year, don't be a tightwad with your gifts to the U.N.R.R.A., the hospitals and to all the organizations who are working to help this old world smile again, in order to make a Big Show with somebody who has plenty of everything, and who may only be bored at the thought of having to send so many "thank-you" notes.

If you are a man, don't forget that Christmas is not "just another holiday" to a woman. It is something beautiful and sacred to her, when she feels that something wonderful is about to happen. Not all wives and sweethearts are gold-diggers. Most of them are looking for a little extra special tenderness and thoughtfulness, from their men, on this day. Women are childlike that way.

Don't buy out the toy shop for Junior, and then get a conscientious complex and tell him that there isn't any Santa Claus. The great trouble with the younger generation is that it has no illusions, no visions. Its imagination has been stunted. Keep the fairly tales of youth bright and glowing as long as you can. You can give nothing to replace dreams!

Don't send that gorgeous basket of sweets to a girl who is on a diet. It will only prove a cruel temptation. With the same money, you can buy shoes and candy and other things for a dozen hungry children who are not trying to reduce.

If you are a girl, don't embarrass your current love-interest with a gift which is too costly, too personal, or too significant. If he's not in love with you, it will only frighten him; and if he is in love with you, it may dampen his enthusiasm. A he-man doesn't feel comfortable to receive expensive gifts from a girl. He wants to play Santa Claus himself. 'Give a man a couple of gaudy neckties, and it's Christmas" say a comedian.

Don't hang the mistletoe too conspicuously. The invitation to the kiss is superfluous, these days. Men don't need any encouragement—not of the obvious variety. And "wolves" might find discouragement a piquant novelty.

Never keep the holly and the Christmas tree until they dry up, wither and begin to fall. Many an innocent husband has cursed fate (and his wife) when he stepped on a dried holly leaf with his bare feet.

And nothing —except a dead romance—is deader than a defunct pine tree!

Of course, nobody wants to be absolutely safe and sane at Christmas; but, after all, it is the Day that means most in all the year! You can make it mean so much to so many, this year.

Fashion Flashes

A GOOD COMPANION for dinner and theatre is a decorative, short-skirted dinner suit, so nice for commuters. Black silk crepe makes a beautiful suit. The skirt is softly full in front, with a high-rising waistband, above which is a deep, oval-necklined bodice of aqua blue satin embroidered with bands of pearls and gold thread. Bolero jacket is lined with the satin and has its satin revers embroidered in pearls and gold thread.

A revival of the ostrich-feather boa seems to be in the offing. Lately we've seen some very smart women wearing such boas at important events.

Cheerful Woolens For Overseas Trade

By DENISE DALTROFF
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—Bright, cheerful colors are the vogue in British woolens as manufacturers set out to win overseas markets and catch the eye of women at home.

Cloths for export to the Dominions and foreign countries were put on show in London by Huddersfield weavers and the International Wool secretariat.

One striking light-weight woollen had horizontal black and orange stripes, and color combinations such as blue and wine, grey and yellow and brown and yellow were used for heavier materials. Cloth with a velour finish was a main feature of the exhibition.

Meantime two London fashion houses have combined to create outfits at moderate price for demobilized servicewomen, who have shown they want exciting clothes after years in drab uniform.

They made red their most prominent color though bright gold and maize were also widely used. As a contrast with service dress, most of the dresses are collarless, with a square yoke and small round neckline.

Raglan sleeves winged at the back and a half-belt and pleated skirt were used on many coats.

Corduroy jackets were a feature of the collection and there were a few utility fur coats of white lamb, opossum and opossum-dyed blue fox, selling at about £30 ($135).

"Britain has bought up almost all the exportable wool from the Dominions and as a consequence we have larger stocks than any other country," said Lord Addison, Dominions Secretary, at the Huddersfield show. "It is therefore up to Great Britain and the four Dominions to see that the market is properly fed and to avoid any slump in the woolen industry."

Referring to developments in the use of plastics for clothing, Lord Addison said a critical matter in the future will be the fashioning of wool so it can "stand up to manufactured substances."

From here it looks as though navy blue will be the big color for Spring. Which is all right with most of us, I'm sure, for what is smarter than navy with a dash of white? Anyway, an early Spring hat is of navy felt with a wide, rippled brim bound in navy satin to match the smashing bow placed in front of the crown.

CHRISTIANITY DAWNED HERE — A CHILD WAS BORN

A woman pilgrim kneels in prayer in the grotto f The Nativity in Bethlehem, Palestine. Here a hild was born more than 1,900 years ago. Kings ame from afar to pay Him homage and even the tars in the heavens gave manifestations that a ew era had dawned for the world. The child was born in the manger of a stable. The ravages of time buried that stable and today it is many feet below the surface of this grotto. Wars were fought for possession of the spot. Christians and "infidels" slaughtered each other for hundreds of years for it. Today, it belongs to the world. Here it was that Christ, the Prince of Peace, came to save the world.

anadians With Well-Filled Pockets eplete Shelves of Yule Merchandise

By FRED KERNER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Since early November cash gisters have jingled a merry ne across Canada, indication at Santa Claus' bag will overow this Christmas. Anticipating shortage of goods, shoppers ocked to do their buying earlier an ever before.

Instead of telling old Santa hat they wanted, this year Candians asked instead what he ad—and took all. In less time an required to make up merhandise displays, store managers eported counters and shelves ere bare.

Everything, particularly praccal gifts, has been in demand nd a Canadian Press survey inicated today that by Dec. 24 here is likelihood the inveterate st-minute shopper will find his uest impossible.

Shoppers, some irritated beause their money could not buy hat they wanted, have taken anything the stores offered. Merchants, on the other hand, have fretted because dollars are slipping through their fingers for lack of goods in demand, but have presented a variety of substitutes which have had strong sale.

Seek More Expensive Gifts

Members of the average Canadian family may not get what they anticipated this first postwar yuletide, but most gifts this year are of a more expensive nature. There is no dearth of money to match the scarcity of goods and "luxury" buying is the trend.

Many merchants claim the strike of dockyard workers in England held up shipments of numerous articles which always have been in demand as gifts. Others said manufacturers are refraining from shipping sufficient to meet demands because of excess profits tax which would increase greatly in the buying spree this year.

Clothing is in greatest demand, yet apparel in lower price brackets generally is ignored. A shortage of men's wear is blamed partly on the thousands of servicemen returned recently to civilian life who have bought up supplies for their own use.

But Mr. and Mrs. Shopper, their ingenuity taxed to the limit, have wisely resorted to gifts of occasional furniture, books and magazine subscriptions.

As counters and shelves empty, merchants have begun to wonder whether they can remain open another five days until the rush ends.

Little Wearing Apparel

When it comes time to open parcels next Tuesday morning, Dad may find the oft-given, practical gifts of shirts, pyjamas and cigars will not be there. And if family and friends waited until late to do their shopping the traditional necktie, too, may be missing, for as other male wearing apparel has vanished stocks of ties are fast being sold.

Also on the limited-quantity list for the head of the house are socks, underwear and electrical appliances. Department managers report most popular gifts for father are cigaret lighters and cases, leather goods, sweaters, gloves, mufflers and books. There also is a wide demand for adult games and game equipment.

Mom's and big sister's yearning for some dainty lingerie and perhaps a pair or two of sheer silk hose most likely will go unfulfilled. Chocolates, another well-received gift for the family's females, will be small in quantity at unwrapping time.

For the woman of the house, enterprising men have been buying furs, diamonds and furniture sets, while glassware, gloves, handbags and knick-knacks also are favorites. Electrical appliances are rare as are chinaware, crystal and silverware.

Early Shoppers Get The Best

The early-bird shoppers "got the worm" when buying sports wear and equipment. However dealers say skis, skates, toboggans and hockey equipment still are available. For the younger generation, toys are plentiful, but demand for metal toys far exceeded supply. Plastic, wood and cardboard toys are to be found and educational toys for the older child can be had.

If young Jimmy is lucky, the bicycle or tricycle he yearned for may be under his tree. But if he has a yen for a musical instrument—they just don't exist. Plentiful in the music line are phonograph records and sheet music.

Shoppers with more money and stores with less goods have not deterred buying or caused a decrease in sales. One early forecast estimated there will be a 15-20 per cent increase in sales over last year.

Dollars and cents have outlasted merchandise but the public is accepting the situation without complaint. They line up in front of stores and at counters, revise shopping lists and pay more than they planned without a murmur of protest.

In Woodstock, contrary to the rule, merchants report shopping was two weeks behind other years and shoppers exercised war time prudence, buying "sensible" things rather than "luxury" gifts. In Guelph stores and Kitchener-Waterloo merchants believe business this year is the greatest ever in the twin city. Galt women started their shopping months before the season and many had completed that task by the start of December.

Imports Greatest Shortage

A lack of imports created greatest shortages in the Windsor area, but thousands of shoppers have substituted with "practical—but expensive" gifts. Chatham also seems affected by fewer imported goods but merchants feel the rush will be over by today or tomorrow.

FUNDED DEBT HITS RECORD FOR CANADA

War Brought Huge Increases but Half Cost of Conflict Paid From Taxation and Borrowing

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—Canada's funded debt which indicates the Dominion's basic financial position, increased during the war by $11,500,000,000, it was shown today in a survey of the 1945 financial picture on the basis of six years of wartime financing.

From March 31, 1940, to Aug. 31, 1945, total funded debt soared from $3,695,685,000 to $14,900,000,000 and officials estimate that by next March 31 it will have reached nearly $16,000,000,000.

The survey also showed that throughout the war Finance Minister Ilsley was able to maintain budget commitments to pay half the cost of the war and civil expenditures from taxation and the remainder by borrowing from the banks and the public.

Total government war and non-war expenditures from 1940 to 1945 were as follows:

Fiscal year	War	Non-war
1940-41	$ 752,045,000	$390,629,000
1941-42	1,339,674,000	444,773,000
1942-43	3,724,249,000	561,251,000
1943-44	4,587,023,000	630,381,000
1944-45	4,418,446,000	767,376,000

Aid To Britain

The wide increase in 1942-43 expenditures over the preceding year was due in part to the $1,000,000,000 gift voted as aid to Britain. Similar assistance under mutual aid legislation for the United Kingdom and other Allied countries was passed in later years.

For the current fiscal year war expenditures were estimated at $3,365,000,000 and non-war at $1,024,000,000.

Thus the Commons voted in six years $18,186,437,000 for war and $3,818,415,000 for civil expenditures, a grand total of $22,004,852,000. While actual expenditure figures are not up to date, they are not believed to vary greatly from the amount indicated.

To help meet these expenditures personal income tax rates were increased by 20 per cent at the outbreak of war and moved in three more swift steps to the full war level established in the 1942 budget, a level maintained until Mr. Ilsley announced an over-all 16-per-cent reduction in his last budget.

The excess profits tax, provisionally enacted in the fall of 1939, was increased in 1942 to 100 per cent, of which 20 per cent is to be refunded. That tax also was reduced in the 1945-46 budget.

In 1940 and 1941, succession duties and new and increased commodity taxes were imposed for revenue, for exchange reasons and to encourage transfer to war production. Later, the main increases in taxation were in indirect taxes applying to non-essential commodities and services.

Loans Successful

Aside from taxation, the mainstay of the government's war financing was its borrowing campaigns and of these, two early War Loans and nine subsequent Victory Loans provided a total of $12,913,000,000, including $679,000,000 in reconversions.

The Victory Loans were held twice a year but when the war ended last August it was announced that the ninth campaign held in October and November, would cover the full year to the fall of 1946.

That drive, the largest of all loans, shattered every record in public financing in Canadian history by producing subscriptions of more than $2,000,000,000 on a minimum objective of $1,500,000,000.

Another part of the war financing operation, still considerable though much smaller than the Victory Loan drives, was the war savings certificate campaign, instituted in 1940, through which $365,000,000 poured into the country's war coffer. Redemptions of certificates are estimated at $115,000,000.

Through all these various savings campaigns—in currency, bank deposits, refundable taxes and Dominion government securities—the Canadian people now are estimated to hold savings of more than $9,500,000,000, an increase of more than $6,500,000,000 since 1938.

The major item in these savings is Dominion government securities estimated at more than $5,250,000,000. At the same time, the savings do not include savings in the form of insurance, pensions, homes or corporate securities.

26 Ships Sunk In Suez Canal During the War

Paris, Dec. 19. (AP)—The Suez Canal was blocked for 76 days during the war and the Mediterranean lay landlocked to the east, stockholders of the waterway learned today.

A dryly worded report said two sunken hulks still narrow the canal channel. They are the last of 26 ships sunk in the canal in 64 German air attacks.

The Germans bombed ships in the channel 20 times and laid mines in the canal on 17 other occasions. Canal ports were raided. Three times the canal was paralyzed for more than eight days and was knocked out for shorter periods on numerous occasions.

Directors of the international concern said canal traffic had fallen to such an extent in 1940, 1941 and 1942 that the company could pay no interest or amortization on capital for those three years. Company officials said privately they expected profits for the 1943-45 period.

The last time shareholders of the Suez Canal met was June 3, 1940, while German bombers were attacking the Renault Work outside Paris. Ten days later the French capital and the headquarters of the canal were in German hands.

Berlin People Wage Struggle for Existence

By BARBARA WACE

Berlin (CP)—Nobody in Berlin goes empty handed. Everybody carries something to barter.

Through the shell and bomb-blasted Tiergarten, grey-faced men and women push every type of handcart and perambulator filled with fuel for the winter. Along city streets, furtively walking close to great piles of rubble and bricks cleared against the shells of buildings, men and women clasp black dispatch cases, often with ruck-sacks on their backs. Near shell craters filled with stagnant water neatly dressed old women hunt for blitz weeds to cook for supper.

Slim frauleins in finery and silk stockings have big suitcases with them as they call "hello" to Allied soldiers in the Kurfurstendamm, or hold whispered conclaves with sturdy high-booted Russian girl soldiers.

For dazed looking Berlin civilians shopping is a complicated business. You see them around Allied messes or parked cars. They peer anxiously at the glass show-cases down the broad sidewalk of the Kurfurstendamm which once held luxury goods and now contain countless little cards with offers of exchange.

There is little you can buy in this ghost-town capital. Bartering has become specialized. Watches for the Russians, cameras and silk stockings for the British and Americans, and cigarets for food on the black market. This is the new currency.

Piano For Coat

The exchange notices show fabulous bargains. One offers a grand piano for a winter coat. Another a dining room suite for "a little food." At an exchange mart a mother tried to exchange a set of her son's toy trains for a little flour, while outside a small girl of seven was begging soldiers for cigarettes so she could exchange them for something to eat. There are no shoes for sale.

Only in one store did I see new goods for sale. These were enormous boots made of thick hairy carpet felt and five inch thick wooden soles weighing five pounds, offered for "the cold days ahead."

One small bookshop in the Kurfurstendamm had sparsely filled shelves with books saved from two bombed out anti-Nazi bookshops. The owner said that anything English was much in request, as were all books with nothing to do with the war. There were few children's books, for all juvenile literature, even picture books for toddlers, were full of Nazi propaganda and are forbidden now.

Food coupons must be given up in restaurants. A typical menu in one restaurant contained potato soup with one slice of bread, vegetable stew with potatoes and beans, a cup of ersatz coffee without milk or sugar, a glass of real tea, or orangeade, marked "made with boiled water" for those fearful of disease.

Canadian Universities Filled to Overflowing

(By The Canadian Press)

Demand for higher education by returned servicemen and women has swelled university enrolment in Canada to proportions so great that shortages of living accommodation, classroom space, food supply and textbooks have become critical in many university cities.

A survey finds between 15,000 and 20,000 veterans entering or reentering college under the veterans' re-establishment program in the current academic year. In addition, a new semester for servicemen is scheduled to start in January at many universities.

Classroom facilities have been doubled and trebled. Additional instructors have been appointed. Hundreds of students are using friends' or library texts until publishers can meet the demand. Trailer camps and other temporary shelters have sprung up overnight. Married students present the greatest living-space problem, and about 10 per cent of students in most universities this year are in this category.

No Special Distinction

Steps have been taken to refrain from special distinction between veterans and students just out of high school. They work in the same classes and enjoy the association with each other. The age, maturity and experience of the veterans is reflected in a keenness of attitude toward studies and community life generally.

Many have been away from studies for as long as 10 years, but most are readjusting themselves with little difficulty. Their earnestness is gratifying to faculty members, who report it a pleasure to work with persons who realize what they want and are ready to sacrifice a great deal in order to get it.

Engineering, medicine, commerce and law are the most popular choices of former servicemen, the general arts, social sciences and agriculture following close behind.

University of Toronto's normal 7,500 enrolment jumped to 10,500 and an additional 1,500 will be accommodated when the Ajax Division—at a former war plant near Oshawa, Ont.—is opened in January. More than 4,500 are returned servicemen.

With addition of some 1,000 veterans at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., approximate normal registration of 1,800 to 2,300 this year. At the University of Western Ontario, London, 600 ex-servicemen registered boosting attendance to over 3,000, an increase of some 800.

Army Huts Used

Some 2,300 veterans at University of British Columbia have added to normal registration of 3,000, boosting attendance to 5,650. Built to accommodate but 2,000, U.B.C. has been forced to buy army huts for extra office, classroom and living space.

Montreal's McGill University has experienced a 96 per cent enrolment increase in the Faculty of Engineering and a 78 per cent increase in the commerce faculty as more than 1,500 service personnel registered. First year students in science and engineering were sent to the university's Dawson College at St. John, Que., to relieve congestion.

The Soviets have ordered 24 compressors for their first natural gas pipe lines that will extend 500 miles from the Ural mountains to Moscow.

Leaders in Crime Acting in Spirit Of Bravado—Parker

Toronto, Dec. 20 (CP)— The sessions Grand Jury in a report to Judge James Parker today said that "young men in a spirit of bravado, who have no respect for the rights of others, are the leaders in the wave of gangsterism which is terrorizing the City of Toronto, York County and the Province of Ontario."

"More energetic methods should be made to cope with them," said the presentment, urging more drastic measures on the part of welfare organizations, parents, the courts, and others engaged in the administration of justice.

"Evidence considered by us indicates that criminals with fantastic records have been allowed their liberty after short terms of incarceration—only to immediately resume a life of crime," the report said. "The frequency of such individual cases portrays a deplorable selfishness, combined with a complete lack of self-respect, ultimately ending in the acts of desperation and violence."

"Unfortunately, the majority of cases brought before us have involved young-men and young women who have launched boldly into crime, seemingly in a spirit of bravado and entirely without regard for the rights of others.

"This type must be dealt with firmly if the tendency to crime is to be impeded. There are too many 17-18-19-20 and 21-year-old criminals confronting society today. The law deals with them after they become criminals. Can they not be dealt with more effectively before they become criminals, by more considerate treatment at home, school, at church and at play?"

The report advocated more rigid censoring of moving pictures, radio and other sources of entertainment and elimination of that pertaining to glorification of crime, uncouthness or sex eccentricities.

Entry to the realm of arts — music, pageantry, literature and pictures—should be encouraged by way of subsidies, bonuses and scholarships.

The Ontario Law Society, the Minister of Justice and judicial bodies were petitioned to co-operate in revision of the criminal code whereby punishment for crimes of violence would more drastically fit the offence.

"In this, we believe that individual convictions under numerous indictments should more often draw consecutive than concurrent sentences."

WINTER'S HANDIWORK — SNOW AND COLD WAVE SWEEPS CONTINENT

When winter comes the fishing boats really get the full effect of the wintry blasts which turn the flying spray into a solid coating of ice on deck and riggings. This scene, on one of the fishing schooners off the Atlantic coast, shows Chris Olsen, a crewman, protecting his ears from the icy winds against an Arctic background on the deck.

A hot spot of a few hours before, this building is a man-made iceberg after the fire that did an estimated $500,000 damage to the Wilcox and nearby buildings in Akron, O. Water from the hoses of the firefighters turned to ice as it hit the building. The fire was called the worst suffered by Akron in 25 years. Sub-zero temperatures hampered the firefighters.

Canada Exploring Possibility Of Using Thorium

By ANDY ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 20—The disclosure by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Canada is exploring the possibility of using thorium as a source of atomic energy has thrown the spotlight on a rare element chiefly used before the war in the manufacture of illuminating gas mantles.

Mr. King said in the Commons Monday that this was one line of study at the huge government atomic energy project at Chalk River, Ont., "125 miles northwest of Ottawa. Hitherto uranium had been used as the basic source of atomic power, "but thorium is probable second basic material for that purpose, although it is not as yet a proven material."

This passing reference to thorium in his report on the results of Anglo-American-Canadian atomic power talks at Washington was the first indication of the nature of the revenue of research being explored at Chalk River.

While the lips of all concerned with atomic energy developments have been sealed, a bureau of statistics spokesman said commercial production of thorium never had been reported in Canada. Thus, either thorium ores are being imported to supply the Chalk River project or a workable deposit has been discovered in Canada during the wartime security black-out.

One thing is certain, the world's second largest uranium deposit on the shores of Canada's Great Bear Lake does not include thorium. One official said a lack of thorium impurities had given Canadian radium first rank in world markets.

Relative of Uranium

Thorium, a close relative of uranium, was named by the famed Swedish scientist, Berzelius, when the basic thorium oxide first was extracted from thorite mined at Lovon, Norway, in 1828.

Recourse to pre-war scientific textbooks discloses that thorium is a radio-active element with an atomic number of 90 and atomic weight of 232.2. It forms the major component of thorite, orangite and various thorium silicates.

Found in monazite sands, among the minerals known as "rare earths," thorium was produced in various parts of the world and used commercially in gas light mantles, in carbon terminals for various types of projection lamps, on luminous watch dials and in self-lighting cigaret lighters.

A more recent use has been in pepping up the flow of electrons from the elements of certain types of radio tubes. It was found that a two per cent addition of the gamma-ray emitting thorium to the tungsten filaments greatly increased the tubes' efficiency.

India Pre-War Source

Travancore, in India, was the major pre-war source, producing three-quarters of world needs. At various times deposits have been worked in Brazil, Australia, The Netherlands East Indies and parts of the United States.

Now world-wide interest in the dawning atomic age has thrust thorium into the race to find a substitute for the rare and expensive uranium, so far the only element known to have been utilized to produce atomic energy.

Thorium is one of those fantastic radio-active heavy elements, which disintegrate of their own accord into elements of lower weight in the atomic scale and eventually, over long periods of time, all become lead.

'STAR OF BETHLEHEM' TO SHINE AT CHRISTMAS

Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 20—(AP) —The Star of Bethlehem, darkened since Pearl Harbor, will shine here again this Christmas Eve. From high on nearby South Mountain, the 90-foot man-made constellation will light this Pennsylvania community — named 204 years ago for the birthplace of the Christ child. Already this Christmas city is glistening with almost 10 miles of colored lights, dimmed since 1941.

Farm Forums Sidney Twp. Hold Meeting

Wallbridge Hall was the scene of as enthusiastic a meeting as has been held in Sidney Township in several years, when 75 farmers and their wives gathered in a joint meeting of the Farm Forums on Monday evening.

Mr. J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., and reeve of the township presided as chairman in his usual capable manner. Rev. Lloyd Shorten, accompanied by Mrs. (Col.) Vanderwater, got the meeting away to a fine start by leading a lively and "ice-breaking" sing-song. After a few remarks by the chairman commending those present on their enthusiasm, Mr. Webster, Agricultural Representative of Prince Edward County, was called upon to introduce the speaker of the evening.

Fine Address.

Mr. Donald Thompson, reeve of South Marysburg Township, and one of the three people most responsible for the newly formed Health Unit in Prince Edward County, gave his address. Everyone was impressed with Mr. Thompson's sincerity and knowledge of Health Units, a subject not too familiar with most of those present. He did not speak vaguely of them, but gave facts and figures, showing just how it will work in Prince Edward when it comes into operation next July. At a cost of 62½ cents per person per year, the people of that county will be given the full time services of one doctor, one nursing supervisor, three nurses, and one sanitary inspector, all working to prevent, rather than cure disease and illness.

Given Vote of Thanks.

Mr. Thompson was tendered a vote of thanks by Mr. Fair, Hastings County Agricultural Representative.

Ralph Campbell, secretary of the County Federation of Agriculture, led in a discussion period in which the assembly was divided into groups. So interested was everybody in the possibilities of a County Health Unit that the discussion lasted longer than was anticipated. Starting on the subject of "The Advantages and disadvantages of a Health Unit", it finished on "How Could We Start one in Hastings."

Refreshments Served.

At the conclusion of the discussion, lunch and coffee were served, and the social period continued for some time.

It was decided that the next joint meeting will be held at the "Brick School" on Jan. 28th, at which time it is hoped that two or more new Forums will have been started.

Forums have got away to a good start in Sidney this year, with four communities reporting from 15—35 attending each week, and one Forum, Centenary, having 38 at their last meeting. This first, and most essential step in farm organization has been meeting with considerable success, and it is hoped that such joint meetings will give it further impetus.

Foxboro L.O.L. Installs Officers

On Thursday evening, December 3rd. Loyal Orange Lodge No. 3 of Foxboro held their annual meeting.

The auditor's report showed the lodge to be in better standing than it had been in a number of years.

One of the highlights of the evening was the interesting address made by Brother Allan Howes who has just returned from overseas.

He spoke of the high standard of all the Allies armies and showed pictures of the great engineering feats of the Canadian army engineering corps of which he was a member. He also showed pictures of German concentration camps and their horrors of which the infamous Belsen camp was the worst.

After this phase of the evening's intercourse Past County Master Brother Wm. Woods took the chair for the election and installation of the officers for 1946.

The following Brethren were then elected and duly installed: W.M., Bro. Selden Homans; D.M., Bro. Carman Dafoe; Chaplain, Bro. Gordon Priest; Secretary, Bro. Glen Priest; Treasurer, Bro. Russel Christie; Secretary Treasurer, Bro. Eddie Clarke; Lecturers, Bro. Leon Wilson, Bro. Earl Bird; Marshal, Bro. Allan Howes; 1st. Committee Man, Bro. Frank Howes; Tyler, Bro. Clifford Wilson.

Ciano's Widow Ordered Confined

Rome, Dec. 20 — (AP)—Edda Mussolini Ciano, daughter of Benito Mussolini and widow of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Fascist Foreign Minister, has been sentenced by an Italian provincial commission to two years' confinement for her efforts in behalf of Fascism, a dispatch from Messina to the newspaper Il Tempo said today.

Edda did not attend her trial, the dispatch said, refusing to leave the tiny island of Lipari, north of Sicily, where she has been interned since the end of the war.

Il Tempo said she was specifically charged with conducting herself in a Fascist manner, aiding the foreign policy which led to the alliance with Germany and to war, maintaining friendly relations with German political leaders, and selling abroad — for personal profit — the diary of her late husband.

British Artillery Pounds Bandoeng

Batavia, Dec. 20 — (AP)—British artillery pounded trouble spots in Northwestern Bandoeng for an hour today, as fighting which had already cost British and Indian troops almost 1,200 casualties continued in Indonesia.

Meanwhile, a Netherlands navy communique announced the first naval action in the Java disturbances — the capture of what was described as a 60-ton motorship. The communique said the ship was seized Dec. 14 after she fired on a Dutch landing party from the destroyer Kortenaer.

The Dutch government information service said British troops made a three-pronged advance following their shelling of Bandoeng, in a virtually unopposed search for weapons. A British announcement yesterday said "many arms," including blunderbusses, were seized when the northern sector of Bandoeng was occupied without casualties.

An official British casualty list reported 196 British and Indian troops killed, 789 wounded and 188 missing, up to Dec. 14.

Fighting broke our yesterday at Buitzenzorg, 30 miles south of here. Mortar bombs fired by Indonesians fell in the centre of the city.

HIDDEN MONEY RECOVERED IN EMBERS OF BLAZE

Rocky Fordwn Colo., Dec. 20—(AP) — Mrs. Pete Montoya placed the mustering out pay of her son, Benny, plus some other family cash in cans and hid them in her home. It totalled $1,200. Fire destroyed the residence yesterday but Mrs. Montoya insisted on digging through the embers. She found the $1,200.

NO FURTHER PROBE

Toronto, Dec. 20 — (CP) — Provincial Police headquarters said yesterday they were satisfied death of Mrs. Lillian MacDougall, 53, at Kincardine, Ont., Sunday, was in no way due to foul play. Police said an autopsy showed she died of a hemorrhage and there would be no further investigation.

General Marshall Now in Shanghai To Settle Dispute

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, Dec. 20 — (AP) — Gen. George C. Marshall arrived today on his mission to end internal strike in China — and as he stepped from his plane, Chinese Communists asked the Chungking government to agree to an immediate, unconditional cessation of hostilities, Lu Ting-Yi, Communist peace-parley delegate, told the Associated Press.

Gen. Marshall is expected to meet President Chiang Kai-Shek at Nanking tomorrow to discuss the situation. The meeting will be their first since the Cairo Big Four Conference.

Associated Press correspondent Spencer Moosa, at Chungking, reported the Communist move toward a cease-fire agreement, and said Lu also informed him that Red leader Chou En-Lai would seek an audience to present the Communist case to Gen. Marshall.

The special United States envoy stepped briskly from a transport plane from Manila and proceeded to a Shanghai hotel for conferences with Lt.-Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, United States commander in China.

In Chungking yesterday, Central Government and Communist leaders alike were reported ready to "go the limit" in making peace concessions to impress Gen. Marshall. The date of the forthcoming peace parley between the two parties has not been announced.

Gen. Marshall and President Chiang are expected to fly together to Chungking later in the week for long conferences. Chiang, who has expressed pleasure over Gen. Marshall's temporary appointment to succeed Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley, arrived in Nanking yesterday to await the envoy.

From Yenan, Communist stronghold in Manchuria, Associated Press correspondent John Roderick quoted a party spokesman as expressing "sincere hopes to reach a compromise with the Kuomintang party.

"Ours is a plain duty, as we face the grave days ahead, to work without ceasing to make a free press the true torch of world peace." — Harry S. Truman, President of United States.

Canadiens Fight off Chicago Challenge to Maintain N.H.L. Lead by Playing Team to Draw

Black Hawks Only One Point Ahead of Bruins Who Defeat Rangers

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens, apparently packing that extra something which keeps a team on top, still made the pace for the National Hockey league today after resisting a strong challenge from their closest contenders.

In one of the fastest games ever played at Chicago stadium the defending N.H.L. champions battled the bullish Black Hawks to a 4-4 draw last night before 15,812 fans to retain their two-point hold on first place.

The division of points left Chicago in second place, one point ahead of Boston Bruins who shaded New York Rangers 8-7 at Boston garden. Wintry weather held the crowd to 9,424.

The high-scoring Hawks needed a victory to achieve a first-place tie with Canadiens, who have held the lead since early in the schedule, but although they held a one-goal margin at the end of the first two periods they couldn't avert a stalemate in the seesaw struggle.

Rookie George Gee of Sudbury, Ont., started the scoring for Chicago after little more than six minutes of play. That margin was erased when Maurice (Rocket) Richard, rounding into the form that made him the league's most feared sniper last season, drilled two pucks past Mike Karakas late in the first period.

Chicago Only Scorer in Period

Chicago scored the only goals of the second period to take a 3-2 lead. Don Grosso caged Bill Mosienko's relay at 5:45 and Max Bentley, still exploiting the new found scoring punch which has made him the league's top scorer with little more than one third of the schedule completed, blasted an unassisted tally to make it 3-2.

Bill Reay passed to Murph Chamberlain for a goal that made it 3-3 early in the third period. Canadiens went ahead for the second time in the game when Toe Blake counted from short range four minutes later, but Clint Smith tied the game for the last time on a play wih Mosienko and Alex Kaleta.

At Boston, in the season's highest-scoring display, Bruins seemed fated to record their fourth straight deadlock. But with 41 seconds left, Herb Cain drove a six-foot shot home to give the home team an 8-7 victory. Cain obtained possession for the goal when Terry Reardon's skate deflected a pass from veteran Bill Cowley, who shared Boston goal-getting honors with Bobby Bauer at two apiece.

Woody Dumart, Pat Egan and Reardon provided the other goals for a Boston team which has been defeated only once since Nov. 10.

Hank Goldup paced the tail-end Rangers with three goals and one assist. The other New York scores were split between Ab Demarco, Phil Watson, Edgar La Prade and Al Pike.

HAMILTON TIGERS SCORE FIFTH STRAIGHT WIN

Take Stratford Indians 3-1 While Toronto Staffords Defeat Owen Sound 7-3

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers swept to their fifth straight senior O.H.A. victory last night when they measured Indians 3-1 in a tight fixture at Stratford which saw no score in the first period and the Bengals to the fore 2-0 in the second, with each side notching a counter in the third lively frame.

Robertson, Brady and Shillington did the scoring honors for the Bengals while the Stratford goal was off the stick of Enio Sclisizzi. The loss was Stratford's sixth in seven scheduled appearances.

At Toronto, the enterprising Staffords grabbed their fourth straight win, after two early setbacks in the campaign, in turning back Owen Sound Mohawks 7-3. Turning out for his first game with the Torontos, Murray Ezeard quickly opened the offensive with the initial marker and Staffords held a 3-1 advantage before the close of the first stanza.

George Mara was tops for the winners with three goals while Bernie McCarthy was the standout for Mohawks with a brace of sinkers, Shears getting the third one for the visitors.

St. Mikes On Top

In the junior "A" picture St. Michaels maintained clear leadership by registering their 11th win in 12 fixtures with a 7-1 decision over Lloyds at Hamilton. The students scored three in the first, four in the second and outgoaled Lloyds 3-1 in the final period. Paul and Sloan collected two counters and other collegian aces were McLean, Blute and Kelly. The Hamilton tally went to Ketola.

Galt Red Wings overcame the Generals at Oshawa 8-3 for their ninth straight triumph to remain in the runner-up position. It was a 2-all tussle in the first frame but the Reds forged ahead 4-3 in the second and swarmed the Gens under a four-goal shower in the third round. Mousseau and Pavelich were double-scorers for Galt, single being collected by Mayer, Curik, Uniac and Adamo. Oshawa marksmen were Lowe, Marshall and Samis.

Barrie Fliers staged a surprise on home ice by turning back St. Catharines Falcons 4-3 in overtime, after doing the same trick against Oshawa last week. Period totals were 0-0, 1-1 and 3-3, with Lund sinking the payoff counter in the extra session for his second goal of the match. McArthur and Wilks collected one apiece. Falcons to score were Daudy, Bury and Peterson.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

DRAMA, EGAD

There'll be a touch of civic dignity at the ceremonies which will usher in the hockey season here on Friday night when the Kingston Locos meet the Redmen in a pre-O.H.A. season tilt.

Hizzoner Frank Follwell, who presides over the seats of the municipal mighty at the monthly marathonic jam sessions in ye City Hall, will don his chief magisterial robes, encircle his manly bosom with the gold chain of office and in solemn dignity and with official mien, slide—pardon—stride to the centre of the ice and hurl the puck to the surface, to formally open the season.

A right trusty bodyguard for the Mayor will be two of his gladiatorial henchmen from the sanctum of municipal musings. Aldermen Harold (Twigg) Woodley, he who heads the Fire and Smoke Department, and one of the newest rookies in the ranks of the Filibuster Fusiliers, Alderman Claude D. Tice, who is at present taking a special course in Approved Night-Sitting, so he will be able to herald the dawn during the regular sessions, without batting an eyelash.

Armed with hockey war clubs, the two sturdy yeomen of the civic guard will hie themselves to the centre ice spot, and at a given signal proceed to belabor themselves about the fetlocks, taking care to miss the mayoral shins, when Hizzoner drops the puck.

After that, it is anybody's fight.

On Thursday evening, ye trusty aldermen will be placed in a local garage where they will be given a free oil and grease job, in case the various cacophony of creaking bones should drown out the cheers of the multitude and the blare of the bands.

Just good clean fun, wot?

WELCOME, CHUM

What looks a generous smile from Lady Luck in the general direction of the Redmen's Camp is the announcement yesterday by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to the effect that Walter Gerow Jr. former Tulsa Oiler has been reinstated to amateur ranks.

Kingston will get a double portion of the Christmas hockey handout from the C.A.H.A. for two other Oilers, from that city, George J. Watts, and J. G. McGregor have also been relegated to the ranks of the simon pures. (It's an old expression, but it is still good for a laugh). A fourth performer in the United States Hockey League, Eric Unger, who played with Minneapolis is being returned to the home-town fold.

Walt Gerow, one of the smoothest performers to come out of Napanee and Belleville, will be a welcome addition to the ranks of the Reds and no doubt he will be received with open arms—if he decides to stay within the shadow of the Moira River this winter.

TROPHY HERE

Emblematic of Junior O. A. S. Boasting one of the strongest junior softball teams from Belleville to go into the provincial playdowns, the Squires copped the provincial honors by downing the strong Hamilton team two straight, the last game being played on rain-soaked Belleville diamond.

Intermediate 'A' Gang Gets Going

Two welcome strangers, additions to the proposed four-team Intermediate O.H.A. "A" group of the district, provided the surprise package at the inaugural meeting of group representatives gathered in conclave here last night by Convener Frank Buckland, Peterboro.

The original entries included Peterboro, Belleville, Kingston and Oshawa but along popped another Oshawa entry and one from Whitby, which should make hockey business highly interesting around these parts this winter. The boys got down to real work and after some interesting discussion drew up a single schedule to the satisfaction of all concerned. Oshawa Legion, one of the new entries will play their home games at Uxbridge with the Petes calling Omemee their home ice.

The group will get under way on January 4 with the Oshawa Legion being entertained by the Petes. Oshawa Red Raiders tangle with Whitby on Jan. 7 and Belleville visits the Kingston squad on the 5th of that month.

Plenty of water has gone under the bridge since these ancient rivals met in hockey combat as a group, and the setup as it appeared last night augurs well for the sport this winter. The boys were amiable, kept their hair on their heads, and generously conceded points of argument that left a sweet taste in the mouths of all concerned.

• • •

The loop finishes its regular schedule on Feb. 8 and the O.H.A. has extended the deadline for a declared winner until Mar. 8. First and third squads will play off in a three-of-five series as will the second and 4th teams. Finals were set for Feb. 27, Mar. 1, 4, 6 and 8 and in the case of Kingston winning the 9th. Teams named their own referees, and decided to use home arbiters instead of appointees by the parent body. Looks good all around.

Splinters

Plenty of hockey excitement at the arena these frigid evenings. Juniors take the practice ice from seven to eight tonight with the Redmen getting in their licks from six to seven .. Reps of the Oshawa, Petes and Whitby teams at the Int. "A" O.H.A. confab last night shrugged expressive shoulders and lamented the fact that "we ain't gotta chance against these Belleville and Kingston squads. Lookit the shinny they're playing, and leading the loop at that." The water rolled off the ducks' backs and the down-easters grinned and murmured "Remember Pearl Harbor".... The "Y" has provided a highly entertaining program, sports and social for the Christmas week vacation. Plenty of swimming wrestling, gymnastics, basketball, etc., with the odd supper and dance thrown in, not to mention the boys' choir giving forth with sweet Yuletide music in the churches.... Stirling juniors are readying for the O.H.A. jousts on the home ice....First casualty occurred the other evening when Hermie Hermiston, promising wing fractured a wrist....Madoc and Norwood have entered squads in the rejuvenated Trent Valley Hockey League bringing the number of teams to six. The executive conclaved this week and drew up the regulations, constitution, etc., and the lads are rarin' to go....Jack Frame, Batawa, will bring the schedule to the next meeting tabbed for Dec. 27....The "Y" junior and intermediate basketball squads are scheduled to get in some practice Dec. 27....Walt Gerow turned out with the Redmen last night at practice, and went well out there on the blades.... Imagination, sez the office wit, is something that sits up with the wife when the husband is out late....'Tis midnight, and thirty.

Toronto, Dec. 20 (CP)—If Red Dutton and the National Hockey League are really serious about changing headquarters from Montreal to Toronto let's hope they have the office-space problem beaten, not to mention ordinary housing.

And for Toronto scribes who figure with the headquarters switch next year they may get more N.H.L. news here's what Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll says: "What seeps out of the N.H.L. offices in the way of news in the course of a season wouldn't cover the head of an old-fashioned Canadian nickel."

Dink doesn't think the Toronto move will change things and recalls that league meetings in Montreal are closed to reporters until the hockey heads are ready to call it a day. But at least once it was different—back in New York along about 1938.

The Art Ross-Conny Smythe rivalry was at its height and just before an intermission the N.H.L. moguls had decided to rewrite some passing rule or other. Ross watched Smythe duck out for a few minutes—maybe to look over a horse at Aqueduct—and told waiting scribes about the decision, then invited them in to help with the rewriting.

If memory still serves, the most enthusiastic rewriter was the late Sammy Robertson, one-time Ottawa jockey and then New York Superintendent for The Canadian Press. He gave Ross and Dutton all the support they needed. There was a quorum which was the all-important thing to Ross and, much to his delight and Conny's discomfiture, these particular rules had been nicely redone when Smythe showed back.

Friend Bill Gladish, who has seen a lot of sport come and go wonders what Canadian sportsmen would like most in their Christmas stocking. Guesses: For Tommy Gorman of Canadiens —another typewriter; Conny Smythe—A goal-guardian without ulcers; P. J. Mulqueen —One more Canadian olympic team (purely amateur); Bert Warwick —A new Winnipeg Blue Bombers team; Doug Ness—His hoss training licence; Jim McCaffrey of Ottawa—More imports; Bobby Robinson of Hamilton—The 1946 Canadian track and field championships; Tod Sloan of St. Mike's —Still more hockey goals; Johnny Greco—Madison Square Gardens; Mike Jacobs—Musical false teeth and an end to all this clicking and clacking.

KANSAS CITY WELL IN FRONT

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City strengthened its lead in the United States Hockey League with a 7-4 victory over the last-place Minneapolis Millers Wednesday night while Dallas Texans downed St. Paul 3-1 to go into a three-way tie for fourth place in the league.

The Pla-Mors' 10th straight victory on their home ice also saw their Butch McDonald regain his place as league-leading scorer with two goals and an assist. Andy Chakowski, Wingy Kohnson, Hank Blade and Larry Silvestri accounted for the rest of the Kansas goals while Sammy Fasano, Geo. Agar, Jim Simpson and Melnyk counted for Minneapolis.

In the Dallas meeting, Ducky Skinner opened the scoring for the Texans while Louis Smrke and Lloyd Finkbeines piled up the two other tallies. Joe Levandoski scored the lone St. Paul marker.

It was also the Kansans' ninth straight victory in their latest run of home and road games. The final period had the fans on their feet when the Kansans outscored Minneapolis four markers to three in a constant flurry of action around the nets at both ends of the ice.

The Dallas team stopped Joe Shack cold for the entire evening, thereby partially accounting for the former league-leader's drop from top-scoring position.

St. Paul meets Tulsa Thursday night in the only scheduled league game.

Maurice Richard, Montreal, who netted a pair of goals as Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks tied 4-4.

Bobby Bauer, Boston, who scored his first two goals of the season.

Hockey's Big Seven

Linemate Bill Mosienko gathered two assists to consolidate his second-place berth with 26 points. Third position is held jointly by Clint Smith of Chicago and Toe Blake of Montreal who each scored once and now have 20 points. Boston's Bill Cowley jumped back into the race with four points earned as Bruins defeated New York Rangers 8-7 and is in a three-way tie with Doug Bentley of Chicago and Elmer Lach of Montreal for fifth place with 19 points apiece.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 870
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Deplore the bridge of Dolly Drools. It never gets a chance to jell. She tries to learn such complex rules, she gets no chance to learn them well.

After the first nervous game of bridge, a palooka begins to hear rumors about an opening bid of two in a suit. After it seeps in for awhile, he gets the idea that it is a forcing-to-game signal.

Does he quickly learn an accurate method of deciding when he has such a hand? Not at first. There are too many jabberpusses with fancy ideas as to how to determine such a hand.

To learn it simply, he needs only to know that such a bid shows a hand that can take nine tricks. In other words, it says: "Partner, I can practically guarantee you a game in my own hand."

Technically, such a bid needs ten tricks. But the chances are that partner will have a trick of some kind. At any rate, it is worth the try for game.

How does a player know when he has nine tricks? He merely counts one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen) in his hand. He adds that to the number of short cards he has and that's all.

Take the south hand in the pair you see here:

♥9 4 2
♦K
♣A K Q J 10 6 4 2
NORTH
♠J 7 5 4 3 2
♥A 6
♦A 7 3 2
♣5

It has five high cards, two short cards in diamonds, two short cards in spades; total nine tricks. Open that hand with two clubs.

You jolly well know you are going to try for a game in something before the bidding is over. Make sure the bidding does not stop until you are ready to permit it to stop.

That's what an opening of two in a suit is for. It is to tell partner that your pair is surely going to game in something. You merely want him to show you what he has in the meantime.

A meaning made plain saves much mental strain.

Montreal Royals Down Hull Valants

Ottawa, Dec. 20—(CP)—Montreal's powerful Royals downed Hull Volants 4-2 in a sizzling Quebec senior hockey league game here last night.

The Volants stung by a 11-2 pasting at the hands of the league leaders, last Sunday, and bolstered by the acquisition of Paul Leclere former Providence Reds goalie, made a game of it all the way.

The revitalized cellar-dwellers held Royals to single counters by Smiley Meronek and Leo Gravelle in each of the first two periods and matched the Montrealers goal for goal in the torrid final session.

Frank Dunlap collected both Hull scoring points, assisted by Bucko McDonald and Alf Webster, while Jean Paul Lamirande and Rip Riopelle netted for Royals. Gravelle picked up assists on both Montreal last period goals.

BUFFALO BISONS WITHIN POINT OF LEADING TEAM

Hornets Move Into First-Place Tie With Capitals in Western Division

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets moved into a first-place tie with Indianapolis Capitals in the Western Division of the American Hockey League last night when they romped to a 9-0 victory over the faltering Capitals. Buffalo Bisons climbed to within one point of the leading Hershey Bears in the Eastern Section nosing out the Bears 3-2, while Providence Reds earned a 5-4 decision over St. Louis Flyers in other games on last night's A.H.L. schedule.

A capacity home crowd roared its approval as the red-hot Hornets banged six goals past Indianapolis goalie Tom Wilson in the first period, added another in the middle frame and two more in the final heat. Ronnie Wilson was the big gun in Pittsburgh's attack with three goals while Bobby Walton notched two and the others went to Johnny Mahaffy, Wally Wilson, Bill Ezinicki and Ken Schultz.

Buffalo built up a 3-0 lead and managed to hold off a determined Hershey rally to gain their victory against the Bears. The Bisons striving for a $1,500 bonus offered if they lead their division at Christmas time, assumed a comfortable lead on a pair of goals by Murdo McKay and one by Roger Leger but were hard pressed to keep their advantage as the Bears put on a late third period drive that netted them two counters, Stan Robertson and Fred Robertson being the marksmen.

Providence Reds came from behind a 4-2 deficit to edge St. Louis 5-4 in a game that was delayed two hours in starting as the Providence team's train was held up by the storm. The Reds jumped into a 2-0 lead in the opening session. St. Louis countered with three in the second to lead 3-2 and added another in the third canto before the Reds rammed home three in a row to clinch the verdict.

Wendell Jamieson led the Providence scorers with a pair of markers while Bill McComb, Jacques Lavoie and Stan Kemp got the others. Paul Gladu paced the Flyers with two goals and Morey Rimstad and Pat McReavy notched the others.

Eddie Miller of Cincinnati, Not Marty Marion of Cards, Top Fielding Shortstop in Loop

Miller Ties Record of Five Titles Set by Joe Tinker of Cubs

By JACK HAND

New York, Dec. 20 — (AP) — Eddie Miller of Cincinnati was the top fielding shortstop in the National League in 1945, outshining the brilliant Marty Marion of St. Louis to annex his fifth title in the last six years.

Backers of the Reds' shortfielder in the countless Miller vs Marion arguments can point to the record books that show Miller tying the league record of five titles, set by Joe Tinker of Chicago and Cincinnati.

By topping Marion in the official National League percentages, .975 to .967, Miller reversed the 1944 result when he was nosed out of a fifth successive crown by a single point.

Chicago's pennant-winning Cubs swept three of the seven individual fielding championships with Stan Hack leading the third basemen, Andy Pafko showing the way to the outfielders and Claude Passeau continuing his errorless streak in the pitching department. Not since Sept. 16, 1941, has Passeau made a misplay in a streak that now has run to 265 chances, establishing a new record.

Pafko topped the flychasers and Ken O'Dea of St. Louis was high man among the catchers although he appeared in only 91 games. It was the first time in modern history of the league that no catcher caught as many as 100 games.

Verban and Miller each tied a major league mark for their respective positions by taking part in five double plays in a single game and Al Lopez of Pittsburgh established a new record for games caught in a lifetime—1,805. This broke the old mark held by Charley (Gabby) Hartnett of Chicago and New York.

The pennant-winning Cubs led in team fielding with a .980 average, three points better than St. Louis and the Phillies wound up in the cellar with most errors, 234, and lowest percentage, .962. The Braves showed the way with 160 double plays and for the 4th season in its history, there were no triple plays in the league.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, Dec. 20 — (AP) — Since Arthur (Red) Patterson landed the fat new job as Public Relations Director for the Yankees some of his envious former contemporaries among the sports writers are whispering Red pulled his punches when he and Larry Macphail tangled in the refreshment room out at Ebbets Field a few years back. It's a canard. Patterson levelled in that one. He had no possible way of knowing at that time that Macphail was going to take over the Yanks, much less be in the market for a publicity director. It is much more likely that Macphail simply subscribes to the theory: "If you can't lick 'em, jine 'em."

The headline of the week, from the San Diego Union: "Cut-throating looms between rival pro loops."

They say the one Cardinal now certain not to be sold or traded is shortstop Slats Marion, that the club's new manager Eddie Dyer took the job on the express stipulation that "Mr. Shortstop" remain . . . The Notre Dame basketball team, annually one of the most popular to appear in Madison Square Garden, has a clause in its contract guaranteeing at least a 30-minute warm-up period before its game . . . For the first 13 days of its present meeting Gulfstream Park gained 59,582 paid admissions and $3,839,876 in mutuel play over the same period a year ago.

Victoriaville Tigers Consolidate Hold

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Dec. 20 — (CP)—The visiting Victoriaville Tigers consolidated their hold on second place in the Provincial Hockey League and are now seven points behind the league-leading Lachine Rapids as they defeated St. Hyacinthe Saints 5-1 here last night before a crowd of 1,800.

A victory for the St. Hyacinthe team would have placed them in a tie with Victoriaville for second place with an even dozen points.

Paul Herbert sparked the visitors' attack with a pair of goals and an assist while defenceman Maurice Despelteau averted a shutout for Saints when he lashed the puck past goalie Jean Paul Nadeau of Tigers at the half-way mark of the second period.

The teams played through a scoreless first period. Tigers took a two-goal lead before four minutes of the middle frame had passed on goals by Armand Bourdon and Paul Hebert. Maurice Despelteau then scored Saints' only goal of the game.

Tigers commanded play throughout the final period and clinched the victory as Hebert scored his second goal and Marcel Bochard and Maurice Deslongchamps notched singles.

HAYMAN EXPECTS TO COACH TEAM IN MONTREAL

Will Take Over Management of Montreal Club in the Big Four

Montreal, Dec. 20—(CP)—Lew Hayman, coach of the Toronto Indians in the interprovincial football union last season, is expected to come to Montreal to coach the big four entry here next season, but final decision will not be known until after a meeting here Jan. 8, it was learned last night. Hayman however, is quite agreeable to coming here and talked freely of his plans for next fall.

"My first concern is to put a winning ball club on the field," he said. "If there are any French-Canadian boys around who can make the grade immediately, that's just wonderful. But I'm not expecting it. I may have to wait four or five years for that.

"I intend to work closely with the junior and high school teams, and I think those French-Canadian players will emerge in time.

Hayman said he had a number of offers to go elsewhere but thinks he can make a "reasonable number" of Montreal citizens realize what a great game football is. He feels his big task here will be to make the French-speaking sport fans football-conscious.

The football club probably will play next season's games in the Montreal baseball stadium, and that will make Sunday games possible. In the past games have been played in the Molson Stadium of McGill University, and university regulations prohibit the use of the field on Sunday.

Lew said he was ready to invest some of his money in launching a "new-deal-for-football" program here. He felt this would be necessary to attract a few key players to Montreal.

"Of course, I hope to get it back," he added. "It's a good gamble."

Greenberg Performs Biggest Comeback In Canadian Sports

(By The Canadian Press)

The biggest comeback in American sports in 1945 was performed by Hank Greenberg when he doffed his captain's uniform of the U.S. Air Force to return to his place with the Detroit American League Tigers after an absence of four years. This was the voting decision of 74 sports editors in an Associated Press poll. Second place went to another ex-serviceman, Ben Hogan, who quickly returned to form in pro golfing, while Mrs Sarah Palfrey Cooke placed third because of her lawn tennis victory following a lay-off of three years.

Following a conference on the court action over the alleged stimulation of horses at Pimlico, the Maryland Racing Commission at Baltimore announced yesterday the indefinite postponement of the hearing on the appeal from one year's suspension of Trainers A. Christmas, Clay Sutphin and R. S. Curran.

President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers entered a Brooklyn hospital yesterday for observation and rest, following an attack of influenza.

The British Football Association revealed at London last night the players of the Moscow dynamo Soccer team, recently on tour in Britain, were rated neither amateur nor professional, according to Soviet officials. Russia's sport heroes were given monetary awards, however, for outstanding achievements.

Emile Collette, honorary president of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association, said at Montreal yesterday he had received an offer from Winnipeg to hold a $10,000 open golf tournament there this year and immediately turned the matter over to the United States Professional Golfers' Association for a date. He said he considered this a normal procedure, for "if we want American professionals in our tournaments we cannot run any without the U.S.P.G.A. giving us a definite date."

Earl Morris, Canadian Tournament manager, said in Toronto yesterday he would be "only too glad" to consider the Winnipeg bid upon receipts of a formal application.

Although three more days of racing were scheduled, the meeting of the Charles Town, W Va., Jockey Club was called off after the close of yesterday's card when only 700 fans were present at the track because of a heavy snowfall.

SASKATOON ELKS HOLD TOP SPOT IN WESTERN LOOP

Look Like World Beaters Until Last Swing Around the Circuit

Edmonton, Dec. 20 — (CP) — With more than one-third of the 36-game schedule complete, it might be expected that the trend in the Western Canada Senior Hockey League would have asserted itself by now.

But with the exception of Regina Capitals, sitting at the bottom of the four-team league, it would be a ticklish job to pick the order in which the clubs will finish when the season winds up next March.

While Saskatoon Elks managed to hold on to the No. 1 spot Calgary Stampeders were seldom more than one game behind, and Edmonton Flyers managed to remain within striking distance as well.

During the first month of the season, Saskatoon, a well-balanced aggregation with scoring ability evenly divided among its two forward lines, looked like world beaters, chalking up six straight victories without a defeat. Then they made their first trip into the Alberta division of the circuit and promptly absorbed two decisive defeats, 9-2 at the hands of Calgary, and 6-1 from Edmonton.

That gave the impression Elks wouldn't be as tough, with the majority of remaining away games to be played in Alberta.

The new Western Senior League, which brings teams from the four cities together for the first time since the old Western Canada professional circuit was a major loop back in the 1920's has thus far provided an exciting race and even more exciting hockey.

Regina Team Weak

The one lamentable factor is that coach Kenny Stewart's Regina team is so weak. They have dropped 13 games and garnered their only point in a tie game with Edmonton.

Coach Stewart has vowed he won't shave until his team wins a game and to help keep his beard down has managed to lure away two Moose Jaw Canuck stars, defencemen Roy Belbin and Al Swain.

With most of the Western Canada junior teams battling it out for leadership in their individual sections, Ewart Robertson's Edmonton Canadians are sitting in the driver seat as far as the northern section of the Albert Junior Hockey League is concerned. Only Edmonton teams are in the loop.

In six of their league games played so far, Canucks have swamped their city rivals by wide margins.

Western junior fans are getting the unusual opportunity of picking their favorites in interprovincial competition this season as Notre Dame Hounds and Regina Abbotts of the Southern Saskatchewan Junior League are lined up for early trips to Lethbridge, Medicine Hat and Calgary. Moose Jaw Canucks have already made a successful trip around the circuit.

Johnny Chinook Catches Spirit of Early West

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

"The Cottonwood Black" famous on this continent in the late 1920s and early 30s as "Midnight" the greatest bucking horse of all time, would never have been such an ornery critter if owner Jim McNab hadn't let himself be persuaded to enter the horse in the bucking lists of the Calgary stampede.

That, says Robert Gard in his book on Alberta—"Johnny Chinook"— (Longmens, Green and Co.) sapped Midnight's faith in men. Even rancher McNab from Cottonwood could no longer stay aboard him. And so began Midnight's career as a rodeo outlaw. When he died in 1936, at the age of 20, he had surpassed all other mean horses in meanness and rivalled in western songs the Roman-nosed hoss "The Strawberry Roan."

"Under this sod lies a great bucking hoss,
There never lived a cowboy he could not toss."

That is the gravestone verse the cowboys had carved for Midnight.

This book by an American professor from Kansas who went to the University of Alberta from Cornell to conduct the Alberta Folklore and Local History Project for the Rockefeller Foundation catches the spirit of these days when the west was young, its characters lusty.

Tall Tales Told

Here you meet "Johnny Chinook", the spirit of an unborn province. And through his Gard introduces storied Albertans such as Bob Edwards, editor of the famous Calgary Eye Opener; "12 foot" Davis of the Peace River country; Hatfield the rainmaker from California who brought cloudbursts to arid Medicine Hat; Paddy Nolan, a famous western lawyer; The story of the Frank Mountain slide, which buried a town in 1903; and humerous tall tales of a land where they like their tales extra tall.

Kipling once called Medicine Hat "the town.. with all hell for a basement," and Gard tells of how rain came in 1921 to this arid city which stands directly on fields of natural gas. Hatfield the Rainmaker had had some success in the United States and drought-stricken Alberta farmers brought him to Canada. True to his prophecy rain began to break the drought and then it fell in such quantities Alberta farmers were telegraphing: "Rain enough. Stop for a few days."

Calgary—"a city of schemes and dreams"—attracted Bob Edwards, champion of the underdog and, in those early days a drinking man of some considerable reputation who in the midst of a great booze-up, saw prohibitionists victorious in Calgary largely through the support he gave them in his Calgary Eye Opener.

Peer Not Amused

Best of the Bob Edwards stories is how he invented Peter McGonigle who, on his release from penitentiary was given a banquet. Among letters of regret at not being able to attend this tribute to an ex-horse thief was one, purportedly from Lord Strathcona, which said that he nearly had achieved distinction in the same direction by dexterous financing but instead of stocks going down they went up and he wound up in the House of Lords.

This item, reaching Sir John Willison, Correspondent for The London Times of London in Toronto, struck him as newsworthy for London. He cabled it forthwith. And when Lord Strathcona read it he nearly blew his top and got London solicitors together to begin court action. But in Alberta they realized fun was fun and finally Lord Strathcona was prevailed upon to forget the legal possibilities of the affair.

Cost of Ships Dooms Sealing in Old Colony

By DAVID LEWIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The sealing industry of Newfoundland, punctuated with a long history of adventure and tragedy, apparently is fading into the rugged past of the island. One explanation of its virtual disappearance is the cost of ships which, with the exception of the steel steamers first used in 1905, can be employed only two months and not be used in other work during the rest of the year. The last fleet to sail for the icefields was in 1941.

That the industry is practically obsolete is obvious from the figures of ships and men employed—in 1906 there were 25 steamers and 4,061 men, while in 1936 these had been reduced to eight steamers and 1,460 men. In 1936 the catch was about 150,000 seals, valued at around $200,000.

When seal hunting was one of the important factors in the industrial life of St. John's, in 1855, the St. John's Seal-skinners' Union was formed. It is the oldest trade union organization in Newfoundland, and one of the oldest in the New World. In those days, when a man could skin 300 or 350 seals in nine hours or so, Newfoundland was exporting 440,828 seal skins annually. The gradual decline of the industry is shown in the figures for seal skins exported. In 1805 the number was 81,099; 440,828 in 1850; 203,858 in 1900; 183,889 in 1936. The largest figure is for the early year of 1831, when 686,836 found outside markets, and the lowest figure was in 1920, with 33,985.

May Sail in Spring

Although it is believed that some firms formerly engaged in the industry are planning to replace some of the sealing ships, any plans will have to wait the return of more normal conditions in the shipyards. No definite plans have been made but it is not unlikely that the Eagle, the sole survivor of the wooden ships will make a voyage next spring. The sole survivor of the steel ships once used is the Nascopie, now used by the Hudson's Bay Company in its trading operations in the far North.

The only remaining attempts at the moment to revive the once important industry is made by shoremen around the north coast, who sometimes succeed in getting remunerative catches. The conditions are subject to the vagaries of wind and tide, and the fishermen practically have to wait for the seals to come to them.

The whale industry of Newfoundland has also decreased in importance until only one firm is engaged in the industry. The whaling plant is at White Bay, and last year about 130 whales were captured.

Prisoner of War Fatally Beaten By Jap Guard

By DUANE HENNESSY

Yokohama, Dec. 19 (AP)—Japanese guards invaded the sanctuary of a prison camp hospital to administer a fatal beating to an American prisoner of war, the United States military commission trying the first war criminal case in Japan—that of guard Tatsuo Tsuchiya—was told today.

Pte. Robert Gordon Teas of Streator, Ill., had been accused by his captors of taking American Red Cross supplies which the Japanese had hidden in the Mitsushima camp, said a deposition from Pte. Charles B. Gavord of Deming, N. Mex.

Pte. Gavord's testimony was read at the trial of Tsuchiya, charged with implication in the murder of Teas who was captured on Bataan April 10, 1942.

"Sergeant Mushmouth (another of the more than 300 Japanese underlings who will stand trial) and little glass eye (as Tsuchiya was known) took Teas into the open yard threw water on him and beat him with hardwood canes shaped like swords," Pte. Gavord testified.

"Then they put him in the guardhouse. But each day they took him out and beat him some more. The day before he died, they put him in the hospital and I personally saw these same Japs beat him just before he died."

Pte. Gavord fixed the date of the incident as in March, 1943, one of the coldest months in Japan.

A deposition by Sgt. Clifton Snodgrass of Junction City, Kas., said one beating given Teas by Tsuchiya and another guard whom the prisoners called "Rivet Tooth" lasted 45 minutes.

"They took a rope about an inch thick, which they doubled several times, and beat Teas around the face and head and each time he fell down they made him get up again," Sgt Snodgrass testified. "When Teas was too weak to stand up, they picked him up and continued the beating for 30 minutes."

The Canadian government used daily newspaper advertising to educate, instruct, and inform the people at every phase of the war; it is using newspaper advertising now to condition the public mind to reconversion and peace.

Japan Bluntly Warned by U.S. In July, 1941

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (AP)—The United States bluntly warned Japan's envoys July 21, 1941, that Japanese occupation of French Indo-China—then contemplated—would render any further talk of peace "hopeless," Prince Fumimaro Konoye, then Premier, wrote in his memoirs.

He credited the statement to Sumner Welles, then United States Undersecretary of State. The memoirs were released to The Associated Press three days before Konoye's suicide Sunday.

Yet a full month after that warning, he wrote, the United States and Japan seemed nearest to averting the war. The late President Roosevelt on Aug. 28, 1941, Konoye said, expressed a desire to meet personally with the Prince to settle the differences which were swinging the two countries in conflict.

Konoye made the original proposal for such a meeting with the consent of the Emperor, he wrote.

Summoning Ambassador Nomura, who delivered Konoye's proposal for the meeting, Mr. Roosevelt was quoted as saying "I desire a meeting of about three days with Prince Konoye." The ex-Premier added: "Although he did not make any commitment as to time, he showed he was very much in favor of it. It probably may be that this was the time that the United States came closest to us."

But something happened. Mr. Roosevelt's enthusiasm cooled between Aug. 28 and Sept. 3 when "he gave Nomura a message for me and although it was very respectful, a clear expression of agreement on the meeting was avoided."

Whether the meeting could have prevented the war and assured peace in the Pacific is questionable, but Konoye told AP correspondent Russell Brines recently "I feel confident that if I had been able to see Roosevelt, I could have established a basis for imperial house intervention in the rising war tide within Japan at that time."

Ideas For Christmas

In the hearts of men this year are kindled those feelings of thankfulness, joy and love, that make a really happy Christmas day.

Each family celebrates Christmas in its own way. The traditional dinner cannot be improved upon—but the spirit of Christmas is embodied in the hospitality with which friends and strangers alike are welcomed.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, have developed several simple recipes for slightly different "goodies" which would be enjoyed at any time, but have that holiday appearance, and taste even better than they look.

Raisin Cranberry Tartlets With Cheese Pastry

1 cup pastry flour; 1-4 cup fat; 1-4 cup processed cheese; 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Let cheese stand at room temperature several hours before using. Cut fat and cheese into the flour. Add salt. Blend to a smooth dough. Roll, on a floured board or between two thickness of waxed paper, until very thin. Cut with a cookie cutter and press into small tart tins. Makes 24 small tarts.

Filling:

1-2 cup raisins; 1-2 cup cranberries; 1 1-4 cups water; 1 teaspoon grated orange rind; 2 teaspoons cornstarch; 1-4 cup sugar.

Mix raisins, cranberries, water and orange rind. Cook 5 minutes. Blend cornstarch with sugar and add to hot mixture. Cook 2 minutes. Cool. Put one heaping teaspoon of filling in each pastry shell. Bake in a hot oven, 400 F, for 10 minutes. Fills 24 small tarts.

Oatmeal Honey Fruit Bars

2 eggs; 3-4 cup honey; 1-2 cup quick-cooking rolled oats; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 teaspoon baking powder; 1-4 teaspoon salt; 1-4 cup chopped nuts; 1 cup mixed fruit (raisins, peel, dates, cherries, etc.)

Beat eggs, add honey and rolled oats. Sift together baking powder, flour and salt. Add to first mixture and mix well. Add nuts and fruit. Spread in shallow pan, 8" x 11", and bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 F, for 20 minutes. But in fingers. Makes 36 bars.

Spice Sticks

1-2 cup molasses; 1-4 cup sugar; 3 tablespoons mild-flavored fat; 1 tablespoon milk; 1 teaspoon baking soda; 1-2 teaspoon salt; 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon; 1-2 teaspoon cloves; 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg; 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour.

Heat molasses to boiling point, add sugar, fat and milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add, blending thoroughly. Chill, roll thin and cut in fingers. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 F, 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 48 large bars.

Quaint Old Recipe For Happy Marriage

Washington (CP)—Sheila Gardiner, of the British Information Services office here, makes a hobby of collecting old recipes.

She found this one—"Married Woman's Cake"—in a book got together years ago by the Ladies Society of the Montreal West Presbyterian Church:

1 pound of true love,
1 pound of perfect trust and confidence,
1 pound of cheerfulness,
A pinch of unselfishness,
A sprinkle of interest in all your husband does.

Mix all well with a gill of the oil of sympathy; put into a tin of contentment; flavor with a bright fireside and a loving kiss. Bake well all your life.

Dear Sir:-

I purchased nine pigs six weeks old a while back. They were the poorest looking pigs I have ever seen anywhere, and one pig was so small, I intended killing it, but decided to give it a chance. After six weeks on "Miracle" Feeds, these pigs now weigh three times more than they did at six weeks old. The small one is now nearly as big as the rest of the litter.

CHAPTER 20

"Do you go back to Portland?"

"I have to, of course. Tonight."

"How's the work going there?"

"Very well."

"And are you and Lilian—?" she stopped, not knowing how to go on.

"We're not living together, if that's what you mean. I have a brother there, and I'm living with him. He's not married. But we keep the surface smooth for her family's sake. Her father's a bishop, you know. She's staying with her family, and I'm practically living at the office until I get things broken in. I see her. I was there for Christmas dinner."

"She wants you back, Kent?"

"Does that matter?" he asked fiercely.

"Jocelyn!" came an augmented scream from the picnickers.

"I have to go," she said again. There was no other word between them. They exchanged a look that was placating on her part and savage on his. Kent picked up his hat and raincoat and was gone. Jocelyn, her heart sick, her pulses throbbing nervously, took her coffee pot and went out to join the others.

The moment she appeared, an advance guard was off up through the narrow strip of orchard, across the muddy road, and into the meadow that stretched upward toward the long straggling windbreak of eucalyptus trees that staggered across the hill. The sun had broken uncertainly through the clouds and shone brilliantly upon wet branches and sodden earth. The air, for the moment, was suffocatingly hot.

When they reached the ridge they stood panting, gasping, looking back in triumph from the heights they had scaled. Clouds were massing again now; a tremor of wind ran over the world, and as they started the downward slope to the ocean a soft warm rain began to fall freely into their faces. But this only raised the spirits of the party to wilder levels. They leaped and ran and shouted in the sweet pure envelopment of the rain, and took the downhill miles almost at a run. Presently they could smell and hear the ocean, breathe the sweet cleanness of salty air, hear the rush and gurgle of waves among rocks. They took the last half-mile in a brisk ten minutes, flinging themselves and their bundles on the sands, laughing, screaming, chattering like the gulls that flew in disturbed circles above them.

For a while everyone lay panting, or crawled about contented to mark the wet strand with bits of driftwood, bore tracks for flea races or spread coral seaweed in fan designs on smooth planes of sand. Then suddenly hunger seized everyone at once, and while the men went for firewood, the girls expertly built a support for the grill, got their coffee started, opened up boxes containing an incredible number of strings of red sausages and a corresponding number of buns.

The sausages popped and sizzled on a hot grill, the buns were toasted and buttered, mustard was passed to lunchers whose mouths were too full for a "thank you," coffee went in boiling dark streams into the tin cups.

They were halfway through the meal when a man's figure emerged from the eucalyptus at the ranch, scaled the gate, and was seen advancing rapidly toward their party. Up to this time they had had the beach all to themselves. They regarded him with suspicion, dislike and surprise, except Jocelyn, who had a horrible fear that it might be Kent, come down to be near her, and sulk and be silent and annoy her uncle, who was rather strict upon the subject of love affairs with married men.

But as he came nearer she saw that it was not Kent. It was Philip Fordyce.

All the blood in her body rushed to Jocelyn's face, or at least that was the sensation she had, and she knew that as the others heard her ejaculate his name they saw her color.

But she had no time to study their reactions. She put down her bun as she recognized the newcomer, wiped her greasy mouth with a paper napkin, and went to meet him.

"What on earth—You couldn't have just—" Jocelyn stammered, as she came back to the fire on the beach with Fordyce.

"No; I didn't just chance it," Philip said, laughing, out of breath, quite ready to sit down on a convenient rock. "I came over to Sausalito house, and Mrs. Partridge told me how to get here."

"Uncle Bart, do you know Mr. Fordyce?" Jocelyn said. She introduced the others, even while Jane was putting a hot bun and a sausage into Philip's hand, and Bam was discovering by nods and shakes and raised eyebrows whether he liked sugar and cream in his coffee. He ate ravenously as the chatter and laughter began again, and presently said fervently that never in his life had he tasted such food.

"We all say that!" said Jossy. When the clearing-up scramble began, Jocelyn was pleased to see that her uncle and Philip had fallen into a serious conversation upon state politics, and pleased again to hear her uncle's earnest; "You are absolutely right, sir. You are absolutely right!"

Later they all went exploring and wading and adventuring along the beach, through the cave, over the rocks and cliffs. Jocelyn, who had been rather silent, perhaps instinctively trying not to betray the wild confusion that reigned in her heart, found herself with Philip, and asked him if he had ever been on a picnic like this one before.

"But this is the way all picnics ought to be. Just weenies and coffee and molasses taffy. Are you much with these people? I think they're perfectly marvelous."

"More since Mother died than I was before. Aunt Nell is my father's sister, and she said something about Mother years ago that Mother never forgave. Women," Jocelyn explained with an apologetic smile, "used to be like that. I don't know what it was. But I think it was that my mother looked so delicate that if she ever had a baby it would be a paper doll! Isn't it funny to remember a thing like that? Mother was very gentle, too, usually very kind to everyone. But she thought Aunt Nell had too many babies, and lived in too sloppy a manner, and she used to say that Uncle Bart would have been a very successful doctor if he hadn't had so many children to support. Oh, they were civil enough, she and Aunt Nell, but they didn't really like each other."

"And isn't he successful, this fine old doctor?"

"Uncle Bart? Oh yes; he has a fine practice and all that. But six girls and a boy, you know, and all their schooling and shoes and trips and two weddings in the past two years, and one more this year, and maybe Sissy, too. All that has kept things rather scarce."

"It's just the family I would have liked. It's just the way I'd like to live," he said steadily. Jocelyn, pacing beside him on the smooth sand just above the tide line, turned to give him a surprised glance.

"You?" she asked, amazed.

"Yes. And I think every man," Philip answered seriously. "I think men like things much more simple than women suppose they do. They get sick of having rooms decorated and commenting upon new clothes. They like walking over hills with girls who kiss them and tease them. And love them," he added in un undertone. "Well!" he interrupted himself in a different voice, "what I came down here to say to you is that we want you back."

Jocelyn's heart leaped: she was not to be exiled, after all.

"Yep," he said. "You saw the paper this morning?"

"The paper!" she echoed, fearfully.

"Oh yes," Philip said resignedly. "Another story on Norma. Didn't anyone see the paper?"

"They don't come up until late, and we were all buzzing around. No." Jocelyn was actually pale. "I didn't see anything," she said.

"She says herself she needs you; we all seem to need you," Philip went on. "Everyone agrees on it. We've had a bad time with Norma since you went away. The school telephoned the second morning, at about ten, that she was gone. Miss Sanderson, in her thorough, old-fashioned way, had taken away Norma's purse, and Norma had very simply started to walk home."

"Good heavens!" Jocelyn exclaimed.

"We notified the police; we thought it might be a kidnaping. My mother got hysterical, and began telephoning all her friends. The police scoured the roads; I came down from the office; we had Pinkerton's on the job, and Norma walked in. She'd had two lifts; anybody could have picked her up. She'd twisted her ankle badly, she's got it in a bandage, so it was no question of her going back. Miss Sanderson came back, furious and crying of course, and my mother didn't do much to quiet things down, and in the middle of it Norma said she'd give me her solemn word to behave and study if Miss Britton would come back."

Jocelyn laughed. "Is there the slightest possibility that she means it?"

"Yes; I think there is. I had a talk with her this morning, and she seemed very serious. She's got to stay in bed for several days, and it'll be a good thing for her. You'll come back?"

He said the last phrase suddenly, turning toward Jocelyn. The girl answered him doubtfully, after a perceptible hesitation. "If you think I'm any good. I'm good at some things," Jocelyn admitted "but I don't feel that I made much of a success of Norma."

"We've none of us made much of a success of Norma," her father said sadly. "And yet there's no reason why she shouldn't be just like other girls."

"Oh, I think there is," Jocelyn said, surprised. "Her not having her mother. Her being passed about from hand to hand. And then, of course, the money. It's very hard not to have that affect people, affect their attitude toward her. It affects me," she added honestly, after a moment's thought and with a little ashamed laugh, "it fascinates me. There's a sort of thrill about it, like royalty, or any high position—the President, or a maharaja or something like that. It's made her different; her whole attitude toward life is different from that of anyone who ever has to think about money."

"It shouldn't be," said her father.

"But it is. She can't think of herself except as she is, with anything and everything she wants in the world here to buy."

"That shouldn't make her unhappy We all love her. Her grandfather simply adored her. The night she was born, I think, was the happiest of the old man's life. He would have liked Janet—my wife—to have a houseful of children. He gave Norma a check before she was twenty-four hours old that made me realize that my baby was going to be richer than I ever could be. He kept chuckling and saying that there would be a boy with his name in a year or two and that he meant to take care of them all. But before Norma was two, as it turned out, her mother had asked for her freedom. He tried to make the best of that poor old Lockey! I think he hoped Janet would go on having children, anyway. But she never had another. So it all came to Norma in the end. And it seems as if there must be some way — There must be some way of making these next five or six years happy ones for her, and starting her off into sensible marriage with some decent fellow who'll take care of the money and of her."

FELT RUNDOWN AND TIRED FULL OF ACHES AND PAINS

"Everything I Ate Disagreed With Me—Brought on Gas, Indigestion and Heartburn," Says This Man. Felt Dizzy, Couldn't Sleep. Tells How Syntona Helped Him.

If, at this time of the year, you feel tired, wornout and nervous; if bowels are constipated and you suffer from indigestion, gas, headaches and rheumatic pain; if you have backache, night risings or dizzy spells, try a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound the chances are that you may find this medicine to be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

For example, here is the recent experience of Mr. Joe Carney, 509 Talbot Street, London, Ontario, who said:

"I had no appetite to speak of and everything I did eat disagreed with my stomach. Even the lightest foods gave me gas, indigestion and heartburn. I was subject to dizzy spells and often while up town I would have one of these and had to grab hold of something for fear of falling. More recently I began to suffer from rheumatic pains in my joints and muscles and my back felt lame and sore. Many days I was full of aches and pains. I often couldn't get restful sleep at night, so I felt rundown and tired.

"My wife had taken Syntona some time ago and she kept urging me to try it, so finally to please her I decided to get some. Even from the first bottle my food began to digest better. I had less gas and heartburn. Now that I've been taking it awhile I enjoy all my meals once again and have no trouble afterward. My appetite has picked up fine and I have not had those dizzy feelings at all lately. Gradually the aches and pains and backache have gone away, so that I am now getting sound sleep at night and instead of being tired all the time I get up mornings feeling fully rested and have more energy throughout the day."

Yes, Syntona has helped many, many people in this same way. Come to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

MR. JOE CARNEY

Little Benny's Note Book

I was eating luntch with ma, being scramble eggs, and I said, What's for diner tonight, ma?

Food, nice food for land sakes, ma said. Dont you think you better finish one meal before you start worrying about what you're going to have for the next one? she said.

I'm not worrying for myself, ma, I said. I'm thinking of pop. He hasn't been feeling very good lately, has he? I said, and ma said, Why, I haven't heard him complain. But then your father never does complain until he's actually sick in bed, and then I must say he never stops complaining. He seems to of been feeling a little tired lately, it's true, she said.

That's what I mean, ma, I mean that's what I was thinking, I said. So maybe it's his nourishment, maybe he hasn't been eating enough. Why dont you give him some of his favorite food tonight? He always eats more if it's something he likes, I said, and ma said, Well naturally, I suppose he's only human.

Well hay, ma, why dont you give him liver and onions? I said.

Being pop's most favorite thing including desserts and ma said, Well now that may not be a bad idea. The way to tempt a man's appetite is through his stummick, that's an old but true saying. Even if he doesn't actually need it from a health stand point, a big dish of liver and onions always makes him cheerful, so then perhaps he wont mind so much when he finds out I've made a bridge engagement for him tonight although he's already played his iron bound quota of one game this week, she said.

Well aw heck, that's not fair, I said. My report card is not so good again, and I was going to ask him to sign it after his liver and onions, and now you're going to spoil it for me by asking him about bridge first after it was all my idea, I said.

The result being ma signed my report card herself as a special occasion.

Sane Driving Over Holidays

With the possibility of slightly more exuberance being shown during Christmas celebrations this year owing to the fact that it is the first Christmas since the cessation of hostilities, Mayor Frank S. Follwell today warned district motorists against mixing drink with driving during the forthcoming holiday season.

Mayor Follwell pointed to the fact that undoubtedly there would be greater numbers of cars on the streets and highways as result of there being plenty of gasoline available and warned especially that care be taken to avoid accidents during the period of Christmas and New Year celebration.

He warned particularly of the existent danger of accidents through carelessness on the part of drunken drivers and assured that such persons would be punished to the limit. Conviction on a drunken driving charge means automatic jail sentence with no alternative of a fine he pointed out.

"My advice to motorists especially during the next two weeks is if they drink not to drive, and if they are driving their cars, not to drink."

Former Freight Agent For C.P.R. Given Promotion

Ed. T. Truman, well known in railway circles here and former Canadian Pacific Railway freight agent in Belleville, has been promoted to the position of assistant superintendent of the Oshawa-Peterborough subdivision of the line, it was learned today.

Mr. Truman for the past three years has been stationed in Kingston as freight agent and prior to that worked in the same capacity in Belleville. He was stationed at one time at Glen Tay, near Perth.

While in Belleville he was a popular member of the Rotary Club and carried on his associations with that service organization after his transfer to Kingston. He was an ardent hunter and fisherman and with his hunting colleague, President "Mac" McLean of the Rotary Club was responsible for many large "bags" of fish and game. At least they came home with the stories thereof.

Queen's Hotel Staff Entertained By Management

Upwards of sixty members of the staff of the Queen's Hotel and their friends were the guests of the management at a Christmas party held in the dining rooms on Tuesday night.

Mrs. Zeta Ryan, proprietress of the hotel provided a sumptuous buffet lunch for her staff with music and dancing in appreciation of their loyalty and efficiency during the past year.

The staff in turn, in tangible appreciation of the co-operation and courteous treatment shown them in their various lines of duty, presented Mrs. Ryan with beautiful twin crystal decanters and twelve crystal goblets.

Music was provided by George Nicholls, Tweed, an accomplished musician who was assisted by a cellist. He in turn was presented with a handsome gift by members of the staff.

Dancing and social amenities continued until a late hour.

the German soldiers had been deliberately shot.

He agreed with Col. MacDonald that such wounds predominated in street fighting whereas in open warfare abdominal wounds prevailed. He said these wounds were not of that type.

"I did not concern myself too much with that," Meyer testified. "I simply made my report to the divisional commander as it was necessary to call his attention to the matter."

"But you concerned yourself sufficiently with it to make slander against other troops," Col. MacDonald said.

"I refute that charge," the accused retorted. "I merely brought the matter to the attention of the division. I can only undermine the reputation of other troops if I make an untrue report about them and then hand on that untrue report."

"You handed in a report without going to the trouble to investigate whether these people had been killed under circumstances which suggested whether they had been taken prisoner," the prosecutor said.

"It was not in my regimental area and it was not necessary that I should make an exact report," Meyer answered. "That was the division's job."

War Work Has Been Valuable To Thousands of Canadian Women

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—Canadian women in 1945 got their breath after a completed war job and turned toward their post-war employment—most of them in their homes or in work that is traditionally feminine.

Of the 5,606,119 women in Canada, an estimated 1,046,000 held paying jobs at the last count at April 1, apart from 46,215 in the women's services and 800,000 on farms.

As war industries closed down and the services were demobilized, many women, particularly married ones, did not seek other jobs but returned to their homes. Many welcomed back servicemen husbands and started out to find and furnish the first home they had ever had.

"Women's part in the nation's war work was vital," said Mrs. Rex Eaton, labor department director of women's employment and former associate director of wartime national selective service.

"It has made them aware of their value to Canada and of the importance of their work in the home. They will approach their domestic tasks with greater efficiency, ability and interest than ever before."

Other women war workers left their humming factories for jobs in hospitals, hotels, laundries, offices and the textile and other industries. Some who had come to the capital stepped from wartime posts to the peace-expanded departments of trade and commerce, reconstruction and external affairs.

Servicewomen were returning to civvie street by the hundreds by the end of the year and Mary Salter, superintendent of women's rehabilitation, reported that the girls in uniform were also following the trend by either returning to their homes or training for the jobs which women have long held.

Vocational Training

Miss Salter's section of the veterans' affairs department is prepared to look after the demobilization and vocational guidance needs of 48,000 women, including nursing sisters, 2,000 girls from other countries who enlisted in the Canadian services and Canadian girls who enlisted in the British women's services.

Up to the end of July, 7,298 women received their discharge from the Canadian Women's Army Corps, and at Oct. 31, 9,426 were released from the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division). However, these figures recorded normal "wastage" during the war years as well as post-war disbandment. Figures for the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service and the nursing services were not available.

Most popular veterans' training course for the 1,600 women now studying under the plan is commercial training which has absorbed 60 per cent. Next most popular is hairdressing and after these come dressmaking, nursing, radio and machine operation. Some are studying occupational therapy and others commercial art.

Of the 190 woman veterans at universities, 177 are continuing and the 13 who have dropped from the department's records did so because they graduated, became ill or their veterans' benefits ended. There have been no failures.

Foot Notes

By JEWELL CASEY
(In Our Dumb Animals)

Mother nature, in her infinite wisdom, found it necessary to design many types of feet for her countless creatures of the wilds. She made particular patterns — types best suiting their needs — for each family group.

In many instances, the feet, or portions of them, are used for purposes other than merely walking. For example, the feet of the flesh-eating animals are equipped with sharp, strong, retractible claws, which are used in defense, as well as in securing food.

The feet of most birds are so designed that even when the creatures are fast asleep, instead of losing their grip, the toes clamp tighter around the limb or perch. A clever muscle arrangement extending down the leg on the outside of the joint draws the toes and claws tightly when the bird settles. The weight of the bird acting as a lever, pulls the muscles tighter, so the bird can sleep without fear of falling and being devoured by some lurking enemy.

The feet of the hummingbird—smallest of all birds—and those of the osprey, hawk-fisher, are so constructed that neither bird can walk or even hop on the ground.

In the case of the hummingbird, one foot cannot be placed ahead of the other in walking, and therefore, the feet are used only for perching.

The osprey's feet are equipped with powerful claws which are used in capturing food and securing nesting material. Both are obtained while the bird is in flight.

• • •

The polar bear has enormous feet, measuring one-sixth of the length of the entire body, and armed with powerful claws. The feet of this animal are particularly distinguished from those of other bears in that the soles are covered with close-set hairs, a provision that prevents their slipping on the ice.

Cottontail rabbits use their feet for walking and running and for talking! The talking is accomplished by the animal resting most of the weight of the body on the forefeet and striking the ground in a series of thumps with the hind feet. This causes a vibration that other rabbits feel and understand. It is believed that rabbits send signals of fear, anger and love.

The starfish has hundreds of feet, and upon some are noses! The foot used as the smelling organ is not needed to help the starfish move about, but it is of the same structure and can be used as a foot if necessary.

Although the pretty dragonfly has six feet, it cannot walk, but must fly, even though it desires to go only a very short distance. The feet and legs are used to form a sort of basket in which to carry insects which are captured in flight.

Most animals as large as a camel would sink into the desert sands, but the peculiar construction of the camel's feet prevent this from happening. The foot of this "ship of the desert," has two toes, and under the toes is a cushion spread out so wide that the animal does not sink much when walking or running over deep loose sand.

In order that they may run quickly over snow in search of food and in evading enemies, the feet of the ruffed grouse are equipped in winter time with snowshoes! Stiff spines grow out of the toes on both sides resembling snowshoes. In warm weather the feet of the grouse are perfectly smooth.

Perhaps the most sure-footed creatures in the world are the mountain sheep and goats, whose feet are specially designed for hazardous climbing. The center of the foot is made of a substance somewhat similar to very tough rubber, while outside is the hoof of very hard material. Thus, the sharp hoof with the rubber pads permits these mountain climbers to go up and down sheer cliffs without any danger of falling, or even slipping.

That queer animal, the sloth, uses its three, long curved claws on the toes, which are perfectly formed to hook around branches of trees where it spends almost its entire life eating leaves and twigs. When absolutely necessary to walk, which is very seldom in a lifetime, the sloth folds up those sharp claws and walks upon knees and elbows.

The king penguin, the bird that walks in an upright manner, uses its right foot as an incubator! There is a piece of skin above the foot, which is pulled down to cover the one egg, hold it in place and keep it warm for the entire period of incubation.

The foot arrangement of the tapir is different from all other hoofed animals, inasmuch as it has four toes on the forefeet and three toes on the hindfeet, all separate and with nail-like hoofs.

The ostrich, largest living bird, is unique among birds in that it has only two toes on each foot. As chief weapon of defense, the feet are very strong and the kick of an ostrich is very painful.

Woodpeckers' feet are fitted out with four strong claws, two pointing backward and two forward, for the purpose of grasping the bark of a tree while boring within for grubs.

• • •

The feet of the largest living land animal, the elephant, are furnished with five toes and the sole of the foot is formed of a very thick pad of skin. Instead of the elephant walking upon the sole of the foot, it actually walks upon its toes.

Only the foot of the snail protrudes from the shell, and upon this foot is the head. There are slender muscles attached to the top of the shell and to the foot, by which means the animal is drawn into its shell.

The toes of tree frogs are expanded into adhesive disks making it possible for them to go up and down trees and to cling to any other surface. Somewhat similarly, the geckos, small lizards of the desert, are fitted with flattened spongy, sticky toes, which enable these little creatures to run with great speed on smooth surfaces, even on ceilings.

Beavers carry a comb on the second toe of each hind foot. This queer double nail arrangement is used to comb their fur.

While it is true that bats use their feet very little for walking purposes, the feet, with five nearly equal-length, slender toes, each bearing a claw, are very important. With the feet, bats hang suspended, head down, from tops of caverns, roofs or barns, or other dark secluded places where they sleep throughout the day in summer time. In winter, they sleep both night and day.

• • •

The feet of that queer bird-reptile-mammal, the duckbill platypus, are indeed odd. Equipped with very strong claws, the feet may be folded up and walked upon, or spread out with web between toes enabling it to swim. The male has a hollow, movable spur on the inside of the hind feet, supplied with venom.

Prosecution Says More Than 150 Prisoners Shot

Statement Made in Course Of Examining Nazi Witness

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurrich, Germany, Dec. 21 — (CP Cable) — More than 150 Canadian prisoners were shot by the 12th S. S. Hitler Jugend Division in Normandy between June 7 and June 21, 1944, Lt.-Col. Bruce Macdonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, today told the court trying Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer on war crimes charges.

Meyer, commander of the 25th Panzer Grenadier Regiment of the 12th S. S. Division during the time the unit was fighting the 3rd Canadian Division, is charged with direct or indirect responsibility for the execution of 48 Canadian prisoners. The Canadian military court trying Meyer is presided over by Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax.

Yesterday Col. Macdonald told the court that 65 Canadian prisoners had been shot in addition to the 48 deaths listed in the indictment of Meyer. The chief prosecutor's story of atrocities against Canadians was expanded at today's session with the charges that even larger numbers had been murdered.

Col. Macdonald made the statement in the course of cross-examination of a German defence witness, a young staff officer who served at 12th S.S. headquarters during the Caen battle in the early stages of the Normandy invasion. The witness, who was not identified for fear of reprisals being taken against him, said he knew nothing of such atrocities.

Regiments Instructed

Previously, the witness had said he had not heard that 18 Canadians were shot at the ancient Abbey of Ardenne. Col. Macdonald told the witness it was a matter of "common gossip" at the rear headquarters of Meyer's 25th Regiment, but the young German maintained he knew nothing about the incidents.

Examined by Lt.-Col. M. W. Andrew of Stratford, Ont., defence counsel, the witness said he was with the 25th Regiment in Belgium in 1943 during its training and the regiment was instructed about the Geneva Convention and articles of war. He said orders were issued and repeated after the invasion that prisoners should be taken and sent back to the division in the proper manner for interrogation.

The witness said he had never heard Meyer say that his unit took no prisoners and testified further that one rainy night southwest of Caen, Meyer ordered 150 Canadian prisoners put in division headquarters buildings because of the severity of the weather.

Captured But Escaped

The witness told the court he was captured by the 4th Canadian Division south of Caen but later escaped. Reporting back to Meyer, he said he found the S.S. officer having dinner with three Canadian officers who had been captured.

The witness buttressed several parts of Meyer's testimony under direct and cross examination.

He corroborated Meyer's statement that he and his officers had worn camouflage uniforms and said he remembered seeing regimental vehicles in the abbey's courtyard and had no impression that any had been stowed in the chapel. He said there could have been mines in the ancient abbey area and added that none had been charted by the German division which laid coastal minefields and none had been reported by Meyer's headquarters as having been laid.

Jan Jesionek, Polish conscript who served at Meyer's headquarters and who appeared several days ago as a witness for the prosecution, had told the court his scout car had hit a German mine in the area around the abbey.

Because Jesionek's car was disabled, the Polish soldier testified, he had returned to headquarters in time to see seven Canadian prisoners of war shot by their captors while Myer was present.

May Have Been Secret

Asked why he knew nothing of the shootings of prisoners although it was common knowledge in the 12th S. S. Division, the German staff officer said: "Either reports went directly to the legal branch and did not come to the operations staff, or else it was kept a secret within the division."

He said he had not heard about it, had no close friends in the regiments alleged to have been involved and added: "I can't imagine that a senior officer would brag about such atrocities to me."

Witnesses said he could "remember quite a lot" about June 17 when German divisional headquarters was shelled but he could not recall hearing about a Canadian officer being taken prisoner. Few prisoners had been taken by the formation between June 12 and June 17, he said, and although Col. Macdonald repeated the circumstances under which Lieut. Fred Williams was believed to have died of head wounds within 50 yards of Meyer's headquarters, he could not recall the incident.

The prosecutor said the witness would "rather like to be helpful to Meyer, his former commander" in his testimony and the officer replied: "I would be happy if things turned out to Meyer's advantage as a result of my testimony, but according my oath, I am saying nothing but the truth."

The staff officer appeared today after the prosecution yesterday had launched its final thrust against the sturdy defence put up by Meyer during cross-examination.

Gen. Patton Dies of Injury

By RICHARD A. O'REAGAN

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 21 —(AP)—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., who led the victorious United States Third Army from the beaches of Normandy into Czechoslovakia, died at 5:50 p.m. (11:50 a.m., E.S.T.) today, a dozen days after his neck was broken in a traffic accident.

The general's stout old fighting heart weakened during the day from effects of pulmonary complications which had beset his apparent recovery from the broken neck and partial paralysis.

Mrs. Patton was with him.

The announcement of the general's death was made by Brig.-Gen. John M. Willen of the United States 7th Army.

The General was 60 last Nov. 11.

He was commander of the United States 15th Army at the time of his death. He had served briefly as acting commander of all American forces in the European theatre a few days before his automobile and an army truck collided near Mannheim Sunday, Dec. 9.

The official announcement said:

"Gen. Patton died at 5:50 tonight it was announced by Brig.-Gen. John M. Willen, Chief of Staff of the 7th Army. The General died peacefully."

The pulmonary complications developed from bronchial secretions yesterday when the colorful general was well on the way toward recovery. He was injured near Mannheim when his automobile and an army truck collided.

Five Ships Arriving Before Dec. 25, Some Canadians to Mark Christmas at Sea

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 21 —(CP)— Canada's first happy peacetime Christmas in six years finds more of her service personnel home than in any war year since 1941 and hundreds of war brides and children observing their first Canadian yuletide.

The 4,000 British brides who have been moved to Canada since VE-Day have taught their 2,000 children that Santa Claus or Pere Noel in Canada is the same beneficent spirit as Father Christmas in England — but the plenty of this Dominion gives him more to draw on than the scarcity of their birthplace.

Only one army division, an air force advance party and some navy men had reached Britain for that first war Christmas in 1939. But Canadian forces built up rapidly and by 1942 exceeded the total of 123,000 who will be away this Christmas. By the 1944 Christmas the overseas total had risen to nearly 450,000.

At overseas posts and away from their families in Canada this year will be approximately 3,000 navy personnel; 100,000 army personnel, of whom 25,000 are in the occupation force, and 20,000 air force personnel, of whom 10,000 are in the occupation force. Also overseas are some 38,000 war brides and children of Canadian servicemen.

211,000 Repatriated Since VE-Day.

Since VE-Day, the navy has repatriated 4,000 men, the army approximately 162,000 and the air force some 45,000. These figures include released prisoners of war who spent previous Christmases in German and Japanese prison camps.

Five ships are scheduled to dock at Saint John, N.B., and Halifax before Christmas with another 800 repatriates, but many of these will not actually reach their homes until after the holiday.

Fierce Atlantic storms have delayed shipping schedules and ships like the Aircraft Carrier H.M.S. Puncher, carrying nearly 500 repatriates, will arrive Sunday—two days late. The Lady Rodney, with another 280 repatriates, is trying to make Halifax before Christmas Eve.

A small group of 61 are aboard the Empire MacAndrew due at Halifax, Sunday, and two small freighters each with three army officers as passengers, are due at Saint John, N.B., before the holiday. They are the Dentonia Park expected in today and the Hampstead Park, due Monday.

M'ARTHUR DENIES HE THREATENED TO RESIGN POST

Radio Report Says General Embroiled in Arguments With the Russians

Tokyo, Dec. 21 — (AP)—Gen. MacArthur today denied a broadcast report that his headquarters had become embroiled in arguments with the Russians over assignment of Soviet occupation troops to Japan and that Gen. MacArthur had threatened to resign.

"I am here to serve and not to hinder or obstruct the American government," the Supreme Commander of the Allied powers said in a statement issued by his Press Relations Office.

"It is my full purpose to see the thing through. The question of Russian participation in the occupation is a matter for other decision than my own."

The statement said that the broadcast report, "purported to have been made by Larry Tighe of the American Broadcasting Corporation, has absolutely no basis in fact."

It concluded:

"If Tighe made the statement he is alleged to have broadcast from Tokyo, someone must have been feeding him a funny type of 'hooch' being peddled around Tokyo on the black market."

(Taking to the air after issuance of the statement, Tighe said "I reaffirm the story which I previously broadcast that the express desire of the commander of this area is that the Russian troops not be allowed to take over the Japanese island of Hokkaido."

Says Statement Inaccurate

(Tighe's reply, monitored in San Francisco by ABC, added:

("Further, the Supreme Commander's claim that if I made such statements I must have been full of Tokyo black market hooch is inaccurate in the first place but — and this is more important —hardly fitting in a discussion of a subject that concerns the very life of the United Nations Organization." Tighe said he received his information "from a reliable and honest source and I still consider it both reliable and honest.")

Tighe, in the broadcast which drew the headquarters denial statement, set forth these reports:

1. Russia wanted to send in an army of occupation to Japan; Gen. MacArthur insisted on only a division.

2. Russia wanted to occupy the northern island of Hokkaido, which is nearest Siberia; Gen. MacArthur suggested Kyushu, leaving United States forces on Honshu and Hokkaido in between the Russians and Siberia.

3. Gen. MacArthur was reported to have told the American State Department he would resign rather than allow Russia any further participation on occupation affairs.

Yesterday in Washington, Tighe's broadcast report was called to the attention of President Truman, who told his press conference neither he nor the War Department had received any such word from Gen. MacArthur. The State Department said it had not heard of reported differences between Gen. MacArthur and the Russians.

ACQUITTED OF BRIBERY

Sherbrooke, Que., Dec. 21 — (CP) — A court of King's Bench jury yesterday acquitted Theodore Langlois of Magog, Ont., on a charge of attempted bribery, as the criminal assizes court concluded sessions here. Langlois had been accused of offering an official $50 to obtain purchase of a motor vehicle.

BRITISH TROOPS EXTEND CONTROL NEAR SOERABAJA

Mosquito and Thunderbolt Aircraft Carrying Bombs Destroy Roadblocks

Batavia, Dec. 21 — (Reuters) —A meeting between Lt.-Gen. Sir Miles Dempsey, Air Marshal Sir Keith Park, commanders of Allied land and air forces, respectively, in Southeast Asia, and Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied Commander-in-Chief in Java, was expected here today, the Netherlands news agency reported.

It was believed the meeting would deal with matters arising from the recent Singapore conference of Allied leaders on the Indonesian situation, the agency added.

Meanwhile British troops extending their control south and west of important Soerabaja naval base, scene of recent severe fighting, continued to meet roadblocks and engage in small clashed duels with Indonesian troops.

Near one cross roads, R. A. F. Mosquito and Thunderbolt aircraft carrying rockets and 500-pound bombs, completely destroyed road blocks and strongpoints 300 yards in front of Gurkha troops who were being held up.

From a village 15 miles southwest of Soerabaja where an RAF sergeant baled out from a damaged Thunderbolt Monday, it was expected that negotiations were under way between a British rescue column and Indonesian authorities to whom the sergeant had been handed over.

The Dutch news agency Aneta said in a dispatch from Singapore that several thousand Dutch Marines trained in the United States had arrived today off the Malayan coast aboard the Dutch steamer Noordam.

A Netherlands naval communique said that Indonesians from Java had landed on Billiton Island, 200 miles north of Batavia. Other Indonesians were reported to have hoisted the red and white banner of the unrecognized Indonesion Republic in Dutch Borneo, about 150 miles inland from Balikpapen.

Aneta said representatives of 15,000 Chinese in the Bandoeng area had protested to authorities that an average of six Chinese were being kidnapped daily by members of Pemoeda, the Indonesian extremist youth organization.

Asks United Nations To Help Send Back All German Agents

Berlin, Dec. 21 —(AP)— The Allied Control Council, through its political directorate, has requested members of the United nations to assist in sending back to Germany all German agents and "obnoxious" Germans in their countries.

The council already had issued a formal recall of all German officials living in neutral countries at the time of the surrender. This order, however, did not apply to Germans in Allied countries.

DOLPHINS ONLY GOLD PLATED

Tokyo, Dec. 21 —(AP)—Allied bombers blasting Agoya Castle during the war destroyed the famous pair of "golden" dolphins on the main tower and a three-centuries-old legend that they were made of solid gold. The newspaper Yomiuri Hocki said today a search of the ruins revealed the dolphins were only gold plated.

BIG 3 MINISTERS HONOR STALIN ON 66TH BIRTHDAY

Conference Continues Into Sixth Day With No Details of Meeting Being Given Out

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 21 — (AP)—The "Big Three" Foreign Ministers, seeking to solve major world problems, went into the sixth day of their conference today as the Soviet Union celebrated the 66th birthday of its leader, Premier Stalin.

Tanned and rested after his long vacation, Stalin was reported to be spending the day at his desk in the Kremlin, according to his custom of pursuing his regular schedule on his birthday.

The event, however, overshadowed the meeting of Foreign Commissar Molotov, State Secretary Byrnes and Foreign Secretary Bevin as far as public interest here was concerned, for Stalin in the eyes of millions of Soviet citizens is regarded as the greatest of all Russians.

The three foreign ministers, who have been holding daily meetings since Sunday, turned back to their complicated problems after cutting short yesterday's session to attend a diplomatic reception given by the Foreign Commissar and Madame Molotov.

There still was no authentic information as to how far they have progressed on such questions as control of atomic energy, withdrawal of foreign troops from Iran, control of Japan, and other problems equally as important to world peace.

Extremely Cordial

It was evident, however, at last night's reception, as at earlier social functions, that the three foreign ministers were on extremely cordial terms. They drank a round of toasts to the friendship and collaboration of their three countries, and appeared to be in jovial mood.

During the reception Mr. Molotov approached Mr. Byrnes and said in Russian: "I suggest we go in and have something to eat and drink."

"What?" asked Mr. Byrnes, not quite catching the Russian translation.

"He says follow him," interrupted the U. S. Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman.

"Tell him I have been following him around up to now, why shouldn't I keep on," Mr. Byrnes said laughing.

While the conference was reported to be going smoothly, news reports and commentaries in the Soviet press left no doubt about the difficulties involved in some of the problems under discussion.

Major Issues Discussed

Several major issues have been spotlighted by the press since Messrs. Byrnes and Bevin arrived in Moscow, the latest of these being demands that Turkey give up certain frontier areas to the Soviet Georgian Republic.

Moscow newspapers previously had mentioned the presence of United States troops in China, the conduct of the Japanese government under United States military control, and the Iranian question.

(A dispatch from London quoted the Moscow radio as saying last night that Greece's left - wing E.A.M. — National Liberation Front — had messaged the foreign ministers' meeting a protest against the presence of "foreign troops" in Greece and said "foreign intervention is hindering the democratic development of the country." British troops have been in Greece since the country's liberation.)

Mother, 5 Children Burned to Death, 3 Others Injured

Fire Destroys Two-Storey House in Central Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Dec. 21 — (CP) — A mother and her five children were burned to death, and three other persons injured, when fire destroyed the interior of a two-storey house in central Winnipeg early today.

Dead are Mrs. Betty Armitage, about 50, two sons, Jerry, 7, Jimmy, 3; and three daughters, Shirley, 16, Elaine, 13, and Yvonne, 6 months.

Injured are Bernard Armitage, 53, husband of the dead woman, another daughter, Sonya, 8, and Reginald Benham, 42.

The fire started at about three o'clock this morning and firemen battled the flames that swept through the wooden building in 15-below-zero weather.

Benham saved young Sonya when he climbed a ladder to an upstairs bedroom window. He saw a maze of hands and feet trying to scramble through the window, and picked up the first youngster he could reach, which happened to be Sonya. He handed her to a fireman standing on another ladder nearby.

Overcome by Smoke

Benham was overcome by smoke when he entered the room in an attempt to rescue the other children. His condition is reported not serious by hospital authorities.

Two other families who lived on the ground floor of the house escaped the flames.

In hospital here Mr. Armitage said his wife awakened him when she smelled the smoke. He "went to the kitchen and it was worse in there. I tried to get to the window on the landing, but it was so dark and smokey that I had to grope my way around."

"I reached the window and by that time I was gasping for air. I opened the window and took a breath of air and started to go back and warn my wife and the kiddies.

All Out of Breath

"I was all out of breath and nearly choking. I had to go back and get some more air. I went back to the window and stepped onto the roof of the next building. I started to go back again.

I just stepped through the window for the second time. I was greeted by an array of sparks and flame. It was impossible for me to get back.

"I yelled for the firemen to get their ladders up and save the children. They strung a ladder up for me and started carrying me down. On the way down the ladder slipped and the firemen and I fell about 12 feet to the ground. They took me to the hospital."

It was Winnipeg's worst conflagration since Dec. 23, 1928, when five firemen were killed fighting a theatre fire.

COL. OHTA ARRESTED AS JAP WAR CRIMINAL

Manila, Dec. 21 —(AP)— Lt.-Col. Seichi Ohta, former chief of the Japanese military police in the Philippines, was arraigned today on charges of permitting torture of Americans and Filipinos. His trial was set for Jan. 3.

Ohta is accused of responsibility for the slaying of Dr. Clarence Kuangson Young, Chinese consul-general, Consul Kai Yien-Mok, and six members of the consulate staff, and of permitting his command to subject civilians and prisoners of war to "the most inhuman conditions" at Fort Santiago in Manila.

Wants South Tyrol Given to Austria

Vienna, Dec. 21 (Reuters)—Dr. Leopold Figl, in his first speech to parliament today as new Austrian Chancellor, called for the return of the South Tyrol from Italian possession and appealed to the Allies to abolish demarcation lines between zones of occupation within the country.

His speech, approved in advance by all cabinet members including Socialists and Communists, followed only two days after a similar demand for the immediate return of the South Tyrol by Dr. Karl Renner, the outgoing chancellor and newly elected president.

Dr. Figl also appealed to the Allies for a reduction of occupation forces to a size which Austrian economy could support.

Austrian co-operation with her neighbors, particularly Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Yugoslavia, was essential he said.

The South Tyrol, comprising the former Austrian provinces of Alto Adige and Trentino, was ceded to Italy in 1919 by the treaty of Saint Germain, and corresponds to the present Italian provinces of Bolzano and Trento.

Japanese Failed Properly to Identify Hospital Ships

Tokyo, Dec. 21. (AP)— Japan lost 19 hospital ships during the war, but none through Allied violation of the rules of warfare, Maj. Kei Shinohara told Kyodo News Agency today. Shinohara, repatriated former chief of a hospital transport, said Japanese authorities failed to properly identify hospital ships, refused to transmit their names to the Allies, insisted on stationing hospital ships among combat vessels in action, and often used them as armed transports.

THIEVES TAKE CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Hamilton, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Harassed Christmas shoppers, certainly, will have all the sympathy in the world for Julius Sachasky whose home at 39 Imperial Street was entered by thieves last night. Stolen were a bottle of Scotch whiskey, a bottle of French Brandy and a bottle of Italian Martinis, three leather bill folds, two cigaret lighters and a set of salt and pepper shakers, all Christmas presents, together with a woman's gold wrist watch and a small mantel clock.

The room of a boarder, John Gurniski, was ransacked and the contents of a trunk scattered over the floor. Nothing was taken.

East Meets West as Crown Colony In China Recovers From the War

By HAL BOYLE

Hong Kong, Dec. 21 — (AP)— The East and West are meeting in this British Crown colony, and seem even to be blending at times.

The classical picture of the Englishman carrying his white man's burden shows him sitting down alone in a full dress suit to his evening meal while outside throb the tempting native drums.

Joseph Conrad wrote a powerful psychological novel, "The Heart of Darkness," about a Briton who took off his dress suit, slipped over the caste lines and bounded out into the night to play with the dark-skinned drummers.

The chains broke that time. They certainly are bending now.

British and American sailors—as well as men — are romancing about the place with pretty Chinese girls and squiring them to teas and dances and Hong Kong's leading night club, the Paramount. The girls are welcome in the Allied Officers' Club.

There is a general feeling among Britons here now that social relations will be easier. Their rigidity was somewhat shaken by three years of communal life, shared by much of Hong Kong's ruling population, in the Stanley Bay internment camp.

The Chinese will be more inclined to believe this, however, if a restriction which bans them from building and dwelling on "the peak," the colony's elite district, is removed.

British authorities have gone methodically to work to restore this Asiatic trading post which for more than a century has been their trade gateway into China and one of the most important bunkering or refuelling points for Empire vessels plying the Pacific.

In three months they have made great progress in restoring order. The streets are swept clear and the tram lines are running. Everybody seems to have something to do. They threw out Japanese currency completely and replaced it with the old Hong Kong dollar — worth about 55 cents Canadian — and tied the money to the pound sterling and the value of rice, the poor man's bread and butter and cake here. Food prices have been cut 50 per cent. The aim has been to keep down the costs of necessities while letting the prices of luxuries inflate.

"Up to a month ago we had distributed 1,000,000 free meals of rice," said Rear Admiral C. H. J. Harcourt, acting Governor and military administrator, "and we are still giving them some, but we are trying to put them to some kind of work instead of handing out charity."

Hong Kong's population of 700,000 to 800,000 is overwhelmingly Chinese.

"Our chief problems are food, coal, housing and the need of getting back our old trading population," said Admiral Harcourt. "Some goods have come in, but the shelves are still empty.

"We want everything wanted by everybody else in the world," he added wryly. "But the trouble is that we are at the end of the line. Everybody helps himself from the train before it gets here."

Frisky Live Eels in Big Demand By N.Y. Italians for Christmas Dinner

By Arthur Edson

Washington, Dec. 21—(AP)— Have you bought a frisky, live eel for your Christmas dinner?

Well, thousands have.

This cheery, seasonal touch is supplied by William H. Dumont of the United States department of the Interior, who today gave a reporter this picture of the industry:

Many Italian immigrants can't bear the thought of an eelless Christmas. An eel caught during the fall is almost certain to be pampered along until the holiday season. Then she (he eels don't count) will reach premium prices.

Special containers and boats are used to keep the eels alive and slithering. And now, with Christmas just around the corner, they're as popular as a nylon salesman at a sorority house.

Dumont said eels are caught from Nova Scotia to North Carolina, 200,000 to 250,000 pounds are sold each season, and most of the customers live in New York.

An eel, he said, gets as big as your arm, weighs three to four pounds, and sells for 25 to 35 cents a pound.

Getting around the he-eels, Dumont says they don't get caught because they spurn fresh water. They're smaller and less desirable anyway, so nobody cares if they do sulk in the bays and coves.

Eels are believed to do all their housekeeping in the Sargossa Sea, a seaweedy portion of the North Atlantic.

Nobody knows why or how the eels find their way back to the Sargossa Sea.

A girl in the Italian Embassy said the eel-eating habit is confined chiefly to Naples and Sicily. Eels are cooked on a spit, she said, and flavored with laurel leaves.

Did she plan to eat eel this Christmas?

"Oh, no!" she squealed.

DESERONTO WANTS BRIDGE ACROSS BAY

Deseronto Industrial Commission and Chamber of Commerce are combining their voices in an attempt to acquire government assistance for the construction of a highway bridge across the Bay of Quinte at that point, and on a project of sewers for the town.

At a recent meeting of the two bodies both projects were discussed with Roscoe Robson, M.P.P. for East Hastings reminding that the government had many other projects under consideration at the present time. No promise could be obtained as to whether sounding could be made this winter and an estimate of the cost made. Vehicular communication between Deseronto and Prince Edward during the summer is possible by ferry but in winter motorists must drive 50 miles out of their way.

Meeting discussions included plans for closer co-operation between management and employees. A. L. Bennett, Galt, presided. J. H. Vernor, Peterborough, a past president of the Associations, attended the meeting.

The collective citation accompanying these awards is as follows:—"The following officers and airmen have completed in various capacities numerous operations against the enemy in the course of which they have invariably displayed the utmost fortitude, courage and devotion to duty."

OBJECT SOUGHT

Uoluelet, B. C., Dec. 21—(CP)—An object, believed to be a Japanese balloon, is sought by a party of Provincial police, guides and R.C.A.F. personnel trekking through the heavily-wooded country between Tofino and Port Alberni.

The party plans to destroy the object, if it is a bomb, which was sighted on a 2,000-foot hill behind Kennedy Lake. The object was sighted during a routine inspection of the R.C.A.F. communication line between Tofino and Port Hard.

Many Unexploded Bombs Still Remain in London

Croydon, Surrey, Dec. 21 — (CP)—Satan was removed from Croydon Sunday, but residents of this bomb-battered English town breathed sighs of relief too soon. That's because Satan — a 4,000-pound unexploded bomb dropped by the German Luftwaffe early in 1941 — had a younger brother.

One mile from the South Croydon lumber yard where Satan was unearthed, Royal Engineer sappers have discovered a 2,000-pounder which has lain dormant since 1941.

30-Foot Shaft.

Sappers from No. 2 Bomb Disposal Squad — the intrepid outfit that drew Satan's teeth — have sunk a 30-foot shaft and hope to remove the bomb before the new year.

It now is disclosed that Greater London still has 24 unexploded or suspected bombs and work on four is proceeding with evacuation of districts where they fell in prospect.

Sappers are boring close to a 200-pound bomb at Abbeywood, while others are about 12 feet from a 250-pounder at Gilford, Essex. A third group is four feet from a 100-pounder near a tar-distilling factory at Silvertown.

One Near Palace.

Operations soon will begin on a 250-kilometre bomb beneath the lake in St. James' Park, not far from Buckingham Palace, while other bomb sites are in the crowded London suburb of Peckham, at the country Village of Potters Bar, Hertfordshire, and in the grounds of the Southwark Cathedral near London Bridge.

Secret steam apparatus is being used to sterilize a 500-pound bomb near the railway line at Woolwich.

After a three-year search, an unexploded 2,000-pound bomb was located with an electrical device in the market place at Hull, Yorkshire, and a squad of Royal Engineers is sinking a shaft to reach it. The bomb, dropped during a raid in July, 1942, grazed the corner of a meat market and embedded itself in soft soil below the surface.

Experts say the longer explosive lies in the ground, the more dangerous it becomes. "Even if left 15 years it would still be getting more and more dangerous," a Government spokesman said. "Smaller bombs are more dangerous because the Germans fitted them with delayed-action fuses."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Haig Did Not Seek Position Says Ald. Pringle

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

In the report contained in your edition dated Dec. 18th, of the proceedings of the City Council, considerable prominence was given to the fact that Council refused to endorse the recommendation of the Industrial Commission and appoint Mr. A. McLean Haig as acting Industrial Commissioner, until a suitable successor to Mr. Herity was appointed.

As Chairman of the Commission, I would like to make perfectly clear that Mr. Haig did not seek this position, but it was felt by the Commission that as considerable care would have to be exercised in order to obtain as successor worthy of Mr. Herity, and as there was a good deal of important work to be done that could not wait, Mr. Haig should be asked to accept the position which he consented to do only after considerable urging by the Commission, and out of a sense of public duty, not because he wanted the job.

During the past five years, I will say that the Council has been very co-operative with the Commission, and it is unfortunate that the recommendation of the Commission was repudiated at a time when it is felt that the City is in a transition period industrially, and the Commission being the responsible body for industrial development in Belleville, after much consideration had decided to retain a man of Mr. Haig's undoubted ability.

Yours very truly,
R. A. Pringle,
Chairman Industrial Commission.

Slippery Pavements Blamed for Accidents

Slippery street conditions were indirectly responsible for three motor accidents over the night, one of which resulted in considerable property damage to one vehicle involved. One accident was reported to police while "bump and run" drivers were blamed for the other two, those being responsible not seeing fit to report the matter to police.

Joseph Bennett, Harvey Street, was driving his auto north on Pinnacle Street, when nearing the Station Street intersection he was in a head-on collision with a Direct Winters truck, driven by Gerald Frost, R.R. 3, Belleville. Frost had been proceeding east on Station Street and in turning south onto Pinnacle his truck went into a skid and crashed into the Bennett auto. Grill, radiator and front fender of the Bennett car received considerable damage.

The other two unreported incidents were of a comparatively minor nature. A Rawson bus driver complained of a car backing into his bus with the driver moving away without stopping, while a Moira Street resident also reported a car bumping her car which was parked near the Front and Moira Street intersection. Licence numbers of both "bump and run" vehicles were ascertained and owners will be verified, according to police.

Go Cold or Use An Inferior Fuel Says Controller

Ottawa, Dec. 21 —(CP)— The critical coal shortage in the United States had caused a reduction in imports to 67 per cent of normal Canadian coal requirements from that source, E. J. Brunning, coal controller, said here last night. He added that under the circumstances, "we have been treated very fairly."

Mr. Brunning was commenting on reports that the Toronto board of control had asked for an investigation after protests by a deputation complaining against the quality of coal and coke being delivered in Toronto.

The coal controller said there was "no alternative" to the use of "inferior fuels this winter."

Explaining the situation, Mr. Brunning said that small size coke now being sold in Canada and the United States, normally had "no market" and "for years had been dumped in great stockpiles" by the producers. When the present shortage developed, the U. S. Solid Fuels Administration had "instructed operators to reclaim and prepare the dumped coal for the market."

The "only reason" the price was as high as it was in Canada was because freight charges were the same regardless of the type of fuel brought in.

"Of course we would all like to burn high grade anthracite," Mr. Brunning added, "but it is a case of either accepting this fuel or none. We are getting a fair share of a fuel in short supply—we either go cold or use an inferior fuel."

Czecho-Slovakia Subject of Talk By Rev. F. Doestal

Insight into the national problems of Czecho-Slovakia as viewed in the light of this nation's historical background was gained by members of the Belleville Life Underwriters' Association at their regular monthly luncheon meeting held Thursday in the Y.M.C.A. when the guest speaker was Rev. F. Doestal, S. J., Batawa, a native of Czecho-Slovakia.

The meeting was presided over by the President, Mr. A. G. Stackhouse, and coming in the Yuletide season, the program featured a musical background of carols, with Mr. Alec Gordon as accompanist. Mr. Jack Murphy acted as song-leader for community singing, while Mr. Don Ridley was a diligent sergeant-at-arms. The booster prize was won by Mr. F. Creeggan.

During the program reference was made to the excellent hospitality afforded by the ladies of the 'Y' Auxiliary who prepare and serve delicious meals each month. A special donation was made as a slight token of appreciation and in accepting the gift, Mrs. J. E. Shortt sincerely thanked the members for their thoughtfulness and for the co-operation that is accorded the Auxiliary.

Business Transacted

Considerable business was transacted, the items including the unanimous selection of the President, Mr. Stackhouse, to represent the Association at the annual meeting of the national association in Toronto next month.

Master Ronald Elmy was guest-soloist and his splendid voice was heard in two numbers. One of these was "Bethlehem Star" which was composed for the youthful singer by Mr. Alec Gordon who adds further to his musical laurels by the charm of this Christmas number. Appreciation to the artists was suitably expressed by Mr. Stackhouse.

This meeting being in charge of the Canada Life Assurance Company the speaker was introduced by Miss Agnes Gallagher. Miss Gallagher referred to the fact that Father Doestal was born in Czecho-Slovakia, had received his education in Europe, holding degrees from various universities there and acquiring a reputation as a brilliant scholar and linguist. He was en route to China as a missionary when the war broke out and was sent instead to Canada where he was appointed pastor at Batawa.

Discussed Conditions

Father Doestal in an interesting and enlightening address discussed present conditions in Czecho-Slovakia, and its probable political and economic trends as influenced by its history and national temperament. The speaker referred to the patron saint of the country whose praises are sung the world over at Christmastime, King Wenceslas, the first Christian king of Bohemia, whose character and work left a lasting impression on the traditions and ideals of the country. For many years Czecho-Slovakia influenced the culture of Central Europe, Prague University being the first to be established there.

Tracing the history of Czecho-Slovakia through the centuries and the various regimes under which it was ruled, the speaker showed how the infiltration of German influence began six hundred years ago in certain sections. This led to Hitler assumming the protection of the Sudeten Germans in 1938 and power coming into the hands of a minority with tragic war results.

Danger of Famine

Having gained its independence following the First Great War under the leadership of President Masaryk, Czecho-Slovakia, now ravaged by war, was seeking to re-establish itself nationally. As in other European countries, danger of famine threatens and destitution faces many of its people. However, with the aid of the Allies, and embued with a strong national spirit, Czecho-Slovakia, the speaker concluded, would face its difficulties as resolutely and courageously as it had the problems which history showed had assailed it many times in the past. Appreciation of his hearers for the scholarly address was conveyed to the speaker by Mr. Percy McGuire.

In addition to the district members of the Association in attendance there were also present at the meeting yesterday, Mr. C. H. Rooke, Kingston, branch manager, and Mr. H. L. Campbell, Brockville, associate manager, of the Canada Life Assurance Company.

NAMES DOVER HOME AFTER NOTED POEM

Dover, England (CP)—Despite wartime unpopularity of the name which some say has carried over into peacetime as a title of ill omen, playwright Noel Coward is calling his new home at St. Margaret's Bay near here "White Cliffs," after the poem by Alice Duer Miller.

A popular song about "The White Cliffs of Dover" became a part of local folklore with the belief that no sooner was it sung than trouble would smite Dover in the form of an air raid or long distance shelling. Singers in local theatres were advised to take the song out of their repertoires.

Gift-Buying At High Level

By DOROTHY CAREW

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)— A buying public convinced that the best is none too good for the first peacetime Christmas in five years is boosting gift-buying to the highest levels in United States history.

The tendency toward more expensive gifts cannot be accounted for entirely by the lack of lower-priced items, retail store executives said.

A sharp increase in cash business in the higher-priced stores is attributed to an abundance of money in people's pockets and the fact that "they want the best and are buying it while they can."

New sales peaks are reported from all parts of the United States, and two New York firms have set records for a single day's business during the past two weeks.

Shopping has presented a real problem with shortages cutting deeply into many traditional gift lines. But lists have been revised, budgets have been increased and the rush for goods continues unabated.

Women's handbags, better jewelry, men's lounge clothes, cosmetics, clothing of all kinds with emphasis on vacation apparel and evening wear, women's accessories and luxury furs all have had a big share in the Christmas business.

May Finish Case End of January

Nuernberg, Dec. 21—(AP)—Members of the Allied prosecution staff expressed hope today that war crimes evidence against 21 leading Nazis and six Nazi organizations may be finished by the end of January, enabling the defence to begin its case early in February.

The International Military Tribunal trying the Nazis adjourned yesterday for a 13-day holiday recess.

In the month since the tribunal convened, British and United States prosecutors have virtually completed their share of presentation of the evidence under general terms of the indictment.

When court reconvenes Jan. 2, the United States Chief Prosecutor, Robert H. Jackson, will first finish the case against the Gestapo and the Nazi Security Police and then proceed with evidence against the last of the six indicted organizations: The German High Command and the General Staff.

With completion of cases against the organizations, the prosecution is scheduled to swing immediately to submission of briefs and evidence intended to show individual responsibility of the 21 defendants. That is slated to be followed by Russian and French evidence of war crimes and crimes against humanity, which constitutes the final phase of the prosecution's case.

Patron Can Be Forcibly Removed Ruling of Court

Toronto, Dec. 21 —(CP)— If a patron in a beverage room is not conforming to Liquor Authority Control Board regulations, the proprietor may request him to leave and, if he does not leave, he may be forcibly removed. Mr. Justice G. A. Urquhart ruled in a judgment at Osgoode Hall yesterday.

He dismissed an action brought by Daniel McKinnon, a mine hand, who sued Cleophas Des Groseillers, proprietor of a hotel in Kirkland Lake townsite, for damages for a fractured leg and loss of a pocket watch.

According to evidence, the proprietor was "easing" McKinnon from the beverage room when another man seized the plaintiff and "heaved" him into the street, causing a leg-bone fracture.

"The defendant will be relieved of liability by an unforeseen and abnormal intervening force which produces a result that could not be foreseen," the judgment said.

Mr. Justice Urquhart noted that "the right of forcible removal only justifies the use of reasonable force and can only be used in a reasonable way."

"The proprietor may not take a man like a sack of flour and heave him out into the street if he were drunk or disorderly," he added.

The judgment noted that prior to the ejection McKinnon and others were engaged in "dunking" their watches in beer to test their waterproof qualities and it was while this pastime was going on that McKinnon claimed he lost his watch.

According to evidence, McKinnon, "by use of obscene language and misbehavior was guilty of gross breach of the regulations."

Mr. Churchill to Take Rest

Former Prime Minister Churchill who is coming to the United States for a complete rest in a warm climate on the advice of his physician, deserves a rest as the reward for his intense duties during the war when he carried one of the heaviest loads that ever rested on mortal's shoulders. The average man had his own burden of worry and anxiety in those trying years of the struggle against the sinister designs of the Axis Powers and Mr. Churchill carried the burden of the load of the British Empire and of the world of freedom. His great mind with his experience, his knowledge of history and of peoples and his never-failing confidence in his own fellowcountrymen and the people of the Empire and Commonwealth and his inspiring leadership helped along with the sacrifices and achievements of others to save humanity from a terrible fate under the foul tyranny of the aggressor leaders.

Some men in high places cannot carry so great a load. Fortunately Britain had a Churchill who could lead and carry the ponderous burden.

It is the prayer of all that this great man may feel the benefit of rest in his stay on this side of the Atlantic.

This Coming Christmas

The season is in the full swing of final preparations for the festivities that cling about Christmastime. Schools have been let out and the pupils who form a large part of the population are now able to add their zeal to the spirit which permeates business and life generally at this time. Parents have been busy in buying gifts for the day of all days in the year. Shops have had a large amount of trading and have done their share with the offerings they have furnished to the people to make the coming Christmas a day long to be remembered. The returned veterans of the recent war have added their great share to the preparations and all signs point to one of the happiest celebrations in memory. Their keen interest and the friendships renewed by the reunion with their families, relatives and friends expand the sumtotal of happy anticipations with which all await Christmas Day.

The Salvation Army band serenades, the music of the instruments possessing an instantaneous appeal for everyone, the notes singing their way into human hearts with the eternal message of Bethlehem. The colored lights shine from countless evergreens waiting to bear the loads of gifts that are symbols of the season and of the feelings of good will with which mankind looks out upon the world.

There is the deepest sense of gratitude that the people will here celebrate in the midst of scenes which were not touched by the shells and bombs of the enemy in the long years of war. With this goes a sense of sympathy that so many millions in the older parts of the world are desperately in need of food and shelter, for war ravaged countryside and cities. In this country people realize that for many "over there" this season has many bitter memories of the tragedy of war through the criminal ambition of the enemy and that for these millions of citizens Christmas cannot restore all that has been lost since the German warlords went out to profit by war and pillage. Yet these peoples must feel a sense of satisfaction that the warlords are out, that many of them are being brought to trial and that judgment has been dealt to many who tried to destroy world liberty. There is this to cheer that the United Nations are making a supreme effort to see Europe revive under the guidance of the free nations and a new era of peace come which no would-be Hitler would dare to try to break.

In this land there is plenty and but a few restrictions remain, all aiming to help in whatever way is possible those who have suffered by war in lack of clothing, food or shelter. Canadians are grateful that their conditions are so favorable and that they themselves are able to do something to ease the burden of those who have to rise out of the conditions which war created.

This sympathy with those who cannot enjoy Christmas in faraway lands as they did in days of yore contains the germ of revival and of hope for the war-burdened world. It is a good sign for the future for this interest in others far away in desolated lands does not forbid our happiness here in this highly favored country.

Christmas itself offers hope to these millions in Europe that a brighter day will dawn because that is the goal of conferences and other meetings of world leaders. There will be Christmases yet which will be merry all over the world.

One of the tragedies is that lands which gave so much to ours and the world's Christmas and added so much in the surroundings and atmosphere with which we greet Christmas Day 1945, are sorely tried by tribulations because of the spirit of the enemies of mankind who were the bitter enemies of the Christmas spirit. Those leaders fortunately are now gone and man is striving to plant the seeds of a better world for humanity the world over which Christmas Day's return heralds for the future.

Snow on the Land

(New York Times)

Now the earth sleeps beneath its winter quilt and snow is on the land. The meadows and level mowings are broad expanses of white. The upland pasture rises and dips look like white waves on a slanting canvas. Here and there are dark gray spots where granite boulders protrude, snow-topped but with bare lichen-etched areas between the blanket and their night caps. High on the mountain brows the white banks perch uneasily on the ledges and crags.

The snow-blown stone walls make bold patterns of white and gray along the roads and around the fields, the pasture bars are double tracks of brown and white and the splintery storm-browned posts wear jaunty-angled hats. The R.F.D. boxe beside the farm dooryard has a big cap and there's a woolly white scarf packed around the base of the tall silo.

The earth has gone to sleep but there is activity in the countryside. The countryman likes to take a walk on a Sunday and read the stories in the snow. Along the meadow brook, deep in the evergreen swamp and in the woods above the sugar groves he sees the tracks of the wildfolk. Out in the open fields and in the quiet woods it's peaceful and relaxing. At high noon on a sunny day the world is clean and white and snow crystals flash colored jewel glints.

Last of the U-Boat Fleet

(Ottawa Citizen)

Germany's huge fleet of submarines on which the Nazis relied for the starvation of Britain by blockade, is now disappearing under the waters of the Atlantic off the north coast of Eire. Supposedly "secret" means of destruction are said to be employed to sink these engines of savagery.

In point of fact, the "secret" is secret no longer. It concerns a British rocket device known as the "hedgehog," which ca. fire 24 projectiles. These fall in a certain pattern around the U-boats, sink through the water, and do not explode until they make contact.

The "hedgehog," which towards the close of the war had largely replaced depth charges, was first used against enemy underwater craft in the North Atlantic early in 1942.

Origin of Name

(From Ship's Magazine)

It isn't called the graveyard shift because of its eerie early morning hour or because, as one authority states, of the number of accidents which once occurred in that after midnight trick. Corruption of an age old seafaring term put the phrase into the language of every shipyard worker and factory employee in the nation.

Centuries ago, mariners referred to the middle watch — the one from midnight to 4 a.m. — as the "gravy eye" watch, because then their eyes usually were sticky from sleep. During the years that followed, some slip between tongue and ear changed "gravy eye" to our less picturesque "graveyard."

DECEMBER 21

Now it's winter! So they say.
All the winds that blew before,
All the snow that filled the way,
Came from autumn's varied store.

Did you hear the tempest roar?
Did you feel the touch of chill?
By the planets as they soar
We are told 'twas autumn still.

That was autumn at its worst;
Autumn old, with wrinkled brow.
Here's December twenty-first
And the snows are winter's now.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 21 (CP)—This week Washington has witnessed a series of events which a year ago few would have thought possible and no one would have thought likely.

The most unexpected incident was appearance of a Japanese submarine commander as witness for the prosecution in the court-martial of Capt. Charles B. McVay III, skipper of the cruiser Indianapolis when it was sunk last July with loss of 880 lives. The dapper, assured little Jap was flown here from Tokyo, lodged in a swank hotel under officer guard and called, over loud defence and public protest, to tell how he sent his torpedoes into the Indianapolis between Guam and Leyte.

A few days later the supreme court hastily assembled in special meeting and granted a stay of execution of the death sentence passed upon Lt.-Gen. Yamashita by a Manila military court.

Yamashita had airmailed a special appeal to the supreme court after the death sentence had been passed for his responsibilities for atrocities against American soldiers and Philippine civilians.

Perhaps the strangest of this series of events was the bawling-out given a group of generals and other "brass hats" by bald-headed 37-year-old Private George L. Marks of Cleveland at a session of the House Military Affairs Committee.

Given immunity and freedom to speak his mind the soldier looked out over the rows of brass and called them "pentagon Boy Scouts, bemedalled four-flushers and aristocratic phoneys."

He said the high officers wanted a big army "so they can retain their rank," and added, "these brass hats don't like work; if they did they wouldn't be in the army."

He was due to discharge next day and one of the generals privately said he would see the discharge went through on schedule.

"We are not going to waste any time letting him out of the army," he said.

President Truman plans to carry out the traditional White House ceremony of lighting the live Christmas tree on the south lawn Christmas eve. Early Christmas morning he plans to take off for a flight to his mother's home in Missouri, 800 miles away.

Washington is not accustomed to winter weather and when there is a snow flurry here it is usually described as a blizzard. But when seven inches of snow came Wednesday morning all the district and suburban schools were closed and it was a front page story.

REPORTS DENIED

London, Dec. 21 (Reuters) — J. B. Hynd, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, who is responsible to parliament for the British administration in Germany, told the House of Commons yesterday that reports published abroad alleging that Jewish displaced persons in the British zone received bad treatment, were without foundation.

TOKYO ROSE'S ALBUM

Laying claim to one of the most unique Japanese souvenirs yet to come out of this war, Sergt. James J. Keeney, 36, Philadelphia, shown above, is the possessor of a large set of records that were played over radio Tokyo by the Los Angeles-born Tokyo Rose. Keeney, a columnist for Yank Magazine, was one of the first to locate the Nips' ace propagandist.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 21 (AP)— The advent of an out-and-out socialist government has rendered the position of the King-Emperor rather paradoxical in theory, although practically the British ruler fits into the new political scheme of things as neatly as though the Kingship were designed originally as part of England's leftist political setup.

The socialists have not shown the slightest disposition to interfere with the monarchy. On the contrary, while thrones on the continent have been toppling in leftist storms, the British institution still stands as solid as its own rock of Gibraltar.

Considering all aspects of the situation, one is tempted to the belief that providence molded the character of the present King to fit the political crisis which now has hit England. He would seem in all respects to represent the type—and the only type — of monarch whom the socialist government could accept.

He is a plain man of the people. So far as one can see he has not any ambition to exercise royal authority, or yet to wear a jewel-studded crown. He is quite happy to take his instructions from the Prime Minister. And that, of course, is precisely what the government in a constitutional monarchy—and especially a socialist government—most desires.

The situation might have had a different complexion were the throne occupied today by the present King's grandfather, Edward VII, or by the late George V, or yet by Edward VIII, who abdicated so that he might marry Mrs. Simpson. All those past monarchs were strong-willed men who at times confronted their governments with gestures of royal authority—and sometimes made their desires stick.

There were times when King George V put down his foot, though in theory that wasn't his prerogative.

There is small likelihood of the present King doing anything like that. He does his job cheerfully—and it is a very heavy one because of his constant public appearances—but he is quite happy to leave the direction of affairs of state to his ministers.

The King is popular with his people, and so is the Queen, whose sound common sense and intense loyalty have been of the greatest assistance to her husband.

SO YOU CAN'T CHEW?

Next to the correction of the nutritional deficiencies— inadequate amounts of the minerals and vitamins essential for food nutrition of teeth, gums, sockets, jaw bones and muscles used in chewing—restoration of that function or as much of it as may still be possible to restore—is the most important part of the treatment of pyorrhea. Remember, please, I use this term "pyorrhea" not in any limited sense but as a general name for the degeneration of teeth, gums, tooth sockets, jaw bones, the deterioration in these tissues which dentists call by various names in different stages of the trouble.

The function of mastication, chewing food, itself tends to keep these tissues in a healthy condition. Ice cream, syrup, lady fingers, blanc-mange and pop are easy to eat, whether you are hungry or not, without the trouble of masticating, and if you stop to think about it your refined modern diet is largely made up with such easy-to-eat items — they contribute plenty of calories but little or no minerals or vitamins.

Please don't interrupt to tell me you can't eat such coarse, rough foods as plain wheat, oatmeal, brown or wild rice, raw cabbage, raw carrots, raw turnip and the like, because your teeth are not good enough. That's a matter to discuss with your dentist, even at this late day. If you have chosen to stagger along with a number of teeth missing or in need of repair, that's your funeral. My job is to teach people how to keep well. For years I have been screaming at you about this, but you have paid no attention. There is one way to save your teeth when they begin to go —prompt and thorough treatment by your dentist.

In my files are numerous testimonials written by people who have followed a suggestion often given in this column— to keep on hand a supply of plain wheat and use it in the daily dietary of the family. In a pamphlet "Wheat to Eat" available on written request if you enclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope, I give the reasons why plain wheat should be so used in every home) and ways to use it. Incidentally I suggest here that it is an excellent habit for any one, young or old, to chew a handful of plain wheat every day, especially for any one who is in the habit of chewing something else.

After you have chewed a mouthful of wheat for a while it becomes gum, you know.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Tuberculosis

Danger of getting tuberculosis from clothes that were worn by one with the disease? (L. G.)

Answer—Ordinary washing and ironing, or dry cleaning, or if the garment cannot be laundered or dry cleaned, just an airing in the sun for a day, makes it perfectly safe for any one to wear. Ordinary laundering takes care of nightclothing, lingerie, bed linen. In fact the clothing worn or used by an intelligent properly trained tuberculosis patient is no greater menace in any circumstance than clothing worn or used by a healthy person. It is only the ignorant, untrained, vicious or careless tuberculosis patient who endangers the health and life of everybody who happens to be exposed to him.

Jeep Seat

Please explain the meaning of "jeep seat," What causes it, what are the symptoms and what can be done for it? (C. H. J.)

Answer — Whoa. Remember, this is a health column. One of the several conditions so called is pilonidal cyst or fistula about tip of spine—it requires surgical treatment—ambulant (office) or hospital.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who first called Faneuil Hall "The Cradle of American Liberty?"

The original Faneuil Hall in Boston was largely destroyed by fire in 1761. A new structure was built by the city. Only the foundations and parts of the old walls were used in the new building.

This second Faneuil Hall was reopened formally March 14, 1763. The orator of the occasion was the patriot James Otis, who dedicated the structure "to the cause of liberty." It is believed that he was the first to call it "The Cradle of American Liberty," a name that was confirmed as the result of the numerous patriotic meetings held there during the years just before the Revolution.

Local patriots were greatly outraged in the fall of 1768 when some of the British soldiers sent to Boston to suppress the Sons of Liberty took advantage of the "Quartering Act" and camped in Faneuil Hall with the approval of the royal governor, Sir Francis Bernard.

During the British occupation of Boston the historic building was used as a theatre and amusement centre for the British troops.

Again, during the stormy period before the Civil War, Faneuil Hall was the scene of many notable speeches.

Elisha P. Lovejoy was killed by a mob at Alton, Ill., November 7, 1837. On the following December 8 Wendell Phillips made a speech in Faneuil Hall on the murder of the abolitionist in which he declared:

"When liberty is in danger Faneuil Hall has the right, it is her duty, to strike the key-note for these United States."

In 1851, after many people in Massachusetts had been exasperated by Daniel Webster's now famous 7th of March speech, a group of his friends invited him to speak in Boston but explained that the mayor and aldermen of the city had denied the use of Faneuil Hall for the purpose. In April of that year Webster wrote to them:

"I shall defer my visit to Faneuil Hall, the cradle of American liberty, until its doors shall fly open upon golden hinges to lovers of Union as well as lovers of Liberty."

"They Bite In Winter, Too!"

When Canadians drop an expectant line through the ice, they are practicing an art which the Indian learned from the Eskimo . . . and they are also enjoying a prolific Canadian asset . . . the abundance of fish which has been the keystone of our $149,000,000 tourist industry.

Yet this great asset can be endangered by over-fishing, by pollution of the streams through forest fires, and most of all by non-observance of conservation laws.

As a Canadian citizen, a share in this great store of natural wealth belongs to you . . . and it is both your privilege and your responsibility to help protect this rich heritage. Carling's believe you can best help by knowing what should or can be done.

Therefore, Carling's have formed The Carling Conservation Club so that current, authentic conservation news may be made widely available. *Join this club today simply by writing to Dept. (B13), The Carling Breweries Limited, Waterloo, Ontario. You will continue to receive factual information on the subject of conservation as it becomes available without cost to you.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 21—(CP)—By now you probably have the turkey bought for the Christmas feast and it is time to sharpen up the carving knife and take a lesson in carving the bird from Laura Pepper, head of the agriculture department consumer section, which has been working on this problem.

The suggestions are also handy to give the man of the family if he is going to preside over the platter.

First consideration is to have a platter large enough to give the carver room to work. Provide him with a well-sharpened, long-bladed carving knife, a carving fork, a serving spoon for dressing and a small side plate on which to put legs and wings.

The steps in carving follow:

1. Place bird on platter with neck to carver's left side.
2. Carve nearer side of bird first.
3. Place fork in bird, pointing to the rear, halfway along breast or. far side of bird.
4. Remove leg by making cut through skin between body and thigh and around the hip joint. Disjoint leg at socket with tip of knife. Transfer to small platter and separate thigh and drumstick. Cut up for serving.
5. Remove wing by cutting through joint of wing at shoulder. (Discard outer tip of wing.) Divide wing into two sections for serving.
6. Slice white meat, cutting toward the front and downwards or. the breast. Do this as plates are being served to prevent meat from becoming cold. Slice full-sized slices.
7. Make a horizontal cut across the abdominal section to remove dressing and serve a small portion on each plate.
8. After completing one side carve the other side the same way. For convenience the bird may be reversed on the platter so that the uncut side is directly in front of the carver.

Each side of a 15 pound turkey, if properly carved will yield about 10 pieces of dark meat and 12 slices of white, beside the wing and leg.

For cooking the turkey these directions are given: Wash turkey after it has been drawn, rinse and dry well. Rub inside of bird with salt before adding dressing. Allow about three-quarters of a cup of dressing for each pound of turkey. Sew up openings.

Truss the bird by turning tops of wings under back and pressing legs close back against the body. Hold in place by inserting skewer under the wings and another under the legs. Then tie turkey in shape with cord, fastening it with skewers. Place turkey breast side down on rack or crossed skewers in roasting pan. Bake in moderate oven, 300 degrees fahrenheit, allowing 20 minutes a pound dressed weight. For turkeys under 10 pounds allow 25 minutes a pound. Baste occasionally during the roasting. Turn turkey on back for last hour of roasting to brown the bird uniformly.

70th Wedding Anniversary To be Celebrated

Former Pictonians, Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, of Stoughton, Sask., will celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary Sunday, December 23. Mrs. Howe, (nee Delphin Potter), was born at Green Point, September 10, 1854. Mr. Howe was born in Prince Edward County in 1852.

After their marriage, the couple lived on the High Shore and on Paul Street, Picton, before going west in 1902.

There had live children: Arthur, Stoughton, Sask.; Mildred, Regina, Sask.; Percy, Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. Ethel Young, Rochester, N.Y., and Mrs. Bessie Powers, deceased, formerly of Picton.

The couple have visited Prince Edward County but once since they moved to Saskatchewan and that was about thirty years ago.

L. A. Naylor, Picton, R.R. 6, is a nephew.

Some Christmas Food Items In Short Supply

Ottawa, Dec. 21. (CP)— Canadian housewives who have left their Christmas food shopping until the last minute had better get going. Those "short supplies" officials keep talking about are getting shorter day by day.

Most housewives likely already have stocked their larders, but for those who plan to finish off their shopping within the two or three days remaining before Christmas this is the way the Prices Board sees the food situation:

Turkeys — Supplies running short due to heavy demand which resulted from meat rationing.

Chickens—Fairly adequate supplies available.

Cranberries—In good quantities in most shops as a result of a good crop this year.

Currants—Running low after a heavy demand earlier in the month.

Raisins—Supplies not too bad, with new shipments in from the United States.

Peel—Very difficult to obtain.

Maraschino cherries—In short supply and scarcer than last year.

Spices—Reasonable supplies available, though moistly all imitation brands.

Mincemeat.—Commercial mincemeat supply is small. Ingredients for homemade mincemeat generally available.

Citrus Fruits—Oranges, tangerines, lemons and grapefruit generally to be found in fruit stores.

Bananas—Good supply available from Mexico, Central America and Jamaica.

Apples—Scarce due to bad crops.

Apricots—None.

Vegetables—Turnips, potatoes and other root vegetables in fair supply, though not as good as last year. Supplies of canned vegetables is fair.

Marmalades and Jams—Supplies not too bad.

Figs and Dates—Figs about the same as last year; some dates available, but not many.

Peanuts, Filberts, Walnuts and Almonds.—Supplies adequate.

Brazil Nuts—None.

Suet—Very scarce, none at all in some centres.

Lard—Situation bad. An additional 1,250,000 pounds placed on market last week failed to meet demand.

Hard Candy—Supplies scarce because of labor and sugar shortage.

Ribbon Candy and Candy Canes —None.

MIDGETS MARRIED

Austin, Tex., Dec. 21—(AP)— Tiny Waylon H. Galloway and Rose Mary Copeland, attended by four other midgets, were married last night in the Texas Senate Chamber in the presence of Gov. Coke R. Stevenson and other state officials. Galloway, once a page in the State Senate, is 45 inches tall and his wife 44.

Buying Christmas Gifts Sets New High Mark in U.S.

New York, Dec. 21—(AP)—A buying public convinced that the best is none too good for the first peace-time Christmas in five years is boosting gift-buying to the highest levels in United States history.

The average Christmas shopper is buying with abandon, retailers said, and is making his purchases "at whatever price he has to pay."

The tendency toward more expensive gifts cannot be accounted for entirely by the lack of lower-priced items, retail store executives said.

A sharp increase in cash business in the higher-priced stores is attributed to an abundance of money in people's pockets and the fact that "they want the best and are buying while they can."

New sales peaks are reported from all parts of the United States, and two New York firms have set records for a single day's business during the last two weeks.

Shopping has presented a real problem with shortages cutting deeply into many traditional gift lines. But lists have been revised, budgets have been increased and the rush for goods continues unabated.

Women's handbags, better jewelry, men's lounge clothes, cosmetics, clothing of all kinds with emphasis on vacation apparel and evening wear, women's accessories and luxury furs all have had a big share in the Christmas business.

An exclusive fur shop reported a great demand for mink coats from $7,000 up. Evening gowns costing $150 and more are so popular that some stores cannot supply enough.

In Moderate Price Field

Interest in the moderate-priced stores is centred on their higher - priced merchandise, several shops reported. Handbags from $45 to $75 plus 20 per cent tax are "selling like hot cakes." Evening bags at $35 to $50, mink and sable scarfs at $75 and $135 a skin, and toys in the $25 to $75 brackets are among things the average customer is buying without blinking an eye stores said.

One reported men's lounge clothes at $50, $75, and $100 are popular and more men's jewelry than usual is in demand at $35 and up.

Most retailers said predictions that store shelves would be bare by Dec. 25 are exaggerations, but added that in certain lines, such as hosiery, lingerie, men's clothing and accessories and other textiles, goods will be near rock bottom by the end of the gift-buying rush.

Paratrooper Meets Success, Wins Hand of English Girl

Nottingham, Eng., Dec. 21 (AP) —Dominick Casciari, 22-year-old exparatrooper from New Canaan, Conn., arrived here bearing an engagement ring, a wedding ring, a pair of nylon stockings and two tickets to the United States.

He had come by air from Boston to get the girl—17-year-old Rita Blankley, whose father had told him to "come and see me after the war" when he asked for her hand in 1944.

"He didn't waste any time, did he?" said the father, Ferdinand Blankley, a public works employee. "Come all that way, I can't very well send him away empty handed, can I?"

Casciari's only disappointment was that his visit did not come as a surprise.

Warned by a newspaper story, the whole neighborhood in Bulwell, Nottingham suburb, was waiting when the American rapped on Rita's door at 1 a.m.

Rita's sister called, "Is that you, Dom?"

"He was so surprised himself that he couldn't answer," Rita's mother laughed.

The veteran's return tickets to the United States are good for three months, and the couple will not be married until after Christmas.

Rita's father indicated he now was ready to give the bride away.

"He must be all right, to have come all this way to fetch her," Blankley said.

Servicewomen Need Stocking Priority

Regina, Dec. 21. (CP)—Discharged servicewomen, happy over the courses they can take and the gratuities they receive, have one complaint—no stockings.

Some in Regina expressed the view the clothing priority slip they received on discharge should include priority on at least one pair of silk stockings as well as the one tailored suit to which it entitled them.

One of them put it this way: "Give me my gratuities and a pair of nylons and I'd be in heaven."

Four women's hosiery departments explained to a reporter they did not recognize priority slips in the purchase of silk stockings.

Discharged servicewomen, said clerks, took their chance with others whenever stockings were on sale. One servicewoman said she found being in uniform jeopardized her chances of buying stockings. Some shops felt women in uniform didn't need silk hose.

Servicewomen, who were moved from place to place, had no chance to become "favored customers" in shops where patrons of long standing were catered to. Though they were allowed to wear silk stockings in off-duty hours and during summer, many servicewomen did not buy stockings and so had no reserve stock on which to fall back.

EVENING AUXILIARY TABERNACLE CHURCH

The monthly meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of Tabernacle United Church met at the home of Mrs. Wm. Dougherty, Victoria Avenue, on Friday evening, with a good attendance and several visitors present. The meeting was opened by a hymn, "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child", followed by prayer by Miss Delia Johnston, president. The program of the evening was in the form of a carol service. During the program a piano solo was rendered by Mrs. George Wright and vocal solos by Mrs. Percy Cornell which were very much enjoyed. Christmas carols were sung throughout the program.

Mrs. George Stanton was elected president of the Auxiliary for the coming year.

Mrs. R. Johnston extended an invitation to the Auxiliary to meet at her home for the January meeting.

At the conclusion of the meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Wife Preservers

When you are making your own glass curtains, be sure to cut off the selvage edges before hemming. The selvage is more tightly woven than the rest of the material and tends to shrink more in washing than the body of the curtain, and go puckery at the edges.

The Calf Path

One day through the primeval wood
A calf walked home as good calves should;
But made a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail as all calves do.

Since then three hundred years have fled,
And I infer the calf is dead.
But still he left behind his trail,
And thereby hangs my moral tale.

The trail was taken up next day
By a long dog that passed that way;
And then a wise bell wether sheep
Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep

And drew the flock behind him, too
As all good bell wethers do.
And from that day o'er hill and glade,
Through these old woods a path was made.

And many men wound in and out,
And dodged and turned and bent about,
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because 'twas such a crooked path;

But still they followed...do not laugh
The first migration of that calf,
This forest path became a lane,
Then bent and turned and turned again.

This crooked lane became a road,
Where many a poor horse with his load
Toiled beneath the burning sun
And traveled some three miles in one.

And thus a century and a half
They trod the footsteps of that calf.
The years passed on in swiftness fleet
The road became a village street.

And this, before man was aware
A city's crowded thoroughfare.
And soon the central street was this
Of a renowned metropolis.

And men two centuries and a half
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.
A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf three centuries dead.

For men are prone to go it blind
Along the calf-paths of the mind
And work from sun to sun
To do what other men have done.

They follow in the beaten track,
And out and in, and forth and back,
And still their devious course pursue,
To keep the path that others do.

They keep the path a sacred groove
Along which all their lives they move,
But how the wise old wood gods laugh
Who saw the first primeval calf.

PICTON

Capt. H. J. Colliver Named Sheriff Of P.E. County

Picton, Dec. 21—Appointment of Capt. Herbert J. Colliver as sheriff of Prince Edward County, was announced yesterday by Attorney General Blackwell, James deC. Hepburn, M.L.A., revealed here. He succeeds Alva E. Bowerman who tendered his resignation effective Jan. 1st. The new sheriff is also Local Registrar of the Supreme Court, Clerk of the County Court and Registrar of the Surrogate Court for Prince Edward.

Capt. Colliver was born and educated at Picton, being the son of Mrs. M. V. Dow. He enlisted in the 2nd Bn (R) Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1940. He entered the Officers' Training Centre at Brockville in June 1941, and while there transferred to the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. Upon completion of his course at Barriefield, he was employed on the training centre's staff there for three months, being transferred to Ottawa. He spent nine months at Debert, N.S., and in June 1942 was posted at Halifax. He was then transferred to District Ordnance M.D. 3 at Kingston and remained there until going overseas. In England he served with the R.C.E.M.E., and went to Normandy just after D-Day. While in action there he suffered a severe injury to his ankle and was invalided to England. He returned to Canada last March. He is unmarried.

Probably Only Two Left To Hold Reunion

Richmond, Va., Dec. 21 (AP)—In the autumn of 1941 50 R. C. A. F. officers en route to Britain, realizing they would lose contact with each other, made a pledge to meet the first New Year's Day after the war in Detroit.

But only two may be able to keep the promise.

"During the war, I kept close watch on the casualty lists. I've checked off about 80 per cent of our number either 'killed in action,' 'missing in action,' or 'prisoners of war,' said Seth T. Parker of Richmond, one of the 50 who agreed to the post-war meeting.

The 26-year-old flyer who was discharged from the air forces last September, is only certain that one other of his classmates is alive. He is Paul Forcey of Woodland, Pa.

"Besides the two of us there might be others. I am afraid that wherever they may be they may hesitate to come to Detroit for fear they'll be alone at our get-together. I want those others—if there are any more—to know that at least two of us will be here," Parker said.

"The manager of the Book-Cadillac Hotel has offered to hold rooms for as many of us as he hears from."

The others who Parker believes may be alive include Ed Rylands, Ontario (town unavbl.) and Grant Aitchison, Ontario (town unavbl.)

Atomic Secret Contributes To Canada-U.S. Friendship

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington (CP)—In a post-war world torn by dangerous international differences and deadly intra-national strife, the old friendship between Canada and the United States remained unshaken through the momentous days of 1945.

If the year of victory, and the problems of victory, brought any change it was to draw the two great neighbors even closer together.

It was apparent that the abrupt change of administration in the United States caused no weakening—or threat of weakening—in the bonds of understanding and co-operation firmly cemented under the Roosevelt regime.

There was one circumstance contributing to a closer union of their common interests — their sharing with Britain in the secret of applying atomic energy to create a destructive agent which makes its possessors potential masters of the world.

Canada lost a warm and consistent friend last April in the death of President Roosevelt. His successor, President Truman, probably knew little more about Canada than the average American. But Mr. Truman, seeking to preserve in almost every way the ideals and objectives of his predecessor, at once sought to improve this relations with Canada.

He invited Prime Minister Mackenzie King to visit him and make himself as much at home in the White House as he was during the long Roosevelt regime.

Truman To Canada

The two national leaders met for the first time at the United Nations organization conference in San Francisco last June. Mr. King spent several hours at the White House when he was en-route to England in the fall, and in November he and the president and Prime Minister Attlee held their momentous conference here on the future of atomic energy secrets.

President Truman has never visited Canada as president but he has been in Windsor and in Winnipeg on brief trips in earlier years. Now, the president says, he is looking forward to making "a real visit" to Canada as soon as the pressure of urgent responsibilities permits.

Throughout the war Canada and the United States worked together almost as a unit in the Anglo-Canadian-American combination to throw their economic strength behind the effort to defeat the Axis.

Questions of trade policies and tariff barriers were pushed into the background. Now they will have to be dealt with in the light of existing proposals for the removal of selfish and unnecessary commercial restrictions between nations. There is no immediate indication that these discussions will produce any sharp conflict between the traditional friends.

In the coming age of atomic power and lightning-fast development of high-speed air travel, Canada's northland becomes a strategic area for the whole American continent.

Integrate Forces

The prospect is that Canada will undertake the trusteeship of that vital area for the benefit of the hemisphere, supplying the scientific and other facilities necessary to keep pace with the demands of peaceful traffic and the contingencies of possible attack.

The Canada-United States joint permanent defence board, set up by Mr. King and President Roosevelt at their Ogdensburg meeting in August, 1940, remains a going concern.

There is a likelihood that its immediate aim will be to integrat the defence forces of the two countries in respect of equipment and training so that, if the need ever arises, they can operate as one unit in defence of the continent, using standardized equipment, armament and tactics.

Canadian interests in Washington were guided through the difficult year by Ambassador L. B. Pearson who is addressed by president and state department officials alike as "Mike" probably the only instance of that kind in diplomatic history. Probably no diplomat in the capital enjoys to a greater degree the confidence and trust of the United States administration.

Canuck Rendezvous To Close in March

London (CP)—The Beaver Club used by some 8,000,000 servicemen since it was opened in February 1940, will close its doors to the services on March 31 next year.

As a compliment to the Canadians, for whom the club was started, the building may be renamed Beaver Building when it is returned to the London County Council. It was formerly the County Hall.

Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, and Mrs. Massey, attended a farewell party at the Beaver Club to A. W. Kemball, Montreal, on his retirement as manager. Mrs. Massey in her capacity as honorary president of the Volunteer Helpers, presented the homegoing manager with a set of candlesticks and a set of English hunting prints.

The new manager, E. G. Walling, Saskatoon, presented him with a silver inkwell set on behalf of the Beaver Club staff.

"The Beaver Club will maintain its slogan 'Service for the Serviceman' until the doors are closed for the last time," Mr. Walling said. "At the present time it is being used by 10,000 service personnel daily."

The club serves on an average 40,000 meals a week and has a staff of 680 women volunteer helpers. During the war years, the number of helpers rose as high as 800.

THUGS GET $480

Toronto, Dec. 21—(CP)—Three armed men trussed the manager of a dry goods branch store in suburban Scarborough Township last night, locked a girl clerk in a back room and escaped with $480.

Manager Kenneth Lightman told police the trio tied him with cord from a flatiron, took his wallet containing $150 and rifled the cash register of $330.

Through the efforts of one newspaper, $40 million was raised in 40 days to build a new battleship for the U. S. Navy.

CARRIED THE SOFTBALL TORCH IN ITALY

You would never take them for the smart, well-disciplined Canadian troops that they were in the softball dishabille you see them wearing in the above picture. But clothes don't make the man, neither did they win softball championships. The dungareed gang above, who resemble a 1952 edition of bobby-soxers, is none other than the Canadian Artillery softball squad and officials, which knocked off the cream of army mushball aggregations and won for themselves the Canadian championship of Italy. Six former Belleville players are members of the team, one of whom was Don Thomas, who acted as coach and general impresario.

Here is the colorful sports stadium in Rome, Italy, land of vino, signorinas, bambinos, and "Erbie." The squad was beaten only by the crack P.P.C.L.I. team and one from the Army Service Corps.

LEAFS RECALL ELWIN MORRIS FROM PITTSBURGH

Toronto Team Plays Twice Over Weekend With New York Rangers

(By The Canadian Press.)

Opportunity knocks again for Chicago Black Hawks in a double weekend date with Detroit Red Wings.

By taking both contents, the Hawks would assure themselves at least a share of National Hockey League leadership with Montreal Canadiens. And should such a double victory be accompanied by a victory for Boston Bruins over Montreal Sunday, Coach Johnny Gottselig's Chicago Club would move into undisputed leadership.

Canadiens now hold a two-point lead over Hawks but their game at Boston is their only chance for further points. Up to the weekend Montreal had played one game more than Chicago.

The five weekend contests also include a home-and-home series between Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers. Leafs, launching a comeback drive, are in fifth place four points behind Detroit who trail third-place Boston by three.

Leafs announced last night recall of defenceman Elwin Morris, earlier sent to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League and replaced by 20-year-old Jimmy Thomson of Winnipeg, who now returns to Pittsburgh. Morris, Leaf regular last season, is expected to pair with Babe Pratt in the series against Rangers, who are 3 1-2 games behind the Toronto club.

TULSA OILERS DEFEAT SAINTS

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 21 — (AP)— With just 10 seconds to play, Tulsa's Oilers forged ahead to win a 5-4 United States Hockey League decision over St. Paul's second place Saints last night and took over undisputed possession of 4th place in the league.

Emile Dagenais shot the winning goal past goalie Doug Stevenson at 19:50 of the final period while a Tulsa player, Red Kane, sat in the penalty box for charging Lin Bend into the boards and knocking him unconscious.

Dagenais had given the Oilers a good start in the first period with a goal at 10:20. The Saints tied the count on Joe Levandoski's shot but Tulsa went ahead again on Jackie Wallis' score.

The Oilers held a 4-2 lead after two periods, on Wallis' second successful effort after goalie Stevenson was hurt when Dagenais' puck hit him in the forehead. Lloyd Ailsby counted St. Paul's second marker but Tulsa went into a 4-2 lead on Morris Hamilton's unassisted goal.

In the finale St. Paul tied the tally on a goal by Al Kuntz after Lin Bend had made the score 4-3.

Dagenais' last minute marker finished the fracas.

BUFFALO BISONS IN FIRST PLACE TIE WITH HERSHEY

Draw With New Haven Eagles After Game Delayed Two Hours

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons climbed into a first-place tie with Hershey Rears in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League last nighht by virtue of their 2-2 draw with New Haven Eagles.

The travel-weary Buffalo club, held up by late trains and lost equipment which delayed the contest two hours in starting, were hard-pressed by the lowly Eagles and had to come from behind in the last period to gain the deadlock. The fixture was the only one scheduled in the A.H.L. last night.

After a scoreless opening period each team tallied once in a wild second session that featured a parade of seven penalties. Murdo McKay slapped in an unassisted marker to put the Bisons in front and then George Pargeter scored to bring New Haven on even terms.

Joe Bell sent the Eagles ahead again with a goal at the half-way mark of the final stanza but their advantage lasted less than two minutes as Vic Lynn banged home the equalizer for Buffalo.

Express Surprise At Tighe Report

Washington, Dec. 21—The State Department said yesterday it had never heard of the disagreement described by Larry Tighe and that the reported protest from Gen. MacArthur to the State Department had not been received.

Government officials, who asked to remain anonymous, expressed surprise at Tighe's repcrt and said Russia never had shown any interest in sending occupation forces to the Japanese home islands.

When the occupation of Japan began, they told reporters, Russia expressed the view that American forces should handle the job alone.

They added that about three weeks ago, the United States had invited Russia to send occupation troops to apan and that to date had received no Soviet reply.

By GEORGE H. CARVER

LOCOS HERE TONIGHT

Those rampaging Locos from east of Barriefield will be here tonight with fire in their eye and some superb reinforcements back in the support trenches. They take on our Redmen in a pre-O.H.A. season tilt that should give the faithful at least some idea as to whom and what is carrying the intermediate torch for the city this coming winter.

The visitors boast a strong aggregation with such pucksters as Udall in the nets, White and Lay patrolling behind the blue lines and front line attackers like Kenny Partis, the Aikens boys, Jarrel, a baseball chucker of no mean repute, Dixon, McNaught and others. Bolstering the visitors will be Watts and McGregor who were recently reinstated to amateur status after playing with the Tulsa Oilers.

• • •

The regular squad of the Redmen will be out there aided and abetted by Walt Gerow Jr. another former Tulsa Oiler who will be seen promenading along one of the flank ice lanes. Big Vern Goyer, who has spent the last two days visiting libraries, probing through encyclopedias and dictionaries in an effort to find the meaning of the word "elephantine", (It's nothing chum, just refers to a certain phase of inflation) will be back on the defence for the Reds with the front line smoothies, the Meagher brothers and Don Barrett sparking the attacking division up front. Tim Williams, Clare Williamson and other boys of the old brigade will be along to help the cause, so the inaugural joust of the winter game should be an eye-full.

• • •

MORE HOCKEY FARE

Additional hockey fare will be added to the winter sports diet come the first of January. Coach Pete Beach, of Albert College informs this pillar. During the first part of that month the Bay of Quinte C. O. S. S. A. will meet and organize in hockey and basketball. In the hockey loop it is expected that St. Michael's, Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville Collegiate Institute and Albert will form an interesting aggregation, while in the northern group of the association. Marmora, Madoc, Stirling and Tweed will vie for titular honors.

That practically makes the hockey cup full to the brim as far as the sports desk is concerned. What with Intermediate "A" Intermediate "B", Junior "B" and "C" and the C.O.S.S.A. all that is needed to overflow the cup is permission to play Sunday sport. Wonder if Jack Benny, Fred Allen et al would mind losing a devoted listener. (Are yuh listening, Colling?)

• • •

BASKETBALL

Latest rumors from the basketball grapevine have it that the C.O.S.S.A. will organize two groups again this winter. Reports state that Belleville, Picton, Trenton and Albert College will enter both junior and senior squads. Strong teams, both boys and girls are entered in their respective loops from the Y.M.C.A. here, so lovers of the hoop game should not complain about any lack of fare.

• • •

JUNIORS OPEN JAN. 2

Coach Toots Holway and Manager Bill Dennis are giving their Junior "B" proteges plenty of work on the ice these days. The kids are beginning to show up well and a number of them loosened up their skating legs on the bay prior to the opening of the rink. The lads are showing plenty of the old zip and the mentors are not sparing the horses. The youngsters get their first taste of battle in Campbellford on January 2 and will entertain the Trenton kids here on Jan. 7.

OVER THERE

Elsewhere in this edition are published cuts of the Canadian softball squad which won the championship of Italy between battles. No less than six former softball luminaries of this city are shown in the squad which won 46 games, losing but two. Another picture shows the colorful sports stadium in Rome where the Canadians cavorted around softball diamonds while surprised signorinas, bambinos and former Mussolinis looked on. The pictures were loaned by Sergeant Lum Carson, ace hurler of the team who recently returned from overseas.

Seen in the group besides Carson, are Don Thomas, one of the better known umpires around these parts who coached the squad and occasionally crouched behind the plate; Leo Goyer, Harold "Bingo" Reid, who captained the team; Walt Gerow, Ray Reid and others from these parts who learned their softball on Quinte sandlots.

DOWN MEMORY LANE

Remember when—For a brilliant season on the gridiron, Tony Golab of Ottawa Roughriders was named the outstanding Canadian athlete of 1941, four years ago today. He returned from overseas service in the R.C.A.F. to play football with Ottawa this fall.

Incidentally, 37 years ago come Christmas Day, Tommy Burns, Canadian-born heavyweight champion of the world, was beaten in 14 rounds by Jack Johnson at Sydney, Australia. Two years later, Johnson knocked out the famous James J. Jeffries, at Reno, Nevada in 15 rounds. Jeff came out of retirement for the fight.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—Today's hottest tip right from the old feed box is that Bing Crosby has not bought a single big league club within the past 48 hours.... Either New Orleans or Dallas, in about that order, is expected to be named within the next few days as the 10th city in the all-American football conference — to break the jump, someone suggested, between Los Angeles and Rio De Janeiro.... Gus Lesnevich, the 175-pound champ, has begun yodelling for a shot at the winner of Louis-Conn. Says he taught 50,000 men how to box during the war and learned plenty himself.

Noting Larry MacPhail's assault trial is due to come up at Bel Air, Md., Jan. 3, Jerry Mitchell of the New York Post comments: "Only one thing is certain now—the John Law who slapped the Yankee boss into the clink will have stiff opposition in the coming election. MacPhail is backing the rival candidate for sheriff with everything at his command, including his celebrated vocal chords."

News from Detroit says there is an excellent chance that the champion Tigers' outfield next season will consist of the star trio which helped Beaumont win a Texas League flag before the war—Hoot Evers, Dick Wakefield and Anse Moore.... Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, the horse trainer, has had the cast removed from his broken leg and is getting around again. After having spent most of his life ducking horses' hooves, with never an injury, Fitz cracked the laig in a scuffle with his dog.

Our Mr. Fullerton returns to run his own column tomorrow.

Nelson Voted Outstanding Athlete of '45

(By The Canadian Press)

The title of outstanding athlete of 1945 in the voting of 82 sportswriters in the annual Associated Press poll was awarded yesterday to Byron Nelson, winner of the U. S. Pro Golfers Championship and 18 other tournaments, this being the second successive year for the shotmaker to gain the distinction. Nelson picked up 161 voting points, 11 more than Doc Blanchard, Army's All-America fullback, in second place.

Pitcher Hal Newhouser of Detroit Tigers wound up in third position on 73 points; fourth was Glenn Davis, another Army gridder, while first-baseman Phil Cavaretta of Chicago Cubs placed fifth with only 14 points.

Immediately after his arrival from England by plane yesterday, promoter Jack Solomons went into a huddle at New York to discuss for the proposed fight between Bruce Woodcock, British Empire heavyweight champion, and Gus Lesnevich, world light-heavyweight titleholder.

Southpaw Johnny Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds yesterday was cleared from the U. S. Navy at New York after service which started March 3, 1944. He won 15 games for the Reds in 1943.

The Royal and Ancient Club announced yesterday the prize money for the 1946 British Open had been raised from £500 to £1,000. The championship tourney is scheduled to start July 1.

City council has approved a site for a $275,000 community memorial centre to serve Peterboro. Plans will be drawn and permission to build sought immediately. Funds for the centre, which includes an artificial ice rink, were raised by public donations and a civic grant.

A Baltimore city court was asked yesterday by the American Trainers Association to declare unconstitutional a rule of the Maryland Racing Commission which made trainers solely responsible for horse-doping practices. The claim was made that the rule afforded no defence. Judge Joseph Sherbow gave the Commission 10 days in which to reply.

A shortstop with an old Detroit team, John Dinsmore, 82, died yesterday at Gloucester, N.J. He played with the team in the old National League back in 1880.

Shorn of most of his beard and weighing 70 pounds lighter, Frank Leavitt, 54, was discharged from the U. S. Army at Atlanta yesterday. In professional wrestling he was known as "Man Mountain Dean" when he tipped the scales at 330 pounds. He planned to return to his farm.

The first complete Royal Henley Regatta since 1939 is scheduled to be held at Henley-on-Thames July 3-6, it was announced yesterday after a meeting of the Regatta Committee in London.

LESSON NO. 371
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Your opening bid has three main purposes. One is to tell your partner what you have as a minimum. Another is to tell him what he may do about it. A third is to ask him what he has.

An opening bid of one tells of the least a player holds. It is not a signal that forces partner to bid. So, if partner bids, he does so voluntarily to show what he has.

An opening bid of two in a suit says to partner (1) I have at least nine tricks, (2) don't let the bidding stop short of game, (3) tell me first whether or not you have a sure trick.

In answer to an opening of two in a suit, partner (1) must bid something, (2) bids two no-trump if he has no sure trick, (3) with a sure trick, follows T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump in that order.

Look again at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♥ A
♠ 9 4 2
♦ K
♣ A K Q J 10 6 4 2
NORTH
♥ J 7 5 4 3 2
♠ A 6
♦ A 7 3 2
♣ 5

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
2 C	2 S
3 C	3 NT
4 NT	6 C
Pass

The opening of two clubs forces partner to help keep the bids alive until at least a game is reached. The fact that north did not reply at once with two no-trump shows he has at least a sure trick.

Four no-trump says: "I see enough for a possible slam. I have decided on the trump suit. How many aces and kings have you?"

In answer to four no-trump, six clubs is the signal for showing two aces and no kings. Thus, south learns of two kings in the hands of opponents and is content to stop at six clubs.

Bids that are good reach where they should.

January 1st Day of Headaches And US Football Bowl Games, 11 for New Year's Day

Rose Bowl Game and Shrine Charity Exhibition Two of the Big Games

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Dec. 21—(AP)—January 1 generally is regarded as a day of headaches and there is a new one for the first day of 1946 with 11 football games in the United States clamoring for attention.

Ten of the contests are of the bowl variety with the exception being the 21st annual Shrine Charity Exhibition at San Francisco in which the pick of the Mississippi River tangle with those from the Eastern side.

The team congregated in Evanston, Ill., Dec. 17 for its first workout. Every one of the 59,-968 tickets for the game has been sold.

Southern California is host in the Rose Bowl for the third straight year with Alabama, unbeaten champion of the southeast conference, the guest. The Trojans romped to a 23-0 verdict over Tennessee a year ago as 94,000 watched, but the coming clash is expected to be closer.

Oklahoma Aggies and St. Mary's each with an all-America ball carrier, are the opponents in the sugar bowl and a capacity throng of 72,000 will be on hand to watch the antics of the Oklahomans' all-America running back, and National leading ground gainer, Bob Fennimore, and the Gaels' Hawaiian-born Herman Wedemeyer.

Multiple threat squirmin' Herman has completed 80 passes in ! shots for 1,086 yards and eight touchdowns; scored nine touchdowns personally and kicked 17 extra points. He's all-America also.

Plunging Stan Koskowski ought Holy Cross to the Orange Bowl at Miami virtually single-handed and at least 30,-000 will be on hand New Year's day to see how he fares against the rugged Miami, Fla., line.

Missouri and Texas are the opponents in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas with some 37,500 fans jammed into the stadium.

Other games that day are the Oil Bowl at Houston, in which Georgia and Tulsa are the foes; the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex., which bills Denver University against New Mexico; the 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., which pits Wake Forest against South Carolina; the Flower Bowl in the same city with Louisiana Normal and Lane College; the Raisin Bowl at Fresno, Calif., which had Drake and Fresno State as opponents and the Vulcan Bowl at Birmingham, Ala., in which Tennessee State and Texas College are billed.

The lineup of games will be preceded by the blue and gray tussle at Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 29 in which Northern Stars will play their Dixie counterparts.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 21 (AP)—Three to four thousand fans gathered at the Cathay Circle Theatre here Wednesday night to watch the celebrities arrive for "Leave Her to Heaven." With six searchlights brightening the sky it was one of the biggest premiers since the war... Tyrone Power in his new civilian suit received the biggest ovation... One of the stars of the picture — Cornel Wilde—won the second loudest applause... Bebe Daniels received a big hand from remembering fans... Two steady twosomes: platium Lana Turner and Robert Hutton; June Haver and Victor Mature... A young duo: Roddy McDowall and Jane Powell... Bill Eythe arrived with Barbara Whiting, young sister of his girl friend, Margaret Whiting... Jeanne Crain with Paul Brooks, a ringer for Errol Flynn... John Payne and his expectant wife, Gloria De Haven... Ella Raines and lawyer Gregg Bautzer.

"Leave Her to Heaven" (20th-Century-Fox—110 minutes) is movie melodrama with an impact. Fairly faithful to the Ben Ames Williams book, it details the life of a woman who is capable of anything, including murder. Gene Tierney plays the title role and is even more impressive than in "Laura." The color scenes of a Maine lake and the Arizona desert are breath-taking.

Movie personalities receive all kinds of letters, many of them asking advice. Comedienne Cass Daley gets many from young people inquiring what they should do about protruding teeth.

Cass is not sensitive about her teeth. "I took my share of kidding when I was a girl," she said. But she didn't let it bother her and went ahead to become a success in show business.

"My advice to young people," she explained, "is to forget about it—develop other talents which will cause people to overlook your teeth."

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALLAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 21—(CP)—Memories of J. Percy Page and his famous Edmonton Grads, the girls' basketball team which became a national sensation in the days before the Second Great War started, still are cherished by sports lovers in Ontario. So much so that provincial cage officials have asked Page to take a team east to meet clubs representing Toronto, Hamilton, London, Guelph, Brantford, Dundas and Stratford in a Christmas holiday exhibition series.

George (Edmonton Journal) Mackintosh, reporting the invitation, says it is not likely to be accepted because Page has turned over coaching duties to his son-in-law, Clare Hollingsworth. On top of that, only a few of the former Grad stars are still in Edmonton to form the nucleus of a team. But Mackintosh says if the same invitation is extended next year, a team probably will be mustered to represent Edmonton.

Meanwhile the record of the Grads will be preserved for at least one section of Ontario's rising generation.

One of more than 500 games played by the Grads — a thrilling contest against Tulsa Stenos which the Grads won on a centre-floor basket by Capt. Noel Macdonald — has been selected by the Ontario Department of Education as suitable material for a story to be published in the next edition of Ontario Readers for girls and boys in public school.

The story will be written by Ken McConnell, sports editor of the Vancouver Province. He will describe how, with the Underwood International Trophy hanging in the balance, Capt. Macdonald tensed for her shot, and the final whistle sounded with the ball still in the air.

The shot swished through the rigging for a clean basket, causing visiting reporters to describe the game as the "most remarkable" they had ever witnessed.

Around the Circuit: The five major bowling alleys in Windsor, Ont., are cooperating to provide money for a Christmas charity by fining each league bowler a cent for each "miss" . . . Cully Simon, formerly with Detroit Red Wings, is returning to hockey with Hull Volants of the Quebec Senior League where he will team on defence with Bucko McDonald, the hockey-playing M. P. who is said to be drawing $4,000 for his chore with puck and stick.

The reported stipend is vehemently denied by manager Boz Guertin of the Volants, however . . . "It's ridiculous," he says, "Bucko plays hockey because he likes to play hockey."

CHAPTER 21

"I suppose men will be after her in no time at all," Jocelyn said thoughtfully.

"Her mother wrote my mother that they were already. Well, we can only do our best. And you will come back? It won't be so hard from now on. She's had her lesson. Hod d'you feel about it?"

"I'd be glad to try again," Jocelyn said simply.

"Is tomorrow too soon?"

"Monday. No; if you like I'll come down Monday."

"I'll send for you. Eleven? He'll be here at eleven, after he takes me into town." It was the touch of luxury again; the easy solution of any problem that money and service and possessions could effect.

They wandered back to the others, to find that the old doctor had just issued marching orders. It was going to rain again. The group started up the long slope, more slowly now, for everyone was tired and sleepy and the day was bleakly unfriendly. But eventually they did reach the ridge again, and, as was customary, broke into loud singing as they went down through the meadow and across their own orchard.

Philip had been urged to stay for an unpretentious supper. But he explained that his car was at the door; the man had been waiting a long time. He confirmed the arrangement that would take Jocelyn to Hill Acres on the following day, and was gone.

But he left something behind him; a glow in Jocelyn's heart, a sense of restored self-respect that warmed her veins like wine.

It was just noon when Jocelyn went into Norma's room the next day, to find the girl banked in pillows on the wide couch, a light taffeta cover drawn over her knees.

"Where's Sandy?" Norma demanded.

"Is she here?" Jocelyn asked, unpleasantly surprised.

"Is she here! She's wild," Norma said carelessly. "She thinks I let her down. I'd said that I'd stay put. But when she didn't believe me, and sneaked my purse away, that was a little too hot! I started to walk home, but I thought they'd lend me money at any gas station, you know, when they knew who I was. But I didn't have the nerve after the first try—the man just grinned politely and said that he was the Duke of Windsor. So I walked on, and I'd have made it too, seventeen miles or whatever it is, if I hadn't wrenched my damn leg!"

"So now you're going to be a good girl for a while?" Jocelyn asked, sitting down on the foot of the bed for a moment's chat.

"Maybe," said Norma, with a wicked smile.

"No; seriously. Seriously, you hurt only yourself with this sort of nonsense, Norma. To have the papers constantly reporting what you do, and all of it so silly, won't help you at all. Your father wants you to grow to be a fine woman, gentle and cultivated and self-controlled, and every time there is one of these breaks it—it sets you back."

"Do you suppose I could grow to be anything else than a fine woman?" Norma asked with her childish shallow air of pride.

"Of course you could. Money isn't any protection against your—well, making a fool of yourself," Jocelyn answered, smiling.

Norma scowled. "My mother sets me a swell example," she said bitterly.

"But even your mother," Jocelyn reminded her adroitly, "hasn't the responsibility that you have. You are a much richer woman than your mother, Norma. People know about you, and they want to look up to you, admire you. They want to feel that you are one of the rich women of the world who sets a good example."

This view of her importance pleased Norma, and she brooded upon it with thoughtful eyes fixed on space.

"I'm a natural louse," she confessed at last.

"I don't think you are at all. I've never seen any signs of it. Just—just impulsiveness and recklessness. You do too many things without thinking."

"No, I'm a louse," Norma repeated. "The only reason I asked Dad to see if you wouldn't come back was to make Sandy wild. She hates you."

"I'm sorry that was the only reason," Jocelyn commented mildly.

"Oh well, it wasn't the only reason," the girl said hastily. She laughed loudly, in embarrassment. "I didn't mean that. But you should have seen Sandy's face when I said—they were all yelling at me, of course, and I was crying and my ankle hurt like hell, and I said that you had a good influence over me and that I'd do anything they wanted if you'd only come back. Sandy looked ready to burst."

"That wasn't very kind."

"I know. But why should you always be kind? It sounds silly to me."

"Well, here's your lunch," Jocelyn said.

Norma caught at her hand. "Look, honestly," the girl said awkwardly. "I wanted you terribly to come back. We'll have a lot of fun. And I'll work with my languages and everything."

"I know you will."

"Mrs. Fordyce would like to see you in her room, Miss Britton," the maid said, steadying the tray as she set it before Norma.

"I won't eat this if I can't have a cocktail," said Norma. "The doctor said I could. I told Granny I wanted a cocktail!"

"I know what you want," Jocelyn said, in an undertone. "A good spanking. A cocktail with luncheon! Go ahead and eat now, and I'll be back in a little while and see if there's anything to do."

Norma looked at her for a moment with a clouded face; then she laughed. "Nobody ever spanked me in my life," she said.

"It's quite evident!" Jocelyn returned. They were both laughing now, but Jocelyn's face sobered as she crossed the hall and was admitted by Annette to Mrs. Fordyce's room.

She found the mistress of the house prone upon a couch, with every evidence of a nervous crisis about her. On a tray were two empty cocktail glasses; on a crystal saucer were the stubs of a dozen cigarettes, heavily marked with lip red; also in view were salts, a glass of water and a headache tablet on a plate.

"Miss Britton, I'm glad you're here. We're all desperate; I've not slept for two nights. Phil told you, I suppose, what's been going on," said Mrs. Fordyce, in a monotonous chant, her eyes closing as she spoke, her words flowing forth almost without accent or punctuation. "We've had eleven wires from Janet; they're all there—each one wilder than the last. She wants to know why anyone else was ever with Norma except Sandy, and she says that unless Sandy has full charge of her she'll begin court proceedings to overthrow the judge's decision fourteen years ago, and try to obtain guardianship of the child; she says she's coming out here, and I don't know what all. We tried bribing Sandy to go, doubling her pension—nothing would work! Janet trusts Sandy, she knows that Sandy is a perfect jailer and never gives a girl a ghost of a chance—you can depend upon Sandy always to think the worst and get ready for it—I will say that—"

"But she ran away from Miss Sanderson when they were at school, didn't she?"

"Janet doesn't count that. She blames it against the school. You can read her telegram there. The consequence was — my heart is really killing me," said Mrs. Fordyce. "Put your hand here, feel that jump? Two doctors have told me that the instant that started again I was a dead woman. The consequence was," she resumed, "that here we all were with Norma on our hands, and she's got to live, you know; we can't put her into a box for six or seven years; and poor Phil looking simply haggard, and Sandy like a marble image saying that she only wanted to do her duty by Norma and Janet, and Norma in floods of tears saying that if Miss Britton would only come back she'd do anything. It's my conviction that she said that to annoy Sandy, who looked daggers at her——"

"She admitted that much," Jocelyn said, smiling. "But this is a pitiful situation," she added, more gravely. "I want—like all the rest of you—somehow to get at Norma, somehow to understand what she is thinking, what her own idea of her future is. If this goes on, at twenty she'll be notorious. And nobody'll ever attempt then to understand her, or put a generous construction on what she does. Being dragged about this way, seeing so much of life that is—is sensational, being able to buy anything he wants; it's all bad for her, it's demoralizing her."

"Exactly!" said her grandmother triumphantly. "And this is where she belongs, in this quiet, simple place, where all her father's old friends are. She certainly shouldn't be turned over to her mother, at her age!"

Jocelyn hardly had time to analyze her own amazement at several phrases of this statement, for the old lady was proceeding calmly, "Now, we've had to pacify Sandy, or she'll report to Janet and there'll be trouble. So she's the—well, the formal governess, and she'll go with Norma down to school now and then, and keep a sort of eye on her. And you'll be the companion, someone for Norma to play with. Can you — do you think you can manage that?"

Jocelyn felt a strong sudden resentment. This was the last arrangement in the world to which she would voluntarily have given consent. She was about to say with dignity that she felt it better to withdraw, when Mr. Fordyce quite unconsciously produced the argument that decided her definitely and instantly for the experiment.

"Sandy, to tell you the truth," said Norma's grandmother, "has an idea that you're not very deeply interested in Norma. After all, you were in Phil's office, you know, and as Sandy says, these office friendships! Sandy is perfectly confident that you'll not stay under that arrangement, that Norma can't have two governesses, and, as Sandy says, the child will very quickly find herself too busy and too taken up with her friends to worry about it any longer. I'm telling you this quite frankly, because I want you to understand that, whatever happens, we can't make Sandy angry, because she's in constant touch with Norma's mother."

When Jocelyn spoke it was smoothly and sweetly; she had risen as if understanding that the interview was over.

"Mr. Fordyce is going to Washington on Wednesday," she said. "Perhaps since there have been so many changes and so much confusion it would be better to leave it as it is. I'll see Miss Sanderson now, and I'm sure we can come to an understanding."

* * *

Philip Fordyce returned from Washington five weeks later. He held Norma at arm's length and looked at her with great satisfaction.

"Well, Seventeen-years-old," he said, "I hear good things of you."

"I'm an angel," Norma reported complacently.

"She really has been good?" Philip asked, kissing his mother.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was up on the Avenue with Glasses Magee looking in the store windows and arguing about different subjects as whether we would rather ask for special Chrissmas presents or take a chance on being surprised, and I said, G, look, if you want to see something cute.

Meening some little kid about 4 years old standing with his mother and looking up at a thin Santa Claws ringing a little bell to remind people to drop money in his box for the Salvation Army, and Glasses said, I remember when I was that age and used to believe in every Santa Claws I saw, no matter what shape they were. Oh boy I bet I had a lot of fun without realizing it, he said.

Me too, I said. I used to tell every Santa Claws a different list of things, just to make sure. Oh boy, that's the age to be, all right. Let's get up close and hear what he asks for, I said.

And we went close and the kid wasn't asking for anything, looking as if he was probably too bashfill and giving me an idea to encourrage him by asking for something myself, and I winked at the Santa Claws so he'd be sure I was only kidding, saying, Will you please bring me ice skates on shoes? and Glasses winked at him saying, I want a pair of rubber boots, please.

Sure, boys, sure, the Santa Claws said, and he winked back at us, and the little kid said to his mother, Aw come on, mom, let's go.

Which they started to, the little kid saying, Good night, mom, how can guys get to be big and still believe in Santa Claws? Do you think they're exter dum, mom? he said, and the Santa Claws started to laugh, saying, That's one on you, boys.

Which it was, and we kept on going, trying not to look any dummer than necesserry.

REPORT THEFT OF CHEST OF SILVER FROM STORE

Brockville, Dec. 21 — (CP) — Petty thieving struck a new high here yesterday when some unknown person walked off with a 42-piece chest of silver from a department store, police were informed.

Canada's Egg Production Sets All-Time Record

Ottawa, Dec. 21. (CP)— Canada's egg production for 1945 is estimated at 395,000,000 dozen, about 34,000,000 dozen more than in 1944 and a new all-time record, the Agriculture department said today.

Looking ahead, the department said 1946 egg production probably would be about 17,000,000 dozen less than this year and an estimated 88,000,000 dozen of this production is expected to be available for export after allowing for continued heavy domestic demand due to meat rationing.

Officials said the estimated 1946 export figure would be sufficient to fill the contract with the British Ministry of Food.

Shipment of fresh eggs to Britain will include 900,000 cases. During the winter and next spring and 850,000 cases next autumn. During 1946 exports of dried egg powder will total 11,200,000 pounds, the equivalent of about 33,600,000 dozen shell eggs.

The department added that since 1940 Canada has shipped a total of 267,000,000 dozen eggs to Britain.

W. H. Hopson Given Company Promotion

Branch manager in Belleville for the past five years for Borden's Ice Cream Co., Mr. William H. Hopson, West Bridge Street, has been transferred to Toronto as district sales manager for the ice cream division of his firm, it has been learned. He will assume his new duties as of January 10th, it was stated.

A native of Ottawa, Mr. Hopson has been associated with Borden's for eighteen years, having in that period being stationed at Ottawa, Hamilton, back in Ottawa and then at Belleville. Service club minded, "Bill" as he is popularly known among social and business associates, became a member of the Kiwanis club and has proven himself an active and willing worker.

Successor to Mr. Hopson as branch manager at Belleville is W. H. Warner, formerly of Hamilton, who already has assumed his duties in this city. Mr. Hopson will move his family to Toronto shortly after the New Year.

The Shortest Day

According to the calendar, today, Friday, December 21, is the first day of winter. If we are to believe the thermometer and the frosty chill on ears and fingers, however, residents of Belleville and district have been experiencing the pangs of winter prematurely for the last few weeks.

Astronomical calculations disagree in that the sun will not enter Capricornus until four minutes after midnight tonight and by so doing officially will open the winter season.

There is something to look forward to on this the shortest day of the year. In six months, June 21, 1946, we will be celebrating the first day of Summer. Put on your warmest clothes then, put out the well-sifted ashes, scrape the ice and snow from around your doorstep and dream about the vacation you're planning to enjoy when "Old Sol" enters Cancer come next June 21.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 21.— (AP)— Stocks generally resumed the downward drift in today's market although resistance cropped up here and there and dealings again were among the slowest since last August.

Steels, Motors, Rails, Aircrafts and Industrial "Blue Chips" dipped fractions to two or more points at the worst. The ticker tape, though, loafed from the opening on and extreme declines were reduced here and there near the fourth hour.

In arrears the greater part of the proceedings were U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, General Motors, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville and American Telephone.

Hiram Walker was up 1-4 at mid-day although quiet trading prevailed among Canadian issues and most changes were on the minus side. Dome Mines and Canadian Pacific eased 1-2 and 3-8 respectively.

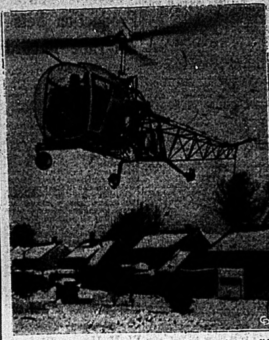
CHILD STABBED BY HER MOTHER

In a holly decorated apartment in Chicago, Mrs. Ann Soby, 30, stabbed her 4-year-old daughter six times in the chest, because the child refused to lie down beside her before she put her own head in the gas-filled oven of a stove. The daughter, Linda, is shown here being comforted by her father, Alex Soby, in the hospital.

WAR STRANDED SISTERS RETURN HOME

The four Winter sisters, Margo, 17; with Nancy, 8; Jean, 16; top left, and Phyliss, 15, who were stranded in Germany for six and a half years, are shown as they arrived with 1,270 repatriates from Europe in the S.S. Gripsholm. The sisters, from Perth Amboy, N.J., had gone to Leipzig to visit their grandparents. Their mother, who accompanied them, is still in Denmark, waiting to return to the U.S.

NO SHOVELLING NEEDED FOR CAR



The blizzard that buried Buffalo under five feet of snow didn't bother Floyd W. Carlson. He just brushed the snow away from his helicopter, parked in his backyard in nearby Williamsville, and took off, straight up. Twelve minutes and 15 miles later, he was at work at the Bell Aircraft plant, where he is a test pilot. On return home, he merely brought his egg-beater down in the snow. No shovelling, no pushing, no swearing.

Promises Watch On Manifestations Of Fascism

London, Dec. 21 (Reuters) — A close watch on Fascist manifestations and strict enforcement of the law were promised by Home Secretary Ede in the House of Commons in a lively exchange on the subject of Sir Oswald Mosley, one-time leader of the British Union of Fascists.

Mr. Ede has been asked by Labor members if he was aware:

1. That activities of men like Mosley around whom "treacherous elements are being organized" were a menace to British international security;

2. That a London dinner gathering last week was attended by 800 men and women who had been detained during the war in the interests of the state;

3. That a reporter was ejected from the meeting for taking notes of a Mosley speech threatening vengeance on his political opponents;

4. That later in the same night Lenin's statute in London was defaced and that the headquarters of a Hitler worshipping cult, the League of Christian Reformers, had been raided by other citizens taking unofficial action.

John Lewis, Labor member for Bolton urged Mr. Ede to issue a regulation requiring notification of all political meetings to the police. This suggestion was drowned in protests from the Conserva- tive benches.

Mr. Ede said: "I am concerne that the Liberal government o Britain should not be destroyed abroad by armed and truculen minorities seizing power to whic they were never invited by th majority in their country, but should find it very difficult in deed to frame at the moment an act that would enable me to de with it."

The King's Christmas Gifts

They Range From Shawls to Postage Stamps but the Royal Family Prefers Home-Made Presents

By ARTHUR NETTLETON

Among the gifts received by King George this Yuletide will be a number of lampreys. Like the blackbirds in the nursery rhyme, they will be baked into a pie, since this is the form prescribed for this unique Christmas present.

The pie is presented by the city of Gloucester, England, and although the reason for the custom is not definitely known, it is believed to relate to some favor granted to the city by a royal personage centuries ago.

It is said that in return for the favor, an obligation of some kind had to be imposed upon the citizens, and an annual gift of lamprey pie was chosen because these eel-like fishes are hard to procure at Christmas.

Nevertheless, the Gloucester authorities have since never failed to meet their obligation to successive Sovereigns.

About Yuletide, the King also expects to receive six Kashmir shawls, hand-made and beautiful in texture and design, from India. They come each year from the ruler of Kashmir, and are in the nature of a "due" to His Majesty as Emperor of India. Other Indian potentates make gifts to the Throne at Christmas, and in every case the presents are exquisite examples of Indian art.

Originally, such gifts were retained for use in the royal palaces in Britain, but in recent years it has become customary for them to be handed on to close friends of the Royal Family, or to retiring members of the household staffs.

Queen Goes Shopping

Royalty's attitude towards Christmas presents has changed in other ways, too. Not so very many years ago, all the Yuletide shopping of our Royal Family was done in the palaces. Leading stores were asked to send representatives with a selection of goods, so that a choice might be made.

In Queen Victoria's time, the approach of the Christmas season was a period when hosts of tradespeople visited Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle, each specially summoned and armed with samples and catalogues.

Changes began to occur during the reign of King George V. Queen Mary was the first British Queen to "go shopping" in the fullest sense. She declared that the system operating in the past restricted her choice, and she started paying visits to shops herself—chiefly to antique dealers' and jewellers' establishments.

She stated that in this way she was better able to select personal Christmas gifts for her friends. Today, the increasing demands of public activities do not allow Queen Elizabeth much time for shopping, and representatives still visit the palaces with Christmas gifts. But the newer idea continues to be preferred whenever it can be adopted, and so far as Queen Mary is concerned, antique dealers still receive her personal patronage.

Queen Elizabeth finds it necessary to start her Yuletide shopping in August, her relatives being very numerous. A list of them is drawn up, and gift-buying progresses steadily until the middle of December.

This Year's Gifts

Certain presents are ordered from organizations and enterprises in which Her Majesty is specially interested. In this way a double purpose is served; the Queen gets the things she desires, and the institutions are assisted at the same time. Needlework guilds, for example, have been helped in that manner.

It is stated that up to £3,000 is spent on Christmas presents by King George and Queen Elizabeth each year. This year, that estimate may be exceeded, for royal gifts are not immune from the increased prices applying today, nor are they exempt from the government tax on luxury goods.

In consequence, rather more presents given by the Royal Family are likely to be homemade, particularly those given by Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret. The gifts will lose none of their value for this reason; on the contrary, they will be prized all the more.

On some occasions in the past, Queen Elizabeth has given watercolour pictures to her close friends at Yuletide—pictures by herself in her 'teens. She executed a considerable number of Scottish scenes when she lived at Glamis Castle, and though she treasures these paintings highly, she has parted with a number of them at Christmastime.

Secret Choice

Our Royal Family's Christmas gift program is something of a joint affair. Hints and tips, about articles which individual members covet, are passed on secretly. News about where these things can be obtained is similarly exchanged.

In conversation last year, King George casually remarked that his collection of Empire postage stamps lacked a certain important but rather rare specimen. His remarks gave the Duchess of Gloucester an idea for a Christmas gift.

The help of other members of the Royal Family was enlisted, and in due course a dealer was found who had a good example of the missing stamp in stock. It was given to the surprised King at Christmas, by the Duchess.

One Yuletide gift custom associated with our Royal Family, and which it is hoped the coming of peace will enable to be revived on something like its old-time scale, is the annual Christmas tree ceremony at Sandringham. A huge Christmas tree from the estate is set up in the servants' hall, and is loaded with gifts for everyone.

On Christmas Eve, the King and Queen, together with all the other members of the Royal Family who have gone to Sandringham, attend the distribution. They assist in removing the presents and hand them personally to the recipients.

27 Blinded by Eating 'Finger Cherry' in New Guinea

Liverpool, England, Dec. 21 — (Reuters) — Charles B. Torvell, scientific advisor to the Far East forces, said yesterday that 27 British servicemen have returned from New Guinea, totally blind as a result of eating "finger cherry," a fruit that looks and tastes like an English cherry.

Eleven Canines Are Discharged From R.C.A.F.

Toronto, Dec. 21 — (CP)—Just as for any other war veteran, rehabilitation is a significant word for the R.C.A.F.'s "canine" branch.

The 12 dogs — Alsation Shepherds and Doberman Pinschers—were trained at Angus, Ont., for 18 months as the first group of guard dogs which the R.C.A.F. planned to place at stations across Canada.

Now 11 of the animals have been honorably discharged and they're going through a complicated four-period stage of retraining so they won't chew the leg off some harmless pedestrian. Sgt. F. Stevenson, who trained hunting dogs on his Whonock, B.C., farm before the war, is the man in charge of rehabilitation.

The 12th dog? He's staying for peacetime duty in the R.C.A.F.

SLEPT WITH DEAD MAN

St. Thomas, Dec. 21—(CP)—Walter Codagan, 68, of R. R. 1 Rodney was found in bed yesterday morning with his blind brother Frank, aged 82.

Last night the two retired at five o'clock, Frank said Walter Codagan shot himself while in bed. His brother went to the door to get help but was unable to make anyone hear. He went back into the house and sat by the fire until there was no more fuel to keep it going. In order to keep warm he had to get back to bed with his dead brother until George Price a neighbor came to visit them.

Canadians at 'Top of Form' At Ortona, Italy, Clearing Schelde Estuary Says Monty

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ostenwald, Germany, Dec. 22 (C.P. Cable) — Field Marshal Montgomery in an interview here yesterday said the two battles in which Canadian troops fighting under his command during the Second Great War were "at the top of their form" were the grim struggle at Ortona, Italy, in December, 1943, and the clearing of the Schelde Estuary in Holland in the autumn of 1944.

Wearing bleached corduroy slacks and a rumpled blue sweater, the commander of the British occupation zone sat in his office and talked with Canadian correspondents of their countrymen's fighting record. He also discussed his proposed trip to Canada which he said would be "the biggest thing in my life."

The Field Marshal added, however, that whether he could go to the Dominion and how long he could stay "will depend on my masters—the state."

(Field Marshal Monigomery said in an interview several weeks ago that he hoped to visit Canada next Spring.)

Wants to Visit Soldiers.

He said that if he went to Canada he wanted to go into homes and meet soldiers and their families. He said all soldiers are different and Canadian soldiers are quite different from British soldiers.

"Monty" added he felt the Canadian soldier is "at his best when he can use his natural qualifications of initiative freely and without restraint."

"Canadians don't like being hemmed in and restricted. I would say therefore that the Canadian soldier is better in a more fluid type of battle when he can crack about and kill Germans. He is better in this type than a tight, set-piece battle when the troops go ahead behind a barrage.

"The Canadians do best when they are given an opportunity to develop their inherent qualities and if you can give Canadians free play that's the stuff for them. I suppose he is a man who comes from the wide open spaces of a great big country."

Regarding the future of the Canadian occupation force in Germany, Field Marshal Montgomery said if the winter goes well, then it will be time to determine when the Canadians can be sent home. The basic idea was to get them back as soon as possible and feasible.

"Canada at first was very anxious to have a share in the party," he went on. "Canada did not want there to be any idea she was pulling out ahead of the others. For instance there was the Canadian contribution to the occupation force in Berlin for a while.

"I don't think there is any question of Canada wanting to pull out before her time. Careful examination is to be made of when we can get the troops back home. But nobody can say what it will be like in Germany next spring. Basically, however, the idea is to get the Canadians back as soon as they can be sent."

The field marshal expressed surprise when asked about a rumor that Lt.-Gen. Guy G. Simonds of Kingston, Ont., commander of the Canadian forces in The Netherlands, might leave the Canadian Army and go to the British Army. He said Gen. Simonds is "a very good soldier."

He declined to comment when asked about the long-term significance of the Canadian attack on Dieppe in August, 1942. He did say its lessons were useful in dealing with beach obstacles. "But Dieppe had nothing to do with me. Prime Minister Churchill was dining with me in the desert when I heard about it."

The British commander said he would not go to Canada until the winter was over and then it would depend on circumstances and what the authorities in London decided. He said he met Prime Minister Mackenzie King unofficially in London during the autumn at the home of a friend and received an invitation "to visit the homes of all the friends I have made."

"I also want to see the Canadians in their own country."

FO. N.D. MacDonald, Marmora, Awarded DFC

His official citation states during an attack on Chemitz ack-ack fire made the rear gun turret and inter-communication system unserviceable. MacDonald's fighting spirit and courage was lauded. Mrs. MacDonald formerly Kathleen Neal and small daughter resided with her mother Mrs. R. Neal, Marmora during his absence overseas and is now residing with her husband in London, Ont.

Boy, 9, Conducts Orchestra Like Veteran

By EDGAR SIMON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 22 —(CP)— A nine-year-old boy conducted the Toronto Symphony Orchestra through two movements of Haydn's Toy Symphony — and did it as if he had been leading orchestras all his life.

Most of Michael Spivak's previous conducting experience had been with phonograph records, but last night he took command of the orchestra with assurance, was prompt with his cues and maintained a steady beat that had the regular conductor, Sir Ernest MacMillan, nodding approval.

Michael took over almost nonchalantly from Sir Ernest, who played the cuckoo's part in the symphony.

Clad in a dark suit with short pants, the boy musician skipped from the podium between movements to retrieve an inadvertently-dropped baton but didn't make a false move in the performance itself.

Wise in the ways of conductors, he brought his orchestra to their feet to share the applause and timed his encore bows perfectly.

"I didn't think he could do it at first," said Michael's father, Elie, concert master of the orchestra. "But he practised the symphony on the piano and on records until he knew it backwards."

The idea for the performance came from Sir Ernest — although he hadn't heard Michael until the day of the performance.

DISBANDMENT APPROVED

Those to be disbanded do not include 363,000 former German armed service personnel outside Britain's six concentration areas and 126,000 non-Germans.

ONT. HOSPITAL GRANTS GIVEN MIXED RECEPTION

Grants Go Into Effect On Jan. 1, Call For Additional Payments By Govt. of $1,000,000

Toronto, Dec. 22—(CP)—Announcement last night by Ontario Health Minister R. P. Vivian of sweeping changes in the methods of making provincial grants to hospitals met a mixed reception.

Dr. Vivian said the new grants go into effect Jan. 1 and call for additional payments by the Ontario government of more than $1,000,000 when the system has been extended to all hospitals. He said the adjustments are aimed at making hospitals self-sustaining and providing service at cost to patients in both public and private wards.

Grants are to be based on the number of public ward beds in each hospital rather than upon a share in the cost of treating indigents. The additional grants go to 14 hospitals in Toronto, London and Kingston.

Dr. Miles Brown, superintendent of Hamilton General Hospital expressed disappointment that the Hamilton hospital had been "ignored," as, he said, it is the second largest hospital in Ontario and the third largest in Canada.

"It cost $1,500,000 a year to run this hospital and our revenue is nothing like that," he said. "The city of Hamilton has to help us every year with a grant to take core of our deficit.

"We had hoped for additional help next year in an increased provincial grant, but it looks as if the citizens of Hamilton will have to keep on bearing the burden."

Dr. Brown added that Hamilton is an industrial city and rates could not be high. Highest cost for a semi-private room was $3 and top rate for a private room $6.50.

Dr. Douglas W. Piercey, superintendent of Ottawa civic hospital expressed pleasure at the grant and said he felt it was the intention to extend it to other hospitals as soon as possible.

"I am quite confident that the minister intends to carry out the promise he made to the Ontario Hospital Association two years ago to underwrite the cost of public ward 'care in every hospital in the province," he said. "This may be the first stage in his effort to fulfil that promise. All hospitals are facing deficits on public ward patients."

Said Miss E. M. Stewart, superintendent of Oshawa General Hospital:

Thinks Grant Wonderful

"I think it's a wonderful thing, even though we do not share in the present grant at present. We manage to make ends meet, but all hospitals could make good use of more money. Let us hope it is extended to all in the future."

At North Bay, where a plan for a new hospital was aproved by citizens in the recent municipal election, Miss Alma Roy, supervisor of North Bay civic hospital said the funds were "really needed."

Russell Northcott, president of the Board of Trustees of Welland General Hospital, said he believed the grants will eventually be extended to smaller hospitals of the province.

"We get a fair grant every year and are almost self-sustaining," said the Mother Superior at Hotel Dieu in Windsor. "However, an increased grant would help us in our work.

Newsmen Covering 3rd Army's Drive Found Patton Ideal as News Source

(Editor's Note: Edward Ball, Associated Press correspondent, covered Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and his swashbuckling United States 3rd Army from Normandy to Austria and Czechoslovakia. Vacationing at his Eatonton, Ga., home, Ball tells this story of the campaign, including unpublished highlights in the career of the colorful general who died Friday.)

By EDWARD BALL

Eatonton, Ga., Dec. 22 — (AP) —The hot summer sun, filtering through the bright green trees of a Normandy apple orchard, shone brilliantly on the highly-lacquered helmet perched on the close-cropped head of Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, Jr.

"Here are your jeeps and there is your war," Gen. Patton was saying with a sweep of his arm in the direction from which the sound of the guns came. It was his first and highly informal greeting to 48 correspondents newly arrived from Britain to cover his United States 3rd Army, about to go into action.

"This is the people's war and I want them to know what's going on," he drawled. "As for the Germans," he added, fingering the needlesharp point of a French hand sword which he referred to fondly as his "Arab gooser," — "I want them to know whom they are fighting. I want them to say: 'Here comes that blankety, blankety blank 3rd and that son of a so and so Patton.'

"I'll tell you everything and leave it to the censors to tell you what you can't tell."

That was just before the St. Lo break-through. Eleven months later, when the war was over, the Germans — who had been beaten to a frazzle — had heard plenty about Gen. Patton and the 3rd Army.

From start to finish, it was "Patton's Army" — that famed 3rd which galloped across France and Germany to Austria and Czechoslovakia.

It was a hard-slugging, hell-raising army which didn't always fight by the books but every move of which bore the trademarks of the fiery, restless commander

Officials Optimistic Over Foreign Ministers' Talks

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 22 — (AP) —Informed quarters, reflecting optimism as the "Big Three" foreign ministers' conference went into its seventh day, said today there was good reason to believe agreements would be reached on some of the critical world problems under discussion.

Although there was no indication which of the numerous issues these quarters referred to, this was the most hopeful prediction yet to come from sources close to participants in the talks.

In this connection, it was recalled that when the conference opened last Sunday State Secretary Byrnes said he would not be surprised if no agreements were arrived at. Foreign Secretary Bevin has taken a similar conservative view.

Both Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Bevin still were said to be anxious not to raise expectations of their people too high in regard to definite results from the discussions, but it was said there was a growing feeling that the outcome may be better than originally anticipated.

It is obvious, these sources said, that every difference between Russia, Britain and the United States will not be settled at this meeting, but they said much progress had been made toward dispelling suspicions on all sides.

The talks appeared to have veered more in the direction of informality. Yesterday's four-hour and 15 minute meeting, the longest yet held, was very informal with only Mr. Brynes, Mr. Bevin, Foreign Commissar Molotov and their translators present.

Previous meetings had been attended by batteries of experts on such subjects as the atomic bomb, Japan and Iran.

Although informed quarters said a "positive stage" has been reached in the talks, there still was no indication how much longer they would last. American circles said Mr. Brynes still hoped to leave Moscow by Christmas, but observers said it was unlikely that the business could be concluded by then.

When Mr. Byrnes left the United States he had hoped to return home before going to London to attend the opening of the general assembly of the United Nations organization scheduled for January 10th.

FORMER ELDORADO OFFICIAL FACES FRAUD CHARGE

Alleged C. B. French Failed to Make Proper Entries in Company Records

Toronto, Dec. 22 (CP)—Carl B. French of Toronto, President of Radium Luminous Industries, Ltd., was scheduled to appear in court today on a charge of failing to make proper entries in company records of Eldorado Mining and Refining Ltd., with intent to defraud.

He is a former secretary-treasurer of Eldorado Mining and Refining, Ltd., now a Crown Company operating under the name of Eldorado Mining and Refining.

He also faces four other charges which police said dealt with accepting secret commissions.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested French yesterday afternoon. He was later released on $5,000 bail. It is expected the case will be adjourned today.

Leslie R. Thomson of the munitions and Supply Department said last night the charges were laid under the Criminal Code of Canada, not under the Special Powers conferred by two Orders-in-Council which authorized an inquiry into the activities of 45 companies and individuals, including French.

Eldorado Mining and Refining, Ltd., was expropriated last Jan. 28 by the Federal government when its products were required for the manufacture of the atomic bomb.

The company is the world's largest producer of radium. At the time of the expropriation, shareholders were paid $1.35 a share.

Sweeping Powers Granted.

In March the question arose whether the Eldorado Mines would revert to its former shareholders. Reconstruction Minister C. D. Howe answered that there was no possibility.

Eldorado was out of the news, its operations on lonely Great Bear Lake in the north west territories cloaked in official secrecy, until the first atomic bomb spread death and destruction in Hiroshima early in August.

Then, for the first time, the part the Eldorado Mine had played in the development of the bomb came to light. Uranium from its pitchblende deposits helped to release atomic energy.

Sweeping powers were conferred on J. Grant Glasso, Toronto accountant, to conduct an inquiry into Eldorado Mining and Refining, Ltd.

Mr. Howe said in the House of Commons last month that the main purpose of the inquiry was to trace every ounce of uranium or radium ore from Eldorado over a six-year period to make sure that none had fallen into wrong hands.

The investigator was authorized to direct the search of any place or building used for storing books or records he might require "if necessary by force" and to seize books, records, documents or other things.

"Absolute discretion" was given as to the manner of conducting the inquiry including the right to determine the extent to which counsel would be permitted.

Later Mr. Howe said, if the inquiry led to court action, no advantage would be taken of the "perhaps unusual" means taken by the government to trace the transactions.

UNEMPLOYED NEAR 100,000 MARK IN THE DOMINION

Number Increased More Than 24,000, in the Past Two Weeks

Ottawa, Dec. 22 — (CP) — The number of Canada's unemployed is nearing the 100,000 mark, it was disclosed in figures released by the Labor Department last night.

From Nov. 23 to Dec. 7, the excess of unplaced workers over unfilled jobs jumped by more than 24,000 to 95,678, the increase being attributed [illegible] to "heavy snowfalls and inaccessibility" of areas requiring woods workers, a statement said.

On Dec. 7 184,523 workers were seeking jobs and 88,845 positions were available, compared with 173,000 unemployed and 102,900 vacancies on Nov. 23.

There still are 25,600 jobs available for skilled and semi-skilled woodsmen, 17,237 of them in Quebec, but "placements of woods workers during November was delayed due to heavy snowfalls and inaccessibility to camps."

"However, placements now are on the upgrade and as soon as the holiday season is over, a large movement into the woods camps is anticipated," the department said.

Despite the large numbers of servicemen discharged, progress in veteran placement was "reasonably satisfactory," with less than 20,000 being registered for more than 15 days.

37,000 Vets Seek Jobs

Veterans Department figures showed 37,000 veterans were seeking employment, but only 5,000 asked for out-of-work benefits during November This prompted Veterans Minister Mackenzie to appeal last night to ex-servicemen to apply for the special out-of-work benefit and not use up their gratuities while looking for work.

The Labor Department survey said greater activity than normal had been shown in construction industries with many skilled and unskilled workers being needed immediately to complete at least outside work while weather conditions remained suitable.

The unemployment situation was more acute on both coasts than in central Canada. In the Maritimes 13,600 unplaced applicants were listed against 6,700 available jobs and in British Columbia, 22,392 registered as unemployed, compared with 7,000 vacant jobs. Quebec had 64,931 seeking 36,551 openings, Ontario 58,988 unemployed and 26,711 vacancies and on the prairies there were 24,602 hunting for 11,836 available jobs.

Two daughters, Mrs. K. I. Wilmot and Mrs. M. E. Schulman receive $50,000 plus income from the estate and grandchildren receive $25,000 each. The will says there is no provision for charities "for the reason that during my lifetime I have provided amply for public undertakings and charities."

FRAME WORK FOR A NEW JAPAN IS FINISHED

Disarm Home Islands And Arrest Many War Leaders for Trial As Criminals

Tokyo, Dec. 22. (AP) —Less than four months after the first Allied occupation troops landed, Gen. MacArthur announced that the framework for a new, demilitarized Japan is finished—a reconstituted country presently planning to tax its Emperor "just as any ordinary tax payer."

The occupation forces, first arriving Aug. 28, have disarmed the home islands and arrested many war leaders for trial as criminals. Today it was learned authoritatively that ex-Premier Hideki Tojo and the men of his Pearl Harbor cabinet" will be tried jointly, probably in February.

The statement on the completed framework said there is a present lack "of sufficient qualified leaders" among the Japanese but that "the changes as directed are expected to be assimilated rapidly." No more major Allied directives are contemplated. The last one ordered an end to state-sponsored Shintoism.

The satement, noting that the directives had removed the yoke of militarism, emphasized that education and guidance "must be the main part of the program from here on, because a people who have lived their lives by the sword need help and leadership to adjust themselves to freedom."

Break Govt. Shackles

Allied directives have, among other things, broken government shackles on the press and opened the way for the people, including released political prisoners, to freely criticize all leaders, even the Emperor.

Today Mainichi said the government has decided to impose the wartime profits levy on Hirohito and his household and to have His Majesty "served with a tax notice just as any ordinary tax payer."

In compliance with a directive of Dec. 13 for the Japanese government to care for the needy, the welfare ministry today completed plans for 200,000,000 yen ($13,333,333) relief for unemployed, war sufferers and repatriates. Community kitchens, medical service and public housing are involved in the program.

Indicative of Japan's new way of life, Kyodo News Agency reported that workers in one of the largest copper mines have won 50-per-cent pay increases after a brief strike.

There were strong indication that some of the arrested war criminal suspects, including Prince Morimasa Nashimoto of royal lineage, may be released.

Problems Confronting British Yule Shopper Told by Newsman's Wife

(Written For The Canadian Press)
By ALISON DAUPHINEE

London, Dec. 22 (CP Cable)—The first peacetime Christmas since 1938 is going to be another wartime Christmas for London—except that there is no war.

Everything else is unchanged. Poor quality merchandise, high prices and mortages which bothered Christmas shoppers before Germany and Japan were beaten still continue and many say they are worse.

There is plenty of grousing as parents try to make some sort of normal Christmas for their families. The fortunate few with gobs of money can do it for you can buy, almost anything in England at a price.

But the average family cannot even ~~buy~~ Christmas tree decorations or tissue or bright ribbon to wrap gifts unless one happens to run into an occasional shop which has managed to corral a bit.

Everywhere one can see women and men too, standing in stores with a look of utter defeat on their faces. I must have looked that way myself.

For decorations there is some holly at two shillings (about 45 cents) a pound and mistletoe at one shilling sixpence (about 33 cents) a sprig. Beyond that makeshifts must do.

There are no bright baubles for the Christmas tree but shiny stars can be cut from aluminum milk bottle tops.. there is no tinsel but bright red silky thread can be crocheted into a substitute... there are no bright Christmas candles but white ones can be daubed with scarlet nail polish—if you have any nail polish... there are no icicles but narrow strips can be cut from silver paper out of cigaret packages from Canada...there is no artificial snow but epsom halts makes a reasonable facsimile.

Toys for children are an expensive problem and scarcely any are really worth buying. I saw a wooden train with a wooden railway station, a score of wooden locomotives and cars, painted rails and a few signal lights which glowed. The cost was £30 (about $135). A four-foot sailboat was the same price.

A few balloons are selling at two shillings sixpense (about 56 cents) each but the stores haven't got them—only street peddlers. No one asks where they got them. A small scooter costs 22 shillings; crude dolls are priced from 15 shillings up; rescue signal kites for surplus R.A.F. stocks cost 24 shillings; plastic airplanes six inches long cost six shillings or more; stuffed cloth toys which are fairly plentiful all are more costly than in Canada.

Our five-year-old son Bill would have had a football if a Board of Trade permit had not been necessary to buy one. Almost all such sporting equipment is reserved to organized teams and clubs.

Gifts for adults are almost as big a problem. Luxury goods are available only at ridiculous prices. Clothing makes a most welcome present in the United Kingdom—but it is rationed and who has extra coupons when 24 must last for eight months and a single pair of women's stockings takes three?

Boy Saw No Bodies At Abbey, He Says, On June 8-10, '44

14-Year-Old Witness Heard by Court at Aurich

By ROSS MUNRO

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 22 — (CP Cable) — Fourteen-year-old Andre Lachevre whose family was evacuated from the ancient Abbey of Ardenne by the Germans, today told a court trying Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer on war crimes charges that there were no bodies in or around the Abbey June 8, 9 or 10, 1944.

The Abbey was the site of the German S.S. divisional commander's headquarters and scene of the shooting of some of the 48 Canadian prisoners of war for which Meyer is being held responsible by the prosecution at the Canadian military court.

The boy witness said he and his friends were allowed by the Germans to move freely about the Abbey at the time of the Germans' arrival in the area June 7 until June 11 when a German officer said they could no longer play where they wanted. The witness said he would have noticed the slightest feature out of the ordinary around the Abbey.

When the Lachevre family returned to the Abbey on Bastille Day, July 14, the boy said he saw German bodies lying at various places.

Asked by Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax, the court president, whether bits of tree branches which were snipped off by artillery fire were on the ground at the time of his return to the Abbey, the boy said "the ground was absolutely bare."

Young Lachevre and Jean Marie Vicot who formerly lived at the Abbey, claimed there were two entrances to the Abbey Chapel through which vehicles might pass — one at the front and another at the rear. Both recalled a barricade which the Germans erected at the entrance to the Abbey Garden but did not recollect any barrier at the entrance to the Abbey tower.

Gen. G.S. Patton Will be Buried In Luxembourg

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 22—(AP)—Funeral services for Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., will be held in Heidelberg Sunday, followed by interment in the United States Army cemetery at Hamm, Luxembourg.

The army announcement came as the body of the American tank commander lay in a small, simple room of the one-time German cavalry school, where he died yesterday from complications resulting from injuries in an automobile accident.

Responsibility for the services will be shared by the 7th and 3rd Armies, both of which had been commanded by Gen. Patton during his brilliant campaigns in North Africa, Sicily and Western Europe.

Messages of sympathy flooded into the hospital — formerly the German Cavalry School just outside this famous university city—where Gen. Patton finally succumbed to pulmonary embolism followed by cardiac failure after fighting for 13 days to recover from a broken neck.

Britain's Prime Minister Attlee, Belgian War Minister Leo Mundeleer, and the French Constituent Assembly were among the leading world fighters and organizations offering their condolences.

Gen. Patton is survived by Mrs. Patton, one son, George S. Patton, 3rd, a West Point cadet, and two daughters, Mrs. James W. Totten and Mrs. James K. Waters, both of Washington, D.C.

Mrs. Patton flew from the United States to be with her husband after he was injured. Other members of the family are expected here for the funeral which probably will be held Monday.

JOHN GILBERT DAFOE
(Crookston)

John Gilbert Dafoe died at the home of Mr. Ray Morgan, First Concession of Huntingdon Township, late Friday evening, Dec. 21st. He was in failing health for some time, but death occurred suddenly.

Turkey Seekers Disappointed On Local Market

There were many disappointed potential turkey buyers on the local produce market on the annual pre-Christmas market when the number of birds that were "purchaseable" could be counted almost on the fingers of one hand.

True, there were quite a number of turkeys displayed on the market but without exception they were stated to have been "ordered" with vendors merely waiting for them to be picked up. One farmer stated his had been all taken for several months while another stated he already had approximately 25 orders for turkeys for next Christmas.

Very few geese were available at the ceiling price of 43 cents per pound, but the greater majority of market customers were forced to be content with chicken as fare for their Christmas dinner. Fully drawn capons were quoted at 53 cents per pound with birds running as high as $4 each, while the general run of fowl ranged from 38 to 40 cents per pound.

One vendor on the outside market offered live geese at $4.50 each.

Eggs took a further slight drop with the general price asked being 40 cents the dozen. Mediums were quoted at 38 cents and pullets at 35 cents.

Two Cars Go Out of Control On Front Street

Front Street pedestrians were in danger of their lives Friday evening when motorists went amok to allow their iron steeds to mount sidewalks and crash into buildings.

Jack Eggleton of Stirling was driving south on Front Street when his auto apparently went out of control to mount the curb in front of the Maher Shoe Store and after knocking down two pedestrians crashed into the store front. Knocked over by the onrushing auto were Mrs. Edna Eggleton and Mr. G. Eggleton. Mrs. Eggleton suffered from bruises and shock.

Leslie Hopkins, Bettes Street, was driving north on Front Street, when he was forced to swerve his vehicle suddenly to the left as a car drove out of the St. Charles driveway. The Hopkins vehicle went out of control and crossing the sidewalk in front of J. B. Boyce and Sons, crashed into the corner of the Odorless Cleaners. First, however, the two mail boxes at the corner of the building were knocked over and broken.

A third traffic accident occurred when a rear-end collision occurred as an auto driven by Donald McTaggart of Thomasburg bumped into the rear of another auto driven by Ben. Ogilvie, William Street. Mr. Ogilvie was driving south on Pinnacle Street when in stopping for a stop sign the McTaggart vehicle crashed into the rear of his car.

Radio "Trouble-Shooters" Find Electric Heating Pads Cause Much Interference

Although electric domestic heating pads are a great source of comfort to bed-ridden patients and elderly people, these same artificial bed warmers are at the same time a constant source of annoyance to radio listeners who wait impatiently for their favorite programs.

Just this fact was assured by two radio "trouble shooters" from the radio division of the Department of Transport who were in the city Friday to check for possible radio interference. And that they found and eliminated two sources of interference can be attested by radio listeners in the Coleman Street and Bridge Street, West districts.

This was particularly true in the Coleman Street area where "stay-at-homes" in recent weeks had their lives made miserable by a disturbing interference which at times made radio listening all but impossible. At all times of the day, during the daylight hours or at night that disturbing and highly amplified "boring" noise could be expected to interrupt a favorite program that radio listeners would shut their machines off in disgust.

Newsman Goes On Tour

Anxious to track down any radio interference in the city, the two inspectors called at the office of the Ontario Intelligence and took this reporter on a tour of Belleville streets in their radio equipped "trouble shooting" car.

Crossing the lower bridge with their special equipment at the ready, the driver turned his car car up Coleman Street only to have a faint "boring" noise emerge from their speaker. At first almost imperceptible from the familiar "background" noise which is heard on all radios, the disturbing noise increased in volume as the car travelled slowly up the street. At a certain point the noise reached a maximum and then faded away until far north of Harriett Street it had almost disappeared.

Exact Spot Located

"See how simple it is to localize this interference?" asked the operator as he turned his car around and proceeded back to the approximate point of maximum interference. Here the volume of the machine was turned low and with the car slowly cruising, the exact spot of the trouble was located.

But here specialized radio trouble shooting efficiency was forgotten and diplomacy became the order of the day.

"Being a public servant is no fun", quoth the inspector as he prepared to make inquiries at the house before which he had stopped. "We hate to accuse anybody of operating an appliance which is causing disturbance but when that appliance is annoying hundreds of radio listeners in the district something has to be done."

And the efficiency of the trouble shooting equipment was quickly proven. Shortly after the inspector entered the house, the "boring" noise suddenly ceased and later he emerged with a satisfied smile on his face.

"I told the lady of the house who I was and she gave me a hearty welcome," he laughed. "And she might well have welcomed me. Her radio was making a terrific noise. I asked her if there were any heating pads being used in the house and she assured me there was — upstairs. She had it turned off and the disturbance on the radio immediately ceased."

Part of the Service

Tracking down just such trouble is part of the service which the Department of Transport gives to radio listeners in return for their $2.50 licence fee, according to the inspector. But even so radio listeners fail to take full advantage of the service. "When disturbances crop up they complain to their neighbor up the street and to everybody else but the right party, which is our department," he said.

When complaints are received from certain town or city inspectors, it was assured that the trouble car would soon be on the job in an effort to ferret out the disturbance. Generally speaking, fullest co-operation is received from the parties owning the appliances or equipment which is causing the trouble. This is particularly true of Hydro and other public utility services, it was stated.

Penalty for Not Complying

But while co-operation is expected in effecting the remedy of any radio disturbance, the inspector assured that the act provided a penalty of $50 fine for any person who failed to comply with recommendations to have disturbing appliances repaired.

Inspectors were quick to point out however that a person may innocently use an electrical heating appliance which is causing no end of trouble to radio listeners in the district.

In explanation it was shown that heating pads with defective thermostats do not immediately cause a radio disturbance when they are turned on. Before doing so they have to attain their greatest heat which sets the thermostat in operation. Then and then only does the disturbance commence.

And users of pads might themselves test their equipment for possible radio disturbance. All they have to do is to allow their electric pad to heat for an hour or so and then if turning it off will stop radio interference, the trouble is located.

"To remedy the trouble all that has to be done is to call a hydro man and have the thermostat replaced, or get a new pad," it was stated.

Many Other Causes.

But electric pads are not the only things which cause radio interference. Fluorescent lights, motors and bad electric bulbs will also cause annoying disturbance. Here the trouble will be more localized, however, and in any event will not be as disturbing as the noise caused by a heating pad.

And just to prove that Belleville listeners get their full share and more of radio trouble shooting service, the inspectors assured that this city is doubly looked after. Radio trouble shooting cars are stationed in both Toronto and in Ottawa. In each case Belleville is the turning point of the operational district. Therefore Belleville is doubly serviced and disturbance complaints as result receive more prompt attention.

Patrick Hayes Dies at His Home On Catherine St.

Patrick Hayes died at his home, 37 Catharine Street, Friday evening, after an illness of four weeks' duration.

The late Mr. Hayes had reached an advanced age, being in his 82nd. year. He was born in Woolwich, Eng., and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hayes. For seventy-two years he lived in this city and he was well known and highly esteemed by many friends to whom the announcement of his death will bring much regret. For forty years he was an efficient officer on the Belleville police force and for a considerable time was a sergeant. Upon retirement from the force he served in a capable manner as sergeant in charge of the Belleville Armouries. For some years he lived retired and it was his custom to spend the winters in Florida; this year ill health prevented him doing so.

Patrick Hayes was a good citizen and he will be much missed. He was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and in connection with the parish he was a member of the Altar Society, the Benevolent Society and the Holy Name Society. He was a charter member of the Belleville Council Knights of Columbus, and a former member of the Belleville Bowling Club.

Surviving him are three daughters, Miss Margaret Hayes, Miss Nora Hayes and Miss May Hayes, all at home, and one son, Mr. John D. Hayes of Toronto and Rochester, N.Y. His wife died twenty-two years ago.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Kingston Locos Nose Out Redmen By 7-6 Count

Kingston's fast travelling Locos, Intermediate "A" O.H.A. entry nosed out the Belleville Redmen by a 7-6 score in a hard fought exhibition game at the Hume Arena Friday night. The game was a preliminary workout for the teams which will meet in the regular O.H.A. schedule district grouping which embraces teams from Oshawa, Peterborough and Whitby.

"Dingo" Hayes, manager of the Locos, trotted out two hockey aces in the persons of Watts and McGregor, recently reinstated amateurs from the United States Hockey League who performed with the Tulsa Oilers and whose efforts were mainly responsible for the win.

The hockey faithful who were on hand to see the first edition of Belleville's Redmen in hockey action, were not disappointed. The heavily-padded Locos after enjoying a four-goal lead in the third period were forced to go out in a flaming third period that saw the scarlet-sweatered gang from the banks of the Moira fighting desperately in an effort to pull the game out of the fire.

Whittled Down Lead.

Gradually the Reds whittled down the lead and flashing attacks near the end of the game had the crowd on its collective feet as the locals paced by the Meagher brothers and Don Barrett swarmed around the Loco's net. Udy Udall, netminder for the Limestone aggregation, was busier than the proverbial one-armed paperhanger with the hives in that last ten minutes and time after time turned aside shots that were labelled all the way.

As a matter of fact the actual break of the game came in the first period when Ken Paris, fast-moving forward for the Locos, drifted a lazy shot in the general direction of the Belleville net. The rubber struck Berny Meagher's skate and rolled into the net for an easy goal.

Gerow Goes Well

Despite the fact the opposition flashed Watts and McGregor in action, the Meagher brothers centred by Don Barrett were the pick of the hockey crop. The kid line of the Redmen swung organized attacks against the strong point of the enemy and accounted for four of the six goals scored by the Redmen.

Walt Gerow, former Tulsa Oiler went into action in his first amateur game and the fast-skating smoothie went well against his former teammates. He notched one marker and got an assist on another.

Big Vern Goyer, 246 pounds of him, deserved a better fate. He played a clean heady game on the defence and his blocking and checking broke many a Loco rush. He was robbed of a sure goal in the third period when he broke into the clear and raced in on Udall. The goalie outguessed him and that was that. Speedy St. Louis, and Tim Williams were shining lights for the Redmen with Clare Williamson turning in his usual steady game. Crandall in the nets did a fine job and his smart work, especially in the second period when a rampaging goal-hungry Loco team went wild.

Watts and McGregor easily showed why the Tulsa Oiler management selected them. The fast sheet of ice was made for their liking and they flashed some of the smartest individual plays seen here in some time. Kenny Partis was in his usual form but Udy Udall was the hero of the night insofar as the Locos were concerned.

The teams meet again in the regular schedule of the Intermediate "A" O.H.A. group of this district.

Testimonial Dinner Given A. Pellow, Manager Consolidated Optical Co., Sponsored by Industrial Commission

Tangible and verbal tribute to an industrial manager whose plant had added much to the prosperity of business life in the city, was paid to Mr. Arthur Pellow, manager of Consolidated Optical Company, at a testimonial dinner Friday evening sponsored by the Belleville Industrial Committee. Mr. Pellow has retired from his managerial duties at the Belleville plant and will return to the United States to live.

Following the dinner which was attended by several members of the city council and aldermen-elect Mr. Pellow was presented with a History of Belleville and a pair of pipes and tobacco pouch, the gift of the corporation. Robert Pringle, chairman of the Industrial Commission, acted as master of ceremonies for the evening with the presentation to Mr. Pellow being made by Mayor Frank S. Follwell.

Meant Much to City

"The Consolidated Optical Company through its annual payroll has meant much to the business life of this city," stated Mayor Follwell. "We are happy to welcome Mr. Pellow to this dinner and to pay tribute for his work in this city. Mr. Pellow is a quiet man but in his own quiet way he has made many friends in this city. We trust he will return to visit us on many occasions."

In voicing his appreciation to the Industrial Commission and to the city council for the gesture, Mr. Pellow expressed his thanks for the honor and for the friendly feeling which he asked also would be extended to his successor, Mr. Gilbert Scott, present assistant manager for Consolidated Optical.

"It is my firm belief that Consolidated Optical makes the best lenses and is a company which in the future will continue to make the best for your eyes."

Came to America in 1894.

Prefacing his expression of appreciation with a brief history of his early life, Mr. Pellow told how he had served a five-year apprenticeship in lense making in England before coming to America in 1894 to settle in Philadelphia. His first job had been at $12 per week. Later he had located at Rochester, N.Y., and by 1917 had risen to the position of prescription dispenser at a large lense manufacturing plant there.

At an age when he had expected to retire Mr. Pellow had been asked by his firm to accept the managership of their plant in Belleville and in 1941 he came to this city.

Present assistant manager of the plant, Mr. Gilbert Scott, who in the first of the New Year will assume the managership, told of the feeling of Buffalo, N.Y., company officials that Mr. Pellow was the "dean" of the North American continent in lense manufacturing on a mass production basis.

Words of Tribute.

"In accepting the responsibilities as the manager here I will endeavor to make a success of the Belleville plant," stated Mr. Scott. "If I do so it will be due to the tutorship received from Mr. Pellow."

R. M. Stanton, manager of the Ottawa branch office of the firm, added a word of tribute to Mr. Pellow as a lense manufacturer, for whom, he said, he had the "highest regards." Lorne McDougall, chairman of industry for the city council, stated Mr. Pellow had fulfilled his duty as a citizen of Belleville and expressed regret that he will be leaving Belleville. Alderman-elect Robt. Graham, D.S.O., also was heard briefly.

Following the dinner the party were guests of Mr. Pellow at the Belleville Club.

WARTIME WAGE CONTROLS TO BE REVISED SHORTLY

Return to Provinces of Minimum Wage Control Considered Certainty

Ottawa, Dec. 21. (CP)—Revision of war time wage controls regulations is expected to receive attention early in the new year. Preliminary consideration has already been given to the possibility of relaxing some restrictions but no decision has been reached.

Return to the provinces of minimum wage control is considered a certainty but other changes are in a more nebulous state. One suggestion on which a decision has not yet been reached is that employers should be allowed to increase wages within a narrow margin—possibly two per cent—without receiving authority from War Labor Boards.

At present the only increases that can be made without government authority are those within an established classification. Thus if tool makers in a certain plant have a range of from 95 cents to $1.10 an hour upward adjustments may be made if they do not exceed the top limit.

When provincial premiers were in Ottawa a few weeks ago for the Dominion-Provincial conference, they were told by Labor Minister Mitchell that basically controls would continue until fear of inflation was ended and that might mean a period of several months.

Colorful Service Show Is Given By Canadians

By NORMAN GRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Godalming, Surrey, England, Dec. 21 — (CP Cable) — Two thousand boisterous Canadian servicemen awaiting repatriation last night jammed the biggest "Big Top" England has ever seen—a huge canvas rising above the quiet Surrey Hills—and opened their lungs in applause a ex-Calgary stampede riders in full western regalia presented an extravaganza of bronco-busting and trick riding.

It was the first night of "Rhythm Rodeo,"—most colorful service show since "Meet The Navy"—created and produced by Lt.-Col Rai Purdy of Toronto and enacted by soldiers and members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps. The show will be repeated five nights weekly for a month for the benefit of Canadians in repatriation camps.

Fighting men, hungry for home, found a broad touch of the old west in a miniature version of the Calgary Stampede presented by Lt.-Col. Kit Carson of Maple Creek, Sask., well-known in the rodeo. This display included 70 horses.

Cheers, shouts and cries of "yoo hoo" were loosed as the lusty bucking bronchos, many loaned by the British Army, cavorted around the sawdust ring under glaring lights. Skyrocket, imported from Ireland, threw one rider, and Mankiller, though manageable in the show, was reported to have sent three Canadians to hospital during rehearsals.

A thrilling chuck wagon race was won by Tr. R. W. Armstrong of Calgary in a close contest with Sgt.-Maj. Jarvis and Pte. "Slim" Wilson of Niagara Falls, Ont., finished first in a real old-time chariot race.

The cheering Canadians also witnessed a display of trick roping, tight-rope walking and juggling, relay racing on horseback and a realistic stage-coach hold-up.

The show was rounded out with a colorfully-dressed musical revue with dance numbers presented on a revolving stage.

CRIME SHOWS INCREASE

London, Dec. 21 — (Reuters)— Sir Harold Scott, Commissioner of Police, told a press conference at Scotland Yard yesterday that figures of indictable crime this year showed an increase of 26.5 per cent compared with 1944. Compared with 1938, they showed a rise of 35.7 per cent.

AN APPRECIATION
from the
SCHUSTER COMPANY, LTD.

In presenting our customary Christmas message of good wishes to our many valued customers, we wish also to express our sincere appreciation of the splendid spirit of co-operation displayed by our customers in cheerfully accepting during the trying times under war conditions of coal scarcity, strikes, and Government regulations, whatever fuel was available, under most difficult delivery conditions at times.

There still is a marked scarcity of coal and we can only hope, with you, that by next Spring conditions in connection with the supply of coal may be back to nearly normal and that there need be no more class "A", class "B" and class "C" fuel, but only the good old coals of pre-war years that have proven so satisfactory to our trade for many years.

We feel that we have made a record in keeping Belleville and district warm during the past four or five strenuous years, and it is our aim to continue this policy of Public Service during the peace years that lie ahead with more efficiency than ever.

At this season of "good-will to men" we wish you all a Very Happy New Year.

LABOR PARTY HAS STARTED 5-YEAR PLAN

British Government Opens Gigantic Experiment in Nationalization

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 22. (CP)—Given practically a free hand by an overwhelming victory at the polls in July, Britain's Labor government has started a gigantic experiment in the nationalization of industry and services.

This program, sponsored by Clement R. Atilee, now prime minister, and his party, was a major issue in the election campaign. Conservatives, who held a majority in the war government, saw in it danger to the liberty of the individual and a menace to the free enterprise on which they said Britain had flourished in the past.

"Free Enterprise vs Public Ownership" was the main election theme and it still is the basis of conflict in parliament between the major parties.

The long-term aim of Labor is a "Socialist Commonwealth of Great Britain," and for its first five years at Westminster the party set forth a detailed program on which a start has been made. Nationalization of the Bank of England, the first step, passed through the Commons with little excitement, mainly because the association between the bank and the government has been so close for generations that the change meant little.

Since then the nationalization path has been more thorny. Fuel Minister Emmanuel Shinwell has admitted the difficulties in nationalizing coal, gas and electricity; public ownership of inland transport involves numerous problems which the government agreed might take time to work out; and decisions on public ownership of iron and steel have been delayed until a report on means of increasing the efficiency of the existing industry is received and studied.

Government Warning

In November Herbert Morrison, government leader in the Commons, threw down the gage of battle to the opposition when he declared the government's intention to proceed with the nationalization program at all possible speed and announced that owners who allow their properties to fall into disrepair because of the prospect of nationalization will face the danger of reduced compensation .

The public-ownership program now in sight has not caused undue alarm in financial and industrial circles. Concerns likely to be nationalized, such as the railway companies, have said they expect adequate compensation will be paid. The government has said it does not intend to nationalize insurance companies. In many other fields public ownership is something for the remote future and not an immediate prospect.

Apart from its interest in public ownership, the new government seeks to extend social security legislation now on the United Kingdom's statute books. An omnibus national insurance bill will provide higher pensions for the aged, widows and others in need. Pending introduction of this legislation the government faced a "revolt" of nearly 200 of its members who demanded that the basic old-age pension rate of 10s ($2.25) a week be increased forthwith and it is making new haste with the promised legislation.

Hunters Kill 21 Wolves In Past Seven Weeks

Peterboro, Dec. 22 — (CP) — Hunters have killed more wolves in the past seven weeks than have been destroyed in the last three years it was reported at the county offices here Friday. The total up to this week shows 21 wolves destroyed, which means that $525 in bounties has been collected. The county pays $15 and the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries $10.

Best count so far goes to James and Dow Taylor of Curve Lake Indian Reserve, who downed six wolves in Smith township near Deer Bay early this week. Dow scored on four and his partner bagged two. Charles Allen has brought in three wolf pelts and collected the bounties.

Up at Apsley, the postmaster, Erin Whitmore, and his father, Dan Whitmore, have set out snares in the Crown Game Preserve under permit from the Department of Game and Fisheries. They collected four wolves and a bear. Two of the wolves were still alive when the trappers arrived, and Dan Whitmore finished them off with a hand axe.

Farmers Alarmed

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 22—(CP)—Farmers in the northwest section of Stamford township are becoming alarmed at the increase of wolves in the district and bands of farmers armed with shotguns are out stalking the marauders every day.

"There is not only danger to our chicken and turkey flocks, but also grave danger to our children who might be attacked on their way to school," said Walter D. Warner, manager of the Bright-Warner farms.

"We did not realize how serious the situation was until footprints of the wolves were seen in the snow this week. The wolves have become very desperate and bold and their tracks lead right into barnyards and even to the doors of houses."

Fred S. Deacon

This community will miss one of her best known and most highly esteemed citizens, Fred Sierichs Deacon, whose death took place a few days ago at Miami, Florida, whither he had gone in quest of health.

Deeply rooted in local traditions and institutions, Mr. Deacon, after obtaining his education and early business training in this city, went to the United States and made his way up the ladder of success in the land of his temporary residence, then returned to Belleville to take his share in the development of the life of this city and district in many phases of its activity. He had no small part in the development of the city. He leaves a memory of a finely proportioned life which touched every aspect of life closely. He is mourned by the people of this city and district to which he lent his untiring aid and energy.

The life of this whole community is the richer and better because Fred S. Deacon lived here and exercised an influence for good and aided every cause of high ideals and helped in the growth and progress of the city commercially, industrially, morally, religiously and socially. Loyal to family traditions he decided to spend most of his time in this community and was associated with various institutions which make and mold citizens' outlook, the church, Sunday School, industry, the Chamber of Commerce, Board of Education and business and philanthropic objectives. These institutions all bear the mark of his devotion in service and his tireless advocacy of what he believed of paramount importance in the life of every boy and man and girl and woman. His work lives on and the memory of this fine Christian will linger in the lives which have come in contact with his optimistic spirit.

His loyalty to Belleville was outstanding. He loved this city of his birth and he loved her people. Few men can have known this city so well and her people as Fred Deacon knew them. He had an uncanny memory for Belleville folk here or far away and never tired of meeting visitors who had once lived here or of hearing of their success. His retentive memory was a treasury of recollections and facts about the lives of people connected with the city. He knew Belleville citizens who had climbed to high posts of honor in many phases of the life of Canada and the United States. He knew former Bellevillians who were abroad as no other person could know them. This wide acquaintance kept uptodate was a passion with him and the manner in which he maintained it indicated his spirit of interest in people and in their many interests. He exerted an influence upon the young life of Belleville as he held up the wholesome ideal of active and successful life lived in a worthy cause of service.

Mr. Deacon was devoted to the fundamental factors in human life. He gave the church of his choice, Bridge Street United Church, and its Sunday School, years of devotion and inspiration. He was not only a member of the church and Sunday School but a working Christian, a staunch supporter of the missionary effort; he served in the conferences of the former Methodist and now United Church. His regard for the essential moral basis of education and training was seen in the fact of his championship of the local Y.M.C.A. of which he was the first treasurer and a member of the board of directors for years. A man of vision he served on the Board of Education and he found opportunity to exalt this institution into its proper place because of the supreme importance of education. He saw keenly the need of vocational and practical training to enable boys and girls to achieve the highest and best in their lives.

His pride in Belleville was marked, for him there was no better place in which to live.

His brother, the late William B. Deacon, and he, founded one of the greater industries, now Deacon Brothers Limited. The growth of this firm is a reminder of the faith which Mr. W. B. Deacon and Mr. F. S. Deacon had in their native place. Here is seen another indication of the influence which they were able to exert in this city in inspiring the business men of the community and the growing generation.

Fred S. Deacon was pleased to spend his life among us. He was never tired of sounding the praises of Belleville and of her citizens, and taught the lesson that opportunity here was as great as that which could be offered anywhere while at the same time it was home to them as it was to him. He was genial and was kind, unwearying in his service, in church, in education and in civic and business duties, and daily performed courtesies to citizens for he was always solicitous of the welfare of others.

Konoye Revelations

(Montreal Herald)

If the late Prince Konoye hoped to startle the world when he penned his pre-suicide revelations of plottings and counter-plottings among the nations, he was foredoomed to failure.

An earlier generation would doubtless have been shocked by the Prince's report on the bargainings between Tokyo and Berlin and the implied readiness of each haggler to swindle those with whom business deals were pending.

But the public has become cynical of late. Its eyes have been opened to the facts of international life as far as secret agreements are concerned.

It hopes that the era of double-dealing is ended and that in future, nations will do their bargaining in the open, with no unwritten "stab in the back" clauses included in treaties and pacts.

Whether these hopes are justified or no, people incline to regard past betrayals and intended betrayals as water over the dam—an attitude which largely nullifies the effects of the Konoye reminiscences.

British Best At It

(Ottawa Journal)

It is no secret at all that the most orderly and best-administered zone in Germany is the British. The British professional soldier takes to administration of an occupied country with a measure of objectivity. His habits of mind derive from an imperial tradition. To administer a subject people with paternal solicitude, to extemporize in an economic emergency, this is a way of life which comes instinctively to most Britons and especially to the educated professional soldier in whose mind command is identical with responsimility for the welfare of those to whom he gives orders. These men can't help looking after anyone whose life is placed in their hands. The job gets hold of them, and they are happy and efficient in doing it.

Vanished Forests

(Le Devoir, Montreal)

During the war years that have just ended, particularly in the last three, Canadian forests in general and Quebec forests in particular have been subjected to an exploitation which was not only extravagant and excessive, but terrible. Those who have had occasion to frequent forest regions during this period and who know how to open their eyes and observe have been able to verify this. According to an old saying, the day after an orgy is productive of hermits. So that, the war having come to an end, how many voices are now to be heard preaching the cause of forest preservation. Another occasion for saying better late than never.

Ancient Skyscraper for Ships

(From "Ships" Magazine)

One of the world's first skyscrapers was a lighthouse, built by the Greeks 300 years before Christ. It stood on the island of Pharos, near Alexandria, and was as high as a modern 30 storey building. For some 1,600 years it stood, a beacon to mariners and a model for tower architecture, finally falling in ruins in 1326 A.D.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1945, Edgar A. Guest)

SLOW TIME

My pa says that: come what may,
Twenty-four hours make a day.
Twenty-five can never be,
Never one with twenty-three.
Says' we'll learn that this is true,
All the same the whole year through.

I don't know how that can be.
Days are not the same to me.
Some are long and some are short,
All depends upon the sort.
Just 'fore Christmas, this I know,
Days are long and slow to go.

Busy mother says: "Oh my!
How the time goes racing by!"
But with her I don't agree:
Time just crawls along for me.
Longest days of all the year,
These, when Christmas Eve is near.

Snowy Owls Should be Protected

Toronto, Dec. 22 (CP)—Snowy owls are reported everywhere in southern Canada this winter as they are driven down from the Arctic and sub-Arctic in surprisingly large numbers because their natural food supply—hares, lemmings and other small animals—are scarce.

Farmers and others, in the belief that their chickens are in danger, are slaughtering the birds. Yet actual study of the stomach contents of the owls shows that rats and mice constitute about 90 per cent of their food. They should be cherished and protected, not destroyed.

Despite the contrary views of some lovers of the smaller birds, hawks are equally deserving of mercy and protection. Hawks and owls, skunks and foxes, destroy tens of thousands of rats every year. If they did not, the world would soon be overwhelmed by rats.

It has been estimated that in five years, the uninterrupted breeding of a single pair of rats could reach 15,000,000 descendants. Hawks and owls in particular are the allies of man in his warfare against the all-too prolific rat.

Novel Nesting Place

About ten years ago, amateur naturalist Reginald James, of Toronto, found an empty nail keg in the Humber Valley near that city, and playfully tossed it into a willow tree. A bright idea was born at that moment. James secured more discarded kegs from builders, closed in the tops, and cut holes in the sides a convenient size to attract screech owls. He distributed 112 kegs within a 25-mile radius of Toronto but during the war was unable to inspect more than six of these regularly, but in those six, 14 owls nested during his observations.

An astonishing feature of his study is the color-variation noted in the owl's plumage. One specimen, collected for the Royal Ontario Museum, was a vivid rose shade; others showed color-mutations from gray, through orange, to chestnut.

Jays Store Food

Tucked beneath the loose bark of trees, packed in hollow stumps and crammed into the crotches of bushes, stores of rose hips, dried berries, and odds and ends of food picked up from camp kitchens are sometimes found in the wooded lower slopes of the Rocky Mountains. They are the winter rations of the jays, better known as "camp robbers" who live on the foothills and mountains. Always these winter pantries the high enough to be accessible above the snow of the cold months.

In Canada the Rocky Mountain jays are found from central British Columbia southward. No birds of the Dominion are more comical in their actions, more full of the sheer joy of living, than these jays of the sunset coast. In the twinkling of an eye they will topple over forward from some slender limb, encircle it completely, then pause for a minute or two before repeating the somersault. If this is done for any reason save fun and exercise, that reason is not apparent.

It happened at Camp Billie Bear, Huntsville, where a group of Canadian naturalists were attending an outdoor nature school. Birders were searching distant points with their field glasses in a discouraged sort of way. Then a girl pointed to a tree branch just above her head. "What kind of a bird is that?" she asked. Immediately al of the group became delirious with joy. It was an Arctic three-toed woodpecker, a species they had merely dreamed of as a possible find!

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec 22. (AP)—I have just had my first private conversation with the head of Britain's new Labor government, Prime Minister Attlee—and I like him.

Now of course this is a wholly unorthodox way of beginning our article, but it's deliberate. An interviewer's first and most important task is to size up his personage. During the instant between crossing the threshold and shaking of hands, the reporter must have determined the character of his man. It's partly training but mostly intuition.

I like Mr. Attlee because he looks honest.

The Prime Minister received me in his office at Number 10 Downing Street. The rather Victorian setting of rich old mahogany and red plush is still at Number 10 but the surroundings are blacked-out by your interest in the quiet, almost retiring man who is the leader of Britain's Leftist Swing. Bald, bespectacled, the paleness of his face accentuated by a black moustache, he looks like an intellectual—and is one

Answered Questions Freely

Mr. Attlee responded thoughtfully but freely to blunt questions. Because he has made it a rule not to give interviews for publication, I can't quote him here. However, it is permitted for me to give my understanding of the government's attitude on some major issues. So I'm going to mention briefly a few points in which special interest has been expressed by many.

The Labor Party has come out categorically against any form of totalitarian government. But what about regimentation of the workers under the nationalization of industry such as is being inaugurated?

Well, I believe Mr. Attlee has said in effect on the floor of the House of Commons that there will be no regimentation—that Labor will be free to pick and choose its jobs without dictation by the government. In fact, should the government attempt to dictate, the trade unions would block it.

That is the attitude of the moderate socialist group headed by Mr. Attlee. I should be stating only a partial truth. However, if I didn't report that there are a few influential Socialist leaders who are so much to the Left that they might welcome an experiment in totalitarian government. They are a very small minority and the moderate majority feels that this minority is only the stub of a tail which can't wag the dog

Democratic Ideals

As the anti-totalitarian British Socialist sees it, Britain's ideas of democracy are the same as those of North America. Both set a value on the human being as a human being—not just as an instrument of the State. However, John Bull's economic ideas differ from those of Uncle Sam. Politically, the British Socialist is with the United States, while economically he leans more towards Russia.

The British government believes that the unity of the Big Three—Britain, the United States and Russia—is vital, and sees no reason why there should be any clash because of a difference in political isms.

But Britain feels there is a special need for Anglo-American unity in the fact that while their ideas of democracy are alike, an increasing number of countries are experimenting with various shades of totalitarian government. John Bull and Uncle Sam should stand together to maintain their democracy.

And what of the differences among the Big Three? They are due largely to suspicions—fears that their ways of life may be upset by outside political interference. Those suspicions must be dissipated.

Buyer Committed For Trial of Theft Of 43 Minks

Toronto, Dec. 22 — (CP)—Leslie Carr, Toronto fur buyer, was committed for trial today on a charge of stealing 51 mink from a fur farm at Lansing on the city's northern outskirts. He also was committed on a charge of receiving 43 mink and bail of $10,000 was renewed.

T. H. Wilson, part owner of the farm, said the mink, all breeding stock, were valued at $5,575 and that he identified two pelts "in a bundle produced in Owen Sound police station Nov. 21."

Wilson said that on examining the nest boxes on discovery of the theft he found enough poisoned powder scattered about to kill 25 mink. The powder, he said, was of a type used by ranchers to kill mink at pelting time.

In court Wilson identified the pelt of a mink which had a pink nose. He said the pink nose showed it to be of a rare type.

TREATMENT OF WOUNDS

I said the other day that in ideal (aseptic) wound treatment no antiseptic, germicide, disinfectant or cauterant is applied, and that the normal healing of any wound is best assured by (1) absolute cleanliness and (2) absolute rest.

Absolute cleanliness means asepsis, avoidance of all unnecessary handling; when feasible the avoidance of any dressing or application of any remedy or substance to the wound except to protect it from contamination; and particularly avoidance of any antiseptic, germicidal or disinfectant liquid, powder or salve. The sulfa drugs are not excepted. Sulfa drugs are not beneficial or in any way helpful to normal healing of an absolutely clean wound and certainly not advisable for routine application to minor wounds by way of first aid treatment.

Provided the wound or rather the member or the structure or region involved gets absolute rest, and provided there is no reason to believe infection or inoculation occurred from the unclean or unsterilized instrument or implement that made the wound, healing will proceed most satisfactorily if the wound is left undressed, uncovered, exposed freely to the daylight, if not to direct sunlight, and allowed to remain dry or else kept comfortably moist by a trickle of sterile normal salt solution (rounded teaspoonful of table salt in the pint of boiled water) for as many days or weeks as may be required for complete healing.

Of course such treatment presupposes protection against possible access of flies or other insects protection from cold at night, and protection from careless contact of the wound by bedclothes, clothing, fingers or any unsterilized objects.

In ordinary household first aid practice such aseptic technique is hardly practicable, even if the layman happens to have better than ordinary understanding of the principles of asepsis. For the everyday wounds, scratches, abrasions, cuts, a single immediate application of mild tincture of iodine—by pouring a few drops into the wound, or by dropping a drop or two on the wound from the glass stopper or rod that comes in the vial—is generally the best treatment. Then cover the wound with a coat of flexible collodion or with a bit of adhesive collodion or with a bit of adhesive plaster or with a sterilize gauze compress and bandage.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

A.A.

I don't understand your answer to the correspondent's question about the liquor habit. I don't get the connection between Anonymous and Alcoholics. But I am anxious to obtain any information or advice that may help in the case of my son. (C. M. DeJ.)

Answer—The name of an organization of selfless men and women who have won their battle and want to help other victims win, is Alcoholics Anonymous. It may prove of inestimable benefit to your son if he will get in touch with a local group of these good people (consult telephone directory or classified ads in paper) and attend their meetings.

Nutmeg Grater

My daughter aged twenty years is very unhappy over the condition of her skin. Since she was thirteen or fourteen it has been so dry and rough, and looks and feels like a nutmeg grater over her legs and arms. (Mrs. G. E.)

Answer—Your daughter will find practical help and advice in the booklet "Save Your Skin"—for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope. The condition you describe, as well as "fishskin" "alligator hide" "frogskin" etc., is often due to deficiency of the fatsoluble vitamins A and D.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Which is correct, game "preserve" or "reserve?"

Areas set aside for the protection and conservation of wild life are variously designated game preserves, reserves, sanctuaries, reservations and refugees.

Game preserve originally implied that the areas so designated is to be used to preserve game from extermination; game reserve implied that the area was to be reserved for breeding game for hunting.

However, all five of the terms given above were used interchangeably so frequently that much confusion resulted.

Therefore the U. S. Government adopted "game refuge" as the official name for all areas set aside by the Federal Government for the conservation of wild life.

Such names as "game preserve," "game reserve" and "bird sanctuary" are retained only in cases where they were employed in the original executive orders or acts of Congress setting the areas aside.

The terms are also sometimes used by State and local authorities. Before 1905 lands set aside by the Federal Government for forest conservation were referred to as "forest reserves," but in that year, when such lands were placed under the administration of the Forest Service, the official name was changed to "National forests" to indicate that such lands were not to be locked up and kept from use as the word "reserve" might imply.

The States followed suit and now we have not only "National forests" and National parks," but also "State forests" and "State parks."

"Forest preserve" has never been used to any considerable extent.

LOST MEMORY IN CRASH

Charleston, W Va., Dec. 22. — (CP)— A young war veteran, victim of amnesia, Thursday night had a happy reunion with his pretty wife and learned not only his name but that he has two small children in Lexington, Ky., waiting for their daddy to come home for Christmas. He was Andrew C. Moore, Jr., 27, who walked into the county jail last Monday with his memory a blank. A former R.C.A.F. man, he lost his memory in a plane crash in January, 1944.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 22 (CP) — Long parliamentary corridors, noisy and busy until prorogation Tuesday, were silent today save for the hum of vacuum cleaners and the whir of waxing machines as cleaning squads took over from the legislators to give the big building its off-season manicure.

Many members and Senators had obtained their train and plane reservations for last weekend on the prospect of prorogation coming then. Afraid of losing scarce accommodation they left anyhow feeling the session wouldn't extend beyond Monday.

Speaker J. H. King of the Senate, attempting to reach his family Christmas reunion in British Columbia, took up his Monday train reservations and left. This meant that Hon. Thomas Vieh, Dr. King's immediate predecessor, occupied the chair for the closing session. And it also meant that Senator Vien was thus precluded from moving his resolution on United Kingdom financial matters —the last resolution on the Senate order paper.

Like unfinished business in the Commons Chamber, the resolution died, but may be reintroduced at the next session of parliament in the spring. Nine questions, a resolution, and seven private members motions died on the Commons order paper.

The questions ranged from war assets corporation sales and the cost of the atomic energy plant at Chalk River, Ont., to wartime housing and a new CBC building at Montreal.

The private members' motions ranged from a demand for government control of the nation's mineral resources to a request that parliament set up a special committee on health and welfare.

The House galloped through hundreds of estimate items in the dying moments to accompaniment of off-stage singing from the government lobby where a group of tired Liberals, after long hours in the House, relaxed in choruses of "Home on the Range."

Sometimes the speed of the House outpaced the usual dignified procedure and at one stage the Commons got into committee, skipping over the orders of the day. A member grumbled and they had to back up and start all over again. This entailed going through the formalities of shifting the mace, reporting progress and speaker, deputy speaker and clerk switching chairs.

Political Huddle: Before the session ended four men connected with parliament got together for a bull session on "football as she was played" back in 1906.

Taking time out from sessional strife, Douglas G. Ross (PC—Toronto St. Pauls), an old McGill man, went over gridiron strife with his former Queen's opponents—Revenue Minister McCann, J. M. MacDonnell (PC—Muskoka Ontario) and Jack Williams, clerk of the parliamentary sessional papers.

Vice-Regal Xmas: A giant Christmas tree has been erected in one of the roomy salons of Rideau Hall and the Governor-General and Princess Alice are preparing to enjoy a quiet last Yuletide in Canada with turkey and plum pudding as the chief dishes.

The staff of the vice-regal residence will hold a party around the tree on Christmas Eve and a few days ago Sunday school children from a little Anglican church nearby were guests of the Governor—and Santa Claus. The Governor chuckled when the children gave him scant attention after the arrival of old St. Nick.

Embolism Cause Of Patton's Death During His Sleep

Heidelberg, Dec. 22 —(AP)— One of the world's great masters of tank warfare — Gen. George S. Patton Jr. — died peacefully in his sleep of a blood clot which developed gangrene in his lungs and weakened his warrior heart.

Mrs. Patton, who was at his side, decided immediately that the 60-year-old commander of the United States 15th Army would be buried in Europe, along the storied route of the United States 3rd Army he led to victory.

The acid-tongued commander, one of the greatest in American history, died at 5:50 p.m. (11:50 a.m., E.S.T.), 12 days after his neck was broken in a traffic accident.

"Went Down Fighting."

"He went down fighting," said Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commander of United Statees forces in Europe.

Gen. Patton died almost a year to the day after one of his most remarkable military feats — the 78-mile plunge of his 3rd Army to the relief of the battered American garrison at Bastogne, France, cut off by the German army's Ardennes offensive in last winter's "Battle of the Bulge."

The General was injured Dec. 9 while on a pheasant hunting trip, when his automobile was involved in a collision with an army truck. Gen. Patton suffered a broken neck with accompanying paralysis from the shoulders down.

"This is a hell of a way to die," Gen. Patton said as he was lifted into an ambulance.

But his condition steadily improved and last Wednesday he sat up in bed. Then bronchial secretions brought on congestion of the lungs and his heart became affected.

Col. R. Glen Spurling, United States War Department medical specialist, said the blood clot which caused death occurred when Gen. Patton was well on his way to recovery from partial paralysis. The clot developed early yesterday.

The medical facts, said Col. Spurling, were these:

"Until the morning of Dec. 19, Patton made very satisfactory progress. His general condition was good and he was confident he would recover.

"The first untoward sign was when he had difficulty raising secretions from his bronchial tubes.

"At approximately 2 a.m. yesterday he had an acute attack of breathlessness and pallor. The attack lasted about an hour and he was relieved by medication. At that time we felt relatively sure the General had pulmonary (lung) embolism."

Col. Spurling explained the blood clot probably originated in Gen. Patton's injured neck and was pumped by the heart to the right lung, causing "a spot" of gangrene in the lung.

"Anybody, particularly an older person and especially one who is paralyzed, is liable to develop such a 'spot'," Col. Spurling said.

The specialist explained that the clot clogged up the vessels in Gen. Patton's lungs, and that though he recovered from the initial shock that morning, his lungs filled up with mucous.

All efforts to stop the increase in the flow of mucous were futile, Col. Spurling said, and early this morning Gen. Patton showed signs of heart failure.

"Late this afternoon Gen. Patton was in a very critical condition," Col. Spurling said.

All Courage in World

Doctors had hoped to fly the fiery general home within the next week or 10 days and Gen. Patton was enthusiastic, Col. Spurling said, adding:

"He had all the courage in the world and was confident he would pull through."

Gen. McNarney told reporters:

"It is my painful duty to announce the death of a great fighter and a great man. . .

"He brought to us a large part of our magnificent victory and this, too well known to need description, belongs to history."

Colors Deposited At Home Barracks

Brockville, Dec. 22 — (CP) — In a regimental dinner in the officers' mess of the Royal Canadian Regiment last night celebrated the return of the regiment's colors from London, Ont., to their home barracks on the 62nd anniversary of the formation of the unit.

A 100-man escort marched with fixed bayonets from the station to the military camp with the colors, which were carried in the Northwest Rebellion, the Boer War, and the First and Second Great Wars.

The regiment was stationed for a time in London and the colors were kept there in the hands of a custodian, awaiting return to Brockville.

At the dinner, a private regimental affair from which newspapermen were barred, Lt.-Gen. Charles Folkes of Ottawa, Chief of General Staff and a former officer of the R.C.R., proposed the toast to the regiment. High ranking former R.C.R. officers and other military guests were present.

Guests included Brig. G. A. McCarter, Officer Commanding Military District No. 3, Kingston; and Lt. Col. J. Myatt of Kingston, formerly at the Brockville Officer Training Centre, and other staff officers from Ottawa and London, Ont.

WEDDINGS

DIAMOND—CHISHOLM

A pretty wedding was quietly solemnized Saturday afternoon, at the Re-Organized Latter Day Saint Church, London, when Rev. A. W. Sheahy united in marriage Mary Helen, youngest daughter of Mrs. Chisholm and late Fred Chisholm, London, to Douglas James, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Diamond, Belleville.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Charles M. Her fingertip veil was caught up by a sweetheart headdress. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Charles Rex, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing a pale blue gown of net over taffeta, halo of blue feathers with shoulder veil, net mittens and carried a Colonial bouquet of chrysanthemums.

Bruce Diamond, of Belleville, assisted his brother as best man. Lorne White was the usher.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. A. W. Sheehy. Miss Win McCoy, soloist, sang "O Promise Me", prior to the wedding and "I Love You Truly", during the signing of the register.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to our life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseenable in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Dear Editor;
I am eight years old.
Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says if you see it in the Sun it's so.
Please tell me the truth;
is there a Santa Claus?

A Warning to Bobby-Soxers

Dainty Shirley Temple is the teen-ager's idea.

By HELEN FOLLETT

BOBBY-SOXERS who live in sweaters all winter long must be on guard against the baneful BO which isn't just a summer sorrow. Woollen fabrics excite the sweat glands. It isn't fair to insult the public nose. Excessive perspiration does not make for popularity of the one who carries its fetid odor.

The daily bath is essential, of course, but even that may not overcome the trouble. Cosmetic counters offer numerous aids; and the victim should not hesitate to restort to them. They come in various forms, creams, powders and liquids. If one doesn't do the business, another one will. It is important to follow directions carefully; the wrong manner of application is often the cause of disappointment.

Sweat Glands

Sweat glands perform duties that are essential to life, the most important of which is the regulation of body temperature through evaporation of perspiration upon the skin. There are between two and three million of these glands upon the human body. Perspiration has another function, the elimination of impurities from the blood and, because of its acid reaction, it protects the skin in a mild way against growth of germs.

Considering the vast number of these glands, it does no harm to stop the functions of those in the armpits. Wastes are sent away through other glands. Some perspiration deterrents close the tiny openings. Any physician will tell you that no harm is done.

Nervousness is often the cause of excessive sweating, not only in the armpits, but in the palms of the hands and on the soles of the feet. For nervousness, there may be a definite physical cause. If one is excessively jittery one should have a medical check up by the old family doc. Certain intestinal disorders, of which one may be scarcely aware, cause nervousness and sleeplessness.

CRIME SHOWS INCREASE

London, Dec. 21 — (Reuters)—Sir Harold Scott, Commissioner of Police, told a press conference at Scotland Yard yesterday that figures of indictable crime, this year showed an increase of 26.5 per cent compared with 1944. Compared with 1938, they showed a rise of 35.7 per cent.

Places Laid for Forty

Guests were the immediate family of the honored couple. Places were laid for forty at the attractively arranged table on which a large wedding cake made a pretty centre with its decorations in white and pink. The bride's cake also made a pretty setting decorated in white and chocolate trimmings. The appetizing dinner menu which consisted of choice viands of all sorts of goodies was furnished by each daughter and their two sons. Presiding over the table were four granddaughters, the Misses Margaret Baggaley, Ruby Wilce, Frances Wilce and Bernice McMurdo.

Again, Mr. Sharpe made another move near Castleton, where he purchased a farm and lived there for fourteen years. Owing to ill health, Mr. Sharpe was forced to discontinue farming and has since purchased a small quantity of land about one mile north of the village where he has built a barn and house.

First White Christmas

By Cecile Musson

Take a look at a Christmas card complete with snow-covered landscape, horse-drawn sleigh, be-furred ladies and bundled-up kiddies with the sparkle of "Merry Christmas" all over the painted and printed message. Take a big step farther and walk into the scene through imagination's door so that you become part of it all and real, warm snow commences to fall on your hair and your nose and changes the color of your coat. You would stand there dreaming. But more so if even a handful of hail a year was a rarity in your semi-tropical island home.

It is warming to remember — a toy island, its semi-circlet clothed in evergreen cedars. Blue, ocean waves surfing in white on pink coral beaches. Prodigal sunsets, visible from everywhere. In the winter (comparatively warm) the stars are like blue brilliants, one moment lost in mist, the next thick overhead, startling the eyes. There is moon-gold dappling on white coral, tree-lined roads. Potent moonlight. Honeymoon-light. A "motorless Eden" it was once, before the Second Great War when America decided Bermuda was a first line of defence and rushed the establishment of 99 year Lend-Lease air and naval bases there.

One night here after lights were out I raised the shade and noticed what looked like mist above the grass. I looked again and decided it was moonlight, "white like snow" I thought. In the morning I woke to a white world and found that my simile had unwittingly struck the truth.

At home as kids we used to crush artificial ice and make "snowballs" adding syrup to color and flavor them. That first day the snow was crunchy underfoot and I laughed as I was reminded of "snowballs." Other days it is like icing sugar or a million boxes of windblown soap-powder suds. To Canadians doubtless it largely stands for the bother of a snow shovel and traffic snarls but to me from where the Gulf Stream flows it is like an animated Christmas card.

Income Tax Staff Enjoys Christmas Party

There were sounds of revelry by night in one of the large lecture rooms of the Armouries on Friday night when the Dominion Income Tax Staff Association held its annual Christmas dance. Upwards of 100 staff members and their friends were present.

The "income-taxers" enjoyed cards, dancing and general entertainment up until a late hour. Music was furnished by Bruce Sills and his orchestra.

Greeting the guests as they entered the rooms were Income Tax Collector Ken Reid, and Mrs. Reid, and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson.

The general fun was interspersed by novelty dances with a special "spot" affair being won by Mr. Welbanks and Mrs. Lang. The "flatfoot" dance prize was annexed by Mr. Andrews and Mrs. Lennox while P. Flagler carried off the trophy in the "broom" dance.

There was a typical Christmas spirit present also a [illegible] mas tree with none other than "Pat" Patrick acting in [illegible] of jolly old St. Nick. Each guest present received a gift from Santa Claus.

Cards under the jurisdiction of Clint McDonald were enjoyed and later refreshments were served by Mrs. Gooch and her capable assistants. Financial arrangements were under the supervision of Earl Elliott.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Hard to Believe This Girl is our Fellow-Countrywoman

This column seems to have become a debating society for and against foreign girls marrying our soldiers. At the same time our own girls have not been above reproach in their treatment of our soldiers. Take this mother's letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My son left me two months ago. I've not had a word from him since; I don't know whether he's living or dead. If he has thrown away his life, I can only hope that He who reads our hearts will understand and be merciful. Here's the story:

"My boy was oversensitive; his nerves seemed on the outside of his skin waiting to be hurt. The Army was a rough school for such a disposition, but he respected his duty to his country, was brave and signed up as soon as he had graduated.

"He had been in love with a girl he had known all his life. They'd been together in kindergarten, in grade school, and graduated from high school in the same class. She always struck me as a hard, young creature, but my son was so utterly and devotedly in love with her, I couldn't find it in my heart to tell him how she impressed me. And before he went overseas, at the age of 20, their engagement was announced and all their high school friends came to our house to celebrate.

"The girl was for an immediate marriage, but my son thought it wouldn't be fair to her, if he came home crippled from overseas. He made his insurance over to me, but exacted a solemn promise thatI would ed a solemn promise that I would divide if he didn't come back. I agreed to this.

"She immediately set to work on the hope-chest he had given her. He also gave her some very good furniture, nice old family pieces he had in his room. He also bought a dozen sheets, pillow cases, towels, all for the new bungalow he was planning to build when he was separated from the service. His father had left him a little money.

"When he came back, badly wounded, wearing the Purple Heart, she wasted no words on telling him, actually over the phone, that she was in love with someone else, and would he mind if she kept the things he had bought for their home? He told her he never wanted to see any of them again, rushed from our house, and that's the last I have seen of my only child. Perhaps you or your readers may be willing to comment on this, a soldier's love story with one of his own countrywomen.

Soldier's Mother."

Husband's and Wife's Names on Business Greeting Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband is in business for himself, and I work in the office for him. To our customers at Christmas-time we are sending small calendars with a greeting card enclosed. Should my husband sign his name only, or should they be from "Mr. and Mrs. John B. Smith"?

J. B. S.

Since you work in the office with your husband, your name should be included with his on the greeting cards.

When An Engagement is Broken

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear friend of mine, who has been engaged for about a year, is going to break her engagement, because their marriage date will have to be put off indefinitely, since his family does not wish him to be married now. They continually quarrel over even the most inconsequential things, for they are both aggravated over this situation, but still he does not do anything to alter the situation.

She received many personal gifts (engagements presents) from friends and also bonds and money. I have advised her that it would be foolish for her to return these engagement presents, since no one would have any use for the things they gave her.

Also there is another very real problem. They had a joint account which was started partly from the money-gifts they received. How should this money be divided? He naturally had more money in the account than she had, but it is difficult to remember how much she put in and how much he put in. Please advise what she should do with the gifts, and what they should do about the money in the joint account.

F. D. H.

First, I don't agree with your advice to your friend. . . .that she should not return the engagement gifts. When an engagement is broken, engagement gifts should be returned with a little note of explanation from the girl saying teither that the engagement has been broken ("by mutual consent") or that the wedding date has been indefinitely postponed. This is a thoroughly sensible rule, for it is important that the girl not only clear from her life all the material things that are symbols of her engagement, but return to the givers the gifts that were sent for an engagement which no longer exists. The reason you give for her not returning the gifts—that "no one would have any use for the things they gave her"—is entirely beside the point.

The gifts of money received by either the girl or the man should be returned to the givers; certainly the givers "would have use for" these! And if the couple can't come to some amicable and fair agreement as to the proportion of the amount each put into the joint account that is now to be dissolved, the final alternative would I think have to be a 50-50 division of the total after the engagement money-gifts have been returned.

Slim Princess Bangles

By PRUNELLA WOOD

REMEMBER the legend of the Slim Princess? Born in a country where bells never weighed less than two hundred, she was a size 10, and could really squeeze into an eight. So they padded her robes with down cushions, and huddled her in furs. And when she was married off to a neighboring prince. . . . who abhorred fat girls but who had to marry the way the old folks said. . . imagine his joy when he lifted her off her palfrey and she weighed about eighty pounds, instead of twice eighty.

To make a long story longer . . . .that's the story of these bracelets. . . . .chunky, barbaric . . .they yet are only featherweight, because they are aluminum. Here the lady has eight of them, which she divides between her wrists, and wears above not over, her gloves.

CHOOSING Your New HOME

SOME LIKE TRADITIONAL TYPE HOUSES OTHERS WANT STRICTLY MODERN

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

Almost any day now, you'll be ready to begin building that new home that's been delayed so long.

Perhaps, during the period when building was halted, you went ahead with the planning of the new house, so that you know exactly what you want and can put the plans into execution at the earliest possible moment.

On the other hand, there are those who, since the actual work couldn't be done anyhow, put off even the selection of the architectural style of the new home, and now must make up their minds on that fundamental point before anything else can be done.

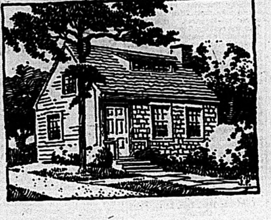
Pictured here are four types of houses popular in this country for their attractiveness and their convenience alike.

At left, in the top row, is the type known as the "Log Cabin" cottage, appealing both from the standpoint of its neat, simple appearance, and also the fact that it can be built very economically.

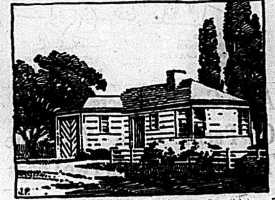
A sharp contrast in appearance, but equally simple and neat of line is the small modern home at its right. The corner windows make this type of house a perfect one for which to plan the use of many of the interesting new pieces of modern furniture.

In the lower row, left, distinctive and charming, is a story and a half house with French Provincial influence evident in the steep-pitched, hipped roof and the dormer windows at the top of the wall instead of higher up on the roof.

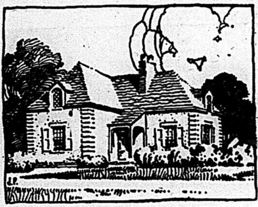
The fourth house, characterized by the large chimney, regulation dormers and small-paned windows, exemplifies the type of dwelling known as Williamsburg Colonial.



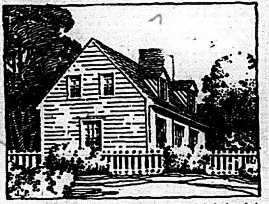
ECONOMICAL TO BUILD, this simple, practical, attractive "Log Cabin" type cottage is a popular choice with those who want a small house.



EQUALLY PRACTICAL and simple, the small modern home, with its corner windows, provides a perfect setting for interesting pieces of furniture.



THIS STOREY-AND-A-HALF house takes from French Provincial architecture its steep roof, characteristic dormers, high first storey windows.



AND HERE A basic Williamsburg Colonial design brings to modern living its big chimney, small-paned windows, precise cornice mouldings.

Fashion Flashes

THIS SPRING you'll be wearing the toppen again, but it will have big gauntlet cuffs to give it a different look. Some toppers have cuffs with huge buttons, while others have embroidered touches.

Firmly established as a fashion and likely to continue when the shortages that dictated it are no more, is the two-fabric dress. A nice afternoon model is of black woollen, with a rippled, curved peplum of faille on the slim skirt. Deep armhole sleeves of the faille.

Lots and lots of feathered hats and headdresses continue to appear. A charming hat is a face-framing model composed of alternating curled pink and black ostrich plumes.

A new twosome is that of tweed with glitter trimming. Simply wonderful is a slim-as-a-reed skirt of black and white hound's-tooth check tweed with a jet sequin in every black check. Devastating when worn with a turtle-necked black jersey top, with lots of gold jewelry.

An indispensible item to the woman who goes about a great deal is the silk dinner suit. Moire, faille and satin are the three most popular fabrics for suits that are simply-made, often with a flared peplum jutting out above a slim skirt. Such suits can take as much dressing up or down as the wearer cares to give them.

A big help to the busy woman is a large suede handbag with a small change purse forming the clasp.

An ideal choice for Spring wear, the reefer is coming back in a big way. An advance model is of gold-colored covert cloth, and keeps its trim lines despite the deep armhole, the full skirt and shirtwaist sleeves.

Lots and lots of satin for Spring, judging by its frequent appearance at fashion shows and collections. Beige satin makes a handsome, long-skirted dinner dress plaided all over in jet sequins.

Lullaby for Christmas Eve

See, little fellow, how the stars
Have snowflaked down to deck the tree!
They thread with colored yarns of light
Each needle of the greenery.

The Christmas angel, glistening
High upon the topmost twig,
Will stitch a slumber robe for you
Of gossamer and holly sprig.

So sleep and dream of Teddy bears,
Electric trains and builder sets.
For boys, with daddies home from war,
There's nothing Santa Claus forgets.

And should his pack, in future years,
Seem full of struggle or despair,
You'll find he always leaves some room
For courage and for honor there.

T.B. Sufferers Benefit By Idea of Danish Clerk

Toronto, Dec. 22. (CP)—History books cite the names of countless persons who have benefited humanity. Yet few people know of Einar Holboell, Danish postal clerk and originator of the Christmas seal.

He was only one of thousands who delivered mail that winter of 1903. The sufferings of tuberculous children on Copenhagen's streets moved him first to compassion, then to action. The long-term result—today's red seal compaign to fight tuberculosis.

Stamps constantly passed through Holboell's hands, and to him came this thought. Why not add one more penny stamp to the thousands of Christmas letters, a levy on healthy senders, to help alleviate T.B. suffering?

The enthusiasm of his fellow workers caused him to present his plan to the King and Queen of Denmark, who paved the way for the first sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals in December, 1904. The proceeds established two hospitals for tuberculous children.

Einar Holboell's idea took root. In 1907, an American woman, attracted by the Danish Christmas seals appearing on mail to Americans, brought the seal plan to the United States. brought to Canada.

Sir William Gage, president of the National Sanitarium Association, introduced the plan to Canada in 1908 to help maintain Canada's first two hospitals for tuberculosis at Muskoka, Ont., and a third at Weston, Ont.

At the outbreak of war 45 countries were annually selling these seals.

Every such seal, whether its motif be the Danish Queen's face (1904) ,a wreath of holly (1907) or a little boy (1945-designed by Artist Park Phipps), whether sold in Canada or Europe, displays the same emblem— the double-barred cross, in its patriarchal or religious form, used as a symbol of rank or dignity by the patriarchs of Jerusalem and Alexandria. More familiar is the Lorraine or heraldic form of the cross, which was used as the badge of the Free French under General de Gaulle.

The Nationa Sanitarium Association, pioneer organization in Canada to fight T.B., founded in 1896 by a group of philanthropists in Toronto, was intended to be national in scope. But so great was the need in Ontario that its efforts were later concentrated in that province and other associations were organized to cover the rest of the Dominion.

In 1900 there was but one small sanatorium. Now there are more than 30 sanatoria which treat 12,000 patients annually.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Complexions Should be Petted

Women are deeply concerned about their hair. They're so eager to keep up with coiffure modes that they are willing to wad their hair on the top of their heads, doughnut fashion; they look as if they were preparing for the bath. Weight and measurements of the so-called perfect form get considerable attention. But, after all, it is the face that means most. It tells the story. That is why the cosmetic industry keeps going like a house afire, no matter what happens to the world and all the people in it.

Just what sort of care do you give your face? Women seem to have different ideas about complexion attentions. Some women don't use soap, depend upon cream for cleansing. Unless the skin is allergic to suds, soap should be used. It is a mild antiseptic; nothing else quite takes its place.

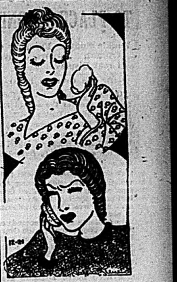
You need plenty of warm water —never hot, unless blackheads are present—and you should be fussy about the soap you use. There are plenty of good soaps, but the one you are using may not be the best for you. If you look in the mirror, scan your complexion and tell yourself "I must do something," start by changing to a different soap.

Fluff up a lather. Don't just put a light film on the washcloth and give a few casual swishes. Apply to the skin generously.

If the epidermis is inclined to be dry, remove makeup with a thin cream, letting some of it remain on when the lathering starts. After the face is well-soaped, give yourself a sort of facial treatment, sending the fingers round and round, over chin, cheeks and forehead, doing up and down strokes over the throat. Throats need lots of attention. That's where Pop Time often grabs one first, forming necklace lines or fiddle strings.

Rub the soap into the creases at the sides of the nostrils, a favorite lodging place for blackheads. Go around the eyes gently; tissues are delicate there, must not have rough treatment.

Rinse thoroughly with warm water, and dry. Apply a cream while the flesh is still warm and glowing; that is when an oily cosmetic gets in its best licks.



Fluff on powder, you'll get better results that way.

The longer a cream remains on the skin, the better the toning and softening effects will be. Apply a little, rub it in, use more. Don't push the flesh up around the eyes. Tap and slap. Give your face a brisk spanking. Blood streams will awaken, go about their business. Leave a little of the cream on the eyelids if you are about to make yourself a new cosmetic face.

Fluff on powder; add more, if necessary. You'll get better results than if you pile it on, try to remove the surplus. The compact rouge is easier to apply, but does not last as long as does a cream rouge.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Pre-Holiday Musings

This is the magic time of year, when the heart begins to go soft —and spills over like ice-cream on the Fourth of July. All of us are filled with the Santa Claus spirit—the holiday impulse to give and give and give. This year of all years, with so many veterans in hospitals, there should be no clamp on the pocket-book, and the dollars and pence should flow like Niagara.

It is amazing to discover how full the world is of trusting masculine hearts, which never wait to get untangled from one girl before getting all wound up with another.

Happiness, for a girl, consists in her ability to take men as they come—as she takes the Christmas holidays—and tranquilly let them go and forget them, when they go.

The trouble usually starts when a girl, who thinks she has the "exclusive rights" to a man's heart, discovers that he is syndicating his kisses and caresses.

When a girl is very young she longs desperately to find a lover who will never, never deceive her. When she's a little older, she longs desperately to find one who will never undeceive her, says Cynical Sybil.

A woman is young just as long as she can think of life as a Christmas stocking, and still believe that it holds another sweet romance or a new sentimental surprise for her. One reason why so many scientists stay young is because they are always looking for a "surprise" and finding one.

Don't take a man's love for granted—because it never is granted. It has to be filched from him, when he's in a dream, just as his rib was. That's why he's always astonished to find himself engaged.

Modern life is a sort of clinic where we dissect our emotions, anaesthetize our imaginations, and study our dreams and illusions under the microscope. Then, when the last vision or fantasy has gone up in vapor, we wish we had our Santa Claus back!

A man is always begging a woman's forgiveness—and then wishing she'd stop smothering him with it. Yet a girl, who can't forgive a man easily, had better learn to live alone and like it.

Reconverting Beauty

THIS WORLDLY and becoming hat and jacket for evening, is what can happen to an heirloom Spanish shawl which has outlived its usefulness in original intent.

The light, rounded turban, the luxuriously sleeved waist-length jacket, are its 1946 guise. Sequins have been embroidered throughout the design of the shawl's own embroidery, highlighting the beautiful colors and giving a designer boost to this clever adaptation. OMAHA KNIGHTS DEFEAT DALLAS TO PLACE SECOND

Winkie Smith, Formerly of Oshawa Juniors, Gives Great Display

(By The Canadian Press)

Omaha's Knights scored three goals in each of the second and third periods at Dallas last night to defeat the home team 7-3 and move into second place in the United States Hockey League. It was the only U.S.H.L. fixture of the night.

A close defensive pattern prevailed on each side during the first period, but centre Fred Gibbon broke through for an Omaha goal with less than two minutes to play.

In a minute and five seconds of the wide open second period Omaha had counted two scores, each with Frank Melong on the delivery end. Winkie Smith served up the first and assisted with Conrad Poitras on the second. Peewee Reed scored a Dallas goal seconds later to bring the tally up to 1-3. Then Don Morrison foxed the whole Dallas team midway of the second to race down the ice for an unassisted goal. In the closing minute of the stanza Joe MacIntosh of Dallas and Don Morrison of Omaha got into a sideline fight which resulted in each drawing a 10-minute penalty.

Smith, whose stellar play highlighted the Knights' offence all evening, scored an unassisted goal early in the third period, then followed up with another with the assistance of John Forbes and Gibbon, to put Dallas behind, 1-6.

Hugh Currie scored for Omaha on a pass from Bobby Thorpe. Then Pte Kapusta chopped in a third Texan score after Reed and Ducky Skinner had lured goalie Harvey Jessiman off guard. Morrison scored his second goal of the night for Omaha before the end of the game.

Tonight's league features will be: Omaha at Fort Worth, Dallas at Tulsa and Kansas City at Minneapolis.

HOME-AND-HOME SERIES BETWEEN LEAFS, RANGERS

Chicago Plays Doubleheader With Detroit and Bruins Meet Canadiens Over the Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Principal interest in the National Hockey League's five-game weekend program naturally attaches to games which may affect the standing of the first four clubs, but the home-and-home series between Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers is bound to have its interesting angles as well.

Through 20 seasons no N. H. L. teams have reached post-season play-offs more frequently than these two clubs, now trailing the field by a wide margin. Some hockey sources say the reason for their lowly stature today is that no other teams were hit as hard by the requirements of Canadian and United States military services.

Rangers, deep in the cellar five points behind fifth-place Toronto, will play in Toronto Saturday and entertain the Leafs in New York Sunday.

"It's going to take the best we have got for either of us to make the play-offs," said coach Happy Day of Leafs, "but don't overlook the fact that the other four clubs will have to show their best to keep us out."

The other home-and-home weekend series sends Chicago Black Hawks to Detroit Saturday and back to Chicago Sunday. In the fifth weekend game Boston Bruins are at home to Montreal Canadiens Sunday.

A double victory for Chicago, coupled with a loss for Canadiens, would send the second-place Hawks into undisputed leadership. Canadiens now hold a two-point edge with Boston in third place, half a game behind Chicago. Detroit is three points behind Boston.

'Babe' Zaharias Voted Best Athlete of '45

(By The Canadian Press)

Mildred Didrikson Zaharias, the "Babe" of the golf links, walked off with the title of outstanding woman athlete of 1945 in the Associated Press poll of 70 sports writers of the United States, the result of which was announced yesterday. Mrs. Zaharias scored 126 points to the 104 for the second-place Ann Curtis of San Francisco who had swept the field in the National A.A.U. swimming championships. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, the comeback queen of tennis, was third with 70 points and Brenda Helser rated fourth.

Patty Berg, renowned in golf, and Pauline Betz, tennis star, were far back in a fifth - place tie at 14 points.

Jack Kearns, 63, former boxing promoter and once manager of Jack Dempsey, was acquitted yesterday at New York of charges of violating the securities laws involving transactions in which it was claimed investors had lost $150,000. The case was based on operations of a company to manufacture fire extinguishers. The government claimed none was ever produced. Harry Lennox, a co-defendant, previously pleaded guilty.

Although they do not know the difference between a lateral pass and a fade-back, the bookies at New Orleans have made Oklahoma Aggies the favorites by two touchdowns over St. Mary's Gaels in the Sugar Bowl football attraction there New Year's Day.

Making his first start after being trounced by Johnny Greco of Montreal, Tony Janiro, youthful Youngstown, O., welterweight, gained the unanimous decision over Humberto Zavala, of Mexico in an eight-rounder at Madison Square Garden last night.

Allan Cup Prospects Brighter On Pacific Coast With Nine Teams Operating in Two Loops

Two of the Outstanding Squads Are Vancouver Canucks and New Westminster Royals

Vancouver, Dec. 22. (CP)—Possibility that the Pacific Coast may produce the 1945-46 Allan Cup champions appears brighter daily as the hockey season progresses.

With one of the largest hockey leagues in the world, the Pacific Coast loop comprising nine teams in two divisions now operating, competition is keen and the calibre of play among the best in amateur circuits across Canada.

Two of the outstanding squads—both in the Northern Division—are Vancouver Canucks, bossed by Paul Thompson, former coach of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, and New Westminster Royals, piloted by Clarence Moher, who coached the Edmonton Junior Canadians last year.

Vancouver is currently leading the the Northern Division. New Westminster, the surprise squad in the League, after a slow start is running a close second.

Other outfits in the Northern Division are Seattle Ironmen and Portland Eagles. Seattle last year won the P.C.L. title and later downed Boston Olympics for the mythical United States amateur championship.

In the Southern Division, considered of lower calibre ,Oakland Oaks are leading the league, but have only a slight edge over Bob Gracie's Hollywood Wolves. San Diego Skyhawks are coasting along in third position with Red McKenzie's San Francisco Shamrocks and Los Angeles Monarchs trailing the pack.

Play All Games to Finish

The P.C.L. which plays all games to a finish and which like baseball leagues computes its standings on a percentage rather than a points basis has been drawing large crowds to all games. Near capacity crowds of more than 5,000 attend most games in Vancouver.

After the coast league playoffs, Vancouver and New Westminster will toss their chancees into the Allan Cup ring while the American squads will play off for the right to meet the Eastern United States champions in a national playdown.

sidered of lower calibre, Oakland teams will have to contend with the winners of the West Kootenay Senior Hockey league comprised of Trail, Kimberley and Nelson, before gaining the right to enter the Allan Cup playoffs.

In the Junior hockey battles, New Westminster Cubs, Nanaimo Clipper and the Vancouver White Spots, are operating this season as a Junior "A" circuit, known as the Pacific Coast Junior hockey league. However, it is doubtful if the loop champion will challenge in the Memorial Cup playdowns.

Toronto, Dec. 22—(CP)—When thousands of civil servants flocked to Ottawa in wartime, the capital faced the problem of providing recreation and entertainment for the newcomers. Part of the answer was supplied by the Civil Service Recreational Association at Ottawa, formed on the initiative of the civil servants themselves.

One of Canada's largest sports organizations — paid membership exceeds 10,000 — the association expanded quickly to provide a sharp contrast with the days when civil service recreation consisted of cricket and tennis on the lawns of Rideau Hall.

Now embracing almost every branch of sport in its activities, the C.S.R.A. rents such accommodation as four major bowling alleys on Sundays, rinks, gym space and club rooms in various parts of Ottawa. One ski club has been erected and another purchased. Other activities include swimming, boxing, basketball, table tennis and badminton.

Today the association has reached the point where its members are looking ahead to one huge sports centre to house all activities.

The present method of renting facilities throughout the city costs considerable money, which the executive feels could be used to provide better, unified quarters and more entertainment. Several prominent architects have offered to donate their services in planning a centre which would include a rink, swimming pool, bowling alleys and an auditorium for meetings and entertainment.

Chairman Wilf Burke definitely feels the possibility of a single centre is past the "dream" stage.

HAMILTON TIGERS ONE GAME AHEAD IN SENIOR RACE

Easily Defeat Owen Sounders While Toronto Staffords Beat Hamilton Pats

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers, defending champions, kept one clear game ahead of Toronto Staffords in the senior O.H.A. race by whitewashing the Mohawks at Owen Sound last night 5-0, the league leaders accounting for their sixth straight victory against no losses.

Dillon Brady scored what proved to be the winning goal in less than four minutes after the start of the engagement for the sole score of the initial period. Liscombe and Laurent added to the total by sinking a shot each in the second frame during which McCarthy was awarded a misconduct for the first penalty of the tilt.

Meanwhile the Staffords were subduing Patricias at Hamilton 9-3 to take their fifth victory in seven appearances, one more than the leading Tigers. The Pats were hardly a match for the fast-coming Torontos whose first-period fusillade resulted in four tallies. The count stood 6-1 going into the third chapter, with the Staffs outscoring the homesters 3-2 at a cruising pace after that.

Don Willson was the ace of the affair, scoring one third of the 9 Toronto markers. The others were taken in turn by Jamieson, Ingoldsby, Smith, Mann, Ezeard and Thompson. Those who counted for Patricias were Grasser, Barlow and their own Thompson.

Hamilton Pats are reclining in third spot of the standing with three wins and four defeats, four points behind Staffords.

RUN DOWN BY MOTORCYCLE

Oshkosh, Wis., Dec. 21 — (AP)—Arden E. Chellow went ice fishing — and caught a wolf. Riding his motorcycle on a frozen lake, Chellow saw a timber wolf leap from the bank and start for the opposite shore. He chased the wolf back and forth across the ice. Finally tiring of the game, the wolf halted abruptly and was run down by the motorcycle.

(For HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Friends of "Silent Tom" Smith, indignant at his being suspended for a year because his assistant sprayed the horse Magnific Duel with ephedrine before a race at Jamaica, are speaking their minds in no uncertain terms. They point out that Maine Chance Farms, for which Smith trains, numbers 22 stake winners among its brilliant string, and that it has no fewer than five top candidates for next year's Kentucky Derby, including Star Pilot, leading two-year-old colt, and Beaugay, the year's leading filly. In other words, they say, Maine Chance Farms, owned by a comparative newcomer to the racing game, Mrs. Elizabeth Graham, is making monkeys out of the old established stables which have been in the habit of dominating the sport.

Mystified that a member of the California wrestling set had been suspended for 60 days for "unbecoming conduct," George Herrick of the San Diego Tribune - Sun asks, reasonably enough: "Just what does a member of the scrambled ear fraternity do to be guilty of 'unbecoming conduct'—burn the arena down?"

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Toronto, Dec . 22 —(CP)—Prices Board officials held out hopes yesterday that the late shoppers may get the Christmas birds. "There are carloads of turkeys rolling in from Western Canada now," one official said. "They should be in time for delivery to the stores Monday. It will mean late shopping but prospects are bright for a last-minute cleanup."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 872
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A bridge expert steeped in conceit is one of the pests hard to take. He either extols his own feat or points out your only mistake.

We are all subject to mistakes. Some of us are even willing to admit it. But when a partner rides us too hard, we are human enough to find some satisfaction in his errors.

All through the session, south had been riding his partner for real or fancied misjudgments. Then this deal came up:

NORTH
♥J 7 5 4 3 2
♠A 6
♦A 7 3 2
♣5

WEST
♥K 9 6
♠Q J 10 8
♦Q 10 8 6 4
♣7

EAST
♥Q 10 8
♠K 7 5 3
♦J 9 5
♣9 8 3

♠9 4 2
♦K
♣A K Q J 10 6 4 2

South became declarer at a small slam in clubs. West led the heart queen. Declarer took that trick with dummy ace. After that the opponents took two heart tricks to defeat the contract.

Ordinarily, such a play may pass unnoticed. With unskillful players, it may even be expected. But when a player is critical of every act by his partner, he assumes an expert attitude.

North meekly asked if the contract couldn't be made and south sneered: "With that lead, not with a lead pencil." To prove it, the cards were laid out as before and the same lead was made.

"Try refusing the first trick," suggested north. And from there on, no matter how he tried, south sweated. But he could find no opponent defence that could stop the taking of 12 tricks.

If opponents lead a second heart, dummy ace wins and south is entered with a diamond. The third south heart is then trumped by the lone dummy club and the rest is a laydown.

Instead of a second heart, suppose opponents lead a trump or a spade or a diamond. South merely wins and pulls the opponents trumps.

With the diamond king gone, the dummy diamond ace is unblocked. So, dummy is entered with a heart to that ace. Dummy then leads the diamond ace and on it is sluffed the last south heart.

The very high rated are sometimes deflated.

Hollywood, Dec. 22. (AP) — Gregory Peck is sliced four ways and likes it.

There have been reports that Greg was disgruntled about an odd contractual arrangement whereby four different producers share the use of his screen face. But he tells me it isn't so.

"The system has worked out very well," he said. "So far I've worked hard, but luckily they have all been good pictures."

They have been good. "Spellbound," "Keys of the Kingdom" and "Valley of Decision" cost plenty and netted plenty. And "The Yearling" and "Duel in the Sun", in which he has been working simultaneously, are among the costliest pictures ever made.

Peck's only beef with the setup has been the lack of vacation time.

Greg's future is pretty well outlined. He has one picture to make for Benedict Bogeaus and Casey Robinson, three for Selznick, two for M.G.M. and three for 20th-Century Fox. After that —if he isn't playing character parts—he would like to make one picture a year and spend the rest of the time on the stage.

• • •

I heard that Lew Ayres is still undecided about the future now that he's out of the armed forces. He has no commitments with M.G.M., contrary to common belief, so it is doubtful if there will be any more Dr. Kildare pictures. Lew does not want to do any film unless it is one of a serious nature.

Lew may go into the production of serious pictures for himself. He directed at Republic studios some years ago. So far, he is concerned with getting readjusted to civilian life.

• • •

Universal announces it will make a picture based on the story of a returned war correspondent. How about someone making the story of the war correspondent in action. It has never been done. "The Story of G.I. Joe" was a picture about the G.I.'s not a story about correspondent Ernie Pyle. . . Mickey Rooney should be back from overseas within a few weeks . . . Moustaches are back in style for leading men. Robert Alda, Dennis Morgan and Gig Young are wearing the paste-on variety at Warners. . .Larry Stevens of the Jack Benny Show will sing two Jerome Kern songs in "Centennial Summer" . . . .

Robert Young is searching for a spot on which his four daughters can get together as a team. The two older girls are good on the piano, so he may organize a musical quartet.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 22 (CP) — "Vigorous" is the word with which New York critics and cognoscenti have most frequently described Maurice Evans' latest appearance in "Hamlet" since the Michael Todd production went on view several evenings ago.

The Shakespearian star, presenting his seventh Broadway portrayal of the Prince of Denmark, is using the acting version in which he played to service audiences in the Pacific during the war. The soldiers liked it, the New Yorkers agree with them.

The classic has been cut sharply and adeptly, omitting large chunks of the script—notably the grave-diggers' sequence — and editing other scenes tightly. The resulting "G. I. version," although losing some of the complex richness of the original and a few of the better-known lines, makes up a lot of lost ground in impact, directness and the rapidity with which one brilliant speech follows another.

Mr. Evans—whose role, except for the Yorick passage is left largely intact—has chosen to exploit the play's melodramaticm possibilities rather more fully than now is usual. Sometimes the exposition of the protagonist's subtler inner conflicts suffer by this treatment; but for all but a few keen Shakespeare scholars the added action is refreshing.

Few actors are gifted with a finer poetic diction than Mr. Evans, nor can many make their speeches at the same time as conversationally convincing and rhetorically rounded as he. Few hamlets can lay on rapier and dagger in as swashbuckling a stagefight or skip about in such finely-controlled frenzy as he reveals in the players' scene. His techniques are superb.

The lighter, more humorous lines—expressing derision of polonius, contempt of rosencrantz and guildenstern and sardonic mockery of Ophelia—are excellently delivered. In the more emotional passages, however, he sometimes works up more steam than feeling and—except for his brilliant reading of three or four of the soliloquies—seldom becomes a profoundly moving Hamlet.

The play wavers, too, in the bedroom scene—written as one of its highest points. Lili Darvas—an amusing enough little comedienne in other local appearances —lacks the dramatic stature necessary for the Queen's role and fails to give the support necessary to this crucial passage.

Frances Reid offers a sound Ophelia, though perhaps not as attractive as necessary. Thomas Gomez gets full value from the role of the King; Thomas Chalmers is a satisfactory Polonius; Leon Shaw, passes muster in the cut-down role of Fortinbras; Walter Coy plays Horatio with finesse.

NEXT AT THE BELLE — Dennis Morgan and Barbara Stanwyck as they appear together in Warners' sparkling comedy-romance "Christmas in Connecticut," scheduled to open Tuesday, Christmas Day, at the Belle Theatre. Also starred is Sydney Greenstreet.

Landslide Buries 70 People Asleep In Twenty Houses

Alabacete, Spain, Dec. 22. (CP) —A landslide buried 70 persons sleeping in 20 houses of Alcala Delucar, a town of 4,000 persons, two days ago.

Six dead and 40 seriously injured were taken from the houses. Little hope remained for the others. The landslide occurred at dawn after intense winds and rain. Alcala Deluca is 30 miles northeast of here.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night, and we were on the living room floor playing my game of Hopping the Atlantic and taking terns spinning the spinner and going back 5 spaces if the spinner stopped at Head Winds and going ahead 5 spaces for Tail Winds, and back 25 for Out of Fuel, and different things, and ma said, When I was a girl we played really instructive games, like Authors. It taught us the names of just dozens and dozens of books, and exactly which writer wrote them. I can still remember most of them, even though I've never read the books. Bleek House, Charles Dickens. The Taming of the Shrew, William Shakesbeer, she said.

Well how about if we play we're Docter Quizzer on the radio and ask questions to see if we know the answers? I said, and ma said, Now that's a very intelligent idea.

You be Docter Quizzer and I'll be the guy from the audience, Artie said, and I said, Okay, what animal wags at one end and barks at the other?

A dog, Artie said, and I said, Abslutely righht, you get 20 dollers. Do you want to take it, or would you rather take a chance for 50 dollers on the next question? I said.

I'll take a chance, Artie said, and I said, Okay, if you put your left shoe on your right foot, what shoe is left?

Your right, Artie said, and I said, And so are you. Here's your 50 dollers and a package of Electric Cawff Drops. Now do you want to try for the 500 doller question by answering which is the slowest, a snale or a torpedo, or do you want to be Docter Quizzer and leave me be the guy from the audience? I said, and ma said, I think you might as well both be Hopping the Atlantic for land sakes.

Which we kept on doing.

Time For New Look At Price Controls

The Financial Post

On more than one occasion Donald Gordon has declared that price control was a war emergency policy only and should end promptly with that emergency. The chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has also declared that in many lines even before the ending of complete control, substantial revision might be advisable.

With those views most responsible business men will be in agreement. They will also agree, judging by an extensive inquiry into the supply situation by The Financial Post which is published elsewhere on this page, that the time has arrived when the overhaul is due.

There is substantial evidence that the price control, in its present rigid form, now tends to restrict a free flow of standard goods, something that is absolutely essential if we ever dare hope to return to normal merchandising conditions. Because production of many of these standard goods is uneconomic under present restricted prices, manufacturers have been forced to turn to luxury or new lines on which the ceiling does not apply so rigidly. Because, too, our ceiling prices are so far out of line on many imports, the normal inflow of these has also dropped or ceased altogether.

To stock up empty shelves and get these standard goods moving again, some overhaul of price control seems, on the evidence, to be desirable. If something is not done along this line very soon, we may find ourselves in the position where we have successfully maintained the form of price control but not the reality.

The fact is today there is a vast difference between the increase in the official cost-of-living index and the increase in the amount of money a person must spend to get the things he wants and needs. Young women can readily buy $17 sweaters but they'll hunt far and long for the familiar $6 sweater.

That situation is arising at hundreds of points in our production and distribution system. So long as it persists, some costs of living will be far out of line indeed with the official figure about which we Canadians do so much speaking with pride.

With this Christmas buying rush out of the way, it is to be hoped that this whole problem gets searching review. The law of supply and demand and the competitive system have not been repealed. The whole of our history shows their power of serving the public well. The wild and weird distortions now taking place in our productive and distributive system certainly cannot be looked at with equanimity.

CHAPTER 22

"Very good," said his mother, unenthusiastically.

"I told you so," Norma said. "It's Jocelyn. Were having a party tonight, Dad. Friday night. Jocelyn lets me have a party every Friday night if I'm up in my lessons. We have fun! Pencil games. We nearly go crazy."

"That sounds like good fun," Philip said believing his ears. "How's Sandy?"

"Awful. Jocelyn will tell you. But there hasn't —been—one thing she could report to Mother!!"

"Look here, are you behaving yourself to spite Sandy or to please Granny and me?"

"To spite Sandy!" Norma answered joyfully. "We don't have dinner with you tonight, Dad; we have it in the old billiard room Friday nights, and we sing. It's fun!"

She presently went off to dress, and Philip followed suit Descending to the library at seven, he sent Lorenz to summon Joselyn. But upon entering the room he discovered that he was not to see her alone. Jane Kimberley, graceful, gentle, with touches of pure silver banding her dark hair, held out a welcoming hand. She had fine brown eyes. and tonight as she smiled at him they wore their most affectionate expression.

"Home again, Phil."

"It feels good, too. I'm going to stay here for a while now. I hear everything's going well."

"Everything goes well when you are back", Jane said. "My dear, dear old boy!"

She put her hands on his shoulders as she spoke, and Philip quite naturally put his arms about her and kissed the upturned face.

Jocelyn had come flying downstairs at his request. He was home again, and she would have a good report to make him of her trust. She was halfway down the last broad shallow flight of stairs when she saw, as if it were a little scene from a play, the two figures in the library; the tall woman with her dark silver-streaked head close to his shoulder; the tall man with his arms about her.

Jocelyn stood stricken for an endless minute. Then she turned and fled up the stairs to her own room, and stood there panting. The room went around slowly, more slowly. In the quiet and emptiness of it Jocelyn spoke aloud.

"So that's what keeps you here! So that's what you're thinking about, Jocelyn Britton? You idiot! You idiot! Well, now you know! Now at least you know!"

Every weekday morning at quarter to ten the car came around the drive to the front door, and Jocelyn and Norma were driven to Palo Alto, where in the dozen low-roofed, oak-shadowed buildings of the school they spent three hours at various studies: Italian, history, English letters. Jocelyn from the beginning entered into the lesson wholeheartedly; it amused and flattered Norma that, in the matter of languages at least, she was far ahead of her companion. She spoke fluent French and had had some years of Italian study; she had heard both languages spoken more or less correctly, and with Jocelyn's urging she could easily keep up with the class of four special students in which she was placed. The history and English work was easier for Jocelyn, and it was a pleasure to her to make it interesting to Norma.

Norma was abismally ignorant here; she loved to dash off a glib opinion of some historical event, expressing herself as to the basic causes of the Civil War or the injustice of the fate of Marie Antoinette, garbling some account she had heard of the Russianroyal tragedy, misquoting an English statesman who was always "right next to The King" in importance, who had "had a crush on Mama," or detailing at great length the story of an Austrian countess who was supposedly "the most beautiful woman they ever had seen in Europe." But she knew absolutely nothing.

Jocelyn put up with these fantasies, patiently, awaiting the occasional yet steadily increasing minutes when Norma was merely an intelligent, nice child, gradually drawing her to quiter manners and a less exaggerated speech. Norma, even at her worst, was always exciting, and the drama that was life at Hill Acres increased rather than lessened in fascination as the days went by.

There was something magnificent about the waste, the extravagance, the luxury of the place. And in the ideas and ideals of its inhabitants Jocelyn found the same elements—a constant wasteful abandonment of one pleasure-seeking plan for another. Norma's short life and her grandmother's long one had been broken into the irreconcilable scraps of a jigsaw puzzle: Antibes, London, somebody's yacht, somebody's villa in Hawaii, with the Freddy Wilkinsons in their adorable Palm Beach place, with the Blossoms in the gorgeous Irish castle, with the Mallards at Tahoe.

These had been only a fraction of Mrs. Fordyce's activities; to Norma's had been added innumerable schools, countless sessions with governesses and companions, countless educational lectures and musical Saturday mornings, encounters, always unsuccessful, with stepfathers, and a series of escapes and flights.

Both had interspersed these interests with much shopping, much trying of new clothes and new haircuts, whatever movies or circuses were available, baby dances, little-girl parties, older parties, dinners, bridge games, and then the sudden reappearance of all trunks and a start through the same procedure all over again. At seventeen, Jocelyn calculated, Norma had lived in about forty different places, and sets of apartments, and temporarily inhabited about twice that many more in hotels, trains, ships, clubs, schools .

To reconcile this particular girl to a quiet-home-life program that included plenty of study seemed to Jocelyn, at first, an impossible undertaking. But she soon discovered that beneath Norma's sophisticated and bored exterior was the hungry heart of a little girl who had been cheated of real affection and real small-girl pleasures. Norma was starved for love, for companionship and fun; she never had had any real interests in her life, and as Jocelyn somewhat doubtfully offered them she seized upon them like the child she was.

Jocelyn had begun with a small dinner party and pencil games every Friday night. At first she had to carry these affairs pretty much on her own shoulders, but by the third evening the young persons were enthusiastically managing them themselves, and when she broke up the meeting at midnight it was always under a storm of protest.

The next Friday after the one on which Philip arrived at home the party was such a hilarious success that Philip, coming home somewhat early for him, found them still laughing and circling about Norma in the hall at a few minutes before one o'clock.

Then the Parker boys' mother, one of the few women of the group who had won Jocelyn's admiration, asked if she might not have the same sort of party, with no cocktails and no punch, at her house on Sunday nights, and Norma exulted that she Norman, had started a fashion. "Graveyard brawls," Charles van der Lipp called them, in scornful allusion to their liquorless character, but he came regularly, and Jocelyn was pleased to see growing up between him and Norma a real brother-and-sister affection and understanding.

Miss Sanderson's alleged position was now that of companion and adviser to Mrs. Fordyce and superintendent of Norma's activities and those of Norma's youthful governess.

"You've got to stay, Sandy dear," Mrs. Fordyce, hating and fearing her, had said cordially. "You understand Norma's mother and you understand her, and no matter what temporary arrangement we have to make to keep the child quiet, we'll need you. Go drown yourself, you old ghoul," Mrs. Fordyce had added, in her soul.

But Sandy had accepted the meaning of the spoken words. She had settled down in a comfortable room, had begun to drive and irritate the maids to madness and had devoted herself to a discontented and scrupulous watching of Norma and Jocelyn. Everyone in the house knew that the moment either one slipped, Sandy would get in touch with Norma's mother, and machinery would instantly be set in motion to remove the child from Philip's guardianship.

But Jocelyn had this great advantage now, that Norma loved her. She would do nothing without her "Jotsy". Jocelyn had moved into rooms adjoining Norma's own, and often the young girl would come in at night when Jocelyn, thoroughly wearied after the strain of the day, would much have preferred to go on with her reading, to sit on Jocelyn's bed and talk on unwearied into the night. She was insatiable in her interest in Jocelyn's life; she wanted to hear all the details of her childhood, what she had worn, what she had wanted for Christmas, what her friends had been. Norma would be quickly jealous of the Sausalito cousins, if Jocelyn quoted Bam or Sissy; she wanted to visit them and know them all and have them like her. Her affection was overpowering at times; her constant desire for Jocelyn's company was anything but restful, but Jocelyn was wrapped in a dream now, and day by day what Norma seemed less important and less real.

For the first few weeks after Jocelyn's return to Hill Acres she had seen Philip not at all, he had been absent in Washington on a law case. During this time she had concentrated upon what she hoped to do for Norma, or at least begin to do for Norma, and when Philip returned she was secretly elated to realize that he found a real change in his daughter.

After that he was again often absent, but only for a night, or for a few days now and then, and when Easter holidays came he announced that he was going to take Norma and Jocelyn to Honolulu. They would be gone only fifteen days, eight of which would be spent at sea; they would have just a week in the islands.

This prospect seemed to excite Norma more than any other her life had offered her. It touched Jocelyn to realize that to be with "Daddy" and with her adored Jotsy on this trip would give it an element of freedom and pleasure that Norma's outings never had known before. The prospect of no lessons, no Sandy, no Granny, just sheer fun with the two persons she liked best in the world raised Norma's spirits to their wildest pitch. Jocelyn was not far behind her; she was experiencing in these days the deepest joy a woman's heart can know; she loved and she knew now that she never had loved before.

Just now she had come to care for Philip she could not quite have said. There was no necessity to say it, even to herself. She was too sure for that. Sure, without a word from him, without a kiss, without a touch of his hand. A thousand insignificant trifles became all-important when her memory joined them; his expression of amusement and affection when they talked of Norma; his consideration for her; his concern that she be made comfortable; the moments he spent occasionally with her and Norma, teasing them, questioning them, at ease as she never saw him at ease under any other circumstances, these and many other little circumstances like them confirmed in her the feeling that burned in her veins almost like a fever, that possessed her with hope and fear, self-contempt and a wild pride, day and night.

There had been almost from the moment of his return from the Washington trip a feeling that she knew at last for love. Everything he did and said thrilled her to the very depths of her being; at night when she was lying wakeful and happy and unhappy in the spring moonlight she remembered the tones of his voice, the casual glance he had given her from the bridge table when she and Norma went through the hall, the meaning that he somehow put into his most careless morning greetings, his briefest messages to her.

Spring was in full flood over the orchards and gardens, the blue mountains and the high meadows now. To Jocelyn there never had been such a spring, and as she heard Philip's quick step on the stairs, the gayer notes of his voice, his readier laughter she told herself that it was spring for him, too.

If she had needed any confirmation of her dream, she would have had it in a rude awakening when one Friday evening Mrs. Kimberley came out from a bridge game to watch the games and to ask Miss Britton for a word aside. The younger crowd was busy over a frenzied struggle with the Prince of Paris and his lost cap, and Jocelyn could go with the other women into the adjoining room and face her with merely curious eyes. But the moment she saw her guest's expression her own changed and her heart sank.

"Miss Britton, I've promised dear Mrs. Fordyce to speak to you, and I know you'll understand," Jane Kimberley began in a bright, nervous, yet determined tone.

"What is it?" Jocelyn asked.

"It's—Miss Britton, you know we are all very fond of you here, and that you and Sandy have done wonders for Norma. But you're not going to Honolulu on the fifteenth with Norma and Phil—Mr. Fordyce?"

Blood rushed into Jocelyn's face and she felt her throat thicken. "Why not?" she asked.

"Because—my de-ar-r-r!" Mrs Kimberley protested, with an eloquent spreading of hands. "A girl like you," she elucidated it, "can't possibly go on a trip with a—a stunning man like Phil, Without a great deal of criticism! You must see that?"

"I'm Norma's governess," Jocelyn offered, selecting words somehow from a wild confusion of heart and mind. "It seems to me that to go on a two-weeks' vacation with her and her father is a perfectly natural thing to do."

"It's an impossible thing to do," Mrs. Kimberley said. "Miss Sanderson is Norma's governess."

"Only in name. Sandy does nothing for her now, except now and then talk to her teachers about her school work, perhaps.'

"Excuse me." Mrs. Kimberley said icily. "Mrs. Fordyce calls you her 'companion.' "

"You're in love with Phil Fordyce, that's what's the trouble," Jocelyn thought. Aloud she said: "Mrs. Fordyce knows of this trip. She and Norma and I were buying clothes for it yesterday."

"And if the Countess von Sturnberg hears that Norma has gone to Hawaii with her father and a very pretty girl?" Mrs. Kimberley said, almost archly. Jocelyn had a strong impulse of hate; she felt the hot blood in her face again.

"It would be too bad to disappoint Norma now," she said. "She has set her heart upon going."

"It wouldn't necessarily mean that," Mrs. Kimberley said delicately. "I told Philip—Mr. Fordyce last night that if I could possibly arrange it, Jean and I would go. That would regularize the whole arrangement. In that case Sandy says she would go —it's just as well to have an older person around."

4 Adults, Child In Hospital After House Fire

Ottawa, Dec. 22 (CP) — Four adults and a 13-months-old child were taken to hospital early today, one of them in a serious condition, from a fire which gutted a three-storey frame rooming house in downtown Ottawa and left 32 persons homeless.

Fireman Lorne Macrostie climbed a swaying ladder to a third-floor window and rescued Mrs. H. Gibson, 38, Doreen Gibson 13, and a 13-month-old child. Returning to the smoke-filled room when told the husband, H. Gibson was still there apparently unconscious, Macrostie himself collapsed and he and Gibson were brought to safety down the ladder by other firemen.

In hospital were Mrs. James Bradley, whose condition is considered "serious", Mrs. Gibson, Doreen Gibson, Henry Johnston, 45, and the Johnstones' 13-month-old child. All suffered asphyxiation and shock.

Fire in Home Nearly Cost Life Of Young Child

Stirling—(Special)—Fire which commenced presumably as the result of an over-heated stove nearly cost the life of the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Bradley, Church Street, when Friday evening in the temporary absence of the parents fire started in the downstairs apartment and filled the upstairs with dense columns of smoke. The child was sleeping in an upstairs room and was carried to safety by the father.

When the fire started the mother was at the show and the father was in another part of the house speaking with his landlady. He heard the baby crying, and running into his own side of the house was horrified to find the living room aflame.

A bucket brigade was quickly formed and the fire brought under control but not before wallpaper and furniture in the living room were damaged.

COVERING

whose stout heart gave way Friday in a Heidelberg hospital.

And covering the 3rd was a newspaperman's dream, no less than covering Gen. Patton himself, a great field commander and one of the greatest actors ever to escape a Hollywood career.

Following the 3rd Army at times was a nightmare because it moved so fast and communications could not keep up.

It was the same trying to keep up with Gen. Patton himself. When the action was heaviest he usually could be found up front calmly cajoling here, laying down the law there.

"Here he comes again, drawing fire," front-line troops would growl as his jeep came tearing along a particularly hot sector. It was not so much the presence of the old man himself that riled the G.I.'s but the occasional blast of his specially-built air horn which sounded like the Queen Mary casting off.

Last spring, down on the Danube, a German fighter jumped the tiny artillery spotter plane in which he was flying. Gen. Patton's pilot "hit the deck" and the German, coming in for the kill, swept too low, failed to pull out and crashed.

"That crazy so and so, could have done better myself," Gen. Patton commented as he emerged with only a shaking-up in a rough landing.

A born actor, he packed the dramatic in everything he did — whether it was swearing over a field map in the middle of a critical campaign, whether he was administering a dressing down to a subordinate, or whether he was kneeling in the mud consoling a wounded soldier.

It was this time last year that he pulled one of his most spectacular exploits and one of the greatest military operations of all time — wheeling his army from the Saar to the Battle of the Bulge. Flying from a conference at Verdun, he returned to his headquarters at Nancy and announced:

"Gentlemen, I have asked you to do the difficult before. This time I ask the impossible."

He explained that he had committed the 3rd Army to help stem Von Rundstedt in the Ardennes.

"Now get going," he said and left his staff to figure out the details.

The 3rd did the impossible. Some of its units, attacking in the Saar in the morning, had withdrawn and were attacking the lower shoulder of the Bulge in Luxembourg the midnight of that same day.

FEARS DISPELLED BRITONS OBSERVE PEACE CHRISTMAS

Many Problems Lie Ahead but Dogged Islanders Confident With the Nazi Menace Ended

By STUART UNDERHILL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 22. (CP) —The lights are coming on slowly in a land that has lain under a wartime blackout for the last six Christmases.

Symbolic of its post-war austerity era, Britain still functions in a dimout, but in the half-light of transition from war to peace, her people can count their blessings and guess at the road ahead.

This is probably as gloomy a Christmas in many ways as any during the war, but under the widespread pessimism and grumbling over continued shortages and future uncertainties lies the calm assurance that Britain, as she always has, will somehow muddle through.

One fact transcends all others: the war has ended in victory and this Yuletide season can be celebrated without the fear of falling bombs or anxiety over friends and relatives on the battlefield.

As to problems that beset the average man at the year-end, they include:

1.—Housing—Britain needs 1,250,000 houses urgently, with a long-range goal of 5,000,000 new homes. She is getting them slowly, but construction will speed up as building experience is acquired and more labor is released from the armed forces. Also progressing steadily is the reconstruction of bomb-damaged residences, with the work of thousands of specially-employed laborers beginning to show results.

2.—Home Supplies—Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the board of trade, says he is "rapidly earning the title of a wicked uncle who seeks to take the clothes off the back of his children to sell them abroad."

Rationing Still Tight.

Sir Stafford exaggerated a bit, but one of the greatest disappointments here has been the fact that the end of the war brought no relaxation of rationing or increase in unrationed supplies, despite desperate shortages of almost everything.

Sir Stafford has warned that the requirements of Britain's export trade must be placed first, but he has also promised better home supplies in the new year.

3.—Trade—Britons were disappointed when they learned that despite, their sacrifices Britain's export trade in September declind to £29,600,000 ($133,200,000) a drop of £7,000,000 from August. Simultaneously imports fell £21,000,000 to £78,300,000, the lowest since February, 1943—and the Daily Herald (Labor) headlined the story: "So We Tighten Our Belts".

These are trade problems the average man reads about. More concretely he is up against inflated prices of all but the bare essentials, on which the government has placed price controls and finds his pound buying less and less. But there are signs of better times ahead. Train service is improving, now and then such a tidbit as an orange or banana turns up on the open market, and —if he's very lucky—sometimes he'll get his laundry back in two weeks instead of waiting six.

South Africa Would Adopt War Orphans

Cape Town, Dec. 22. (CP)—The Department of External Affairs has announced that the South African government is considering a plan to help selected children to come to South Africa from Allied countries in Europe.

The aim is to encourage the immigration of children who lost their parents during the war and arrangements are to be made for their adoption in South Africa. The scheme has a dual purpose of helping to receive some of the distress in war ravaged Europe and to build up South Africa's population and productive resources.

Share Reparations From West Germany

Paris, Dec 22 (AP)—The inter-Allied reparations conference announced yesterday that the United States and Britain each would be awarded 28 per cent of the remaining available reparations from western Germany

France will get 16 per cent. The remaining 28 per cent will be divided among 14 other countries.

Actually, the 17 countries will be dividing only 75 per cent of the available reparations from western Germany because previously the Potsdam conference pledged 25 per cent to Russia.

Package of Cigarette Papers Bore Signature of Lorne Harris Witness Testifies at Trial

Whitby, Ont., Dec. 22 — (CP)—Hint of a possible connection between the murder of a young woman at nearby Ajax and the slaying of a 'teen-aged girl at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., came Friday at preliminary hearing of Lorne Harris, 21, charged with murder.

Harris is charged with the murder of Mrs. Andrew Lyons, 23, mother of two children, who was strangled and criminally assaulted in her Ajax home Nov. 10.

Inspector W. D. Franks of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the Ontario Provincial Police, said in cross-examination he had made inquiries to police at Sault Ste. Marie where 18-year-old Theresa DeCourcy was found strangled Oct. 19.

Asked by defence counsel if he had connected the two murders, Franks replied: "I don't think I should answer that." The question was ruled out by the court.

"Have you proved to yourself that Harris, the accused, was in Sault Ste. Marie on the day of the murder there?" asked defence counsel Kenneth McDiarmid.

"No, I have not," the inspector replied.

Found in Bushes

(Body of Miss DeCourcy was found in a cluster of bushes near the Sault Ste. Marie technical school after a search when she failed to appear at a school dance. At that time police said the slayer was a maniac. The girl's clothing was disarranged and there were indications she had been strangled with a cord.)

In evidence as the second day of the preliminary hearing continued today, Franks said the bedroom in which the body of Mrs. Lyons was found bore evidence of a struggle. A housecoat worn by the woman had been torn down the back.

The Inspector said Harris could not be questioned the morning after his arrest because he was unconscious on the floor of the Provincial Police office here from the effects of liquor.

Harris was arrested at a dance here Nov. 10 a few hours after the scantily-clad body of Mrs. Audrey Lyons, 21, was found by neighbors in the bedroom of her home. She had been strangled and criminally assaulted, police said.

The preliminary hearing opened yesterday when it was testified by a Toronto police fingerprint and photograph expert that a package of cigaret papers found between an arm and side of the body bore the signature "Lorne Harris."

Over $52 Millions Have Been Loaned By Govt. Agency to Farmers Since '29

Ottawa, Dec. 22. (CP)— The Canadian Farm Loan Board, the Dominion government's loan agency designed to help farmers meet financial distress, has loaned more than $52,000,000 to 25,712 farmers since it began operations in 1929.

In reviewing its work in a report made public yesterday, the board said the average loan over its 16 years of operation was $2,000 and of the total monies loaned, $26,624,000 has been repaid by the farmers.

In the report the Board said that more than $2,000,000 would be loaned by the end of the current fiscal year. Money is loaned farmers to provide long term borrowers with short term credit on second and chattel mortgage security.

During 1945 mortgage payments have been good, the reports said and at March 31 of this year, 92 first mostgage borrowers out of 100 had no arrears. A total of 3,201 first mortgage loans were repaid in full during the year, an increase of 49 per cent over the previous year and an increase of 300 per cent over the average for the previous four years.

Since 1929, the cost of loaning funds has been gradually decreased from five per cent and money borrowed for loaning after March 31, 1945, has been obtained at three per cent from the Dominion government, the Board report said. This enabled the Board to make new first mortgage loans since that date at 4 1-2 per cent, the extra 1 1-2 per cent being estimated as necessary to cover administration costs, pay unavoidable losses and set up necessary reserves.

Mysterious Man Shoots and Kills Man and Woman

Allentown, Pa., Dec. 22. (AP) —A mysterious gunman shot and killed a man and his woman companion—the mother of two children—as the killer's victim was apparently escorting the woman home last night, police reported Friday.

The dead were Benjamin Clifford Bowman, Jr., 25, of Williamsport, Pa., and Mrs. Madeline Barnak, 21, of Allentown.

Police said there were no known witnesses to the slayings.

John Barnak, 30, husband of the slain woman, was being held for questioning. Barnak denied knowledge of the deaths though admitting he separated from his wife two months ago, police said.

Officers said the woman's father, Charles Schiffner, with whom she lived, heard the shots —"just two of them"—and rushed to the scene. He carried his daughter into their home where she died minutes later, police recounted.

Bowman was shot in the head, police said, and died immediately. One bullet struck Mrs. Barnak in the chest.

Vancouver Woman Writes to 1,000

Vancouver, Dec. 22 (CP)—The postman never fails to bring a fat handful of letters to a certain house in Vancouver. They're always addressed to Mrs. May Allison, but inside the salutation usually is "Dear Ma."

The letters come from almost every country where Allied soldiers have been serving. You see, Ma's family is more than 1,000 strong and it takes a lot of letters to keep up with every member.

Mrs. Allison had 11 children—nine daughters and two sons — when the war broke out. When her sons joined the armed services it was then Ma began her career as a one-woman entertainment unit. She estimates she has served thousands of dinners to servicemen.

Ma kept track of her giant family in a little black book which now contains addresses throughout Britain, the United States, British West Indies, South America, Mexico, South Africa and Newfoundland.

Last Christmas Ma had 30 guests for dinner and the postman brought her greetings from 300 lads she had previously entertained.

She knows definitely that three of her "sons" have been killed in action. But it's hard to keep up with casualty lists published in other countries. In some cases letters have ceased to come and she suspects the worst.

REHABILITATION COM. IS FORMED BY PREMIER DREW

Maj.-Gen. Bruce Matthews, Son of Lieutenant-Governor, is Named as Chairman

Toronto, Dec. 24 —(CP)— Premier Drew of Ontario Sunday night announced the establishment of a Provincial Rehabilitation Committee with Maj.-Gen. Bruce Matthews, son of Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario, as chairman.

Maj.-Gen. Matthews rose from junior rank and fought in Sicily, Italy, Western Europe and Germany.

Col. Drew said that under statutory authority a Provincial Rehabilitation Committee was appointed some time ago under the chairmanship of Dr. George Langford. It had done excellent work, he said, in laying the foundation for the wider task ahead, but it now had been decided to make the committee an independent public body.

Those who are directly or indirectly in the service of the government are to withdraw and the new committee will be extended to embrace the widest possible contact with all phases of the province's daily life, the Premier said.

"It will be the main purpose of this committee to plan rehabilitation activities in the wider fields outside of those which are covered by the pension and other provisions of the Dominion Government or the instructional classes administered by the Ontario Government," he added.

Will Co-operate.

"The Ontario Rehabilitation Committee will co-operate with all local rehabilitation committees throughout Ontario. It will seek to co-ordinate these voluntary activities in every part of the province so that by exchange of information and constant contacts the most effective results may be obtained."

No attempt would be made to establish any rigid basis of uniformity, nor would there be any interference of any kind with the many types of local organizations in existence. On the contrary, the purpose would be to co-operate with such local bodies as now are in operation and to encourage the creation of new committees in those communities where they have not yet been organized, on such a basis as is considered most suitable for the locality in which they are to operate.

Have Permanent Office.

The Premier said the committee would have a permanent office in Toronto. He urged all local committees to communicate with Maj.-Gen. Matthews and establish an effective basis of co-operation as soon as possible.

"I would also urge those communities where communittees are not yet in existence to establish some form of local committee as soon as possible," he continued. "If it is desired, Gen. Matthews will be glad to offer suggestions and assistance."

Premier Drew made the announcement during the broadcast of a Christmas message to the people of Ontario.

REV. J. McGUIGAN NAMED CARDINAL BY POPE PIUS

Archbishop of Toronto Sees in Elevation an Honor to Canada

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Most Rev. James Charles McGuigan, whose appointment as Canada's first English-speaking Cardinal was announced yesterday by Pope Pius, said Sunday night that the new honor would in no way affect his responsibilities and position as Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Toronto.

He is to receive the Red Hat, traditional symbol of his exalted office, at a Consistory in Rome Feb. 18.

"The overwhelming honor of which I am the unworthy recipient from the august hands of our holy father is in very truth the greatest surprise of my life," he said.

"To be ranked among the princes of the church, to be exalted to the Senate of the holy father, to partake of the eminence of those who throughout the years have kept the gates of the city of God —this is the meaning of the ineffable honor to which I have been raised.

"My heart is stirred to its very depths at the thought of my own unworthiness."

When named to the Archiepiscopal See of Regina at 36, Archbishop McGuigan was the youngest Archbishop in the Roman Catholic world. From Regina he came to Toronto in 1934 to head the most influential English-speaking Diocese of the church in Canada.

Enthroned in 1935

Appointed to Toronto Dec. 22 1934, he was enthroned on March 20, 1935. He was created Assistant at the Pontifical Throne and a Papal Count in October, 1943.

He said he accepted the honor as coming to the Dominion of Canada as a recognition of its enhanced place in the world and an anticipation of its future growth in power and influence in the councils of Christendom.

Tall Stories Received by Liars' Club Seek Recognition of Best Lie of Year

Burlington, Wis., Dec. 24—(AP) —"There are just as many liars as ever and the lies are getting better."

That's O. C. Hulett talking and it's no lie, he says.

Hulett, president of the noted Burlington Liars' Club, is winnowing some 6,000 letters to select 1945's biggest fibber for a New Year's announcement.

Hulett still is chuckling over the tale that won the 1944 lying laurels:

Capt. Hope Harrin of Arkansas, a member of the W.A.C., wrote in and gave the impression that she was a male soldier stationed in Paris.

This soldier had been stationed overseas two years and was lonesome. While working in an army commissary, he got an idea from seeing the dehydrated foods.

The soldier wrote to his girl friend and had her go to a dehydrating plant and get herself dehydrated. Then her mother mailed her to Paris.

"I sprinkled a little water on her and she was as good as ever," the soldier wrote.

Hulett dished out a few samples from the 1945 crop:

Writing from the "only Pacific island completely covered with water," a Sgt. Floyd Hobbs said that it rained so much that the Japs bombed their tents, thinking they were cargo ships.

Jake Taylor of Herminie, Pa., said that it was so cold last winter his wife had to build a fire alongside the stove to keep the stove fire from freezing.

A fighter control squadron was short of gas in Burma, wrote Cpt. August Nisterowicz, so the mechanics rigged the planes with skis. The Burma fog was so heavy that, to save gas, the pilots skiied and coasted on the fog.

KRESGE BUILDING IN WINDSOR BURNS, $1,000,000 LOSS

Slight Explosion Blows Seven Firemen Back From the Entrance, Fire Chief Injured

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 24. (CP)— —Damage estimated at $1,000,000 was caused in Windsor's largest fire in history early today when flames roared through the Victoria block at Ouellette and Chatham Streets, destroying the Kresge store and leaving the building a smoke-blackened shell.

Discovered shortly after midnight, the blaze threatened for a time to engulf adjacent buildings until firemen, battling with frozen equipment in zero weather brought it under control. Only injury, was Fire Chief Clarence J. Defields, who suffered a bruised hip in falling down a staircase.

Every piece of firefighting equipment in Windsor was called out and ambulances stood by as the flames leaped high above the roof and a strong east wind threw sparks in showers over into Pelissier and Victoria Streets.

At the height of the fire a slight explosion blew seven firemen back from the entrance to the Kresge store on Chatham Street, but unhurt, they redirected their hose nozzle into the fiery cauldron as windows cracked and broke about them.

Shortly after two a.m., the whole side and front of the building was a mass of fire as flames leaped from the windows. Then the second floor of the building gave way and crashed, sending a huge shower of sparks flying out into the street. At 2.40 am., the third floor and part of the roof fell in and by early morning only the walls were left standing.

Early today the hoses and fire trucks were frozen in deepening ice and police closed the streets to traffic.

In one threatened store a line of volunteers helped to remove a stock of fur coats to a nearby furniture store. Chairs in a barber shop west of the fur store were moved across the street.

Chief Defields said the fire started in the basement of the Kresge store but he was unable to say what caused it. The only way of entering the basement from the outside was through a steel door set in the sidewalk on Chatham Street.

BABY TO HAVE OPERATION

Long Branch, Dec. 24 —(CP)— Two-year-old Gail Mitchell, Long Branch's "blue baby," will be able to go to John's Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore as soon as doctors there complete arrangements to perform the operation, which, it is hoped, will permit her to live normally.

Reeve T. F. Carter of Long Branch announced this last night and said that $1,223 of a projected $1,500 fund started by the Long Branch council had been subscribed. The objective should be reached today, Gail's birthday, he estimated.

TO HANG JANUARY 3

London, Dec. 24 (CP)—William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce, whose appeal of his death sentence for high treason was dismissed by the House of Lords last week, will be executed at Wandsworth prison Jan. 3, it was announced Saturday.

A Merry Christmas

THIS should be an unforgettable Christmas. The thunder of the guns has ceased. The Martian shadow that hung a deadly pall over a war-weary world for the past five years has been lifted. Once again the glad joyful season of a peacetime Christmas is here.

This Christmas will be one of joyful homecoming and merry reunion for thousands of the crusaders of civilization who left hearth, home and family five years ago to make civilization safe for humanity. Vacant chairs will be filled. The glad happiness of little children exemplified in shrill cries of joy on Christmas morning will be enhanced with the inward glow of reunion with father, brother or sister home from the armed services.

But, too, there will be many vacant chairs which can never be filled. In the far-flung former bloody battlefields of Europe, Asia, and in the Seven Seas lie those heroes in spots which "will be forever Canada." Around many a festive board, as the Yuletide lights shine down in suffused glow, heads will be bowed in sorrow to the memory of a loved one who gave his all that little children might enjoy Christmas; that adults can hold high the banners of freedom, and that we as a whole can worship in the way we see fit.

It should be a Christmas of Thanksgiving and of Memory.

Let us then, this Christmas season reaffirm the faith we had in those who gave their best, and some of them their all, that we might carry the Torch of world peace and understanding on through the years to come. We have passed through the Valley of Death and ahead lies the rosy glow of the dawn of Peace heralding, what all free men hope, the sunshine of a world of good will where all can live together in the harmony of liberty and justice.

Let us also resolve that in the coming year we shall endeavor to look further ahead, in a spirit of tolerance and understanding. Great men of the United Nations are endeavoring to mold the peoples of the earth in a world-wide bond of amity and understanding. We, too, in our own small way can do the same with our fellow men as we follow the destiny of our lives.

When that great day comes, the nations of the earth can truly say one to the other, in the true sense of the words, "A MERRY CHRISTMAS."

Holiday Traffic Records Broken in Central Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

Despite the fact that reduced travel by servicemen and the long weekend preceding the Christmas holiday eased the usual strain on travel facilities across the Dominion, the long lines in front of railway and bus line ticket windows are not shorter than last year and trains and busses are no less packed.

Furlough travel definitely was down because of reduced military personnel at Canadian camps, but civilians seemed on the go in greater numbers to take up the slack.

Throughout Ontario, as elsewhere in the Dominion, stationmasters reported thousands on the move and the last minute rush was rapidly developing in many cities. A great problem was shortage of rolling stock and trains and busses were slowly falling behind schedule.

In Toronto, travel officials said traffic was a little lighter than last year but still were urging civilians to restrict their travelling as much as possible. Ottawa's Union Station has been crowded for four days despite extra ticket wickets.

Some Eastern Ontario points such as Kingston and Brockville said travel was lighter than the average for the six wartime years, but extra sections were put on all trains to handle additional crowds and bus lines were running many specials. Belleville reported heavy traffic and all trains running behind schedule.

Indications were that traffic over railway lines in Northern Ontario would break all previous records for holiday travel. North Bay reports said schedules were delayed on all three railroad lines — Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Temiskaming and Northern Ontario — and the last minute rush was expected to reach its peak early tonight.

Travel at St. Catharines, Welland and Niagara Falls was said to be normal. Travel from the United States through border cities was heavy during the weekend and trains into Canada were running behind schedule.

Chatham, Brantford and Woodstock report many persons are staying at home this yuletide and others are using their own cars for travel now that gasoline restrictions are lifted. A slight increase of passengers was noted and a rush is expected Christmas Eve.

Holiday traffic records are said to be unprecedented in Central Ontario with capacity loads arriving and leaving Kitchener, Stratford, Galt, Guelph and Owen Sound.

GEN. G.S. PATTON BURIED AT HAMM

Rests Among Graves of U. S. Soldiers in U. S. Army Cemetery

By RELMAN MORIN

Luxembourg, Dec. 24. (AP) — Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., was buried today amid the graves of many soldiers of his own command in the United States Army Cemetery at Hamm, five miles east of Luxembourg.

Representatives of eight countries whose victory Gen. Patton had helped win or whose freedom he had helped regain were in the cortege which wound through the crowded streets of this little capital on the way to the cemetery.

Gen. Patton's body was guarded by troops of the 3rd Army, which he had led in smashing down Germany's fierce counter drive out of the Ardennes across upper Luxembourg just a year ago.

Mrs. Patton accompanied the procession and stood beside her husband's grave during the military ceremony.

The General's body arrived at the Luxembourg station before dawn from Heidelberg by special train which passed through Mainz and Saarbrucken and across the scattered battlefields of Metz and Thionville, scenes of Gen. Patton's victories.

RUSSIA NOT LET IN ON SECRETS OF ATOMIC BOMB

End of Conference At Moscow in Sight And Good News May Be Expected

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 24 — (AP)—The end of the Big Three Foreign Ministers conference is in sight, informed sources said today, and good news may be expected to be announced.

The informants said that accomplishments have been achieved and probably would be announced simultaneously in Moscow, London and Washington.

Although the conference has reached its final stage, both U.S. Secretary of State Byrnes and British Foreign Secretary Bevin will be in Moscow until Christmas morning at least, it was said.

Meanwhile, it was reliably reported that Russia had not been let in on any secrets about the atomic bomb, although the foreign ministers were said to have discussed the United States-British-Canadian policy on world control of atomic energy.

An atmosphere of optimism continued to prevail as the conference went into its ninth day. The three ministers twice displayed their cordiality publicly last night at the Bolshoi theatre, by arising and clasping hands above their heads.

Adhere to Policy

It was understood that State Secretary Byrnes of the United States and Britain's Foreign Secretary Bevin have adhered to the policy set forth by President Truman, Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King for placing the control of atomic energy in the hands of a United Nations commission. Meanwhile production secrets on the bomb would be kept until effective controls have been established.

Extent of progress made on handling the atomic energy question was not revealed. However, informed observers have said current meetings of Messrs. Byrnes and Bevin with Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov are much more cordial than the stalemated five-power Foreign Ministers' Conference in London last October.

After a two-hour informal discussion by the three yesterday in Molotov's Kremlin office, Mr Byrnes had his second talk in five days with Premier Stalin. Mr. Molotov also was reported to have been at the conference.

Pope Urges Statesmen to Banish Hate, Vengeance and Dishonest Competition

By GEORGE BRIA

Vatican City, Dec. 24 — (AP) —The Pope in a world broadcast today urged statesmen to banish "hate, vengeance" and "dishonest competition" from the political and economic conferences restoring world peace.

The Pontiff spoke a day after he named 32 new cardinals including one from Canada, four from the United States, six from Latin America and one each from China and Australia. The membership of the College of Cardinals after the secret consistory Feb. 18 will reduce the traditionally overwhelming Italian majority to 40 per cent.

The Pope spoke to the Cardinals, replying to their traditional Christmas greetings. He said that the hatred and devastation of the war would long remain impressed upon the world.

He said statesmen probably never before faced such a gigantic task "to restore to humanity after 30 years of global war, economic catastrophe and boundless impoverishment — order, peace and prosperity."

Commenting on the creation of the new cardinals, the Pope said that the many nationalities included illustrated the universality of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Pope condemned totalitarianism as a source of war and appealed to the world to return to the principles of Christianity which he said were practicable, even in relations between states

Noting that many prisoners of war still were not repatriated, despite the end of the war, the Pontiff said that repatriation was being held up in some cases without just cause.

He spoke for 37 minutes, starting at 10 a.m. (5 a.m. E.S.T.)

"Totalitarianism is incompatible with true and sane democracy," the Pope said. "Like a dangerous germ, it poisons the community of nations and renders it incapable of guaranteeing the safety of individual peoples. It represents a continued danger of war."

In order to establish a basis of collaboration among nations, the Pope said it was necessary that an attempt "to create the omnipotency of money be abandoned everywhere."

He urged a return to Christian principles, saying:

"Let it not be said that this is not a realistic policy. Experience should have taught to everyone that experience of the law of God is the most real and concrete of all policies."

The pope appealed for humane treatment of political prisoners who "cannot be accused of any criminal activity beyond their political past."

This was the first time in six years that Christmas was being celebrated at peace — but not in a real peace, he said.

He expressed satisfaction that his new appointments had brought the College of Cardinals up to its full strength of 70, and said he regretted that other churchmen, however worthy, could not be appointed cardinals because of the traditional limit. He noted that the elevation of 32 cardinals would create a precedent for the number appointed at one time.

"The Catholic church is above nationalities — it is the mother of all nations and all peoples," he said. The church, he continued, radiated a unifying force to a torn and shattered humanity and rebuffed every attempt to dismember it or make it a slave of any one people.

The traditional Christmas reception for cardinals and members of the Papal Court took place in the Vatican Consistorial Hall. About 200 prelates, including 18 cardinals, attended, along with 3 cardinals-designate. The walls of the great hall were hung with red damask. The Pope, in white robes, sat erect in a gilded throne facing two microphones.

The Pope spoke in firm tones No outsiders were admitted to the Vatican during the ceremony.

Special detachments of Swiss guards stood at entrances to the Papal City. Telephone communications with the Vatican were suspended while the Pope was speaking.

Entire Business Block at Madoc Destroyed by Fire

Parents, Five Small Children, Forced to Flee in Night Attire

Madoc (Special) — Parents and five small children were forced to escape in their night clothes into bitter zero weather here early Monday morning when shortly after midnight an entire business block was gutted by flames causing approximately $30,000 damage.

Burned was the Frank Smith gasoline service station, the Charles Derry garage, the Anglican Guild rooms, and an upstairs apartment over the garage occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Roy White and their five small children. The White family lost their entire household furnishings and clothing.

Situated on No. 63 highway just north of the village bridge on Highway No. 7, the building was a mass of flames when the fire was first discovered and firemen had no chance to save the stone and frame structure. Efforts of firemen were hampered by the bitter 15 degree below zero weather.

Automobiles in storage in the Derry garage fortunately were rolled to safety, but tools and machinery in the garage were lost, while tools at the Smith service station were also lost. Furnishings at the Anglican Guild Hall were also mostly saved from the flames, but fire had gained too much progress for household furniture in the upstairs White apartment to be saved. Defective electric wiring was thought to be the cause of the blaze.

Christmas Music Featured By City Churches

The thunder and majesty of mighty organs; the harmonious blending of the voices of augmented choirs; the individual artistry of vocal soloist and instrumentalist, were welded into a melodic whole on Sunday as thousands of worshippers thronged city churches in a pre-Christmas religious celebration of the festive Yuletide season.

In many churches the beautifully impressive candlelight services featured the evening gatherings. In Bridge Street United Church, a junior choir under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs, made a melodic debut in its presentation of many beautiful carols and other Christmas music. Master Ronald Elmy and Mr. Bankier were featured soloists. Fred S. Deacon Honored In Impressive Rites

Last Tribute Paid by Mourning Citizens at Service at Bridge Street United Church

For the second time within a week a busy city and district paused in the rush and bustle of pre-Christmas activities to pay final tribute to a beloved departed resident.

While the city bowed its head in collective sorrow, the late Mr. Fred S. Deacon, secretary treasurer of the Deacon Brothers Ltd., here, was laid in his final resting place in snow-blanketed Belleville cemetery on Saturday afternoon.

From Bridge Street United Church, the edifice he loved so well' and for which he did so much, the funeral cortege slowly wended its way through crowded city streets, while sorrowing residents bowed their heads as a distinguished son made his last pilgrimage through the city which he loved and linved in for so long.

In the reverent hush of the crowded church auditroium representative people from all walks of life, business, the professions, industry, government and the man on the street sat in impressive silence as the funeral service slowly unfolded. Overhead the bells of the church tolled a solemn requiem. Outside the hum and bustle of a busy city seemed to subside.

Impressive Tribute Paid

Beautifully impressive in his simple yet sincere eloquence, the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of George Street United Church, Peterborough and former minister of Bridge Street, and a beloved personal friend of the late Mr. Deacon, paid reverent yet homely tribute to his friend.

Taking as his text from the Book of Samuel, "Thou shalt be missed for thy seat will be vacant," Dr. Semple said, "The late F. S. Deacon needs no eulogy of man for a wonderful life, for his living and deeds will forever remain a eulogy in this community."

"We should give thanks on account of his life. He was a great man for his 'ain folk' and his home life will ever remain a great benediction. Its beauty, tranquility and his gentleness of manner with his family group formed a golden relation that was characteristic of him."

The late Mr. Deacon will be greatly missed in this community, Dr. Semple said. "The magnificent business he built up here with his brother the late W. B. Deacon was regarded more as a great family circle than employer and employee. His honesty, impartiality, kindness, understanding and firm purpose wove a golden thread that bound one to another in the firm."

F. S. Deacon and W. B. Deacon were wrapped up in two grand personalities. The name of Deacon will be honored in succeeding generations, the minister said.

School Dream of Life

The high school was a dream of his life and he labored that the best be placed in classrooms so that education could have its rightful place here. Several groups will miss him. Young men, who were amazed at the lavishness of his kindness, will miss him. He held a large interest in amusement; in the field of competitive recreation and he was always the first to offer his services for the betterment of his fellow men and his community."

"His very life was a vindication of all that he believed. There are great men scattered in all parts of the world, who when they left Belleville carried in their pockets a Bible or a letter from F. S. Deacon asking them to be true to the Church and to work for Christianity. These men can rise and thank God for the life of F. S. Deacon and his ministry."

Kind to the Poor

He was good and kind to the poor especially at the Christmas season, Dr. Semple said, and many families are grateful for his generous acts and kindness. He served where the need was greatest.

"He will be missed in this church. I can't visualize Bridge Street without F. S. Deacon as its recording steward. His graciousness of personality, his warm smile, his cordial handshake endeared him to all of us. For F. S. Deacon was Belleville's first Christian. Goodness shone forth from him in a manner that impressed people. His secret was his great loyalty to Christ, the church and himself. Everything he did emanated from this loyalty".

May God deal graciously with the family and those who follow on so the family can hold high the Deacon banner carried so nobly by the late F. S. and W. B. Deacon. I thank God for their friendship, Dr. Semple concluded.

Large Circle of Friends

The Rev. Donald Amos, minister of the church spoke in brief eulogy to the late Mr. Deacon. "His circle of friends included the rich and the poor. We of the family of Bridge Street loved to call him friend for he served his Lord and Master in his many activities both inside and outside the church".

"Many young men retain a memory of his whole-hearted encouragement which was deeply rooted in his vision of life. He had confidence in mankind because he knew life."

"His outstanding gifts of character and personality were spent in the edifying of the congregation of this church. We thank God for a life lived in our midst that has set us an example to follow until we, too, are called to the higher service."

Choirs Offer Anthem

In melodic tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Deacon, the choir under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs, offered the anthem "The Lord is My Shepherd".

While the friends of the late Mr. Deacon were gathering for the service Mr. Alec Gordon, organist, played softly one of the movements from the Pathetique Symphonie of Tschaikowsky, and as the cortege was entering the church the organ softly intoned the hymn "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and following the service "What a Friend we Have in Jesus."

The brief committal service held in the Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Rev. Mr. Amos.

The honorary pallbearers included: Messrs. W. J. Morrison, H. W. Ackerman, H. J. Clark, J. J. Galloway, E. Reg. Hinchey, W. M. Leslie, S. H. Burrows, C. H. Sulman.

Active pallbearers were: Dr G. S. Cronk, Clayton Burr, Bruce Lattimer, Russell Wootten, William Moore, and Newton Thompson.

CANADIAN PACKED YEARS OF ACTION INTO 12 MONTHS

Leo Heaps Writes Diary of Adventurous Year as Paratrooper, Ecape Chief

Toronto, Dec. 24 (CP — "Escape from Arnhem", (Macmillans) is the autobiography of 12 fighting months in the life of Leo Heaps of Winnipeg, a young Canadian soldier who sought and found as big a role in the defeat of German armed might as any one man could hope for.

It is the running diary of an infantry officer who set out to prove his worth as a fighter for democracy and who mastered a jungle of red tape and misunderstanding to keep a D-Day appointment in Normandy as an infantry officer, to win the Military Cross as a paratrooper at Arnhem three months later, and to perform a risky, roving assignment for the British war office in Holland.

The adventure begins on a barrack-room bed near Aldershot, N.S., in April, 1944, when Heaps, once a private and then a reinforcement officer heard of a plan for farming out Canadians to the British army. By May 24, two weeks before D-Day, he was in England on invasion exercises with a battalion of the Dorset Regiment. After 12 days in the Normandy bridgehead he was wounded and evacuated to England where he made a rapid recovery.

While in the bridgehead, he was one of the first to see the bodies of Canadian soldiers shot after capture by German S. S. troops.

"When I arrived in Audrieu the bodies were still untouched," he wrote. "It was obvious they had been lined up against the wall and shot. The dead men lay like twisted rag-dolls, and some of them had been shot many times. This was war in all its horror."

Joined Paratroops.

His thirst for action sharpened, Heaps decided to join the paratroops. He applied, was rejected, and appealed in person to the general commanding Britain's airborne forces. By the end of August he was attending a paratroops training course and September 17 found him Arnhem-bound with a British unit.

After three or four perilous days as a liaison officer with the paratroop force Heaps was captured when he tried to swim the Lower Rhine on one of his missions. He was carried downstream by the current and made shore on the German-held north bank.

A few days later began the last phase of his adventuresome army career. With two others he escaped from a railroad cattle car taking prisoners to Germany, and went underground with the Dutch resistance, which helped him to escape to the British lines.

Back in England for recuperation, Heaps received carte blanche at the war office to continue with his plans to help organize the escape of others evading capture in German-held parts of Holland.

Making his headquarters near Nijmegen with a field unit of the British intelligence service, he co-operated with headquarters, 2nd. Canadian Corps, and 101st. United States Airborne Division, during the winter months in plotting the rescue of Allied evaders across the icy Rhine below Arnhem. In one operation alone, in which he played a big role, 140 cold, hungry paratroops were organized under the German's nose and brought to safety behind the Allied lines.

Intelligence assignment took him far and wide across Holland and Germany before and after the capitulation. The most vivid memory he brought back to Canada last summer, however, was the Belsen concentration camp, which he visited the day it was captured.

Permit System To Seek Jobs Is Rescinded

Ottawa, Dec. 22 (CP) — The permit system for workers seeking jobs—last of the unemployment regulations which held the rein on job-shifting in wartime —has been rescinded, thus reducing government interference with Canadian employees and employers to practically its pre-war basis.

In making the announcement Friday night, Labor Minister Mitchell said that a system of reporting to the National Employment Service, the peacetime equivalent of National Selective Service which operated during the war, had been substituted. Only these four regulations, described as the minimum necessary to preserving an efficient employment service, remain in effect:

1. Employers are required to notify the National Employment Office of all vacancies in their establishments.
2. Employers are required to report to the National Employment Office all additions to their staffs.
3. Unemployed workers seeking jobs are required to register with the National Employment Office.
4. A person terminating employment, either employer or employee, is required to give seven days' notice.

Up to now all male workers seeking employment were required to obtain a permit from the National Employment Office to seek a job.

During the war the permit system also affected female workers and employers were restricted in advertising for workers through National Selective Service, which recently changed its name to the National Employment Service. Both these latter regulations were recently rescinded and with the lifting of the permit system on male job-seekers, regulations returned practically to their pre-war basis.

Labor Minister Mitchell said that employment regulations had been constantly amended since the end of the war with changes in the manpower situation. The four remaining requirements for job-seekers and labor-seekers would remain in effect "in the interests of preserving an efficient employment service."

They were considered the minimum to give local employment office a reasonably complete picture of the manpower supply and demand and to enable them to render efficient service.

2 Keepers Taken Off Lighthouse By Small Boat, Tug

Erieau, Dec. 22. (CP)— Two lighthouse keepers who faced a lonely Christmas on Channel Light in Lake Erie reached the mainland last night on the ice-encrusted Tug Beverly R. Goodison.

The tug weathered high seas, floating ice and one of the season's most severe snow storms to reach port after two previous attempts to rescue the men failed.

On the two previous attempts the tugs and its five-man crew could not reach the lighthouse, but today a small boat carried the imprisoned pair a short distance to the rescue tug.

The men, W. A. Moore, of Leamington, Ont., and Radio Operator Jean Paul Roy, of Quebec, had enough provisions to last two weeks.

Sent to Trial On Murder Count

Whitby, Dec. 22 (CP) — Magistrate Frank S. Ebbs yesterday committed Lorne Cecil Harris of nearby Ajax for trial at Spring Assizes on a charge of murdering Mrs. Audrey Lyons at her Ajax home last November 10.

Police said the young woman was strangled to death and criminally assaulted.

Inspector W. D. Franks of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the Ontario Provincial Police said in cross-examination he had made inquiries to police at Sault Ste. Marie where 18-year-old Theresa DeCourcey was found strangled October 19.

Asked by defence counsel if he had connected the two murders, Franks replied: "I don't think I should answer that." The question was ruled out by the court.

"Have you proved to yourself that Harris, the accused, was in Sault Ste. Marie on the day of the murder there?" asked defence counsel Kenneth McDiarmid.

"No, I have not," the inspector replied.

(Body of Miss DeCourcy was found in a cluster of bushes near the Sault Ste. Marie technical school after a search when she failed to appear at a school dance. At that time police said the slayer was a maniac. The girl's clothing was disarranged and there were indications that she had been strangled with a cord.)

SHE SAVED HER HAT

Ponca City, Okla. (CP) — Mrs. D. A. Shaffer is nursing some sore knuckles. She made a quick backhand grab for her hat and rammed her fist into the open mouth of a man behind her.

Four Killed In Short-Lived Revolution

Panama City, Dec. 22 (AP) — At least four persons were killed and one wounded early today in a short-lived revolutionary attempt, which a government statement charged was carried out by followers of former President Arnulfo Arias.

The attempt was made a Colon where a small band of armed men tried to seize the national police station in a midnight attack.

An official announcement said the dead included one police officer and "three or four of the attackers." Another police officer was wounded.

The government announced that the attack was quickly broken up and that order had been restored.

General Marshall At Chungking

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Dec. 22 — (AP) — Gen. George C. Marshall, assigned by President Truman to end China's internal strife, reached Chungking today and is expected to meet President Chiang Kai-Shek in a series of conferences beginning tomorrow.

President Chiang and Madame Chiang, who entertained Gen. Marshall yesterday at Nanking, are scheduled to arrive tomorrow. Premier T. V. Soong and other notables — including Gen. En-Lai, head of the Chinese Communist delegation to forthcoming peace parleys here — greeted Gen. Marshall ceremoniously at the airdrome today.

Premier Soong accompanied Gen. Marshall to his quarters for an unscheduled, informal lunch with the new United States envoy and a few other officials.

Although Chinese Communists have proposed an immediate unconditional truce, and offered to put the oral proposal officially into writing, reports from the north indicated no cessation of hostilities thus far.

Associated Press correspondent Spencer Davis in Peiping quoted Maj.-Gen. Hu Chung - Ching, spokesman for Chinese 11th war zone headquarters, as reporting continuing fighting between Communists and National Government forces.

Communists, it was announced at a press conference there, were making every effort to consolidate positions in central Hopeh province and allegedly were confiscating supplies from farmers and merchants of that area.

Twenty thousand Communist troops were reported concentrated along the Tsinan-to-Tsingtao railway in Shantung province, government spokesmen told Davis.

BANTU CENSUS

Pretoria (CP) — Major P. van der Byl, minister of Native Affairs, has announced that a complete census of the African (black Bantu) population in the Union of South Africa will be taken next May and will include new tabulations which will throw more light on native life and progress.

Collector Proud Of 6,000 Buttons

Yorkton, Sask. Dec. 24 (CP) — If you lose a button from your coat, Mrs. Jake Meekma of this eastern Saskatchewan community is the person to help you. She has 6,000 buttons, none of them alike.

She began collecting buttons about four years ago. Now the four walls of one room of her home are covered by cards of colorful buttons of all shapes and sizes, and from 12 different countries.

Mrs. Meekma, who belongs to a button collectors' club in the United States, says one of its rules is that the collections must be displayed.

"You can't put them in a box and shove them under the bed and call yourself a collector," she said. Button collecting has become one of the most popular hobbies in the United States, and the club to which she belongs has 300 collectors in one state.

From 25 to 30 buttons are sewn on round cards, called "plates." The most outstanding button usually is sewn in the centre. There are two main classes—novelty buttons, solely for decoration, and those made to go thru' a button hole or loop. Those made for use are more valued by collectors.

The favorites of Mrs. Meekma's collection are soft water pearl buttons, of which she more than 400. She has 75 buttons from different uniforms, including army, railway and Salvation Army buttons.

Hardly a week goes by that someone does not call on Mrs. Meekma to see if she can match a button. She not only is able to do so but also offers to sew the replacement on.

The Beaver Creek Free Methodist Sunday School met for their annual Christmas service at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin McCoy on Thursday evening. Following a program gifts were distributed to the Sunday School class and lunch was served.

A delegation from Marmora High School Board, composed of Chairman Eugene Brady and Mr. R. E. Bonter and Mr. H. W. Sabine visited the Deputy Minister of Education in Toronto last week to discuss the matter of a new high school for Marmora. The interview was satisfactory, and the prospects good for a new school and also a reduction in the school rate.

This Merry Christmas

Again the Christmas season has come with the great annual festival. Originally it voiced the joy of the people of the early Christian Church in the life and works of Him the anniversary of whose birth is observed at this time. With the generations and centuries it has spread until its message is heard in all parts of the earth. It is the world's greatest festival, associated with the birth of Jesus whose life has made the greatest impression upon world history. It speaks a universal language in men's hearts and lives.

The life of Christ is one of the great events and facts of history and His birth is for hundreds of millions of people an event to be celebrated with joy and thanksgiving for the riches and blessings which flowed from that life. The richest flowering of human life has been dedicated to faith in Him and in His message for humanity. Historians, poets, prophets, painters, sculptors, have given their best to humanity under the abiding influence of His message. Christianity has properly molded the lives of hundreds of millions and the story of the Nativity has always appealed to followers of Him.

It is the centre of the thought and worship of Christians in the entire world at this time.

Christmastime makes an irresistible appeal to man. It satisfies his loftiest and most exalted thoughts. It has spread the gospel of good will the world over. It brings members of families together though long divided by distance and by the work men and women are performing here and there throughout the earth. At its very basis is the enthronement of the child in the family as symbolized by the birth at Bethlehem.

One of the finest customs associated with this blessed time consecrated to the observance of the birth of Jesus, is the giving of gifts. The merry heart must give something to bring joy and happiness to others.

This Christmastide is one that will live long in the memory of people because the most devastating war in history has been closed and the unholy enemies, Germany and Japan, whose spirit was evil itself, have been crushed. Now the United Nations are endeavoring to inspire in the defeated peoples true ideals of international relations. The ending of the war has released from service scores of thousands of men and women service folk who have arrived home and will mark this Christmas with their families and friends after years of absence from Canada. Accordingly the Christmas spirit will be realized about the ancestral hearth in a manner inspiring to the sacred institution of the family.

The mood of Christmas is the mood that should at last triumph over all international relations. In the spirit of Christmas mankind should be able to solve differences and find happiness in world peace guarded by the good will of the race of men.

Christmas speaks this message for the world. Its message is one of happiness and the word "merry" has for many centuries been associated with the greetings spoken yearly at this time. Again in 1945 the salutation is heard across the earth—"A Merry Christmas!"

Gen. Patton's Death

The passing of General George S. Patton is mourned by the people of his own country and by those of all other Allied countries. The leader whose remarkable achievements in battle on the Western Front from Normandy to the end of the struggle amazed the world died as the consequence of a traffic accident while on his duties in Germany. The irony of his death in this manner since he had so often risked his life in battle is particularly tragic.

He was a leader of great force of character as the Montreal Gazette points out in speaking of "the extreme forcefulness of his character and the faults of his strength." "It was he that carried successful campaigns through Africa and Sicily, across France and through the Siegfried Line into the heart of Germany. He impressed the Allies and the enemy alike by the vigorous skill with which he could thrust his armored divisions to their objectives, combining a massive attack with a sensitive alertness to unexpected threats and opportunities/. . . But this very quality of aggressive power found expression at times in incidents that tried the temper of his colleagues and even provoked public incidents. But these trying faults were generally recognized by his superiors and by his subordinates as really only 'the other side' of his energy and initiative. It was always realized that as a commander he had an amazing competence upon the field of action and, if he was hard on his men, he was also hard on himself."

This leader had his softer side and was easily brought to tears by the people's recognition of his achievements. Once he said that for every man he had spoken a harsh word to, he had patted five on the back. He also possessed a deeply religious spirit."

His great accomplishment in the war is a memorial which will live in his own land and it will be a great fact in military and world history.

A Ship from Canada

(London News Chronicle)

It was a cheering sight in the great King George V dock.

The white hull of the Norwegian ship Abraham Lincoln, chartered by the C.P.R., lay alongside with all her hatches off and hugh cranes were lifting out tons of food, with a crowd of newly returned dockers working on until after dark.

The Abraham Lincoln has brought the first consignment of the hundreds of thousands of tons of food that Canada is sending us under her generous Food for Britain plan.

Here is some of what the ship has brought — 3,000 tons of wheat, 306 tons of flour, 30 tons of rolled oats, 1,288 tons of bacon and hams — and a host of other things, including 23 tons of Canadian furs and 200 tons of wood splints for making matches.

We owe a big debt to this vessel. She is coming across freely now—but Capt. Olsen and First Officer Johannessen have spent the whole of the war in her bringing food and ammunitions to Britain. She made this perilous passage over 50 times during the war years, and was generally leader of the convoy with the Commodore aboard her.

"Great Past . . . Great Future"

(Montreal Star)

From the text of an address by Premier Attlee of Great Britain: "We are receiving as a Government plenty of criticism just now, but I am persuaded that, underlying all our disagreements, there lies the fundamental unity that brought us through the war and will bring us through the difficult years of reconstruction. The great contribution of this country to civilization is not exhausted. Our conceptions of freedom, democracy and the Rule of Law and our moral standards are things of permanent value to the world. We will make our contribution, mindful of our great past, but believing in our great future."

Any words in commentary would be superfluous.

How Japan Did It

Japan was able to finance her war very largely through profits gained from her silk industry. Her own, and the silk industry of which she robbed the Chinese. There's every evidence to substantiate the belief that, without silk, there'd have been no ensuing bloodshed in the Pacific. The Nips mustn't be allowed to build up that business again — at least, not until they've gone through a long, long period of repentance.—(Windsor Star.)

Newspaper Facts

The keen interest which daily newspapers take in municipal government keeps local politics honest, says Mayor Robert H. Saunders of Toronto. Mayor Saunders denied that newspapers try to dictate to local officials.

SO UNTO SHEPHERDS

The angel of the Lord passed by
The magistrates of worldly power,
The rich and great who scorn the sky,
And came upon that midnight hour
To watchful shepherds who'd believe
The word of that first Christmas Eve.

The angel knew that men of pride
Are slow to listen and perceive.
The inn was crowded, but inside
Was none to witness or believe
To shepherds, watching flocks afield,
The birth at Bethlehem was revealed.

Proud men by interest blinded are,
The grip of self on them so strong
That none would follow Bethlehem's star
Or hear or heed angelic song.
So, unto shepherds that glad morn
Was told: "The Prince of Peace is born!"

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 24 (AP) — I reported in Friday's column that Prime Minister Attlee, Britain's new socialist chief of state, had received me at 10 Downing Street and that I had sized him up as being an honest man.

Today I want to go a step further in examining his character, since it is a matter of utmost importance to the entire world.

Mr. Attlee is the master chemist in a leftist politico-economic experiment which, if it should go wrong, would have a tremendous repercussion not only on Britain but on the rest of the globe.

The difficulty, as I see it, is that chemist Attlee is experimenting with an untried mixture. And of course honesty won't prevent it from blowing up in his face. However, the steady hand that comes from integrity of purpose certainly is vital.

It is interesting to find that the prime minister is deeply religious. Indeed his whole approach to politics is said to have been religious.

Incidentally Mr. Attlee has a brother who is a church of England clergyman. The premier's father was a successfull lawyer, and the son received a broad education, including the advantages of Oxford. It was while he was in the university that he entered social work, and spent much time in boys' clubs in London's poverty-stricken east end.

In this manner young Attlee exemplified his conviction that religion should be practical. Gradually through his religious and social work he drifted into politics. They say he has small personal ambition and never has pushed himself, but the Labor party recognized his integrity and thrust him into leadership.

His home life fits into this picture.

Mr. and Mrs. Attlee are home folk. They like young people and they have four of their own—a son in the merchant marine, a daughter in the women's army service, another in a training college for nurses and the youngest in boarding school.

Mrs. Attlee is a housewife. She doesn't mix in politics and her only public activity is the Red Cross. She is so much of a home body that when the Attlees had to move into the official residence at 10 Downing Street, they promptly stood tradition on its head by turning the third floor of the ancient mansion into a cozy little apartment.

There they can make a home—something not even a magician could do with the great, austere rooms of the two lower floors which have housed generations of prime ministers. These floors are reserved for official entertainment, but the Attlees live way up top where the housewife can take a hand at cooking when she wants to, which is often.

Well, there you have the man who is trying to turn Britain into a place "fit for heroes to live in." Will he make his socialist plan work? His opponents, and even some of his more conservative supporters, are uneasy over this adventure into the unknown. But I have yet to find anyone—friend or political foe—who doesn't believe in his integrity.

Tire Rationing Lifted in U.S.

Washington, Dc. 22. (AP)—The rationing will end in the United States at 12.01 a.m. Jan. 1, Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced.

He said the tire rationing program can be terminated then "because production of tires, particularly passenger tires, the shortage of which has been most acute, has increased steadily during the past two months, reaching an output for this quarter of about 11,000,000."

Holders of tire purchase certificates will have until Dec. 31 to turn in ration coupons to dealers and obtain passenger or truck tires before unrationed sales begin.

TO DUMB FORGETFULNESS A PREY

Excluding the failure in the memory that occurs so commonly in prolonged grave illness and in advancing age, the most frequent cause of forgetfulness is anoxia, I believe. Anoxia is oxygen deficiency, that is insufficient supply of oxygen to the functioning tissues and cells of all the organs as well as the brain centres. I base this belief largely upon such studies as those of Haldane and Priestley (Respiration, published by Yale University Press, '35).

The authorities named observe that in many instances of prolonged grave illness or senile decline: "As the slow onset of anoxaemia (oxygen deficit in the blood) advances, the senses and intellect become dulled without the person being aware of it . . . ."

That is something to remember when dealing with such invalids. It accounts for many of the odd or irrational things they say or do. Often, too, their power of judgment is even more impaired than their power of memory, and hence they may make peculiar wills or dispositions. To ordinary observers they are "of sound mind" but their judgment is impaired nevertheless.

The bad habit of costal or chest breathing which most of us have acquired from bad education, together with the inactive or sedentary life most of us lead, keeps us close to the borderline of anoxia or oxygen deficit of the time, and hence subject to poor memory.

It scarcely follows that "deep breathing" wil prevent or correct oxygen deficit and the manifestations mentioned, though I do believe that regular practice of natural breathing (the Belly Breathing exercise, as described in booklet "How to Breathe" mailed on request if you inclose twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope) may in the course of years at least improve the breathing habit if not re-establish natural function of the diaphragm. In the same direction, it seems to me, if every child in the country could have the boon of elementary education or schooling that might correct the bad breathing habit. As we do these things now, physical education is farce in our public schools and the only effective instruction children of school age get about themselves, their physical bodies and how their bodies work or how to keep them in good working order for the duration, is the bunk the all-powerful commercial interests provide for them. In the few public schools where, through the efforts of courageous educators, a minimum of physical training is required for passing or graduation, the ignorance of parents too often enables the child to evade what these folk regard as somewhat silly gym classes and whatever newfangled subjects they lump in the same category.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Heart Trouble

Man claims he has heart trouble but after ten years of this the opinion is that his heart is normal and his trouble is imaginary or nerves. The man has had bleeding piles for twenty years. (F.B.W.)

Answer—The man should have the piles cured to stop the bleeding—maybe that will permit him to recover health and strength. The bleeding piles can be successfully and painlessly treated by the injection method, provided a physician skilled in that method gives the treatment. Beware of charlatans who have to canvass the public for customers—remember, if a doctor is good his satisfied patients send their friends to him and keep him so busy that he doesn't have to go out into the highways and byways trying to lure unwary customers to his shop.

Potted Ham

My husband has picked up quite a bit of extra money in the past several years playing bit parts in the movies. His best chances have been in dancefloor or cabaret scenes, but he is getting quite a pot lately, so send the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight."

(Mrs. M.H.)

Answer—For simple overweight or nutritional obesity, send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for the pamphlet "How to Lose Weight."

CZECHS HUNGRY FOR EDUCATION

Wife of Minister to U. S. Says They Seek Books More Than Food

By ADELAIDE KERR

New York, Dec. 24 (CP) — "In Czechoslovakia today the hunger for the printed word is greater than the hunger for food."

That report comes from Mrs. Jan Papanek, American-born wife of the Czechoslovakian minister plenipotentiary to the United States, who is also head of the Czechoslovakian Information Service in this country. The Papaneks have just returned from a two months' visit in Czechoslovakia.

"I saw constant evidence of that terrific hunger for information," Mrs. Papanek said. "There are four times as many students enrolled in Czechoslovakian universities and high rank technical schools now as formerly—90,000 students compared with 25,000 before the war. The professors are carrying four times as great a load of lectures as they did formerly. They used to be the leisure class. Now their work is almost back-breaking.

"In Prague the United States Information Service opened a reading room in a small store stocked with periodicals. All day long queues stand in front of that room. From 800 to 1,000 people use it daily, poring over the publications and scribbling notes as fast as they can.

English Popular.

"Remember that these periodicals are written in English. Many more people seem to have learned English during the war. In Prague I was invited to speak before the English Speaking Club founded by university students. I accepted, expecting an audience of 60 or 70. I stepped into an auditorium jammed to the windows with between 600 and 700 students.

Mrs. Papanek said that Czechoslovakia still faces a serious physical hunger problem, that only bread and potatoes are unrationed and that people get only one small piece of meat a week. But she said that U.N.R.R.A. gifts of tractors, harvesters, horses and cattle had enabled the people to plant some crops and stock some farms, and thus to look forward to better food conditions next year, though the present winter promises to be one of great privation.

Mrs. Papanek, a Chicagoan, is a graduate of Northwestern University and a former social service worker. She met her husband in the early twenties during a visit to Paris and they were married several years later.

"The health of the Czechoslovakian children is one of the country's gravest problems today," Mrs. Papanek said. "A survey of the national Ministry of Health showed that three-quarters of a million children in a population of 15 million are suffering from malnutrition and resulting diseases. Many of these are still living in damp cellars and other unhealthful places. Because of the lack of transportation and other things many cannot be given adequate care. What the fate of these children will be no one knows."

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 23 (CP) — The feeling in diplomatic circles here is that a European and not a Canadian or an American will be chosen as secretary-general to the United Nations organization.

With the United States chosen as the permanent site for the organization's headquarters, it was believed that the nations would balance matters by giving one of the most important posts to a European.

Hon. L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States; Norman Robertson, Canadian undersecretary of State for External Affairs, and Hume Wrong, assistant undersecretary, have been mentioned as possible choices for the posts.

It is understood, however, that even Canadian government officials do not expect the post to go to one of these men.

The government is expected to announce shortly the names of the Canadian delegates to the general assembly meeting of the organization meeting in London, on January 10. At previous organization meetings the Canadian delegation has been selected from the various parties in parliament.

Japanese:— Efforts to repatriate Japanese now in Canada are expected to centre first on those who are definitely in repatriation categories. Already a number of these people — Japanese nationals and Canadian-born Japanese who had asked for repatriation and not revoked their applications before Japan was defeated, is well underway. The first shipment of some 800 is expected to leave next month.

Once work is completed on those who now are elated for repatriation attention will turn to those in doubtful categories. There so far has been no indication of when a three-man commission, provided for in an order-in-council, will be made to rule on the loyalty of Japanese who wish to remain in Canada.

Government: — The similarity of opinions in Britain and Canada on the need for a world government for the maintenance of world security is not the result of any drive by the commonwealth to have such a body established.

Foreign Secretary Bevin and his predecessor, Hon. Anthony Eden, recently suggested in Britain there was need for a world government. The need for such a body was likewise emphasized recently by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and John Bracken, Progressive Conservative party leader.

These opinions were said to arise out of the recognition that such important problems as those arising out of the use of atomic energy could not be handled on any regional or national basis. To have effective control there would have to be some universal body, recognized by all nations, which would have power to prevent the use of atomic energy for war purposes.

CAUGHT BY CAMERA

London (CP) — A press photographer's flashlight photo taken in a department store showed a woman shopper slipping a model airplane into her shopping bag. She was sentenced to one month's imprisonment.

THEIR ROAD TO Enjoyment

Two million or more motorists from the States visit us each year . . . thousands for the sheer beauty of our countryside. Let's see to it that our hospitality matches its perfection.

WHAT CAN I DO?

Well, everybody has his own way of showing hospitality . . . whatever you do, make sure it adds up to "drop in anytime, we're glad to have you!" Here's a set of tips suggested by an Ontario hotelman.

1. Find out all about what your own neighborhood offers and become a booster.
2. Write your friends in the States about Ontario . . . show them that you're really proud of it.
3. Try to make all our visitors glad they came . . . and be really enthusiastic about it.
4. If they ask for information or directions, take time to answer them fully and graciously.
5. In any business dealings you may have with them, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, just follow the "Golden Rule!"

On Sidney Bay Hill, Bruce Peninsula, Ontario.

Whether they come from the Border Cities, along the famous Blue Water Highway, from Niagara through Ontario's fruit land or from the East along No. 2 or No. 7 Highway, U.S. visitors to the Bruce Peninsula will enjoy good roads, good hotels and some of the loveliest scenery in the world.

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! Actually the Province of Ontario, in pre-war years, profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the much publicized gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that this business goes on growing.

We all share! Everyone benefits from the income our tourist business represents. This diagram, based on figures supplied by the Hotel Association, shows this. Aside from the demands of hospitality, it's good business to make our visitors feel at home.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend in Canada.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

OUTSTANDING Christmas program was held on Wednesday night, December 19th., at Wesleyan Methodist Church. A fair congregation listened with keen interest to the program by the Young Missionary Workers Band and Sunday School children of the church.

The service opened with a congregational number, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." This was followed by a "Welcome" by Roy Crocker.

Following a recitation, "Merry Christmas," by Helen Spearman, "Away in a Manger" was sung by a group of more than twenty of the small children. Other recitations were given by Jerry Crocker, Mary Gardner, Carol Smith and Joan Crocker.

"O Come Little Children" was beautifully rendered by Mary Gardner, Beverly Crocker, Beatrice Yoets and Joyce Smith.

By special request, Mr. Stanley Hawthorne sang "Etiquette Blues."

The senior pupils staged a humorous dialogue "Wanted, a Housekeeper," and Barbara Hamilton's monologue showed exceptional talent.

Garbed in raincoats and standing under umbrellas the senior girls and boys presented "One Umbrella Built for Two" which was very well received. The senior boys came right back in action and costume to give their rendition of "Shortnin' Bread".

All the drills, recitations, skits and songs were very well presented and much credit is due Miss Evelyn Callaghan, the teacher. The audience showed very keen interest right through to the last number by the senior girls, "Are You Sorry That You Came" and indeed they weren't.

At the close of the concert, the crowd gathered around the gaily-lighted Christmas tree where Santa Claus presented candy and presents to all the pupils.

Christmas Brings Host Of Problems to British Wives

By DENISE DALTROFF
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 24 (CP) — The women of Britain, six years of vital war work finished, are hurrying back home to welcome demobilized husbands and set up full-time housekeeping — under difficulties.

Eight hundred thousand married women left the armed forces and war industry during the six months after Germany capitulated. Employment offices in most industrial centres say the shortage of women willing to work is one of their biggest problems.

The situation is so serious that a special government campaign has been launched to keep women at their jobs until more men are discharged. So far it has met with only limited success.

While most British women are getting home, thousands of young British wives of Canadian servicemen still are kicking their heels awaiting transportation to the Dominion. Their best Christmas present is word that two Canadian ships—the Lady Rodney and Lady Nelson—will be used in the New Year to start the movement across the Atlantic.

It will be a long job. Of 50,000 wives and children about 14,000 were sent to Canada before the end of hostilities started heavy service-repatriation to tie up all available shipping space. Since last May there has been only a very small dribble of wives across the ocean.

Peacetime Problems.

Getting back to peacetime routine is no cinch for Britain's women. Most goods are scarce and queues have been growing longer. The housing shortage, intensified by enemy bombing, will take years to overcome and meantime many must share a house with friends or relatives. Setting up a new home is plagued by many difficulties, including the scarcity of utility furniture and the high price of second hand.

Their big job in wartime—from the manufacture of aircraft to working on farms with the 80,000-strong Women's Land Army—has given British women a greater feeling of independence and self-reliance. Social service officials say women are looking upon marriage more as an equal partnership than they ever did before.

They are taking more interest in politics, too, in repetition of the trend during and after the First Great War when women won the right to vote.

Britain's new parliament has 24 women members—far more than any previous parliament. Twenty-one of them are supporters of the Labor Party.

Season's Greetings

A Very Merry Christmas and it is our hope that the New Year will bring you all much Happiness and Health.

Wintertime Hand Protection

After Washing your hands, apply a soothing hand lotion

By HELEN FOLLETT

ALONG about the time when we're watching for Santa Claus, hand troubles start up. The skin gets chapped, the cuticle around the rosy finger nails seems to thicken, hands are rough.

Do you wash your hands properly? That is the first, most important question for you to ask yourself. Is the soap bland, do you use a nail brush after heavy work, do you rinse away every bit of soap, dry the flesh thoroughly.

Correct Hand Washing

Boys and girls should be taught correct hand washing. Dipping the hands in water, rubbing the dirt on the towel isn't even half a job. This practice won't do because hands carry germs. Careless hand washing is often responsible for serious illness.

Stains left after one prepares vegetables can be removed by friction with a cut lemon. Don't overlook the advantages of wearing rubber gloves when wiping up the kitchen floor, cotton ones when polishing silver or furniture.

Protection is the thing

Use a hand lotion every day of your life, especially after washing dishes. Once or twice a week, friction with a heavy cream.

Treat each finger separately, rubbing upward from base to tip. Thumb the back of the hand and the wrist, while you're at it, give some of the soothing lubricant to your elbows that may be coarse and grey looking, for all you know. We never see our elbows.

Once a day, after a hand washing, use the orange wood stick to lift the cuticle around the nails. If you don't keep it detached, you're likely to get hangnails.

GOOD MANNERS

A Church Wedding Can be Beautiful, Dignified and Inexpensive.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have recently been discharged from the army and am planning to be married soon. I cannot afford an expensive wedding, but I have always wanted to have a church wedding. Would you please give me your advice as to how I could plan to have a simple, informal church wedding, as inexpensive as possible?

—MIRIAM.

A simple, informal, inexpensive church wedding is really the easiest kind of wedding to have, and it can achieve the true dignity and beauty that will make it beautifully memorable. First, consult with the minister about engaging the church for the date you wish or the nearest date available. You can dispense with all floral decorations except a few flowers at the altar; but I hope that, if at all possible for your budget, you will arrange to have organ music. You or your mother may invite the guests orally, or by telephone, or by handwritten notes.

According to the degree of informality you wish to have, your dress may be of white or pastel shade, of floor-length or street-length (with a veil-less head-dress or hat), or you may wear your going-away suit. Instead of carrying a bouquet, you may wear a simple corsage. Your one attendant should wear dress of the same length you wear.

If you are having only a few guests, you may enter from the side door at the left of the altar either with your attendant or following her. The bridegroom and the best man will come from the vestry door on the right, in the usual manner.

Not many expenses with this simple wedding, are there? You could plan your dress so that it will be useful for many occasions afterward. Although you plan your attendant's costume, she pays for every detail of it except her flowers, which you provide. Your bridegroom provides your flowers, your wedding ring, of course, the marriage license, and gives the fee to the minister.

It isn't necessary to have any reception. You and your bridegroom may follow the friendly custom of waiting after the recessional at the back of the church to greet your guests and receive their good wishes. Or at your home there might be a simple tea, with your wedding cake as the main attraction, and something cold—domestic champagne, a punch made of fruit juices, or ginger ale — in which to drink "to the happiness of the bride and bridegroom."

If In Doubt, Ask the Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Do I remember correctly that I have read in your column that, when one is in doubt as to what type of dress the hostess expects guests to wear at her party, it is correct for one to telephone and ask the hostess? This is to settle a discussion that arose last evening among a group of girls.

—ALICE.

Yes, you do remember correctly. And in these days, especially when there is so often the question as to whether or not the hostess expects her guests to "dress," it is entirely proper, when you are in doubt, to telephone your hostess and ask her.

TOP TEAMS IN AMERICAN LOOP DRAW AND LOSE

Cleveland Barons Show Surprising Form With Team at Full Strength

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets and Indianapolis Capitals both drew one game and lost another over the weekend to remain in a first-place tie in the Western Division of the American Hockey League. Hornets lost a 6-5 verdict to Providence Reds Saturday before a capacity crowd of 5,000 home fans while Capitals took an 11-4 shellacking from Cleveland Barons, who were playing at full strength for the first time in weeks. Tommy Burlington and Earl Bartholome scored 3 goals apiece for the victorious Barons. Both teams drew at Indianapolis Sunday as Bobby Walton tallied two counters for Hornets.

Buffalo Bisons and St. Louis Flyers divided a weekend double-header, each team winning on the home ice. Saturday, Flyers edged out Bisons 3-2 after coming from behind a one-goal deficit at the end of the first period with the clinching tally coming in the final frame off the stick of Dick Kowcinak. Bisons turned the tables on Flyers Sunday and rattled off five straight goals in the second and third period to distance St. Louis, 7-3.

Armand Gaudreault, lanky right-winger, scored three goals to help Hershey Bears pound out a 7-4 victory over New Haven Eagles at Hershey Saturday and Bears overcame a two-goal deficit yesterday to hold Eagles to a 2-2 tie at New Haven in a slow contest between two obviously fired teams.

At Providence last night, Cleveland Barons delayed the start of the game for 3½ hours because of transportation difficulties and turned back Providence Reds 4-2 before a patient crowd of 3,999. Barons, who came directly to Providence after playing in Cleveland Saturday, were unable to appear before the opening face-off until 11:45 p.m.

Once they swung into action, Tommy Burlington paced their triumph by scoring their first 3 goals in the second and third periods.

PLA-MORS HOLD TOP SPOT IN U.S. LEAGUE

Saint Paul in Second Place One Point Ahead of Omaha

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors held top spot in the United States Hockey League despite a 6-3 Sunday loss to St. Paul which put the Saints in second position. The Saints are one point ahead of Omaha — last week's runner-up in the series standing.

Other weekend games saw Tulsa Oilers defeat Dallas Texans 4-2 and Fort Worth Rangers defeat Omaha 5-3.

Scoring three goals in each of the second and third periods, the Saints came from behind to down the Pla-Mors. Johnny Harns and Wingy Johnson scored in the first period to give Kansas a 2-0 lead, but the Saints took advantage of penalties to score twice in the second frame. Bobby Dill and Norm Burns each skidded the puck into the nets while a couple of their opponents were in the penalty box. Hal Brown's goal for the Saints and Johnson's second of the night left the teams 3-all at the end of the second. Joe Shack, league-leading scorer, counted at the third period's start, and St. Paul continued to take the play away. Lin Bend and Bobby Dew each counted before the bell to give the Saints their first victory against Kansas.

Tulsa scored in every period Saturday night and guarded its own nets so well that goalie Bud Lamarche had to make only 17 saves. John Morrow scored for Tulsa at the opening and Scotty Mair made it 2-0 before the end of the frame. Emile Dagenais' unassisted effort at the start of the second gave the Oilers a 3-0 advantage. Dallas then got in two goals, one by Bob Thorpe and one by Lou Smrke.

At Fort Worth, the home team trailed 3-0 in the first frame, then came from behind to overcome the Omaha offensive. Tied 3-all at the end of the second period, Harold Johnson chipped in his second goal of the night three minutes after the Rangers made their last goal — by Ken Mackenzie. The Knights had opened the scoring when Wilson Podolsky slashed one through goalie Nelson Little. The Omahans came back a minute later with Gordon Howes' effort for the evening.

No league games are scheduled Monday night.

Chips Off The Sports Block

A Merry Christmas

Another year is nearly history. Once more the glad season of Christmas is at hand with its merriness, happiness and general joy in the sheer feeling of living.

The brilliant glow of lighted windows with their colorful Yuletide decorations exude a warmth that is heart pleasing. The happy cries of children on the great morning when the anticipation of weeks of patient waiting reaches the zenith of realization as gleaming Christmas gifts come to light. The looks of happiness and contentment on the faces of the adults; the appetizing smell of succulent turkey and the trimmin's are but part of the annual Christmas picture that exemplifies the Canadian way of living.

• • •

The thunder of the guns has ceased. Overseas, and here too, the ragged threads of war are slowly untangling from the Martian knot of five years. The boys are coming home. This Victory Christmas should be one of the brightest, merriest and gayest since Hitler hordes over-ran Europe and threw the world in a maelstrom of hell and blood. For many vacant seats will be filled this Christmas as that soldier, sailor and airmen once again takes his rightful place with his family.

But there are those, too, who will not return. They lie in the far-flung battlefields of Europe, Asia, and in the seven seas. Their Christmas gift, a memory: a sob, tears. But their gift to us was the greatest of all. Their memories must not and will not die. For they in their greatest sacrifice exemplified all that Christ stood for. "Greater love hath no man than this. . . ."

• • •

Previous to the end of the war from press, radio and pulpit emanated reports of an "enduring peace", the four freedoms and the Atlantic Charter.

• • •

Yet, there came too, warnings that the winning of the peace would not be easy. The cessation of hostilities, the laying down of arms; the thunder of homecomings, the demobilization of the armed forces, some thought would be all that was necessary as a prelude to the resumption of the normal peacetime way of living.

• • •

As one writer puts it: "We have tried suspicion and distrust and antagonism. We have built walls and created armies. We have sponsored causes and crusades and have followed them in gallant senselessness. For in these closing days of 1945 we are as far from being confident of peace as we ever were. This is so because we have always sought a peace that was the outgrowth of force while experience should have taught us that peace comes with good will.

"There has never been a cause that has had only one side. All the wars that we thought just whether wars between nations or a minor strike in a minor plant sprang from an initial unwillingness to think as considerately of someone else's position as we do of our own."

If such is the case how appropriate is "Peace on Eearth, Good Will Toward Men."

• • •

International dignitaries are striving hard to attain a common bond among the nations of the world. We as individuals should emulate this effort in our own small way, no matter what our phase of life. The other fellow may have a chip on his shoulder, but it is not our place to knock it off until we discover the whys and wherefores.

Therefore, it behooves us to extend our fullest efforts during the coming year and in a spirit of tolerance "and good will toward men" endeavor in our own small way to make this old world the place that those who died for it, would have it be.

And so to all sports fans, athletic organizations, teams etc., who have given us such grand co-operation since taking over the column, and to the readers in general, Ken. J. Colling, yours truly and the staff wish for you the best, brightest and Merriest Christmas of all time.

What a Man

They're telling this one down around N'Yawk way, and lovers of basketball should get some sort of a kick from the yarn.

A hoop team came to Gotham from the hills of Kentucky. It consisted of five brothers; had no coach and no reserves. At home they played all their games outdoors because they had no gymnasium.

They met a sharp-shooting team of city slickers. A great derisive laugh went up when the hillbillies trotted out in their bare feet.

The game began. One of the mountaineers grabbed a pass dribbled in to his own foul line, and shot. He had to cover three-fourths of the court. As he shot he turned away before the ball hooked into the basket.

The fans roared. A few seconds later the fellow did it again. He took 20 long shots scored 20 baskets. The Kentuckians didn't smile, cheer, or cut up any high jinks. They just fed their man the ball and he kept shooting blind.

Finally one of the officials broke into speech.

"Migosh," he cried, "I never saw such shooting. And you don't even watch your shots flights after the ball leaves your hands."

"Shucks, mister" grinned the hillbilly. "Ain't no need to watch them shots. Why, they ain't no wind in yere at all."

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, Dec. 24 — (AP) — It's just a suggestion, but the main body of professional golfers might find it smart in the long run if they made Byron Nelson a Christmas gift of about a half-dozen tractors and a covey of cows for that ranch of his up in North Texas. The initial cost would be high, but there is the chance that Nelson would be so wrapped up in his new possessions that he would plumb forget about three or four of the big-money tournaments this winter and let the other boys divvy up the prizes.

Lieut. Bill Sullivan Jr. leaves Annapolis Jan. 1 to take over his new job as public relations man for Boston Braves. We record this not only because Sullivan did a good job as Navy Publicity Director during the war, but because his new position is, as far as we know, unique in baseball.

For the most part, big league clubs have depended upon their road secretaries to pass out any lbrid ..ttr z driblets of news there might be and to preside generally as hosts to the press. Some of them have done a conspicuously good job, too.

Eddie Brannick, to make the classic example, probably has created more goodwill for the Giants than any other man. But the Braves, surfeited with new Money, decided they could use a fulltime hand in their reconstruction program, and they have told Sullivan to let 'er rip.

Nearest thing to Sullivan's job appears to be that just created by the Yankees, though their man, Red Patterson, will double as road secretary.

Chicago Black Hawks marksmen consolidated their holds on the National Hockey League scoring race during the weekend as they defeated Detroit Red Wings 6-4 then tied 4-4. Max Bentley added two goals and assists to bring his total to 34 points — 19 goals and 15 assists — and take a firm hold on first place. Linemate Bill Mosienko added a goal and three assists to take hold of second place with 30 points while Doug Bentley jumped into third place after scoring three goals and earning two assists during the weekend. Doug's 25 points are made up of 13 goals and 12 assists. Another Hawk, Clint Smith, holds down fourth place with 12 goals and 10 assists for 22 points as Toe Blake of Montreal garnered one point as Canadiens defeated Boston Bruins 4-1 last night and slipped into a fifth place tie with teammate Elmer Lach who earned a goal and an assist to bring his total to 21 points. Alex Kaleta of Hawks holds down seventh berth with seven goals and 13 assists for 20 points.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 24 (CP) — Al. Murray, pocket-sized defenceman whose jolting bodychecks became his trademark through seven National League seasons with the New York Americans, has a coach's seat on the sidelines today but still hits straight from the shoulder.

As his Galt Red Wings surveyed a record of nine straight victories which stamped them the hottest team in junior hockey, Murray said he "earnestly" hopes the Canadian Amateur Association will revamp its rules so junior teams may dress 14 players instead of 12.

The 155-pound, five-foot 7½-inch athlete—"Don't forget the half, please"—believes it would be a definite service to the sport if teams could dress four defencemen and three forward lines instead of stringing along with two lines up front, two utility men and three behind the blueline.

"You sign 18 players and you dress 12," said the 37-year-old Stratford, Ont., native, who quit competitive hockey in 1940. "That means you have six ambitious boys twiddling their thumbs in idleness."

If the C.A.H.A. at its next meeting December 28 approved two extra players, the third forward line could be juggled to give all signed players a chance.

In the Ontario Association's 8-team Junior A Group, where Galt now holds second place behind Toronto St. Mike's, that would mean an additional 48 players reasonably sure of at least some competition.

Murray, who played senior hockey in South Porcupine, Ont. at 19 after starting with Stratford Midgets in 1927-28, is more concerned about the prospect of this rules amendment than he is about the nine-game streak which has stamped Galt a bold threat to the Memorial Cup machine at St. Michael's College.

"I'm pessimistic," he says. "I'm not even thinking about the Memorial Cup."

But he admits the farm team of Detroit Red Wings has possibilities. He likes the short, spectacular passing game of his two top forward lines and the terrific bodychecking of 185-pound Lee Fogolin from Fort William, who bounces 'em in the old Murray tradition.

Galt lost its first two games this season and Murray resigned as coach. Word spread he did so because the players were temperamental. He withdrew the resignation almost immediately and the club promptly started its unbeaten spree. But his brief abdication, he explains, wasn't caused by temperament. It was just that he had too much work to do as Galt Hotel proprietor, service club head and hockey coach. On top of that his father was seriously ill in Stratford, where he died December 8.

The team's leading scorer is Bill Curik of Timmins, who centres Marty Pavelich of Sault Ste. Marie and Lyle (Rusty) Wiseman of Montreal, on the first line.

Billy Adamo of South Porcupine at centre; Frenchy Mayer, of Gatineau Mills, Que., at right wing and Win Mousseau of Powassan, left wing, form the second attacking unit. The two regular defencemen besides Foglin, are poke-checking Dean McBride of St. Catharines, and six-foot-two Jim Hodgson of Montreal.

Long Tom McGratton of Brantford, took over netminding shortly after the season started and clicked immediately.

Alternates include Jim Uniac of Stratford, Jim Davis of Galt, Bobby Porter of Paris, Fred Anderson of Welland, Bill Scott of Kirkland Lake, Fred Glover of Toronto and spare goalie Cecil Gruhl of Port Colborne.

It's obvious Murray expects some of them to be wearing another Red Wing uniform in tougher company before long.

Toronto Leafs Within 2 Points Of Last Play-off Berth by Tieing And Winning From Rangers

Chicago Hawks Tie and Win From Detroit While Canadiens Defeat Boston

(By The Canadian Press)

Another inconclusive instalment in the leadership quarrel between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks marked the National Hockey League's eighth weekend of competition as Toronto Maple Leafs showed faint signs of injecting new life into the play-off care.

By gaining three of a possible four points in a home-and-home series against New York Rangers, the Leafs stretched their total of consecutive games without a loss of five and advanced within two points of the fourth-place Detroit Red Wings. It was Toronto's closest approach to the last play-off berth since the first week of the season.

Chicago also gained three of four points in two games against Detroit, but remained one point behind Canadiens who pummelled Boston.

Bruins clung to third four points behind Chicago and two ahead of Detroit.

Last-period comebacks highlighted the Chicago- Detroit series. At Detroit Saturday, the high-scoring Hawks telescoped three goals in a 65-second span of the third period to achieve a 6-4 decision. The Bentley Brothers and Bill Mosienko continued to create most of the scoring spark, centre Max Bentley getting two in 17 seconds at the height of the rally. Other Chicago goals Saturday went to Brother Doug Bentley, Mosienko, George Gee and Clint Smith.

Eddie Bruneteau tallied twice for Detroit, with Carl Liscombe and Bill Hollett picking up the other two.

Come from Behind

..That Saturday decision gave Hawks a temporary share of the league lead, but they toppled from the front rung Sunday when Detroit, in tit-for-tat fashion, smashed from behind for three goals and a 4-4 deadlock before 19,055 fans in Chicago stadium. Doug Bentley counted three times for Chicago and Red Hamill beat Harry Lumley once against a single goal by Murray Armstrong to give Hawks a 4-1 lead with only 16 minutes to go when the Detroit deluge broke.

Fern Gauthier, Bill Quackenbush and Ted Lindsay, scoring produced the markers which tied the score.

Big Babe Pratt figured prominently in the Toronto-New York doubleheader. In the Sunday game at New York he blasted the winning puck past Charley Rayner to give Toronto a 4-3 decision, and Saturday in Toronto his low 30-foot drive at 19.05 of the second period started a three-goal splurge which enabled Leafs to tie Rangers 5-5.

The leading scorer in the two contests was Gaye Stewart, who sniped two goals Saturday and one Sunday. But more notable than that from a statistical stand point was an assist he earned in Toronto—his first of the season. Ab Demarco of Rangers and Billy Taylor of Leafs also scored twice in the weekend action.

HAL NEWHOUSER KING OF MOUND FOR YEAR 1945

Detroit Southpaw Led the American League in Five Departments

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, Dec. 24—(AP)—Speed-baller Hal Newhouser, who made fictional Frank Merriwell look like bat-boys as he pitched the Detroit Tigers to the world's baseball championship, today officially was crowned the American league's 1945 king of the mound.

Final league statistics showed Newhouser compiled a brilliant 25-9 record, to rank him best among the league work-horses for the second straight year and weave an amazing two-year victory skein of 54. Last year, Newhouser fashioned a 29-9 record.

The 24-year-old lefty who made good in his own home town, completely dominated American league pitching last summer, leading in five departments win-loss percentage, earned run average, strike-outs, most innings pitched and most batters faced.

Although he toiled 313 innings in 40 games, Newhouser yielded only 63 earned runs for an incredible average of 1.81. At the same time, the six-foot-two Tiger pitcher struck out 212 of the 1,132 batters he faced.

Not reflected in the imposing array of statistics was Newhouser's immeasurable aid to the aged, crippled Tigers as a "money" performer. It was Hal who stepped in as a reliefer to hold the St. Louis Browns at bay until Hank Greenberg's grand-slam homer won the pennant on the last day of the season. And it was Newhouser who waded back after an opening-game humiliation by the Chicago Cubs in the world series to win the fifth and deciding seventh games.

Bob Muncrief of St. Louis bettered Newhouser's .735 percentage, but the right-handed Brownie won less than 15 games, finishing with a 13-4 record for .765.

Besides Newhouser, there were only two other 20-game winners—Dave Ferris, Boston's sensational rookie, who had 21-10 and pitched 22 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings for a new freshman record, and Roger Wolff of Washington with 20-10.

OSHAWA GENS. COULD NOT STAND GALT PRESSURE

Red Wings Win 6-4 After Being Down 4-2 at End of Second Frame

Overtaking a two-goal deficit, Galt Red Wings put on the steam with a resulting four-tally splurge in the third period to win 6-4 against Oshawa Generals at Galt Saturday night to account for their 10th straight victory in the O.H.A. Junior "A" drive. The Wings continued four points below the league-leading St. Mikes for the runner-up position while the Generals accepted their fifth setback in 12 starts for third place in the standing.

Oshawa made it 3-0 in the first stanza and held a 4-2 advantage going into the third period, then folded. To a considerable extent it was a Curik vs Curik affair with Galt's Bill and Oshawa's Leo each notching two counters. Mayer of the winners was ace performer, however, collecting three markers while Pavelich sank the sixth.

Arundel and Lowe were other scorers for Generals.

In Saturday afternoon's doublet at Toronto, St. Mikes registered at 10-2 victory over St. Catharines, thanks mostly to another five-goal record by Tod Sloan, his second such splash of the season. The other five tallies were spread among as many marksmen. Bury and T. Smelle found the cage for the Falcons.

Toronto Young Rangers and Marlboros wound up with a 1-1 deadlock in overtime after McLernon bagged the Young Rangers' singleton in the second and Lovelace secured the equalizer in the third. It was the second tie game for Young Rangers this season.

Rocky Graziano And Willie Joyce Most Popular Boxers

(By The Canadian Press.)

A middleweight knockout artist, Rocky Graziano, and a lightweight boxer with one of the best jabs in the sport, Willie Joyce, were the most popular scrappers at Madison Square Garden during 1945.

A compilation by The Associated Press showed today that Graziano, who jumped into popularity with five straight knockouts, lured $402,462 in gross receipts compared to Joyce's $371,407 in seven main events.

The Brooklyn clouter and the Gary, Ind., boxer, have been signed for early 1946 appearances in the famous arena here.

Johnny Greco, a Montreal slugger, and Tony Janiro, of Youngstown, Ohio, who battled each other three times during the year, ranked third and fourth, respectively. Greco pulled $328,449 and Janiro $255,079. They are welterweights.

Chrismas Around The World

Australia

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
(C. P. Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 24 (CP Cable)—Australians today faced a bleak and uncomfortable holiday season but there was every indication they were determined to enjoy their first peacetime Christmas since 1938.

In most states restrictions on the use of gas and electricity domestically, caused by the 14-day New South Wales coal strike earlier this month for higher wages, have been lifted for today and Christmas day but will be enforced through the remainder of the holiday period.

This will mean darkened houses and primitive cooking arrangements for most families, many of which will be having their first Christmas reunions with husbands or sons who were in the fighting forces.

The power restrictions also caused a drastic reduction in the number of trains available to take Australians to holiday resorts. Transport services in Sydney, Melbourne and other big cities also were cut down, adding to the difficulties of the biggest crowds of Christmas shoppers for six years.

The transport shortages caused scenes of near-panic during the week-end in the main railways stations at Sydney and Melbourne where thousands fought to board the few trains running. Women became hysterical and fainted; men, women and children were trampled and passengers who succeeded in getting onto trains were packed in like sardines. Some even rode between the cars, standing precariously over the couplings.

Shops have been crowded with free-spending customers in the biggest gift-buying jamboree on record. Thousands in Sydney Saturday pushed, shoved and trod on each other in an eleventh-hour surge of indiscriminate buying. There were similar scenes today and the shops were quickly denuded of all available gifts.

Many Australians are out of work because of the effect on industry of the power cuts and have had to dig into savings accounts for Christmas expenses. Sydney banks estimate that nearly £1,000,000 (about $3,000,000) has been withdrawn from savings accounts. They predicted that total Christmas spending will probably reach £3,000,000.

Scotland

By EDITH McCOOK

Grantown-on-Spey, Scotland, Dec. 24. (CP Cable)—Here in the lee of the Cairngorm Mountains shops tempt no one with signs "Do your Christmas Shopping" early or late.

A few modest "gifts" cards in shop windows or apologetic "presents for the home" on a table piled with bath towels can hardly be called exuberant advertising.

But food shelves in Scotland are comfortably stocked with essentials and even occasional luxury. To Canadians, dates, raisins, currants, molasses—here it is treacle—and corn syrup look inviting.

Under price control, a pound of dates or raisins costs ninepence (about 17 cents) and a two-pound can of syrup one shilling threepence (about 29 cents). These prices indicate there is no profiteering. Nuts are unobtainable and spices rare, however, and children are disappointed over the failure of oranges, apples, lemons and bananas to appear except in imperceptible trickles

Turkeys Rare.

Meat for Christmas is reasonably prices. Turkeys are rare and ducks and geese scarce. But chickens costing about 10 shilling ($2,25) each will grace many Highland tables while others in the game country have rabbit or hare and perhaps a bit of venison.

Extra rations of fats and sugar mean plum puddings, even if eggs are as scarce as gold nuggets. Cranberries for dressing cost three shillings (67 cents) a pound and a few people will have them.

Christmas cards cost on the average a shilling each and writing paper is so poor in quality and so expensive that few realistic Highland stores are handling any. Books in this country of avid readers are scarcer than ever.

In Canada toys are expensive and scarce but in Scotland they are more expensive and very scarce. Rag dolls predominate for small girls, costing from four to 12 shillings. Little boys have wider choice of wooden cars, blocks, tumbling clows or wheel-barrows.

But it looks like Christmas outside—there is snow on the ground, innumerable pines waiting to be Christmas trees, bright peacetime lights in cottage windows. Little boys with bare knees and little girls with tartan skirts have eyes that sparkle bright over Santa Claus for whom stockings will hang beside peat fires.

London

By ED CREAGH

London, Dec. 24 — (CP) — A lean Santa totes a thin pack for most of the world on this first peacetime Christmas in six years.

In conquering and liberated countries, as well as in the shattered remnants of the Axis, there is not food enough for a hearty yuletide feast, and chilren's Christmas stockings literally gape at toes and heels.

Allied servicemen, separated from their families on another Christmas, are filling their now-familiar role of foster Santa wherever they can.

Hundreds of English families will share their meagre Christmas fare with Canadian and American soldiers "sweating out" the long wait for passage home.

German housewives have begged a few luxuries from Allied soldiers to supplement their families' hand-to-mouth existence. In a Frankfurt railroad station, one large tree, devoid of ornament, stands as a symbol of the drabness of Christmas in Germany.

By contrast, liberated Brussels turned a public square into a forest of Christmas trees with bright flowers, while in Copenhagen great torches will flare tonight over the graves of patriots killed by the Germans.

In Paris, children whose parents still can't buy new shoes for them, pressed noses against show windows displaying expensive dolls and toy jeeps costing $175 each.

Roman stores, blacked out by power shortage, still display an abundance of cheeses, nuts and confections, at which the average working man making $2 a day could only look.

Nuernberg's toy market, once the world centre for the industry, has shrunk to a handful of shabby shops.

Even in Portugal, neutral throughout the war, poultry prices stood at five times the peacetime level. However, a glass of red wine or an attractive toy could be bought for half a cent.

But somehow people who had been through the war were getting along—thankful the soldiers were home and the bombers grounded this Christmas eve.

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration distributed 100,000 Christmas packages in cold, disease-ridden Poland.

Socks came from Allied countries for nearly every Hollander, and British children donated 57 cases of toys to Danish youngsters.

Britain

By MARIE McGOWN

London, Dec. 24 (Reuters) — Britons are preparing good-humoredly for what in several respects will be their toughest Christmas since the war began in September, 1939.

Inured to privation through six years of war, they have looked forward to the first Yuletide of peace as a time when plenty would be in prospect if not in actual evidence. But at the first post-victory Christmas they know that the only prospect for the forseeable future is sweat and toil.

Perhaps the outstanding aspect of Christmas, 1945, for battered Britain is the assurance—for the first time in six years—that no V-2s or other devilish Nazi devices will disrupt the Yuletide festivities. Aside from the relief there is nothing to distinguish this from the "austerity" Christmases which britons have come to accept as part of the price of freedom.

So far as the liquor situation is concerned only "regulars" at a well-stocked pub or spirits store can expect an extra bottle of gin, Scotch or even sherry at controlled prices.

Of course anyone with the money can get all the gin he wants at £3 ($13.50) a bottle instead of the controlled price of 30 shillings ($36,75)—and for that matter any of the other traditional paraphernalia—but "black market" is a fighting word to the average Briton.

Despite the generosity of the Dominions and expatriate Britons in other countries who have sent quantities of eggs, oranges and candy to the Mother Country, and the modest largesse of extra basic rations dispensed by Food Minister Sirben Smith, there just is not enough to go around for the Christmas feast.

Britons are queuing up in queues as long as ever for a Christmas as monotonous as ever.

It has been estimated that advertising in daily newspapers giving information about business and industry increased 1600% during the war.

Ration on Beer, Gin Removed In Saskatchewan

Regina, Dec. 24 —(CP)— F. J. C. Edwards, chairman of the Saskatchewan Liquor Control Board, announced Saturday that effective Jan. 1, 1946, the use of ration books for beer and gin will be discontinued.

The existing beer ration is 24 pints a month and after Jan. 1 and until further notice consumers may purchase up to 12 pints in any one day. Liquor permits will not be required for gin — although the purchase limit per day will be one bottle—although the rationing of whisky, brandy, rum and other spirits will continue.

The present ration of spirits is one bottle of rum per month. Only one bottle may be purchased in any one day.

The wine ration will remain unchanged at two bottles of Canadian wine or one bottle of imported wine a month.

Grants Extended To all Hospitals Under Conditions

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Premier Drew said in a statement Saturday the new system of provincial grants, announced Friday night for 14 hospitals, will be extended to all public hospitals in Ontario "when they receive departmental approval of their system of hospital records and cost accounting."

Premier Drew said the grants which Ontario Health Minister Vivian announced last night would entail provincial help of some $1,000,000 yearly to the 14 hospitals named in two groups, was made applicable as of Jan. 1 for these two groups because it was possible to work out detailed statistics from their records and cost accounting practices.

"This is essential because the new system of grants is based upon actual bed costs and for this purpose it is essential that there be some measure of uniformity in the manner of keeping records and particularly in the system of cost accounting in each hospital," Col. Drew said.

In addition to the hospitals in the first two groups, which include large hospitals in the three university medical teaching centres of Toronto, Kingston and London, Col. Drew said public hospitals would be divided into two further groups for the purpose of computing the grants.

These would be group "C", including all public hospitals with a bed capacity of more than 65 beds, and group "D", comprising those with less than 65 beds.

Accurate Basis

"Many of the hospitals in groups "C" and "D" undoubtedly have excellent records and cost accounting systems; some have not," the premier said. "One of the great advantages of this system of grants is that it will assure statistical and other records which will provide an accurate and uniform basis for arriving at the actual cost of service.

"This will be of the utmost importance to the hospitals themselves, to the municipal councils and to the Ontario Department of Health. Quite apart from the advantages to hospitals and municipalities of the new system of grants, this feature alone marks a great step forward in our provincial hospital system."

The new system of grants, based upon the number of public ward beds in each hospital rather than upon a share in the cost of treating indigents, is aimed at making hospitals self-sustaining and providing service at cost in both public and private wards, Dr. Vivian said in his announcement last night.

While it was applicable initially to large hospitals, both teaching and non-teaching, in the three university medical teaching centres, it would be extended to all other public hospitals as rapidly as possible, he said.

Mennonites Give Food to Euope

Saskatoon, Dec. 24 (CP) — Saskatchewan Mennonites are making a notable contribution to the food relief program of the Mennonite central committee, which has set a goal of shipping 100,000 quarts of canned meat and 125,000 quarts of vegetables to Europe.

Already more than 43,000 quarts of canned meat and vegetables, 1,200 pounds of beans and 1,000 pounds of home-made soup have been contributed to the general pool by Saskatchewan Mennonites. In addition $4,000 in cash and a considerable amount of flour and clothing has been turned over.

All the food that is being sent to Europe is produced on the farms of the cocntributors. A sticker with the address of the donor is attached to each jar.

The relief program, under the auspices of the central committee, with headquarters in Kitchener, Ont., was first organized in 1920 for famine relief in Russia, for which $1,000,000 was raised. In 1940 the committee started relief for the bombed areas in England, and two homes were established for refugees from the blitzed districts.

Newspaper readers don't miss a good story because it isn't on the front page. A scientific study shows that many of the best read stories are on the back pages.

THIS time it's really Christmas. He is home.

◆ No need, now, to pretend . . . with just a snapshot for company. No need for the smile you didn't feel, that somehow failed to help much last time. He's home.

◆ And there he sits . . . appetite and all. Beaming. Hungry.

◆ Waiting for this hasn't been easy . . . for anyone. But now it's here . . . Christmas 1945.

◆ To Mom and Dad it brings the best gift of all . . . maybe a little bigger . . . maybe a little older. Good . . . all the more turkey then . . . all the more room in their hearts.

◆ Things haven't changed much around the house, come to think of it. The tree looks just like the one he dragged in six years ago . . . tracking snow all over the place and forgetting to mop it up. That boy! Even the holly hangs lopsided over Grandad's picture . . . he never could get it to sit straight. And the Christmas cards clutter up the mantelpiece so you can't see the clock. What a lot of friends the family has . . . all saying Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas!

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 23

"I can consult Mr. Fordyce about it," Jocelyn said, her heart sick with anger and disappointment. Norma had been happier, more like a normal girl, over this prospect than Jocelyn had ever seen her before. They had discussed every detail of the trip with the eagerness of complete novelty and pleasure on Jocelyn's part, and a real girlish unspoiled enthusiasm on Norma's that had delighted Jocelyn. They had selected bathing suits, sport clothes, evening dresses; they had gone down to the docks and inspected the boat, one happy noontime, with Philip as escort. The lounges, the dining rooms, the deck chairs under awnings among palms, the fascination of narrow passages and high white boat decks, and above all, the charm of their own luxurious suite had opened up for Jocelyn a dream of delight she had never before experienced; she had told herself a hundred times that such fun could not be for her; that something would happen.

Now it had happened. Jealous, watchful, suspicious Mrs. Kimberley and the dissatisfied Sandy had brewed this nonsense between them, and Norma felt with a dismal prescience that in the end it would wreck the whole plan.

"I don't think consulting Mr. Fordyce would quite do," Mrs. Kimberley said. "Men don't see these things quite as women do, and he would probably think there was nothing irregular about it."

"There is nothing irregular about it!" Jocelyn said proudly, impulsively. To this Mrs. Kimberley made no audible answer. She narrowed her eyes and looked into space with a little half-smile on her lips. "Sure," Jocelyn went on, despising herself inwardly for wasting so much time on this woman, "surely a man may travel with his daughter and her governess without starting any scandal?"

"Oh, if it's Norma's governess, if it's Sandy, then there is nothing to be said," Mrs. Kimberley countered neatly. "If you speak to Mr. Fordyce about it," she added, "please don't quote me. I am merely suggesting to you that, as dear Mrs. Fordyce doesn't want Janet rushing out here to make trouble, it might be wiser to make some other arrangement. And now I must go back," said the visitor sweetly. "I was dummy, and I thought I'd just slip out here and give you a hint. You see, with a man as attractive as Mr. Fordyce, Miss Britton, it's very easy for a girl to put herself into a false position."

Graceful, with her smooth hair beautifully curled and her slender figure lovely in soft brown lace, she flitted away, and Jocelyn, bitterly ruffled in spirit, went back to the younger set. She felt distracted and uncertain; to whom could she speak, who could advise her now?

Philip had seemed to take an interest almost as keen as the girls' own in the prospective trip. He had picked out a trunk and two bags for Jocelyn, and had had them marked with her initials. Their creamy stiff smartness was now displayed in Norma's sitting room, with Norma's own beautiful bags. Scattered about were new stockings, white shoes with their straps and silk laces still immaculate, hat boxes, frocks on hangers. Norma and Jocelyn had been looking at their new purchases before dinner, rejoicing in them, trying on a white taffeta coat or a broad-brimmed flowery hat.

Jocelyn knew that she herself was the main attraction of the whole plan for Norma. To travel for the first time in her life with an adored companion, with a friend young enough to enter into her interests, a companion whose honest enthusiasm would inspire her to enjoy things that once would have been boring to her, to feel no longer either shy or foolish; all this made a prospect that was new and intoxicatingly pleasant in Norma's scheme. She wanted always to be with Jocelyn, always to get Jocelyn's reactions before she was sure of her own, she loved her new role of the protected and self-controlled little princess who owed a duty to the world as well as to herself.

All this would be blasted if Mrs. Kimberley took Jocelyn't place; almost as completely blasted as if Sandy did.

Jocelyn confidently expected an outburst of fury from Norma at the first suspicion of a change of plan, and she dreaded it. She was working hard with her studies, anticipating holidays all the happier for her industry when the big ship sailed just a week from tomorrow.

On Saturday Norma went to a matinee luncheon with the Parker boys and their mother, and Jocelyn utilized her free hours for a trip to Sausalito. Aunt Nell would decide the point for her! Aunt Nell, who always thought anything the girls wanted to do was right.

She found the mistress of Maple Den in a foggy back yard, under the fresh new green of the trees, watching two sleeping grandchildren, and fortunately alone. Jocelyn, eager, frowning scornful, appealing by turns lost no time in putting her problem.

Her aunt was equally prompt and much more definite in her answer. Of course it was impossible. Some other arrangement would have to be made.

Jocelyn sat facing her aunt with eyes that were tragic in a suddenly paled face. "But Aunt Nell, surely girls and their fathers and governesses are always travelling together!"

"Not always. It could happen, of course. But not with this girl.

"She's had considerable newspaper notoriety already Her father's a rich and important man. And you're a pretty girl, Jocelyn."

"Aunt Nell, that's — that's nonsense! How can people be so — so vulgar and — and censorious and suspicious! It seems to me if they are, it would be just a good idea to show them that one didn't care a rap what they thought!"

"You can't do that, dear. Women—and men, too, for the matter of that — are always trying to do it. They go off somewhere on islands, or—"

"But Aunt Nell, this is just a man and his daughter going on a trip, and taking a companion for the daughter who isn't out yet!"

"Isn't out yet?" Mrs. Partridge said leniently. "Why, that girl is so far out in society that it's a nice question as to whether you can ever get her in far enough to have her come out again! She has been out since she was born. No, Jocelyn, you can't take chances with a girl like Norma Fordyce. You tell me she's happy now, that she's beginning to act like a human being. For heaven's sake keep her so. Don't get her grandmother and mother and father and this Sanderson woman all worked up again! Keep things quiet."

Jocelyn stared into space, a mutinous expression on her face. Presently she demanded resentfully, "am I supposed to be in love with him?"

"Are you in love with him, Jocelyn?" her aunt asked quietly, when the angry words had had time to die away into the quiet, still foggy air.

"Aunt Nell!" the girl exclaimed, freshly indignant. But if she had more words ready they did not come; she looked at her aunt for a few seconds with her face reddening, and then covered her hot cheeks suddenly with her hands.

"If I see it, probably they see it," Mrs. Partridge said dryly, and for a long time nothing more was said.

After a while Jocelyn took down her hands and looked far away into space and laughed.

"How long have you known it, Jocelyn?"

"Oh, not long. I thought — I never dreamed anyone else would know. Everyone loves Philip. There are two or three women who are just—open, about it. I suppose of course it makes a difference! About the trip, I mean. Now don't say anything, Aunt Nell," Jocelyn said quickly, as her aunt made a movement as if she would speak. "Don't. I know what a fool I am! I thought it would always be my secret, that no one but myself ever would know. You see," she went on, trying to laugh, "he's wonderful. He's quiet, but he's so definite! He puts things into just a few words. He's— I don't know, he knows everything about international law and maritime law, and fishing and golf, and plays and London clubs and everything. I always used to think, in the office, that there was no one like him, but now— now—when he's so good to Norma and me, and so pleased that she's happy—"

"He bought you some lovely dresses for the trip, didn't he?"

"Well, not expensive dresses! The whole lot didn't come to what one of Norma's did. I'd have to have clothes, Aunt Nell. And I've never been to Honolulu!" Jocelyn ended, on a wail. "And now I'll never get there!" she added, despairingly.

"I suppose Miss Sanderson couldn't go?"

"Oh, that would ruin everything!" Jocelyn said, so frantic in her disappointment that her aunt realized suddenly how young she was.

"Well, you'll have to get out of it somehow, dear. To go would be to put yourself and Mr. Fordyce and the child, too, in a false position. Especially with the mother anxious to get hold of her and her fortune. It seems to me the best thing would be to go to Mr. Fordyce and explain, and ask him what ne would suggest. If there were some friends of his going on the trip, who would join the party—"

Dad is home again!

Christmas candles will burn brighter this year and Christmas turkeys have a new and special flavour for the thousands of Canadians who will be sitting down to their first Christmas dinner with the family circle complete. And many a childish face will glow in the candlelight because "dad" takes his place at the head of the table again — with his strange tales from Italy, from France, Germany or the Pacific.

But even as the candles are lit and the heaped plates go round, Canadians will pause and remember — remember those family groups that will never be complete—those thousands of desolate and homeless in Europe — that great army of children who have been frightened and hurt and starved by a war not of their making.

Let us therefore make a solemn resolve never again to allow the powers of darkness — greed, selfishness and mistrust — to put out the candles of Christmas, those brave lights that symbolize the warm love and kindness that came into the world two thousand years ago.

So, it's a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year that we are wishing you and it is with heartfelt appreciation that we sincerely thank you for your kind and understanding patience during the war. Now that peace is here, we shall be able to serve you better, please you more. We look forward to your continued valued patronage.

Fish Head Soup and Other Inedible Food Provided Canadian POW by Japs Says Pte. Harold Maynes, Plainfield

Forced to Do Heavy Labor for Long Hours; Japs Seized Red Cross Parcels

"The little yellow rats cut the heads off their fish rations and tossed them to us to make soup. That was the kind of fare men got who were working ten hours daily in a foundry," reminisced Private Harold Maynes, Plainfield, a member of the Royal Rifles of Canada who was a prisoner of war in Japanese hands for over three years.

"Yes," he went on wistfully gazing at a fat turkey he held in his hands," our Christmas dinner was fish-head soup and this augmented by the hind legs of dogs which we killed in order to keep ourselves alive."

"For dessert we had rice. For breakfast we had rice and for supper we had rice."

Maynes enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939 but transfered to the Royal Rifles of Canada early in 1940 and went to Hong Kong with that unit in 1941. He was taken prisoner with other Canadians when that British bastion of the Far East fell into enemy hands. He remained there for nearly two years then was transferred to Nikama in northern Japan where he was forced to do heavy manual labor in a Japanese foundry.

Being Ill Made No Difference

"There was no point in arguing with the Japs, even if you were sick. You had to force yourself to work if you didn't want a beating. One of our boys dropped in his tracks one day and we were forced to stand by and watch five Jap guards beat and kick him to death. Then they stood back and laughed loud and long at their fiendish handiwork." Maynes said.

"The Japs paid us the rate of ten yen a day. But what was the use. There was nothing we could spend it on. All we could buy was some sort of a substitute for tobacco which resembled fine steel wool and which tasted like the bottom of an owl's nest. I didn't smoke a cigarette in two-one-half years." Maynes said.

During his entire sojourn as a prisoner of war, Maynes and his companions received one egg from their captors. "It was a beautiful robin's egg blue color, and was ready for an old-age pension. It was terrible, but we closed our eyes and ate the thing."

Maynes and his companions received but four Red Cross parcels during their long incarceration. After they were liberated, Maynes said, "we discovered that thirty percent of the parcels received by the Japs for us had been stolen by their own troops."

Received One Letter.

"I wrote as often as I could and got but one letter from my people, and that came via the Red Cross. My relatives here never received one of the many letters I wrote."

Four blankets and the hard floor of a hut were his bed. And this for men who labored long hours in a foundry and on farms. "A mattress and clean sheets were things that were but a memory to us."

Maynes lost fifty pounds during his incarceration, but is gradually attaining his former weight.

"Rat and dog meat garnished with fish heads is not a fattening diet but it helped keep the spark of life burning," said the young soldier. "We used to catch the things when they rummaged through the huts at night. I guess they were as hungry as we were. It beats all what a fellow will eat if he is near starvation."

The Canadian prisoners of war were marched to their work at seven in the morning under a heavy armed Jap guard and labored until six at night with a few minutes off for their meagre lunch of rice and inedible soup at noon. Later in a magnificent gesture, the Japanese reduced the working hours from ten to nine hours daily.

Went Wild on Liberation.

Maynes was liberated a few months ago and reached home last autumn. Asked how the prisoners of war reacted when they heard the news of the Japanese defeat he said, "we went wild and whooped it up the best we could."

"The only news we received came when the Japanese commandant of the camp sent for our officer commanding and curtly informed him of the Jap surrender," he added.

Questioned as to whether some of the prisoners of war pent-up feelings resulted in any outward show against the guards following liberation, the young soldier grimly evaded the question.

Pressed on the point, he intimated that "some of them were sorry, and probably said so to their ancestors."

HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

Now in hall and cottage, holly wreaths are hanging,
Homes are bright and cheery with the Christmas glow,
Back to home and fireside wayward feet are trending,
Once again they're children as in the long ago.

Every care and worry to the wind they're flinging
Careless of the sorrows that the years have brought;
Oh! the happy spirit of good-will they're bringing,
Counting all the passions of the year as nought.

Gladsome is the greeting, free the joyous giving,
In it does the semblance of our Lord appear;
Oh! the Christmas spirit makes a joy of living —
That its tender influence might linger through the year.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Christmas 1945 will be remembered as a home-coming by many of our best and bravest, but alas, in some homes will be found the vacant chair. But their names will be ever honored and remembered.

Guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wallbridge, Huff's Island, and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. W. A. Davern, Wellington. Mrs. Arnold Cruickshank assisted the hostess in serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morton will entertain their family at a Christmas dinner on Sunday, guests including Mr. and Mrs. J. Cochrane of Peterboro, Mr. and Mrs. D. Harns of Burrs', and Mr. and Mrs. D. Black of Huff's Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Cruickshank, North Lakeside, will be at home Christmas day, entertaining the members of their family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Morton and Mrs. James Morton will spend Christmas day with friends in Belleville.

Mrs. Clifton Gamble has returned home after spending a pleasant week with friends in Toronto.

Christmas greetings to the editor and staff of the Ontario Intelligencer and to its many readers.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON

People rushing to and fro,
Crowds around where'er you go,
Laughing, running through the snow,
This is the Christmas season.

Stores so busy, no abating
Of the crowds of shoppers waiting,
No one stops, no hesitating,
This is the Christmas season.

Children talk with widened eyes,
Of a Santa who will surprise,
Bringing toys of every size,
For the Christmas season.

Mothers cleaning, cooking, baking,
Beautiful gifts their dear hands making,
Their own comforts all forsaking,
All for the Christmas season.

Happiness reigns everywhere,
Sleigh-bells jingle on the frosty air,
Never a worry, never a care,
For this is the Christmas season.

CHRISTMAS . . . evergreen

How beautiful is Christmas . . . how everlastingly beautiful! Each year for two thousand years the star comes up in the same soft Eastern sky and trails its radiance through troublous times and smooth. Each year the same glad message of goodwill echoes over the earth and each year, in every heart, joy is reborn. As childhood is so fresh, as Spring is evergreen . . . as sudden and as sweet . . . it's Christmas again!

This year our "MERRY CHRISTMAS" holds a warm and special meaning. May fun and friendship be yours in full measure and may the rich happiness of reunion increase the joy in many hearts.

We would like to thank our customers sincerely for their patronage and helpful co-operation during difficult years; and to express to our employees our deep appreciation of their generous and loyal support.

(By JOHN A. PARRIS)

London, Dec. 27 (AP) — State Secretary James F. Byrnes said in Moscow today that the Big Three foreign ministers had agreed on the handling of the atomic question and a reliable informant in London said the foreign ministers also approvad 4-power rule for Japan.

The London source said the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and Russia agreed also to a five-year trusteeship of Korea, suggesting that independence would come to that Asiatic peninsula country after 1950.

The informant, who is in a position to know what transpired during the 11 days of talks in Moscow, said Big Three agreed that Japan should be controlled by Russia, the United States, Britain and China.

Full details of the agreement were not immediately known but it was understood that the unanimity rule would prevail on the four-power council.

Leaves by Air.

The foreign ministers ended their conference before dawn today and State Secretary Byrnes, of the United States, left Moscow for Washington by air, Moscow dispatches said. No announcement was made on the departure plans of Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain.

The communique on results of the conference is to be issued in London, Washington and Moscow at 10 p.m. E.S.T., today.

The London informant said it was not clear whether final authority in Japan would rest with the council or if Gen. MacArthur would have the power to override its decisions as the administering agent of Japan.

Will Draw Peace Treaties.

It already has been announced that the Messrs. Bevin and Byrnes and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov of Russia, reached an agreement on procedure for drawing peace treaties with Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Finland and Italy.

On the question of atomic energy, the Big Three were understood to have adopted the Anglo-American plan of presenting a resolution to the United Nations General Assembly in January, outlining their suggestions.

Russia was said to have agreed to associate herself with the United States, Britain and Canada in the presentation of the resolutions. France and China were also said to have been asked to associate themselves with the document.

During the discussions, Mr. Byrnes was understood to have suggested that the United Nations Security Council comprise the proposed atomic control commission.

The ministers were said to have agreed that the atomic control reports should go to the United Nations Security Council and not to the peace agency's general assembly. This was the expressed wish of Russia.

Diplomatic quarters said they considered the reported agreement on Korea significant.

For Period of Five Years

Information here was that the Big Three agreed to establish a Big-Four trusteeship council composed of the United States, Russia, Britain and China. The report that the trusteeship would be held for five years led to the assumption that, at the end of that period, the Koreans would be given independence.

It was understood that the Big Three Foreign Ministers further agreed that the United States military command in Southern Korea and the Russian command in Northern Korea would confer and co-ordinate the administration of the country, wrested from Japan.

London sources said also that Turkey and the claims projected by intellectuals in Soviet Georgia for Turkish territories on the Black Sea and elsewhere were discussed by the Big Three, but that no agreement was reached.

These informants said the Iranian problem played a "lesser role" in the discussions that had been expected. Iran has accused Russia of interfering with efforts to suppress rebellion in the northern Iranian province of Azerbaijan, currently occupied by the Red Army.

British Foreign Ministry experts were understood to be busy deciphering the Moscow communique which began arriving here early this morning for issuance later.

Soviet Program In Russian-Occupied Germany Outlined

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Berlin, Dec. 27. (AP) — A planned economy for industry and business and widespread revision of land ownership are the basis of the Soviet program in Russian-occupied Germany.

German government leaders say the program is progressing satisfactorily despite initial hardships. The reaction of the average German ranges from courageous optimism among the new farmers to helpless doubt in Dresden and complaints in the streets of Halle and Leipzig.

The program of Sovietization is being carried out with veteran communists in key posts. Industry, farming and mining are largely under control of German provincial governments, aided and supported by the Russian military government

The Soviet-sponsored program was observed at work in an area which largely escaped the terrific bomb damage inflicted on Western Germany. It is a region which is rich agriculturally but which faces a tremendous refugee problem.

The people complained chiefly of shortages of food and clothing, but Russian military government officials said there was no sign of despondency or insurgence-

Bing Crosby In Good Health Says Brother

Hollywood, Dec. 27 —(AP)— Singer Bing Crosby is in his usual good health, in spite of persistent rumors to the contrary, his brother, Larry Crosby, said yesterday.

"Bing called me up long distance today," said Larry. "He was feeling fine. He's in New York on business, and hasn't been near a doctor for three months. I suppose the rumors started because three months ago, after finishing his latest picture, he spent three days in a Santa Monica hospital for a check-up on arthritis. He'll be home in a few days."

G.B. Shaw Wants New Alphabet, Would Pay War Cost in Time Saved

London, Dec. 27 —(CP)— George Bernard Shaw appealed today to the British government to appoint a committee to draft a new English alphabet "with which every sound in our speech can be written with one graphic and easily written symbol without even crosses or dots."

Mr. Shaw, who has campaigned before for simplification of the alphabet, said in a letter to the Times that adoption of his proposals would soon pay the cost of the war in time saved.

Using the word "bomb" as an example, Mr. Shaw said the final "b" was "entirely senseless" and represented "an absurd mispronunciation, as if the word 'gun' were to be spelt 'gung'."

"I can scribble the word 'bomb' barely legibly 18 times in one minute," Mr. Shaw said, "and 'bom' 24 times, a saving of 25 per cent."

The result, he argued, is staggering enough to justify a priority for a new alphabet, "no matter what is costs."

Mr. Shaw said he had found "it is useless to appeal to education authorities."

"They dare not interfere with Dr. Johnson's monumental mispelling, which is now much more sacred than the creed and the catechism," he declared. "I suggested to one eminent official educator that children in the elementary school be encouraged to spell phonetically as they speak, so that their mispronunciations should be detected and corrected. He replied that the barest hint of such a step would banish him from public life.

"I do not propose to meddle with our classic texts, mispelt — or rather unspelt — as they are. What I desiderate as a professional writer is an alternative alphabet which will save the millions of hours of manual labor now wasted in a sort of devil worship of Dr. Johnson."

Mr. Shaw said he would disqualify from the alphabet drafting committee such "cranks" as universal language advocates, shorthand experts and "persons who want to force everybody to spell in the same way.

"The phonetics involved," Mr. Shaw said, "are simple, A, B, C: What we need are economically and statistically minded men and women of vision, even if they are hopelessly bad spellers and cannot add up their own washing bills."

STOREKEEPER SHOT BY FOUR GUNMEN STAGING HOLDUP

Toronto Police Offer $500 Reward for The Capture, Conviction Of the Thugs

Toronto, Dec. 27 — (CP)—One of the greatest police manhunts in this area was in full swing today for a band of four men who ruthlessly shot down 53-year-old Myer Tobias Wednesday night in his ladies' clothing store while his wife sat in a theatre next door unaware of the shooting until an hour later.

Three men entered the shop on Mount Pleasant Road in the northeast section of the city in what police believe was an attempt to hold up Tobias. Two of them fired .32 and .38 calibre bullets into his body and all three fled to a waiting automobile containing another man.

The car, - stolen previously in another section of the city, was found abandoned shortly afterwards about four blocks from the scene of the shooting.

Police officials last night offered $500 reward for the capture of the bandits and Lou Fenkell, a lawyer, said prominent members of the Toronto Jewish community will meet today to "raise a substantial reward for information leading to their capture."

Cold-Blooded Killing

The thugs apparently fired a second bullet into the merchant's body as he lay dying at their feet, Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner of Toronto, said today.

"This is a cold-blooded killing, one of the worst in a long time," declared Dr. Lawson, who aided the autopsy, performed by Dr. W. L. Robinson. He said one bullet pierced the aorta, main artery of the body, which would bring almost instantaneous death.

"The second shot," said the coroner, "was a glancing one and was fired, apparently when Tobias had collapsed from the first wound, to make sure he was dead."

Two bullets found in the store were both of foreign manufacture, said Prof. Joslyn Rogers, provincial criminologist. One was the type used in an officer's model of a German Lueger and the other was from a Belgian-manufactured revolver.

Shot Shortly After Seven

The shooting occurred at seven p. m. a few minutes after Mrs. Tobias had left her husband to go to the theatre and following a brief telephone conversation with his son Harold whom he told he was about to close the store and go to bed.

The shots were heard by another son, Murray, who was in an upstairs apartment. He rushed to a window and quickly noted the licence number of the speeding car and then ran downstairs. Mr. and Mrs. John Keating who had seen the men run from the store, rushed into the shop to find Tobias on the floor.

"At first I thought the three men rushing out were young people going to a party," Mrs. Keating said. "Then I saw one of them had a gun and realized it was a holdup. Two of the young men came out together with the third, a gun in his hand, a few paces behind . . .

"We ran into the store and saw the man lying on the floor. I leaned over and spoke to him and told him he would be all right and that I was going for a doctor."

Four Brothers Drown in River As Ice Cracks

Pembroke, Dec. 27 (CP)—Four Sheenboro, Que., brothers were drowned last night when their car broke through ice on the Ottawa River near Oiseau Point, Que., about 25 miles west of Pembroke. A fifth occupant of the car escaped.

The drowned were: Victor Downey, 32; Gordon Downey, 28; Albert Downey, 25, and Earl Downey, 11, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Downey of Sheenboro.

Clarence Morris, also of Sheenboro, climbed out of the car and climbed to safety on the ice.

The five were driving to the Defence Industries Ltd., plant at Deep Rock where Albert Downey and Clarence Morris were employed. It is believed the ice, unprotected by snow, had cracked during a severe frost and formed an air pocket through which the car plunged.

Morris, after crawling ashore with his clothes icesheathed made his way to the home of Samuel Hueber, a mile distant, where he was given assistance.

HOPE VIRTUALLY ABANDONED FOR TRAPPED MINERS

30 to 50 Coal Miners Entombed After Heavy Explosion

Pineville, Ky., Dec. 27—(AP)— At least 13 fires have been spotted and put out by rescue workers attempting to reach from 30 to 50 men entombed by a coal mine explosion more than 24 hours previously but hopes that the men would be found alive grew dimmer.

A. D. Sisk, director of rescue operations outside the No. 1 mine of the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company, said no more fires had been sighted by it was not known whether any were farther back in the tunnel. The workers had penetrated approximately 1½ miles back and were about 3,000 feet from the entombed men.

The number of trapped men still was not definitely known today. Estimates of officials ranged as high as 50 but others believed the figure would not exceed 30.

Hopes Fade

Hopes of reaching the men alive faded as 24 hours passed since the explosion which, although not felt or heard above ground, turned the mine's timbers and walls into a jungle of wreckage.

A company spokesman said there was no indication how much longer it might take to reach the scene of the blast, believed to be near the end of the two to 2½-mile-long tunnel. Some mine men said the cave-in might be reached today, but others said it was doubtful that the area could be reached short of two or three more days.

None of those close to the scene held out hopes that any of the men would be reached alive. The consensus of experts was that most of the miners could have been killed by the actual explosion or later by carbon monoxide.

Flames were encountered 3,100 feet from the mine entrance, police reported. The miners were believed trapped at the dead-end of the 2½-mile long mine.

The fire apparently had been burning since the explosion about 8:30 a.m., E.S.T. yesterday in the mine operated by the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company.

Mine experts believe that most of the men might have perished in the actual explosion. They added that gas fumes probably killed any who might have survived the underground concussion.

Prime Minister Unlikely to Attend

Mr. King represents the Glengarry riding in Parliament and had been invited to take part in the welcome. However, an accumulation of work over the Christmas period is likely to keep him close to his East Block desk for the next few days.

ACTIVE MEASURES WILL BE TAKEN TO RESTORE ORDER

Large-Scale Fighting Flares Anew in Bandoeng, Java's Summer Capital

By VERN HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 27 — (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, informed Indonesian leaders today that he planned "more active measures" to restore order in strife-torn Java.

He also called on the Indonesians to place under his command whatever units of the Indonesian peace preservation corps (T.K.R.) he might need to assist British troops in suppressing disorders.

Gen. Christison outlined his plans at a conference with Premier Sutan Sjahrir and Information Minister Amir Sjarifuddin of the unrecognized Indonesian Republic as large-scale fighting flared anew in Bandoeng, Java's summer capital.

In one sector of Bandoeng British Mahbatta troops cleared an Indonesian training centre after six hours of heavy house-to-house fighting. They found a well-organized defence system of trenches, trip wires, booby traps, mines, road blocks and snipers.

In another sector Gurkha troops, with tank support, attacked a suburban area held by Indonesians, but were forced to withdraw.

British Patrol Attacked

Other outbreaks were reported in Soerabaja, where 50 Nationalists attacked a British patrol base with machine-guns and grenades, wounding two British soldiers. In the vicinity of Semarang, two former Japanese 75 mm. guns shelled British positions.

Shortly before going into the meeting with Sjahrir and Sjarifuddin, Gen. Christison issued a prepared statement declaring that British troops in Java were there "only in pursuance of an Anglo-American decision allocating the responsibility for disarming and repatriating the Japanese, and rescuing European and Eurasian prisoners and internees."

Wants Definite Statement

(In London Prime Minister Willem Schermerhorn of The Netherlands and Acting Governor-General Hubertus J. Van Mook of the Netherlands East Indies continued talks with Prime Minister Attlee on a settlement of the Indonesian dispute. Mr. Attlee, who is said to be anxious to withdraw British troops from the Indies, was reported to have asked the Dutch to state specifically their intentions with regard to Indonesian demands for inde-

MEYER ACQUITTED ON TWO COUNTS OUT OF 5 CHARGED

Findings, Sentence On Other Charges To be Promulgated Later by Court

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 27 — (CP Cable) — S. S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer today was acquitted on two of the five war crimes charges against him but the Canadian military court trying the former German regimental commander announced that the findings and sentence on the other 3 will be promulgated later—normal wording for a court-martial decision in which a defendant is found guilty.

The charges on which Meyer was acquitted were the second and third on the first charge sheet —that he was responsible for the killing by his troops of 23 Canadian prisoners of war near Buron and Authie, France, in June, 1944, during the early stages of the invasion of Normandy, and that he ordered his troops to kill seven other Canadian prisoners of war at his headquarters in the ancient Abbey of Ardenne.

The charges on which the findings are to be promulgated are the first, fourth and fifth — that he incited his troops to deny quarter to Allied troops; that he was responsible for his troops killing seven Canadian prisoners of war at the ancient Abbey; and that he was responsible when his troops killed 11 other prisoners of war at his headquarters.

The fourth charge, that of responsibility, was listed as an alternative to the third which stated he gave orders for the shooting.

Hearing on the second charge sheet against Meyer, first German officer to be tried as a war criminal by a Canadian military court, will begin tomorrow.

The court's findings were announced after the defence and prosecution had completed their final summaries. Sessions of the trial were resumed today following a Christmas recess.

Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax, is president of the court.

At this morning's session, Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, gave a two-hour recapitulation of the case against Meyer, and maintained that the 33-year-old former regimental and divisional commander was "supremely responsible" for the murder of the Canadian prisoners.

Morale of Marines "Cracking Up"

Shanghai, Dec. 27 (AP) —Morale of homesick American marines in North China was described by the service newspaper Stars and Stripes today as "cracking up" because the servicemen "are convinced they are merely pawns in a political chess game."

The China theatre edition of the army newspaper, in a Tientsin-datelined article said the marines refused to believe it is necessary for them to guard Chinese railroads and British-owned coal properties.

"Incidents" had decreased during the past month, but marine casualties from snipers, demolition crews and track-wreckers were higher than reports have indicated.

The army newspaper went on: "Nightly jags, mourning buddies who fell in Pacific campaigns, a bit of joint-wrecking, brawls with civilians and marines, an occasional show of arms and sometimes more than just a show—these are the manifestations of the cracking-up of America's fighting men who have had too much fighting and want to go home so desperately that nothing else means anything to them."

Canada Slowly Shakes Loose From Wartime Controls

Tire Rationing Will Cease In Dominion on January 1

Ottawa, Dec. 27 —(CP)— Canada is slowly shaking loose the wartime shackles on production and distribution of her consumer goods and services but as she enters 1946 with her transition well launched, she finds certain controls still necessary in holding the line against a dangerous inflation.

That was the message of Donald Gordon, chairman of the Prices Board, in a year-end review issued today. The review said that close to 150 supply controls had been revoked during 1945 and out of 330 or more which existed at the peak of the war effort, only about 30 still remain.

Canadians were given this control picture shortly after the Munitions Department announced the lifting Jan. 1 of one of the motorists greatest wartime checks — tire rationing. It was the second big news for autoists within six months. Gasoline rationing was ended last August.

Remaining munition department controls include those on coal, timber, tin, and power as it applies to the use of gas in Southwestern Ontario. Sale of new passenger cars will be on a priority basis, with the first going to essential users.

On the labor front the year saw replacement of the permit system for Canadian job-seekers with a system of reporting to National Employment Offices. Thus was returned the freedom of action of the Dominion's workers and employers.

Cost of Living Controlled.

The Prices Board review showed that the line against inflation had been tightly held during 1945, and the cost of living in Canada rose only about one per cent during the 12-month period.

"It is still necessary to continue price control if the inflationary conditions which exist as a consequence of war, are to be held in check," Mr. Gordon said. "For some time yet there will undoubtedly be acute shortages in certain fields, notably in textiles and some kinds of foodstuffs.

"This country has its obligations in respect to the supply of foodstuffs to help relieve terrible conditions of distress in the liberated areas."

He added that every effort was being made to reduce remaining board restrictions to a minimum "but they continue to need the support of the general public to make them effective."

Decontrol Starts After VE-Day.

Implementation of decontrol policies began shortly after VE-Day when production controls were lifted on a wide variety of capital goods, including sporting goods, office machinery, electric stoves, radios and replacement parts, farm machinery and refrigerators.

Restrictions on the manufacture of elastic material, nylon yarns, household goods and such things as bed sheets and towels, footwear and most types of clothing, also have disappeared.

In addition to revoking 35 orders to permit greater freedom of manufacture in some lines. For instance restrictions on the making of long dresses and other style features were revoked.

The services administration of the Board removed all restrictions during the year on retail and wholesale deliveries and use of automobiles on deliveries by laundries, cleaners, dyers and other businesses. Revoking of 28 orders in the pulp and paper field gave the green light to making all kinds of paper containers, facial tissues, paper napkins and the like.

The quota system under which Canada's publishers were rationed on the newsprint, was lifted.

Meat Rationing Still On.

To the housewife perhaps the year's most significant step was return of meat rationing in September. Government spokesmen said it was necessary so that Canada might send more to Britain and Europe. Other foods considered in short supply—butter, sugar and preserves—continued to be controlled by coupon rationing.

Other decontrol measures lifted the ban on travel and hotel accommodation for conventions and rental regulations were changed to permit demobilized home-owners to obtain possession of their homes on a three-months' notice to tenants. Emergency shelter regulations were extended to include all Canada as the nation faced its worst housing shortage in history.

Veterans Given Suits

Canada's returning servicemen were assured through a priority certificates system, of obtaining at least one civvy suit on the tight clothing market.

New regulations introduced by the Board during the year were designed largely to control price and distribution of new goods returning to the market, to encourage manufacturers to produce goods which were in short supply and to protect consumers from any degradation in quality. Compulsory labelling of almost all clothing item was introduced last April.

Prices Board regulations remaining in effect include besides rentals control and rationing, the general price control, licensing of new businesses, consumer credit and controls on the butterfat content of milk.

Returned Vets Want Women To Look Smart

Chicago, Dec. 27. (AP)—Women: to wow your wandering warrior wear wool in the daytime and wax worldly at night.

That's the advice of a department store survey conducted among more than 1,000 United States college men, most of them returned veterans, on the campuses of 12 universities. The survey, disclosed:

Young men still like sweater girls. They chose sweaters for daytime—particularly campus—wear by a majority of 65 per cent.

They want their girls to be sirens at night, wearing black-low-necked and streamlined —by a vote of almost two to one.

Ninety-six per cent want to see long evening dresses again, with the choice divided between the slinky type and the swirly variety.

Their favorite color is blue, with red and black second and third respectively.

As for high heels—by all means.

Twenty-two per cent haven't attained a broad viewpoint. They arbitrarily turned thumbs down on slacks—but 74 per cent approved them for sports and picnic wear. A miraculous gour per cent okayed them for general daytime wear.

To the question "what stands out in your mind as the best-looking costume you have even seen" the replies overwhelmingly favored strapless evening gowns and bathing suits.

Chinese Communists Present Written Proposal for Unconditional Truce

Chungking, Dec. 27 —(AP)— Chinese Communists announced that they presented a formal written proposal to the government today for an unconditional truce on all fronts of China's undeclared civil war.

The proposal, they said, was delivered at a two-hour meeting with three government representatives. The meeting, the first formal session between the two sides since Nov. 17, took place at the headquarters of the National Military Council in downtown Chungking.

Communists said that their proposal was, first, an unconditional "cease-fire" order by each side; second, settling peacefully of all problems relating to "the civil war," and third, sending of inter-party and non-partisan groups to the various fronts to observe the situation.

Government representatives at today's session promised to deliver the truce proposal to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek for consideration, the Communists said.

Ratepayers Vote For School Area In Tyendinaga

Ratepayers of School Section No. 11, Tyendinaga, at a special meeting held in Melrose township hall on Wednesday voted unanimously in favor of township school areas.

Under a township school area, Public School Inspector, R. H. Macklem pointed out, the schools remain as they are now except that one school board controls all the schools in the area which may include any number of schools. This board is made up of five members elected for two-year periods. Trustees are elected by ballot the same as the township councillors and at the same time.

The Department of Education is encouraging the formation of school areas by giving extra grants of one mill on the assessment or $150 for each school section entering an area. These grants are paid each year.

Inspector Macklem described the model school at Utterson, near Bracebridge and expressed the hope that the township school areas which are being considered in Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga would make possible a similar school in South Hastings.

At the meeting Mr. Arthur English, a member of the South Hastings Educational Association was elected a trustee succeeding Mr. Fred Jeffrey, who had served as trustee for the regular 3-year term.

FOUND ON TRACKS

Port Hope, Dec. 27 — (CP) — The body of Ciela Phillips, 25, of Port Hope was found on the railway tracks here Wednesday, lying between two freight cars of a train which had stopped at the station. She apparently had been run over by the train. No inquest will be held.

Relatives said she had been in poor health for some time and had suffered a nervous breakdown. Her mother, a stepfather and two brothers survive.

Veteran Gets Ride to Home On Freight Train

Lance Corporal Arthur Druce of the Canadian Army Provost Corps, a five-year veteran of the wars, did not intend being held up by a mere railway train on Christmas Day. He had arrived home from overseas aboard the H.M.S. "Puncher" which docked on Sunday and was waiting here for a regular passenger train to take him home.

Along puffed a freight train and someone offered him a ride in a freight-laden car. He promptly accepted the offer and arrived at his home in Peterborough about 3 a.m. or about the same time as Santa Claus.

It was a pleasant surprise for the soldier's wife and three young sons when their family hero strode into the home in the early hours of the morning. They did not expect him until later in the day.

Druce enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Peterborough five years ago but was transferred to the Provost Corps after going overseas. He saw service in North Africa, Italy and Holland.

Empty Shelves Greet Workers In all Stores

Holiday-weary merchants and their staffs relaxed today and viewed nearly empty shelves, aftermath of one of the busiest Christmas shopping seasons in years.

The inevitable last-minute shoppers in an eleventh-hour buying orgy practically depleted stocks of all kinds of merchandise, despite the fact there was little variety and not much choice.

One department store manager stated today that his Christmas turnover this year was the largest in volume in ten years, and his "left-overs" were almost nil.

It was practically the same story in all lines of business. Merchants stated that the customary "exchange" business will be very low this year, due to the fact that there is little left to exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. John Public appeared to have plenty of ready money and credits asked were extremely low. The better quality of merchandise was quickly bought up at the beginning of the season with other types finding their way into private homes when nothing else was available.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Notwithstanding the psychologically consistent and logical Chisholm pronouncement respecting Santa Claus . . . and surprisingly the very able Sandwell support of same . . . to the contrary, your commendable reproduction in Saturday's issue of that classical reply to Virginia's letter by the N. Y. Sun in 1897, will likely be received with grateful appreciation by hundreds to every one who thus publicly expressed it.

Mrs. Sarah Shortt, Bonarlaw, Injured When Hit by Car

Struck from behind while walking on Highway No. 14, near Bonarlaw, Mrs. Sarah Shortt of Bonarlaw, is in Belleville hospital, in serious condition suffering from a compound leg fracture, bruises, and possible fracture of the skull. The accident occurred on Christmas Eve and was one of several which occurred on district highways over the holiday.

Driver of the auto which struck Mrs. Shortt down was Mr. Carl McKeown, of R.R. 1, Bonarlaw. He stated to police he had been driving north and had been blinded by the lights of an oncoming car when he saw Mrs. Shortt just as she was struck by the bumper of his car.

Five Slightly Hurt

Five passengers of a Colonial bus received minor injuries when their bus left No. 2 highway and went into the ditch two miles west of Marysville, after being in collision with another auto.

According to police an American car of unknown ownership had been parked along the highway when an auto driven by Furman Delgleish of Toronto, attempted to pass just as the bus arrived on the scene. The car skidded on the icy pavement and was in collision with the bus before coming to rest in the ditch. Mr. Boyce of Deseronto, attended the injured passengers.

Guard Rails Broken

When his auto went out of control as the right wheels entered slush at the side of the highway, guard rails were broken and approximately $50 damage resulted to a car driven by Boyce Cook, of Shannonville. Two passengers in the car, Evelyn and Velma Cook, received slight injury in the accident which occurred three miles west of Deseronto. Provincial Constable Hector Gould investigated all three accidents.

Motorists Praised For Careful Driving Over the Holiday

Tribute to local and district motorists for the care and precaution exercised in driving over the Christmas holiday was paid by Police Chief Walter Probert today. According to police officers admirable precaution was exercised by motorists at all times and despite the fact that streets were in a slippery condition only a few minor accidents occurred.

Lee Ray of Halloway was driving south on Everett Street, when in entering the Bridge Street intersection he collided with a car being driven by William Flunder, 14 Murney Street. Flunder was driving west on Bridge Street at the time of the accident. About $75 damage to both cars resulted.

Melvine Haggar, Foster Ave., lost control of his car on the icy pavement while driving north on Station Street and struck a car parked on the opposite side of the street.

Robert Noyes, 14 Howard St., was in collision on Howard St., with a car driven by Spence Wonnacott, Green Street. Front end damage resulted to both cars but no one was injured.

Icy roadway conditions were also reported as responsible for a slight accident at the corner of Dundas and Pinnacle Street when a Toronto motorist attempted to stop his auto at the railway tracks only to skid into a parked car.

Jack Noakes, Ridley Street, reported to police he was driving south on North Front Street on Wednesday afternoon when near the King George School a ten-year-old lad skated into his car and fell to the pavement. The boy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Valleau, 45 College Street.

Christmas Mass Celebrated At St. Michael's

Overflow congregations attended the midnight mass at St. Michael's Church on Christmas Eve, which was celebrated by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., assisted by Rev. A. L. O'Donnell as Deacon and Rev. John Knox, S. J., as sub Deacon. The overflow assembly was taken to St. Michael's Academy, where Rev. C. E. Baker celebrated the Mass.

The usual procession of the children took place to the crib and the sermon was delivered by Colonel John Knox, S. J., O.B.E. of Toronto, the text of his sermon being taken from the Epistle of the First Mass of Christmas.

"Dearly beloved the grace of God our Saviour hath appeared to all men." The preacher pointed out that "the sense in which the word grace is used in this epistle is made clear for us in the fourth verse of the same epistle to Titus ""Dearly beloved the goodness and kindness of God hath appeared." Therefore the word grace in this instance expresses on the part of the doer, kindness benevolence; on the part of the receiver it implies profound gratitude for favors received.

"Without doubt this kindness and goodness on God's part hath appeared to all men," stated the speaker. "First of all in human affairs, the birthday of every child of God brings it before the mind. God created man in His own image and likeness" in endowing him and an immortal soul. He endowed each soul with the power of memory, understanding and will. "He made us and not we ourselves. We are His people and the sheep of His pasture. God made us to know, love and serve Him in this life and to be happy with Him for all eternity. Surely then the kindness and goodness of God hath appeared to all men. This kindness and goodness of God goes further for after man's ingratitude to God when sin and death entered into the world, ,God did not cast us off."

'Return unto Me and I will return unto you sayeth' the Lord God of Hosts. God so loved the world as to give His only begotten Son, whosoever believeth in Him may not perish but may have everlasting life. For us men and our salvation He came down from Heaven. The world was made flesh and dwelt among us and we saw His glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. The birthday of Christ, the eternal son of God is a certain sign of the goodness and kindness of God toward each one of His children. In realization of this truth lies the peace of the world. Peace to all men of good will." The preacher concluded by wishing each and everyone, the Peace of Christ, the true peace of Christmas.

At the end of the mass, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson addressed the congregation expressing the sincere hope that the Christ Child would bestow His choicest blessings on the congregation and all citizens of Belleville by the bay. Masses were also said three times on Christmas Day.

As I end this first sad year.

Careful Driving

Rain and sleet in winter create hazards especially on highways, roads and sideways, trying to motorists and to pedestrians. Modern roads, modern sidewalks, modern conveyances and the forces of nature-often inspire about this time of year to make travel on roads such as to require the utmost of precaution by the alert driver and the alert pedestrian.

In the days when over the roads, not so level as the pavements and sidewalks of today, the rate of travel was much slower, the horse set the pace for the horse with sleigh or cutter was not geared to lightning speed. The horse wore shoes especially sharpened for the winter season to provide a firm grip into the ice. The nearest approach today to the sharp shoe is the chain on the tire. The sharpened caulks of the horseshoe used to provide unusual grip on the roads.

The public has just experienced one of those not infrequent weather changes which convert the roads and streets into potentialities for accident.

When one is warning drivers and pedestrians not to omit the exercise of precaution at all times, it must not be forgotten that if there were not great care practised by the very great number of people who use the ways there would be a heavier toll of accident.

For all the safe drivers and sensible pedestrians everyone ought to feel very grateful for these go a long way towards keeping down the total of accidents due to weather conditions.

The motorized age has produced a great body of expert drivers whose pride it is and has been to avoid accidents. That is a laudable pride and one that everybody should possess.

Healthier Than Ever Before

British health statistics for the year ended March 1945 presented to Parliament resently show a progressive improvement. In many respects the United Kingdom is healthier now than ever before in war or peace. Despite the continuation of war time living conditions and their cumulative effects over six years, public health has improved greatly during the year. The infant mortality rate — considered by experts to be the surest indication of a nation's health — dropped to forty-six per thousand live births. Maternal mortality fell to 1.95 per thousand births. These figures, like those for the deaths of infants under one month old and of children between one and five, are the lowest ever recorded in England and Wales in war or peace. The same applies to the death rates from tuberculosis, diphtheria and typhoid, and to standardized death rates for both men and women, the latter being 9.42 per thousand for men and 6.63 for women. The birth rate reached eighteen per thousand living — the highest figure for nineteen years.

The main reason for the continuation of the improvement in the health of the United Kingdom already noted in statistics for the earlier war years is the success of the wartime nutritional and health policy. The wartime rationing system has ensured for the first time in history a properly balanced diet for large sections of the population, and extra protective foods for mothers and young children. Despite a reduction in the total consumption of food the Ministry of Food may claim to have achieved its aim of providing sufficient to keep the population fighting fit, and the decision to continue this war time ministry into the peace is an apt tribute to its success. The Ministry of Health has played a parallel part by taking special measures against specific diseases. Outstanding is the campaign for immunising children against diphtheria which has caused a decrease in the number of cases for the third year in succession. An important part has also been played by the increased war time provision of maternity and child welfare services. Vigorous wartime research has also led to British discoveries of new treatment methods, especially penicillin.

In a foreword to Tuesday's report Mr. Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health, declares: "The road to a fitter Britain is now clearly marked. In the great field of public health the war has taught lessons which must be put into permanent practice. Much more can be done not only to reduce ill health but to promote good health. In the near future detailed proposals will be presented to Parliament for the establishment of a national health service to ensure that every man, woman and child can have the best medical advice and care without the worry of whether they can afford to pay or not." As an example of the work to be undertaken the minister points out that though only four civilians of every thousand suffered last year from notifiable disease, special inquiries revealed that in an average quarter six out of ten civilians of working age suffered from some ailment not necessarily keeping them away from work. Meanwhile the possibility of setbacks consequent on six years of war must be faced.

Never-to-be-Forgotten Celebration

It was a tired world which went to rest after the celebration of the first peacetime celebration of Christmas since 1938. For wholehearted participation in the great Yuletide and Christmas festival, it is impossible to consider one that could equal in intensity that which has just passed. Aiding to the sumtotal of happiness and merriment with which the festival was observed were the returning veterans of the war against the Axis. What they added to the festivity and to the wholehearted spirit with which the annual mid-winter fete was marked is realized by everyone. Business had been taxed to the utmost with the demands upon it to provide gifts and other essentials for the really greatest observance of Christmastide in this twentieth century. Transport systems carried seemingly endless crowds to and fro and into and from almost every part of the country. They brought returned men arriving just before the great festival, they carried troops on leave for Christmas and they carried great numbers of civilians to their homes for the merry Yuletide festival.

The festive season called for living at a high tempo of activity and interest. Millions put their best efforts and spirit into a celebration which has now become a memory to be cherished for years to be. The enthusiasm and labor put into the planning and execution of the plans for family gatherings had the desired result in the merriest and most deeply moving social and religious observances within living memory. The spirit of Christmas lived again and leaves its results for a benediction upon the individuals and the nations. Fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers went the whole way in making countless children happy. The youngsters have had another visit from Santa Claus who has left gifts which are mementoes of his 1945 journey across the world.

Christmases come and go but the spirit of Christmas lives on. Millions have been blessed this year and will carry to their latest day the proofs of the presence of the spirit of good at work in the world. The child has seen that proof in the gifts made to him. There will of course be a natural let-down from the height of the lofty emotions stirred by the mid-winter festival but the celebrations are abiding for the child who rests assured in his mind that Santa Claus lives, for the parents and others who join in the celebration, and for all who acknowledge at this time one of the great facts of life.

Newspaper Facts

People read classified advertising for the accidental humor that sometimes slips in, as well as for the values advertised. For instance, a farmer put this ad in his local newspaper: "Wanted — Man to take care of a cow that does not gamble, drink, or go to dances."

God has two dwellings; one in heaven, and the other in a thankful heart.—Izaak Walton.

JUST FOLKS

KNOW-NOTHING

If I knew the right from wrong,
  Knew the shortest way through doubt
Which has puzzled men so long,
  I would gladly point it out.
But when wiser men than I
  Over matters can't agree,
And dispute each how and why,
  No advice they get from me.

To omniscience I've no claim.
  As a thinker I'm too slow.
I've said "Yes" and signed my name
  When I should have shouted "No!"
I've been saddened through and through
  By what later has occurred,
When what once deemed best to do
  Proved a blunder most absurd.

When mistakes are plain to see,
  Quick to censure I'm not one.
Were the problem put to me,
  I'm not sure what I'd have done.
I confess, though hard I try
  To be right the whole day long,
All too oft it happens I
  Have unwittingly done wrong.

Royal Bank Assets Top $2,000,000,000

New High Records Revealed in Royal Bank Annual Statement. Assets Reach Highest Point in History. Total Deposits at Record Level of $1,888,000,000. Healthy Increase in Current Loans. Liquid Position, Strong. Profits Improve.

Montreal, Dec. 27—New records in the field of Canadian banking are revealed in the Annual Statement of The Royal Bank of Canada, for the year ended November 30, 1945. Total assets, which increased during the year by over $217,000,000 have reached a total of $2,007,546,978 which is not only a new record for the bank, but is the first time the assets of any Canadian bank have reached the two billion dollar figure. Total Deposits, which a year ago stood at the record total of $1,676,884,696, are again up, having increased by more than $211,000,000 to $1,888,757,074. Deposits by the public are also at the new high level of $1,595,389,294, an increase of over $195,000,000. That the scale of private savings, steadily on the increase through the war years, has been well maintained is reflected by public deposits bearing interest totalling $711,591,119. This figure compares with $592,851,469 in 1944.

Current loans both in Canada and abroad are higher than a year ago, and have reached a total of $383,624,056 as compared with $351,652,376. The downward trend of current loans in Canada noted in last year's report has been reversed, the figures under this head showing an encouraging increase in the present balance sheet. At the close of the bank's fiscal year on November 30th such loans totalled $283,726,567, an increase of more than $22,000,000 over the figure for the previous year. Current loans outside Canada, which now total $88,441,196, are higher by $9,323,726. An increase of some $53,000,000 is also shown for Call Loans in Canada, probably due in large measure to the temporary accommodation extended to investment dealers in the financing of purchases of the 9th Victory Loan.

The bank's profit and loss account is this year presented in a somewhat different form to that used previously. Profits, after the usual contribution to the Pension Fund Society and appropriation for Contingency Reserves, amounted to $6,003,142. From this amount $2,175,000 has been set aside for Dominion Government taxes, leaving a net profit for the year of $3,828,142. The comparative figure for the previous year was $2,932,184. From the net profit $729,295 has been set aside for Bank Premises and the usual dividends amounting to $2,100,000 paid, leaving $998,847 to be carried forward to surplus which now stands at $5,246,518.

WATCH YOUR CHIN—NEVER MIND YOUR CHEST

One handsome youth in a group of two dozen young men undergoing physical examination for a coveted position impressed the examining physician by exhibiting a chest expansion of fully five inches. All the other youths (still in their 'teens or a year or two older) had just ordinary chest expansion—two to three inches perhaps. Not that it matters a little bit whether one can expand one's chest scarcely 1 1-2 or 2 inches or all of three, four or five inches. This exceptional young man explained that he had been following, I forget whose mail-order "course" for development of superb manhood or something of the sort for several years. The boy's pride of achievement was almost pathetic—really so, as it turned out. As though unconsciously he contrived to pose several times during the interview in the superb manhood pose so effectively employed by Moose Musclebound. The youth said he had gone as far as sophomore year in high school but had left school then, for some obscure reason.

This one handsome young man with the abnormal chest expansion flunked because he had incipient pulmonary tuberculosis. All the other young men with just ordinary chest expansion passed the examination.

Moral: Chestiness outside of the comic strip doesn't mean a thing.

I hope no young reader will infer from this that he or she should pay no attention to posture or that it is all right to cultivate a slump or slouch when sitting, standing or walking. The suggestion is rather that for good posture, good looks and good health you should watch the chin and never mind the chest.

A fundamental principle of posture is that at all times, whenever the thought of posture occurs to you, you should keep your chin in, not up. That is, keep it tucked inside of an imaginary high collar. In other words hold your head as though you were carrying a basket of bananas or a sack of coal balanced on your head. You will find if you try it that you can keep such a weight balanced on top of your head much more easily if you keep your chin in and the crown of your head, rather than the forehead high. In fact anyone can walk a tight rope or do a dance or skate or play golf or tennis or pitch or bat a baseball or paint a dog kennel or shoot an arrow or knit a sweater or read an announcement or sing a song better if he or she keeps the chin in and the crown high.

As you pursue the study of posture you will learn that good posture is a large factor of good looks and indeed that it is precisely the cultivation of or neglect of posture that explains why this individual somehow seems good looking even if he or she has no better features, form, complexion etc., than that individual.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Immunization for Baby

I am raising a new baby at our house by "the Brady Baby Book" and if I do say so, she is the picture of health. My question now (I do not find it answered in the book) is what immunization should she have in her first year?

(Mrs. W. W. H.)

Answer—Every infant should be vaccinated against small pox when three months old and immunized against diphtheria when two or three years old, or in any case before the child is old enough to attend nursery school or kindergarten or before the child begins to play with other children. Leave all other immunizing treatments to the judgment of the attending physician. Copy of "Preparing for Maternity" mailed on request if you inclose stamped self addressed envelope and ten cents. Inclose additional ten cents for copy of "The Brady Baby Book."

Postmaster, Clerk Are Abducted And Left Bound

Sandusky, Mich., Dec. 27. (AP)—Postmaster Horace Parrish and a woman postal clerk were abducted by two men and left bound and gagged near Pontiac about midnight, police reported today.

Police said Parrish identified his abductors as J. C. Cyse and Charles Townsend, both of Pontiac, who broke loose from the county jail a short time earlier. Cyse and Townsend, both 25, were awaiting sentence Friday after pleading guilty to the armed robbery of the Post Office at nearby Tyre several weeks ago.

Parrish and the Clerk, Helen E. Shillinger, 25, told police they were held up as they left the Sandusky Post Office about seven p.m., and ordered to ride with the two men in Parrish's automobile to a tourist camp four miles north of Pontiac.

There, they said, they were forced from the car, ordered inside a vacant tourist cabin and bound and gagged with bed sheets. The two men drove away in the postmaster's auto, they said.

Neither Parrish nor Miss Shillinger was harmed. Parrish said he had only $19 with him as he locked the post office for the night and the woman reported she had only about $9. Both amounts were stolen.

Fashion Flashes

PRETTY PRINTS mark the frocks now coming into the shops. A design of red, white and green flowers and gold flower boxes on black crepe makes for a charming frock. Multiple rows of self ruffles, on either side of the deep V-neckline give bredth to the top of the frock and form pretty sleeves.

AN OLD FAVORITE returns for spring. It is crisp taffeta in small or large checks or plaided design. Nice to pair off with a black skirt, or over a very slim frock, is a tiny black and white checked taffeta tunic. Its deep peplum flares sharply for a slim waist, which is achieved by double drawstrings of plain black taffeta pulled through set-in self belt. Collarless neckline, selvedge edges down the deep front closing.

BRIGHTEN UP that plain wool dress of the casual or spectator-sports type with the aid of a brightly-colored snakeskin belt.

PLAIN, PRETTY hats is what many women want, rather than those of intricate line or complicated trimming. For instance, a toque of white violets swathed in misty green tulle is a sure-fire success, as is a high-pointed sugar-loaf silhouette in fuchsia tulle banded in self-tone flowers. Hats of this type, of course, are for late afternoon or informal dinner wear, and are charming with theatre suits.

ALL GONE is the sloppiness associated with many early teen-age clothes. Instead of sloppy sweaters we have smartly styled frocks, such as a two-piece pin-stripe rayon frock with nipped-in waist, rounded shoulders, deep armholes and kick-pleat skirt. Nice going!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Man Lets House Go — Puts All Improvements in Barn.

A correspondent's complaint that her husband puts all the modern improvements in the barn and lets the house go to pieces recalls a story written by the late Mary Wilkins.

The scene of Mary Wilkins' story was New England, and the farmer-husband, steadily growing in prosperity, made things absolutely comfortable for his milk cows in the barn. There was running water which the house did not have. I'm not sure, but I believe there was also electricity in the cow quarters.

Well, one fine day when the farmer returned for his hearty mid-day meal, he discovered his wife had moved into the barn where all the conveniences were to be found.

Now from clear across the country comes a similar story. The wife, who's a fragile little woman, weighing less than 100 pounds, must haul water from the barn to the house on washdays, twelve or more bucketsful, and to the husband's way of thinking this is all right. House versus barn is run pretty much that way—no conveniences in the house, everything for the stock in the barn. But what a short-sighted husband doesn't realize is that his wife, who has to haul enough water for washing which would be a considerable chore for a husky hired man, is gradually losing her health, her spirits and her ability to keep on.

If she died, he probably could get someone else to replace her, after a decent interval. But would her success agree to wreck her health doing this type of work? The was has been a tremendous eye-opener for the type of wife who took everything for granted and asked nothing in return. Women have learned that work outside the home commands good market value. And a great many wives especially the younger ones, decline to go back to household drudgery of this type. Many of them have written to me that while they don't object to cooking, keeping the house clean and caring for the children, they do object to farm work and such things as hauling water for the family wash.

Attention, husbands and fathers! If the old overworked wife dies in her tracks, whom will you get to replace her? She is the irreplaceable woman today.

TO PURCHASE PLANES

New York, Dec. 27 — (AP) — American Airlines System announced last night it has contracted to purchase for approximately $18,000,000 one hundred jet exhaust propulsion type planes, the first to be used by commercial passenger airlines.

RIOTING BREAKS OUT

Athens, Dec. 27. (AP)— Rioting broke out today in the suburbs of Piraeus when a mob attempted to free two members of the extreme Leftwing organization K.K.E. who had been arrested for allegedly disarming a police officer.

The crowd fought its way to the cells where the men were held before it was driven back by police. Greek reinforcements later were dispatched from Piraeus, Port of Athens, to preserve order.

ROYALS STILL TOP AMATEUR TEAM IN QUEBEC

Montreal Team Holds Five-Game Edge but Quebec Aces Moving Up

By PIERRE LEMOYNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Dec 27 — (CP) — After completing the first half of their Quebec senior hockey league schedule, Montreal Royals are still the top amateur team in Quebec Province but as the season progresses the opposition is getting tougher.

Royals hold a five-game lead atop the Q. S. H. L. but the Quebec Aces are moving up at a threatening pace. Aces, coached b Lex Cook who led Kirkland Lake to the Allan cup in 1939, have a good goalkeeper and three well-balanced linee, if somewhat lacking on the defensive side.

Sport experts give them an even chance of overtaking Royals in the Q. S. H. L. playoffs and go from there to their second Allan cup within three years. Judging by the way they trimmed Roayls 5-1 on Montreal ice last week, there may be something to that.

One big reason for Royals' success this year is the presense of 19-year-old cherub-face Gerry McNeil in their nets. McNeill, who is slated in time to succeed goalie Bill Durnan with the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, has been the difference between victory and defeat in many games this season.

The highest scoring line in the league is Valleyfield Braves' Gerry Plamondon-Tod Campeau-Fernand Majeau trio. They have compiled 79 scoring points so far while Campeau and Plamondon lead the league individual scoring race with 33 and 28 points respectively. A big drawing card on the Valleyfield lineup is burly Jimmy Orlando, former defence star with Detroit Red Wings, who plays a stellar game at the Braves' blueline.

In the Provincial hockey league, Paul Haynes' Lachine ran away from the rest of the field in the first part of the heap, but Victoriaville Tigers and St. Hyacinthe Saints are drawing closer with every game. Tigers trail Rapids by eight points, but they have played four games less. The Victoriaville squad is made up of youthful hometown products along with some veterans of intermediate hockey from Three Rivers —a blend which has proven successful.

ADMITS GRAND LARCENY

New York, Dec. 27, (AP) — Lester B. Mathews, 48-year-old auditor pleaded guilty to grand larceny today, because:

Last May Mathews received a bank statement showing $5,000 credit although he had only $59 on deposit. He withdrew $3,000, bought a car, and left town. The bank later found the money should have been credited to Mrs. Lillian B. Mathews, no relative. Mathews was arrested in Little Rock, Ark. The bank says he still is credited with a bank balance—but this time it's $59.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By GORDON McKEAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—Sydney Wooderson, Britain's premier miler, is going in for longer distances, but will not hang up his spikes for many years. His ambition is to coach young Britons in boys' clubs all over the country.

The 64-inch bespectacled lawyer now is 31, unmarried, doesn't smoke or drink and "thinks it better not to." He looks and acts so unpretentiously that thousands who have cheered him on the track pass him on the street without a second glance.

His first race was a cross-country event which he was persuaded to enter at the age of 13 1-2, by his elder brother who was an outstanding school athlete. Syd won the event and his interest now stimulated, went on to track fame.

His first world record for the mile (four minutes 6.4 seconds) came in 1937 and in 1939 he was defeated in the controversial Mile of the Century in the United States.

The outbreak of the war found him tired and over-trained but his army duties as a radio operator gave him time to rest and, he thinks, accounted for his good showing against Arne Anderson, present world record holder.

Suspension of Alex James has been lifted by the Football Association and the Scottish ex-Arsenal star now can take part in football and football management. James, 44, was suspended in 1937 when he became a football pool director.

Alex is still a gunner with the 5th Maritime Regiment, Royal Artillery, but expects to be demobilized in a few months. He has not made plans to accept any position in football.

Eight French horses have been entered for the Ascot Gold Cup next year and the King has nominated Kingstone and Rising Light from his stables. But the entry which created the most interest among turf followers was Cliftontreschic—a 14-year-old who made headlines during the war as "the most beautiful horse in the world."

Owned by H. T. de Vere Clifton, he was once advertised as a stallion—at a 500 guinea ($2,350) fee. Cliftontreschic formerly was named Tres Chic and Flagg.

Because he won for a dead owner, The Irish chaser Poor Flame has been disqualified from the Borcas Chase which he won at Windsor. The owner, J. C. Metcalfe, died in New York shortly before the race.

The race now goes to Chaka, but his backers will still be losers, as bets were not affected.

Cathie Gibson, 14-year-old Motherwell swimmer, established a new Scottish half-mile record of 12 minutes 5 2-10 seconds at Edinburgh. She lowered Nancy Raich's former record by 2 7-10 seconds.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens scored one goal last night as Montreal defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2, and jumped into a tie with Clint Smith of Chicago Black Hawks for fourth place among National Hockey League scoring leaders. Blake now has 14 goals and eight assists for 22 points. Only other scoring leader to advance was Gaye Stewart of Maple Leafs whose assist gave him 19 goals and two assists for 21 points and a tie with Elmer Lach of Montreal in sixth place.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The first international event of its kind since 1939, the all-world chess tournament opens its two-weeks' stand tomorrow at Hastings, England, with 140 experts on hand from many countries to try their wits. One of the absentees is the Canadian specialist, Abe Yanofsky, who is still in the Canadian Navy.

Top weight of 130 pounds in the record field of 134 nominations for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 9 has been handed to Thumbs Up, Louis B. Mayer's seven-year-old star which won the 1945 race at the same weight. Armed was weighted at 128 pounds and First Fiddle is next with 126 pounds.

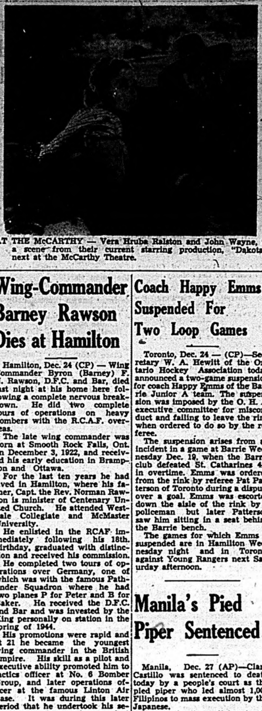
In Montreal, boxer Gus Mell's Christmas celebration brought him into Recorder's Court yesterday where he and three friends received suspended sentence after pleading guilty to a charge that they sat in the middle of a Montreal street early yesterday morning until removed by police. The Montreal lightweight and his companions were taken to the police cells after being found sitting in Colborne Street at 5 a.m.

Bud Polle of Fort William, Ont., fired a goal late in the third period yesterday to help Canadian Military Headquarters hockey team tie 4-4 with the Wembley Lions at London. Some 8,000 fans turned out for the event. The Lions' lineup featured such names as Johnny Chad, formerly of the Chicago Black Hawks, Sid Abel and Johnny Mowers, both former National Hockey League players. Chad scored the first and last goal for the Lions on assists from Abel. Buck Jones of Barrie, Ont., Charlie Phillips of Toronto and Polle were the Army scorers.

President Maurice Podoloff of the American Hockey League yesterday threatened a fine of not less than $10,000 for the Buffalo hockey club if it persisted in distributing a $1,500 bonus to the players for winning first place in the standing. He said it was against the rules.

SHAKES BED AND ALL AND IT SLIPPED

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP)—Mrs. Alberta Brooks explaining to the judge how she aired her bedding, denied a charge of malicious mischief. "I shook my bedclothes out the window," said Mrs. Brooks but the prosecution said a bed hit an automobile parked below her second floor window, and the owner wanted $200 damages. "Sure," said Mrs. Brooks. "When I shake my bedding, I shake it bed and all. And it just slipped out of my hands." She was acquitted of the charge.



AT THE McCARTHY — Vera Hruba Ralston and John Wayne, in a scene from their current starring production, "Dakota," next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Wing-Commander Barney Rawson Dies at Hamilton

Hamilton, Dec. 24 (CP) — Wing Commander Byron (Barney) F. N. Rawson, D.F.C. and Bar, died last night at his home here following a complete nervous breakdown. He did two complete tours of operations on heavy bombers with the R.C.A.F. overseas.

The late wing commander was born at Smooth Rock Falls, Ont. on December 3, 1922, and received his early education in Brampton and Ottawa.

For the last ten years he had lived in Hamilton, where his father, Capt. the Rev. Norman Rawson is minister of Centenary United Church. He attended Westdale Collegiate and McMaster University.

He enlisted in the RCAF immediately following his 18th. birthday, graduated with distinction and received his commission.

He completed two tours of operations over Germany, one of which was with the famous Pathfinder Squadron where he had two planes P for Peter and B for Baker. He received the D.F.C. and Bar and was invested by the King personally on station in the spring of 1944.

His promotions were rapid and at 21 he became the youngest wing commander in the British Empire. His skill as a pilot and executive ability promoted him to tactics officer at No. 6 Bomber Group, and later operations officer at the famous Linton Air Base. It was during this later period that he undertook his second tour of operations against the better judgment of his superior officers who finally yielded to his insistence.

He returned to Canada during the summer of 1945, and this fall entered Osgoode Hall in Toronto to study law.

He is survived by his parents, the Rev. Norman Rawson and Mrs. Rawson and three sisters.

The funeral will be held in Centenary United Church Wednesday.

Coach Happy Emms Suspended For Two Loop Games

Toronto, Dec. 24 — (CP)—Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association today announced a two-game suspension for coach Happy Emms of the Barrie Junior A team. The suspension was imposed by the O. H. A. executive committee for misconduct and failing to leave the rink when ordered to do so by the referee.

The suspension arises from an incident in a game at Barrie Wednesday Dec. 19, when the Barrie club defeated St. Catharines 4-3 in overtime. Emms was ordered from the rink by referee Pat Patterson of Toronto during a dispute over a goal. Emms was escorted down the aisle of the rink by a policeman but later Patterson saw him sitting in a seat behind the Barrie bench.

The games for which Emms is suspended are in Hamilton Wednesday night and in Toronto against Young Rangers next Saturday afternoon.

Manila's Pied Piper Sentenced

Manila, Dec. 27 (AP)—Clark Castillo was sentenced to death today by a people's court as the pied piper who led almost 1,000 Filipinos to mass execution by the Japanese.

He was the first collaborator to receive the death sentence in a decision which established as an important precedent that membership in the Japanese-sponsored Makapili army constitutes treason.

Last March, Castillo, on pretense that the Japanese were accorded safe conduct, cajoled the population of the village of Lumband in Batangas province, to congregate. The Japanese then killed all except members of the Makapili organization.

Detroit Red Wings Move Into Contention for N.H.L. Lead By Defeating Leafs, Rangers

Team in Third Place With Canadiens Game-and-a-Half Ahead of Hawks

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens had another breathing spell today in their struggle to remain the National Hockey League's top team, but if Detroit Red Wings keep on going the lull will be only temporary.

That became apparent Wednesday night as Detroit defeated New York Rangers 3-2 to move into undisputed possession of third place, just two points behind Chicago Black Hawks.

Canadiens meanwhile thumped Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 before 13,264 fans and stretched their lead over the Hawks to 1½ games. It was the second loss in two nights for the Leafs, who bowed 6-3 to Detroit Christmas night.

The two victories for Detroit served a double purpose — they enabled the Wings to stave off Toronto's threat for the fourth-place spot and shoved the Detroit club past Boston into third place.

At Toronto Joe Benoit broke loose for two unassisted goals in the second period to break a 2-2 deadlock. After that Canadiens retired into a defensive shell which Toronto could not penetrate. Toe Blake and Billy Reay scored the other Montreal goals, with Gus Bodnar and Syl Apps connecting for Leafs.

Pratt and Hill Out

Leafs were without defenceman Babe Pratt and winger Mel Hill, injured in Detroit Tuesday. Canadiens lost the services of Murph Chamberlain near the end of the first period when he suffered a skate gash in his instep.

The game at New York, witnessed by 14,853 fans, was one of the season's roughest and marked by fights, high sticking and hot tempers throughout. Twice in the third period Rangers played with only three men and once Detroit had two men off the ice.

Neil Colville, Alf Pike and Eddie Bruneteau all drew majors, while a scuffle between Detroit's Adam Brown and New York's Tony Leswick resulted in minors for both and an additional two minutes for high sticking to Brown.

Eddie Bruneteau led the Detroit attack with two goals, Hal Jackson scoring the other on a long second-period shot that bounced out of goalie Jim Henry's glove into the net. Lynn Patrick and Edgar Paprade were the New York marksmen.

Rangers had a surge of hope late in the game when a long shot by Neil Colville hit goalie Harry Lumley, bounded out and the red light flashed. But after a long delay for discussion between officials, the shot was declared no goal.

BARRIE FLYERS IN FIFTH PLACE

(By The Canadian Press)

Handing a 11-5 trouncing to Lloyds at Hamilton last night, Barrie Flyers are now basking alone in fifth place in the O.H.A. junior "A" standing, only three points below St. Catharines Falcons. It was the fourth win of the season for the northerners against eight defeats and one tie game.

In their most convincing display of the campaign, Barrie swarmed over the Hamiltonians although Ketola gave the latter a short-lived lead by snatching a quick goal less than a minute after the opening faceoff. The Flyers assumed a 4-1 lead for the first period, coasted a bit in the second stanza when each side scored three and added four more in the final session while holding Lloyds to one tally.

Richardson of Barrie fattened his average by notching a trio for top scoring honors, followed by Kauppi and Lund with a pair apiece, others to bulge the twine being Wilkes, McArthur, Cook and Fife. For the losers who were tasting defeat for the 11th time against three victories, Ketola and Hnatiuk each snared two goals and Kemp accounted for the fifth counter shortly before the finish.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Well, that's that. Another Christmas come and gone leaving a wake of more or less partially ruined digestive systems. Hmm. that goose was delicious but four p.m. is no time to gorge ones self especially after committing various forms of mayhem on a turkey at high noon.

A bit slow in sports circles over the holiday—a few did some skating in the wide open spaces while a number of ski enthusiasts hied themselves to the snowy slopes around Picton way to indulge in their favorite sport.

The hockey squads are getting in a bit of practice and readying themselves for the various schedules which open around the first of the month.

Speaking of hockey there will be some familiar faces seen when the Peterborough squad plays here. According to Cec Purdue, Petes sports scribe: "Not much dope emanating at the moment from the Petes' "A" camp up Omemee way, but it's a good guess to say Honey Tompkins, Bun Kingdon and Art Heal will form one front line, with Percy Nicholls, Joe Blewett and Ned Vitarelli on the other. Ray Harding back between the pipes again. The defence? Dunno yet. Likely Les Burton for one, probably an Omemee puckist, but haven't the haziest yet about the other guys. Not more than a dozen players, plus an extra goalie, may be in uniform at one time, so the team has several more to account for ere opening play. But it'll all come out shortly, as well as the coach's name.

Byron's Boyhood.

Arthur Daley of the New York Times tells the following story of two great golfers.

"The frail little caddy wearing the sun visor was thrilled to death. He finally had the opportunity to see the great Walter Hagen in action. It was back in 1927 that the 15-year-old youngster hitch-hiked from Fort Worth to Dallas to watch the fabulous Haig battle for the PGA championship. With admiring eyes he studied every stroke and never left his idol's side for an instant.

Eventually Sir Walter reached the final against Joe Turnesa. By then he had begun to notice his worshiper with the sun visor. He even spoke to him and the caddy soon was walking on clouds. No more rabid or devoted follower did Hagen have than the kid from Fort Worth.

The match had reached a crucial point and Hagen had to shoot into the sun. The glare bothered the hatless Walter and he glanced over at his new, young friend. That gave him an idea.

"Hey, sonny," he said. "How about lending me that sun visor of yours?"

Would he lend it to him? The boy would have given it to him. With the visor shielding his eyes, the Haig whipped off a magnificent shot and went on to win the championship.

Last week the lad in the sun visor was back at the Glen Garden Country Club in Fort Worth, where he once had been a caddy. A large gallery followed him just as breathlessly as he had once followed the mighty Haig. And in that gallery was Walter Hagen himself. The boy had grown older and had become golf's most spectacular figure, Byron Nelson."

And it still being story telling time here's one told by Steve Owen, famous football coach: It is about the huge fullback on a Negro team who was doing a tremendous job of line-smashing in the big game. His eleven took over on its own goalline and marched steadily down the field. On every play the huge fullback carried the ball. He'd rip off three or four yards at a clip in an awesome display of power. Down he hammered to the ten. He pounded up to the six. Then he rocketed all the way to the six-inch line—and the first quarter ended.

The referee, tending to business, picked up the ball and headed for the opposite end of the field. But the huge fullback had been so intent on scoring that he was utterly unaware of the period's end. There was a look of frustration on his agonized features as he rushed up to the whistle-tooter.

"Mistuh Referee," he said bitterly. "That's the most unfairest penalty Ah ever did see."

JOE DIMAGGIO TRYING COMEBACK

By JACK HAND

New York, Dec. 27 — (AP) — Joe DiMaggio is pedalling like mad on a stationary bicycle, pounding his leg muscles into shape for the grind ahead in a prelude to one of the most interesting comeback attempts of 1946.

Di Mage isn't taking chances on faltering or missing fire when he tries to pick up his New York Yankee career where he left off after the world series of 1942. He saw Hank Greenberg hobble around the outfield and watched Cecil Travis bend his aching back for a grass-cutter that he never touched and he decided that was not for him.

"After watching some of the other fellows last fall at the Yankee Stadium I told myself I would undergo as tough a training schedule as I could stand," said Joe. "That means about three weeks here, two weeks more on my own in Florida and then a start with the early birds at St. Petersburgh."

DiMaggio has little doubt of his ability to regain his former sharpness, pointing out he was used to stepping into the lineup at the last minute, playing games a week or so after his contract trouble had been signed. But he is taking no chances.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 27 (CP)— Has war service in the Pacific theatre "defrosted" frigid Frankie Brimsek?

Could be — But watch those snap answers. As the lawyers say, there may be "extenuating circumstances" surrounding Brimsek's unpretentious record since he returned to National Hockey League competition with Boston Bruins.

The 30-year-old Eveleth, Minn., netminder—hockey's No. 1 backstop before he joined the United States Coast Guard—allowed 18 pucks to filter past in his first three games this season. That six-a-game average hardly seems fitting for Mr. Zero, who won the Vezina Trophy in 1938 and 1942.

But before judgment can be passed on Brimsek's comeback potential, one logical argument should be carefully weighed. It comes from Manager Art Ross, the man who took a long gamble —and won—when he cut reliable tiny Thompson adrift and called upon Brimsek to don the heavy pads.

In essence, the Ross contention is that goaltenders find the comeback process more painful in mid-season. They haven't had a chance to sweat off weight in those strenuous pre-season practices. It takes a while to get the feel of that cumbersome rigging the goalies wear, and once the season starts practices usually are restricted to one hour a day.

"Most people think a goalie doesn't have to do much except stand around in those nets," says Ross. "But condition is just as important for the man between the pipes as it is for any other player—and you can't get it so quickly if you weren't around for the pre-season practices."

Comments Dan (New York Daily Mirror) Parker:

"Before Red Dutton starts trying to induce the reactionary club owners of the National Hockey League to expand their circuit to take in the Pacific coast, why can't he persuade them to put a major league team in New York?"

Around the circuit: An error by rink designers robbed the senior intermediate league in Alberta of hockey with an international flavor—but officials in Great Falls, Mont., hope to rectify the oversight shortly. Before the war started, Great Falls erected a modern, well-appointed community centre including an artificial ice rink—and then discovered the ice surface dimensions—160 feet long and 80 wide—were shorter than the prescribed minimum for the puck sport. Now it's reported Great Falls is going to try again—with a berth in the Alberta senior league as an objective.... Maple Leaf Gardens is going big-time. They're handing out free drinks (soft) in the press box at the hockey games now—and most of the Toronto writers received Christmas turkeys "with the compliments of the Gardens."

TULSA OILERS BEAT FORT WORTH

(By The Canadian Press)

Tulsa Oilers came from behind in the third period Wednesday night to defeat Fort Worth Rangers 5-4 and retain their fourth place spot in the United States Hockey League.

In a second league game, Dallas defeated the cellar-dwelling Minneapolis Millers 6-4.

The Tulsans punched two goals into the net in the last period after the Rangers had led all the way except for a short while in the first period. With the Rangers leading 4-3, Vic Miles tied the score for Tulsa half way through the third period. The Oilers moved out in front again on John Morrow's second goal of the evening at 16:20 and held their lead for the rest of the game.

Other scorers for Tulsa were Scotty Mai and Emile Dagenais. Scorers for the losers were Al Rittinger, Andy Brown, Frank Bowman and Donald Culley.

Dallas was led by Peewee Read, Louis Smrke and Pete Kapusta in its defeat of the Millers. Read and Sammy Fasano of the Millers scored a pair in the first period to tie the game up. Read scored the lone goal of the second frame, making it 2-1 for Dallas. Kapusta, Smrke, Thorpe and Mike Shabaga all scored for Dallas in the final period, while George Agar and Ernie Trigg scored for Minneapolis. Trigg led the Millers' unsuccessful offensive, scoring twice in the third period and ending an assist on Fasano's marker in the first.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

By VICTOR EUBANK

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Specialties, including liquors, accounted for several wide advances in today's stock market although many leaders were unable to extend the upswing of the preceding session.

Trends turned a shade irregular after an active opening and dealings slackened appreciably. While plus marks were plentiful near the fourth hour, numerous fractional losers presisted.

Schenley opened around an hour late on a 2,600-share block, up 4 at a high of 99 and subsequently extended the jump. In front fractions to three or more points most of the time were Distillers Corp., National Distillers, Hiram Walker, Macy, Douglas Aircraft, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical.

Occasional stumblers were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Boeing, Kennecott and Western Union "A".

Canadian issues at mid-day featured liquors with Distillers Seagrams and Hiram Walker up 2 1-2 and 1 3-4 respectively. Canadian Pacific was unchanged and Dome Mines and Lake Shore were off 1-4 and 1-8.

Strike Arbiter Now in Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 27 — (CP)—Mr. Justice Ivan C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada arrived here today to act as arbiter in the dispute over union security between the Ford Motor Company of Canada and Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

Scheduled to reach Windsor yesterday, Mr. Justice Rand arrived by train from Ottawa after his plane had been grounded by bad weather.

Appointed by Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Federal Minister of Labor, Mr. Justice Rand said today he was awaiting the arrival of H. R. Pettigrove, Industrial Relations Officer of the Federal Department of Labor in the Maritimes, who has been appointed umpire of labor relations in the Ford dispute.

Meanwhile, offices of the Ford Motor Company were reopened yesterday following the return to work of all office staff. The company has vacated its temporary offices in a hotel here. Workers were being called back steadily and company spokesmen said the return to work would be progressive as the plant was recommissioned.

BREAKS WINDOW PLAYING "SHINNY"

The icy surface of the market square between the city hall and the police station made an ideal place for local youths to play "shinny" over the holiday, but too many windows can be a source of remorse.

At least that is what one local youth was reminded over the holiday when in putting his new hockey stick to use he let the puck fly without giving too much consideration to direction. Result was a broken city hall window and his puck lost in the farmers' market building. The lad told police he would contact his mother and that the damage would be paid for.

Newspaper readers don't miss a good story because it isn't on the front page. A scientific study shows that many of the best read stories are on the back pages.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

"But that wouldn't be so much fun," Jocelyn interrupted, still unreasonable. "We had everything p-p-planned and we were going to do s-s-so many things—" And twisting her body about and putting her head on the back of her chair, she burst out into bitter crying.

Mrs. Partridge, who had risen with a grandchild in her arms, looked down at the bowed bright head thoughtfully for a full minute. Then she rapped it gently with her thimble.

"You're behaving very foolishly, Jocelyn; I don't know that I've seen you act quite so silly," she said calmly. "You're a woman, now, and you have to act like a woman. To get yourself mixed up in a scandal wouldn't do you any good, and would undo everything you've done for Norma Fordyce. Now you stop it. Let her go off with her father under the charge of some married woman, and you wait here. You're no worse off than you were before this whole thing was talked of a few weeks ago. Bring Rosemary in, will you, dear? They both are awake, and I think I'll let them play in the kitchen. It's nice and warm in there. There are conventions, Jocelyn; there are things that you just can't do. So you should be glad someone reminded you of them in time!"

When Jocelyn picked up Norma at the theatre an hour later the younger girl looked at her sharply. "You've been crying, Jotsy?" she said.

"Yes. I got upset about something. You've got good eyes!" Jocelyn said smilingly.

"Who was mean to you?"

"Nobody. It's only—now be a sport, Norma, and don't tell anyone I've told you this. But Sandy and your aunt Jane feel. . ."

Jocelyn went into the matter somewhat, hesitatingly, wondering just how much to say and how much to conceal. The effect, surprisingly was to make Norma laugh.

"Old snotty busybodies!" she said. "What business is it of theirs! Never mind, darling, we'll be off a week from tomorrow no matter what they say! Why don't you talk to Dad?"

"I thought I would. And promise me you'll not say anything until we see what he thinks."

"I'll do anything you say, dearest. But if they think for one minute that we aren't going to sail next Saturday, they can go sit on a tack!" Her confidence, baseless as Jocelyn knew it to be had the effect of cheering them both, and when she had a chance to speak to Philip that evening, it was with considerably more hope in her manner.

He listened thoughtfully, not looking at her.

"M ymother's just been saying something of the sort," Philip muttered when she paused. He kicked at a log in the fireplace, and looked up to smile at her dubiously. He was going out to dinner; he was in formal evening dress, looking his groomed and handsome best.

"Your mother! But she was the one who talked it all over with us. She's known about it from the beginning."

"I know. I suppose this is some of Sandy's work."

"And Mrs. Kimberly."

"That so? Did Jane put her hooks in? Well, they evidently worked to some purpose on my mother. She was all agog tonight. I mustn't let Norma in for any more publicity or we'd have Janet all over us. All that!"

Jocelyn was unable to say anything; the bitterness of her disappointment seemed to choke her.

"I'd been looking forward to it; it seemed as if we might have a few days' fun," Philip presently said. "But we can't take a chance on Norma's mother."

"No, of course not," Jocelyn agreed dully. "Norma'll be disappointed," she added, with a little effort.

"She'll not be any more disappointed than I am!" the man said, half aloud. "But it's had the effect—I mean all this women's nonsense—" he went on, "of making me see something that I mightn't have seen quite so quickly before. Of course you know what I mean?"

Jocelyn looked at him quickly in the soft half-light of the library. Philip took both her hands, and for her the world seemed to turn upside down.

"You know that I had to find out sooner or later what had given me back my daughter, and why this trip meant so much to me, don't you?" he questioned her again.

Speechless, swallowing with a dry throat, she looked steadily at him.

"Can't you say 'yes' to that, Jocelyn?" he asked.

"I don't know what you mean," she whispered after a long moment.

"Why, it meant that I've found you," he said simply. "Everything's been twisting about and changing, and I've not known what was the matter with me, and now I know. While my mother was talking to me today it came to me like a flash .So there's something for you to think of while I'm at my dinner, my dear!"

"Don't go!" she managed to say.

"I have to go." His tone was amused, kind, not at all flustered. "But I want you to know how I stand. I've fallen in love with you, as if I were a boy," he said. "I'm forty-two, I've a daughter of seventeen. She'd always be a problem to us both, even after she married. You know exactly what a madhouse this is. But the fact remains that I love you. Just how will it work, out I haven't any idea; you'll have to be the one to fit the pieces together. But if we aren't to be allowed to go to Honolulu without a chaperon, perhaps if we got married, they'd worry less about us. Now I'm going, but you think it all over, and we'll talk some more tomorrow! Don't look so astonished," Philip finished, laughing. "The most natural thing in the world for anyone who is in your neighborhood at all is to fall in love with you. This may be the solution; anyway, I hope it is. Good night, my dear."

Philip was gone, and Jocelyn was standing perfectly still in the big shadowy room, breathless, ecstatic, wondering if she had imagined the whole scene. His cigarette was still smoking on the cinnabar tray; she heard his brief word of thanks to one of the men, as he took his big coat and silk hat in the hall. No, it hadn't been a dream.

But he couldn't have said said what she thought he had said! Philip Fordyce, the most important man her fortune had ever brought within her circle of friendships. Wanting to marry her! Her head whirled.

Why, that would mean—that would meant everything she had ever wanted in the world! That would mean security, a place of her own, a home, a chance to establish friendships and build what she wanted into her life. That would mean that these brilliant, enviable,, maddeningly arrogant women would have to take her into their calculations, would have to consider her seriously whether they liked it or not. It would mean that she had magnificent Phil behind her, sustaining her and loving her in everything she did.

Loving her! That was the miracle. She couldn't help loving him. Jocelyn had told herself days earlier that it was this man's fascination that kept her here at Hill Acres. It was impossible for her now to think of living anywhere but near him, if only to hear his voice occasionally, if only to catch a glimpse of him now and then. But for him to love her? Why should he?

Half the glamour of the proposed trip to Hawaii had been because Philip was to head the little party. The moments of her bitterest disappointment, as the plan had faded from probability, had been caused by the thought, not quite recognized at the time, but recognizable now, that she would be parted from his company for a long two weeks.

Now that consideration was banished. Those few incredible minutes in the library had killed it; in its place was a confusion of hope and fear that made her feel an actual physical exhaustion. Long after Norma was asleep she lay awake, thinking.

In the end she said to herself that Philip had perhaps spoken in an unthinking mood of gaiety and good nature, and that he might never make another allusion to the subject. She would never bring it up again, naturally, and therefore she must begin again to plan for whatever alterations in the plans for the trip were necessary. Someone must go with them, that was obvious. The question was, who could go suitably, adequately, without destroying all the pleasure of Philip, Norma and herself?
off for his tennis game at the

The next day Philip was gone country club when she and Norma came downstairs at about ten o'clock. Some girls had come over to talk of a charity rummage sale with Norma, and Norma was delighted to take them upstairs again to her sitting room and dazzle them with the magnificence and variety of the things she was giving to the sale.

Meggy Brice and Peggy Wilson quite shamelessly appraised a dozen or more sweaters at a dollar apiece, and bought several with no further formality. Meggy bought two French hats, and Jocelyn was stung into sudden realization that she was paying a dollar and a half for a Bond Street topcoat, of tweed so soft it was furry, and so flexible that the whole thing might almost have been put through a hoop.

"We never price anything at more than a dollar and a half!" Peggy said, with a meritorious air.

The young ladies, after some beautifying processes, decided to go to the club for lunch. This afternoon Jocelyn and Norma had a special reason for wanting to watch the tennis, for at luncheon time the news spread through the big dining room that Phil Fordyce and Joe Carter had qualified for the finals in a 6-4, 7-9 match against Bill Trent and the senior Ned Randall that morning. The finals would begin at two.

It was exciting to find places in the bleachers, and watch the easy pendulum movement of the first rallies. Every boy and girl Norma knew was also watching, and Jocelyn watched Phil, and thought that he was the most wonderful man in the world.

The sun shone down on his brown hair and his burned brown skin; his sport shirt was open at the neck, and from the brief sleeves and beneath the flannels he wore, his rounded, firm arms and legs worked with the precision of pistons. Now and then, between games, he brushed back his hair with his forearm, wiped his forehead with the same movement, and looked over to laugh at Norma and Jocelyn.

"Whew!" he said. "Those boys are too much for your poor old dad, Potty!"

"The umpire gave them every decision," Norma said accusingly, and everyone within hearing laughed.

"Are we out without Sandy," Philip said, falling into step beside Jocelyn as they turned toward the clubhouse.

"We haven't seen either her or your mother this morning."

"I'm going to take a shower," said Philip. "You going right home?.. Good. I'll follow you and come up to Spotty's room and we can talk. Been thinking over what I said to you yesterday?"

"I've been trying to believe that you said it." Jocelyn looked up seriously from under the brim of a new hat. For a second he looked down at her with a thoughtful half-smile on his face, then she felt his fingers catch hers in an instant's grip.

"I said it all right," he said, and Jocelyn had those words to ponder as she went home. Just that much certitude she had wanted during the long hours of the night. Now that she had it, her heart was already making fresh demands. She was sure; but she wanted to be more sure, to have everyone know, to have it settled beyond dispute or question. These women would laugh at the mere idea of Phil Fordyce seriously considering marriage with the governess. They must not be allowed to laugh. It must all be settled, and quickly.

"Oh, I couldn't ever do anything else now!" Jocelyn said to herself, trembling, as she and Norma went into the big house and turned toward the great vault of the stairway. As they did so a woman began to descend, stopped, assumed a pose and bent a smile of incredible sweetness upon Norma. A slender, girlish-looking woman with soft lustless fair hair, dyed to a color that was not quite gold, not quite brown, braided about her head, and a soft, powder-blue gown of filmy silk wrapped tightly about her body and buttoned snugly up her long throat to her chin, and spreading and flowing in waves about her knees and feet.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking to school with Puds Simkins and we started to have a argument about which we would rather be, a cop or a fireman, Puds saying a cop and me saying a fireman, and Puds said, Okay, go ahead and be a fireman if you want, go ahead and get bernt all the time, except when you're getting wet.

Okay, go ahead and be a cop and walk your beet all day without even dasting to sit down on somebody's front steps no matter what your feet like, I said, and Puds said, Cops dont have to sit down after they get used to leening against things. And if you're a cop everybody's polite to you, even people that dont like you, he said.

That's just the trouble, that makes it just twice as hard for you to start a argument, because you have to do all the yelling and conderdicting while the other guy stays polite without helping you any, and the first thing you know your face gets red once too often and stays that way, but a fireman can break up your whole house with his axe and you cant even sue him for dammages or even claim it wasn't necesserry, I said.

Yeh, but suppose he finds out afterwards that you weren't evan insured, oh boy I bet his conscience would hert him, Puds said, and I said, No it wouldn't, either. just the opposite, because he knows it'll teach you to get insured the next time, so the whole thing will be a big favor to you and some day you'll probably thank him.

Okay, why dont you go ahead and be a fireman and fall off a ladder for bad luck? Puds said, and I said, All right I will, why dont you go ahead and be a cop and arrest innocent people with gilty expressions?

Being the end of the subject with nobody winning.

MEYER SENTENCED BY COURT TO BE SHOT

Top Wartime Allies Re-united After Parley

Atomic Controls Assigned to U.N.O. By Big 3 Powers

Russia Also Wins Voice In Control of Beaten Japan

By GRAHAM HOVEY

Washington, Dec. 28—(AP)—Russia was aligned today behind Anglo-American-Canadian proposals to put atomic energy controls up to the United Nations and in turn won a voice in control of beaten Japan.

These two results highlighted the 11-day meeting of big three foreign ministers in Moscow—a meeting which officially re-united the top wartime allies in their efforts to solve the formidable problems of peace.

Breaking a deadlock in their relations which lasted nearly three months, the United States, Russia and Britain also agreed in a communique made public simultaneously in the three capitals last night on:

1. The necessity for a unified, democratic and independent China under the National government now headed by President Chiang Kai-Shek.

2. The establishment of a provisional government for Korea with prospect of complete independence for that country in five years.

3. Broadening the governments of Romania and Bulgaria and plans concluding peace treaties with them, along with Italy, Hungary and Finland.

Architects of these agreements were state secretary Byrnes of the United States; Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain, and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia. They hammered them out in a conference which—in results—provided a sharp contrast to the London meeting of foreign ministers last September.

Yet many vexing problems remained unsettled—and unmentioned. Among them are the uprising in Soviet-occupied Northern Iran; the issue of access to the Dardanelles straights; Germany's western border, and a common Big Three policy on the Franco government of Spain.

Iranian Issue Discussed.

Mr. Bevin told reporters in Moscow last night the Iranian issue had been discussed at length but without final agreement. He added, however, that the March 2 date for withdrawal of Russian and British troops from the little middle eastern country "still stands." The United States has promised to have its forces out by Jan. 1.

The meeting cleared the air in British-American relations with Russia and heightened chances for a successful first session of the United Nations Assembly in London next month.

Mr. Byrnes told newspapermen before leaving Moscow that the conference had been "very constructive" in accomplishments and in restoring "cordial relations."

In disposing, for the present, of the touchy atomic energy question, Russia agreed to join Britain and the United States in sponsoring a resolution in the United Nations Assembly which would establish a control commission, responsible to the powerful 11-member security council.

11 Representatives.

The atomic commission would consist of representatives from the 11 countries holding council seats (the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China hold permanent ones) and Canada, which shares atomic energy secrets. It would work toward the exact goals outlined Nov. 15 by Prime Ministers Attlee and Mackenzie King and President Truman.

These include international exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends; control of atomic energy to ensure its use for peaceful purposes only; elimination of atomic and other weapons adaptable to mass destruction, and safeguards against violations and evasions of the control regulations.

For control of Japan, the Big Three foreign ministers agreed to establish in Tokyo a four-power council of the United States, Russia, Britain and China and an 11-country far eastern policy-making commission in Washington, to replace the present 10-member advisory commission.

One United States official concerned with the far eastern policy-making machinery said that as a practical matter, the present advisory commission probably would become the new policy-making body, with the addition of Russia which previously refused to participate. The commission now is en route to Japan for an inspection trip.

MacArthur Administrator

It appeared that because Gen. MacArthur has been the administrator of policy in Japan, not the maker of it, his powers would be left pretty much intact.

In brief, the communique assigned the 11-power commission to:

1. Draft policies to speed Japanese compliance with the surrender terms.

2. Review, "on the request of any member," and directive issued to Gen. MacArthur or any action taken by him "involving policy decisions within the jurisdiction of the commission."

3. Consider other matters assigned to it by agreement of member governments.

Veto power given the United States, Russia, Britain and China would enable each to block any attempt to change any directives which have gone out to Gen. MacArthur since the occupation began.

The three powers will proceed with plans for concluding peace settlements with Italy, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland, along lines announced in a preliminary communique issued Christmas Day.

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec. 28. (AP)—Japanese viewed with surprise and dismay today the Big Three decision for establishment of a four-power occupation council for Japan, which most observers regarded as a Russian victory in international bargaining.

Gen. MacArthur studied the joint communique outlining the creation of an 11-country far eastern policy-making commission and an Allied Control Council—but he had no comment immediately.

By late afternoon, Japan had not been advised officially of the Allied decision and, therefore, the government foreign office had not formally told Emperor Hirohito of the development—which may have an important bearing as to his future status.

Government officials declined comment, but an undercurrent of concern was apparent. Typical Japanese comment seemed to be:

"Aren't things going all right now? What is the need for an Occupation Council."

The principal immediate Japanese reaction was the expressed belief that Russia had won concessions for the international council in bargaining for settlement of Korean and Manchurian problems. Some observers said they considered it a Russian victory to the detriment of the other Allies.

Apprehension over the fate of Hirohito and the Emperor system appeared to increase, as the Japanese recalled that both Russia and China had previously proposed eliminating the system.

United States circles in Tokyo expressed concern over the future, saying that establishment of the new council might mean radical changes in policy—which they generally have found suitable thus far.

Red Cross Establishes Free Blood Transfusion Service for Civilians

Toronto, Dec. 28. (CP)—A free national blood transfusion service for civilians has been established by the Canadian Red Cross Society under Dr. W. Stuart Stanbury, the Society announced last night.

The service will get underway some time in the new year, perhaps in a few months, officials said today.

The new $1,000,000 service will provide all Canadian hospitals free of charge with all necessary blood, plasma and transfusion equipment—with the stipulation it must also be provided free to patients.

Dr. Stanbury's appointment is to take effect January 1.

UXBRIDGE BOY FOUND DEAD WITH BULLET IN HEAD

Accidentally Shot And Body Dragged to Bush And Hidden, Another Boy Tells Police

Uxbridge, Ont., Dec. 28 — (CP)—The body of five-year-old Ronald Paradine was found in bushland about a quarter of a mile from his home Thursday night after a posse of about 200 neighbors searched for two hours. There was a bullet hole in the child's head.

Uxbridge is about 20 miles northeast of Toronto.

After the boy was found, Beverly Brown, 12, Toronto, told police the young boy was accidentally shot in a shed at the side of the house. Brown said he dragged the lad's body about a quarter of a mile into the bush and hid it there.

Brown was employed on a farm owned by Paradine's uncle. He did not say how the accident happened.

Search Instituted

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Paradine, were attending the funeral of Mrs. Paradine's sister in Uxbridge at the time. First word of the boy's disappearance was received when Brown phoned Ronald's parents to say their son was missing.

A posse of neighbors was formed immediately and a search instituted.

Provincial Police are holding Brown for further questioning.

Authorities said Brown was working on Henry Paradine's brother's farm and had come there from the Ontario Training School for Boys at Bowmanville last October.

The searching neighbors discovered the boy's body about 8 p.m. last night.

Left Playing in Shed

Mrs. Ernest Paradine, wife of Brown's employer, said the boys had been left at home with other children when the family went to the funeral services. They were playing in a shed at the side of the house, she said.

Two of Ronald's brothers, eight-year-old George and seven-year-old Keith, had gone sleigh riding on the highway about half a mile from the house. Ken Peterson, a neighbor's boy, stayed in the house to mind the Paradine baby. Three other Paradine children, two boys and a girl, were all at home but knew nothing of the tragedy.

The two families live in a large brick farmhouse about three miles from Uxbridge.

"The first idea we had that anything was wrong," Mrs. Ernest Paradine said, "was when Beverly phoned us at Uxbridge and said he couldn't find Ronald. We came home and neighbors started out looking for him.

"Everybody in the district was there and some people from Uxbridge and we called the police from Whitby.

Told How It Happened

"When they found Ronald's body the police started asking questions and some time later Beverly told us how it happened.

"He said he had been playing with Ronald in the shed, and they had been climbing on the rafters and got the rifle. The rifle was hanging on the wall up out of harm's way, I think there were some bullets in a box on one of the rafters.

"They have often played there but had never touched the gun before. Beverly said he didn't know it was loaded, and when Ronald was shot he took him out in the woods and left him there. Then he came back and phoned us and said he couldn't find Ronald.

CANADA WANTS REPRESENTATION ON CONTROL BODY

Also Will Request Voice on Security Council of United Nations

Ottawa, Dec. 28. (CP)—Canada hopes to obtain representation on both the United Nations Security Council and the Atomic Energy Commission proposed by the Moscow Conference, it was learned today.

The text of the agreement between Foreign Secretaries Molotov of Russia, Bevin of Britain and Byrnes of the United States, specifically names Canada as a member of the proposed commission in a resolution drafted for presentation to the United Nations General Assembly.

The resolution would set up a Commission composed of a representative of each member of the Council "and Canada, when that country is not a member of the Security Council." And, Canada has been invited, along with the Big Three, France and China, to sponsor the resolution at the General Assembly meeting next month.

If this Commission is approved by the Assembly, Canada would be assured of a seat on the Atomic Control body whether or not she is a member of the Security Council.

It is felt here the Dominion should be granted representation on both bodies because of her position as one of three holders of the secret of atomic bomb production, as owner of the world's second largest deposits of uranium and as one of the larger active belligerents in the war.

Election of six non-permanent members of the Security Council will be made at the same general assembly meeting in London.

It was reported from Washington that Australia is making a strong bid for election as one of the non-permanent members. If she is successful, it is believed possible that Canada might not get a seat on the council.

However, it is known the Canadian government expects Canada to get a seat and likely will do everything possible to see that she gets one.

HOUSE OCCUPANTS ROBBED

Winnipeg, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Eight persons were locked in the basement of their home for two hours last night while three hold-up men escaped with $200 worth of jewelry, $30 cash and bonds of undetermined value.

The occupants of the house Mr. and Mrs. Morris Yanovsky and their baby daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Yanovsky, along with three visitors, were herded into the cellar by two of the bandits who brandished revolvers, while a third stood guard.

WOMAN STOPS HOLDUP

Brantford, Dec. 28. (CP) — Police last night credited a woman's scream with stopping a holdup at nearby Echol Place. They said two men entered a store operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Barnes. A third man waited outside in an autmobile with the motor running. The men left when Mrs. Barnes began screaming.

FORTY PERSONS ROUNDED UP IN TORONTO SEARCH

Police Seek Information on Slayer of Meyer Tobias, Merchant

Toronto, Dec. 28 —(CP)—Forty persons were rounded up for questioning yesterday and today in connection with the murder Wednesday night of Meyer Tobias, 54-year-old north Toronto merchant, as the greatest manhunt in the city's history continued for three 'teen-aged youths who shot him to death.

Police said they were informed the four men involved in the Tobias slaying escaped from the northern Toronto area by boarding a southbound Yonge Street tram after abandoning their automobile. One of the men waited outside the Tobias store in the car while the slaying took place.

Police did not disclose their source of information, said they were trying to trace anyone who saw the four thugs on the trolley and possibly learn where they got off.

Officers pressed an all-out drive against crimes of violence and drunken driving, combing the city and suburbs for information on the Tobias slaying and other crimes. But last night thugs held up a drug store, looted a second drug store, smashed the windows of a fur store, where $1,450 in fur coats was taken, and robbed a house.

Robbers hurled a brick through the plate glass window of the Universal Fur Sales on Bloor Street West in central Toronto. Police Constable David Linton saw the vehicle drive away after the crash and riddled it with bullets. The car, stolen earlier, was found abandoned a few blocks away from the scene of the robbery.

Informed an attempt was being made to crack the safe of the Glass Art Cut China Company in eastern Toronto, police surrounded the place and arrested Jack Rowen, 16, Allan MacLean, 16, and Frank Hopper, on shop-breaking charges.

Two young men, one carrying a German automatic, held up the Pascoe and Newman drug store on Yonge Street in the downtown area, took $100 from the cash register and Pascoe's wrist watch and overcoat. The automatic was pressed against Pascoe's face and he said the thought of Tobias' fate impelled him to yield without resistance.

Detectives said they were at a "dead end" in their investigation of the Tobias killing, but that revenge was a possible motive.

Officials said they were doing their best to cope with the crime wave but the strength of the police force, 998 men "is insufficient." They said "unemployment which has developed in the reconversion period is responsible for some of the crime."

After Chief Constable D. C. Draper issued a two-fisted warning against drunken driving which, he said, "continues in the city to a degree which staggers the imagination of our citizens," the Globe and Mail today headed a front-page editorial "Time to Get Tough."

BRITISH TOMMIES ENTER JERUSALEM TO ENFORCE LAW

Move into Tel Aviv Following Bombing And Gunfire Which Killed 9 in Two Cities

Jerusalem, Dec. 28—(CP)—Steel-helmeted tommies of the Royal Warwickshire regiment and the British 6th airborne division moved into Jerusalem and Tel Aviv today to enforce a tight curfew in muncipal and Jewish residential quarters following bombings and gunfire which last night killed at least nine persons and injured 11 in the two cities.

The terroristic attack in Jerusalem was made on police headquarters buildings. Eye-witnesses were quoted as saying that six young men—some carrying pistols, some bomb-filled haversacks—shot their way to the gates of the building where they placed the explosives which turned the place into a shambles.

An official announcement said the attacks on district police headquarters in Tel Aviv, all-Jewish city which was the scene of riots last month, were carried out by 50 steel-helmeted Jews wearing British battle dress.

One dispatch said 12 persons had been killed in the skirmishes.

All communications in Jerusalem, including the telephone system in the Jewish area of the city were suspended.

Men of the famed 6th division, veterans of last year's battle of Arnhem, Holland, took over Tel Aviv and Palestine policemen on traffic duty were protected by paratroops with tommy guns.

Business at Standstill

Business was almost at a standstill as investigations into the attacks began. Thousands of persons in the curfew area were confined to their homes, some morning newspapers did not appear.

Early in the day truckloads of civilians were seen rumbling up to detention barracks for questioning in connection with the bombing which destroyed the criminal investigation headquarters.

A Jewish agency spokesman here said the attack on the Jerusalem police headquarters clearly was not the work of the Jewish defence organization Haganah but appeared to have the customary forms of the extremist Irgun Zvei Leumi Organization which concentrated on police stations.

Cause of Attack

He attributed the attack to the announcement last week that all Jewish immigration into Palestine had been stopped.

He said that Haganah reaction to that statement was to bring a shipload of immigrants without certificates into the country while Irgun Zvei Leumi apparently decided on terrorist attacks.

The simultaneous attacks in Tel Aviv, made on district police headquarters and an arms store of the Royal Engineers north of the city, caused the death of an Arab telephone operator and a British soldier.

Killed in the explosion in Jerusalem were a British assistant police superintendent, two British constables and four Basutoland (South African) military policemen. The superintendent of police was among those seriously injured.

5,000 Tons Bombs Breaking Loose In Liberty Ship Menace Crew

New York, Dec. 28. (AP)—The Henry D. Thoreau, a Liberty ship out of Naples, Italy, for Cape May, N.J., advised the navy here today that 5,000 tons of bombs were breaking loose and "if they give way entirely nothing can save us." The Navy said it was not a troopship.

The Thoreau reported she was about 420 miles southwest of the Azores, the Navy said, adding she had a normal crew of about 40 men.

The message, received by the Navy at 7 a.m., said the bombs had been stowed in a "tween-decks hatch." The bombs probably were some of those unused in Italy and were being returned to an ammunition depot in the United States, the Navy said.

An unidentified ship radioed the Navy she was standing by the Thoreau, but could do nothing immediately to assist.

Details were unavailable, the Navy said.

Found Responsible For Deaths of 18 Canadian Prisoners

Shooting of 7 Not Heard Another Charge Involving

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 28. (CP Cable)—Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, former S.S. Regimental and Divisional commander, today was sentenced by a Canadian military court to be shot after he was found guilty on three of five charges against him in connection with the deaths of 48 Canadian prisoners of war.

Standing bareheaded before the court, Meyer was told by Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster, of Picton, Ont., and Halifax, Court president, that the findings and sentence of the court were subject to confirmation.

The charges on which Meyer was sentenced were that he incited his troops to deny quarter to Allied troops; that he was responsible for his troops killing seven Canadian prisoners of war at the ancient Abbey of Ardennes, his headquarters, in the early stages of the Normandy campaign, and that he was responsible when his troops killed 11 other prisoners of war at the Abbey.

Acquitted on Two Charges

Yesterday Meyer was acquitted on two other charges—that he was responsible for the killing by his troops of 23 Canadian prisoners near Buron and Authie in France, and that he ordered his troops to shoot the seven prisoners killed at the Abbey.

Another charge involving the shooting of seven other Canadian prisoners of war June 17, 1944, was to have been heard today, but when the court opened Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, announced he had been authorized by the general officer convening the court, Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, not to proceed.

The morning was taken up with the hearing of character witnesses including Capt. J. A. Renwick, of Toronto, Meyer's wife and two German army officers.

Meyer himself addressed the court before it retired.

The case now is in the hands of Gen. Vokes who can confirm the findings and the sentence. Meyer has the right to petition for appeal of his sentence within 48 hours and even if it is confirmed, he can appeal to Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds of Kingston, Ont., who, as Canadian commander in the European theatre, can mitigate the sentence although he cannot change findings of the court.

Lt.-Col. M. W. Andrew of Stratford, Ont., chief defence counsel, now goes on leave and Meyer's case is in the hands of Capt. F. R. Plourde of Edmunston, N.B. who will see the condemned man tomorrow to determine if he will petition for clemency.

Brig. R. J. Orde, Judge Advocate General at Canadian Military Headquarters, Ottawa, now is at Gen. Vokes headquarters and can advise the theatre commander on legal points.

Wife Pleads for Husband

One of the trial's most dramatic moments came near the end of today's session when Frau Meyer bare-headed and wan, took the stand to speak for the husband she has been married to for 11 years and to whom she has borne five children including a two-month-old son.

"I have a very good husband," she said, "and I have been happily married. My husband also has been a good father to our family."

She paused helplessly, turning to Capt. Plourde and then to Gen. Foster as though for some hint as to what she could say. Their faces were set and stern.

Forcing a smile she went on: "I cannot say anything else; just that I am supremely happy with my husband and the children are very much attached to him. They cried when I had to leave and could not bring them along to see him. We all were very happy when he was home from fighting."

Capt. Renwick, who was adjutant of a British Columbia regiment when he was captured in Normandy Sept. 9, 1944, said he had been taken to Meyer's headquarters for interrogation and was shown by an officer in Meyer's presence a copy of the Canadian army newspaper Maple Leaf which contained an order of the day from Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the Canadian army, relating to the murder of Canadian prisoners of war.

The officer told Capt. Renwick "We do not fight that way." Shortly afterwards Meyer talked with the Canadian officer for 15 minutes through an interpreter. Meyer said he could not understand why the Allies were fighting.

"The impression I had of this officer (Meyer) was that he was an able and capable man who believed in that for which he was fighting," Capt. Renwick said. "At no time was I threatened or intimidated by the officer or the men there. He himself behaved perfectly and his conduct was that of a gentleman and an officer."

Meyer was the last man to address the court. He declared: — "Here in front of the German public I wish to say that in the hands of the Canadian Army I have been treated as a soldier and the law proceedings have been fairly conducted."

He said he had been a soldier for 17 of his 33 years and it was to be assumed that he was in a position to educate and train soldiers. He said he had wished to make his regiment an example of "the youthful power of our people" and trained his men "according to international soldierly ordinances."

Throughout most of the testimony today Meyer sat erect with his head back and listened intently. His calm broke, however, when his wife took the stand. Leaning forward he clasped and reclasped his hands or clutched his bowed head and would not look at her.

Kinsmen Give Christmas Party For C.A.S. Wards

The full meaning of the Christmas season was appreciated by approximately 20 wards of the Children's Aid Society when on Christmas Eve at Stirling the children were visited by members of the local Kinsmen club who had presents and candies galore to pass out to the kiddies.

But presents were not all that was enjoyed by the unfortunate kiddies as in a delightful Christmas program the children heard some of the best vocal and instrumental artists from the city as they sang and played loved carols and other Christmas numbers.

Silver-voiced Ronald Elmy was heard in "White Christmas" as well as in another appropriate number, while Arthur Duby also was heard in several numbers, including "Till the End of Time". Adding to the enjoyment of the occasion Ed Shortt in his own inimitable dialect fashion told the story of Columbus and his discovery of America. Two of Belleville's most able musicians, Fred Stone and Bruce Sills, with their violin and accordion, supplied the musical accompaniment for carol singing with Ernie Coleborne acting as song leader. Popular William Navin, acted as accompanist for the solo numbers.

Jamie Clarke was in top form in his role as Santa and the kiddies' eyes popped when this representative of St. Nicholas handed out presents and candies, demanding a kiss from each of the recipients. Master of ceremonies for the evening was Kinsmen president Harry Rollins.

Help War Victims.

Prince Edward County has an enviable record for its generosity toward worthy causes. One of the chief of these is the British War Victims Fund of which Phil Dodds conducts a local auxiliary.

During December, voluntary donations were received for the Christmas Cheer for British children. These totalled $644.53 and brought the year's total to $2,009.53. Since the fund opened, $26,716.30 has been contributed by the 15,000 county residents. There has been no canvassing, no tag days or special effort, beyond mention of the need, and for the greater part donations have been small but made regularly.

Greater Changes In Agriculture Can be Expected

Picton, Dec. 28 — There will be even greater changes in agriculture and farmers must organize to meet these changes, declared Alex McKinney, Brampton, president of the Ontario Plowmen's Association and past president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, in an address at the annual meeting of Prince Edward Federation here.

"Other branches of the community have organized and farmers must do so too that they may take their rightful place, and see that their interests are properly taken care of," declared Mr. McKinney. "We must make sure that the standard of living and living conditions of those engaged in agriculture, are what is our just right."

Speeding up of transportation, which opened up a broader market and increased competition were among the changes cited by the speaker, in urging that farmers recognize changes and organize to cope with them.

3,500,000 Farmers

"We have seen the farm population recede from 75 to 25 per cent of the total population. Today there are 3,500,000 people engaged in agriculture, with 8,500,000 others as consumers. To secure reforms, we must have the support of these consumers, Mr. McKinney pointed out.

Agriculture must adjust itself to the mechanization of farming and farmers on a larger scale, said the speaker.

Cost of operating a farm has greatly increased, and farmers must take in greater revenue than was the case 25 years ago, he said.

"Success as farmers individually depends on the efficiency of the plant we operate. The greatest asset we have is the soil — it is our duty to pass it on to our children in the same fertility we received it.

Not Organized

"In the national economy, agriculture is the only branch unorganized. This means we are placing ourselves in an inferior position in relation to Canadian welfare. The task of the Federation of Agriculture is to unify farm organization already in existence and to unify farm opinion.

"In the Federation of Agriculture are commodity and co-operative groups totalling 60 to 70 thousand people," said Mr. McKinney.

Speaker Thanked

The speaker was introduced by Morley Williams and thanked by S. D. Palmatier and Lee Allison.

D. O. Reynolds, president of the County Federation, urged that more Farm Forums be organized. Secretary B. R. Baxter gave the financial report. Rev. M. Buttars reported for Farm Forums, feeling education necessary to solve farm problems.

Resolutions were passed asking Ottawa to carry out a bovine TB test recheck in 1946.

Directors of the Prince Edward Federation were named as follows:

Ameliasburg — W. Nightingale, M. Wallbridge;

Hillier — C. H. Kinnear, John Taylor;

Hallowell — B. R. Baxter, D.O. Reynolds, M. Williams, Lee Allison;

Officials Honor Retiring Sheriff

Picton, Dec. 28—Previous to his retirement as sheriff of Prince Edward County on Dec. 31st. Alva E. Lane spoke in appreciation of the services of Mr. Bowerman, and he was presented with a reclining chair and ottoman. A bouquet of flowers was given Mrs. Bowerman. In expressing thanks, Mr. Bowerman said it had been a pleasure to serve among such obliging officials and summed up his creed as live each day so as to get something out of life, then it doesn't matter when the end comes."

Several Mentioned For Wardenship

With the approach of the January session of the Hastings County Council, speculative rumors are beginning to let themselves be heard in county government circles as to the identity of the 1946 warden.

While nothing of a definite nature as to possible candidates for the highest honor the county can bestow is available, names being connected with the wardenship include Reeve George West, Madoc Village; Reeve James A. Nickle, Madoc township; Reeve Joseph H. Davis, Monteagle and Herschel, and Reeve A. A. Harvey, Mayo township.

Retiring Warden J. Fred Wilson will officially vacate his seat at the opening session of council on January 15, and the body will immediately go into special conclave to elect its head for 1946.

Sugar Scarcity To Continue For Another Year

Ottawa, Dec. 28 (CP) — The Canadian sweet tooth, curbed by a restricted sugar allotment in 1945, will be on short rations again in 1946—and perhaps into 1947.

Prices Board officials said in a review of the world sugar situation that there was little likelihood of the Canadian sugar ration of approximately six ounces per person per week being removed or even increased during the next year.

A spokesman said the simple fact was that there just wasn't enough sugar in the world to go around. Surplus stocks had been consumed and the world now was eating its "sugar capital."

"In 1945 the world consumed 1,000,000 tons more sugar than it produced," he said. "Production in 1946 must be 1,000,000 tons more than in 1945 if we are to continue on the same basis."

The present Canadian consumption was 71 pounds per person per year, against approximately 100 pounds in 1939.

Chief factor in the short sugar supply was the cutting off of cargoes which before the war came from the Philippines, Java and other islands of the Eastern Archipelago. The Japanese invaders plowed the sugar plantations under to grow cotton and rice, and now it will take 18 months to two years to get sugar back into production.

The spokesman said the Canadian sugar beet industry had made a valuable contribution to the over-all world supply, providing 16 to 20 per cent of the grand total. This production might be increased in 1946, but even then the crop would not become available until next fall.

Under present conditions Canada, and the rest of the world, could not be certain of abundant sugar supplies until the big crops begin to roll in around the spring of 1947.

Veterans Receiving New Buttons

Ottawa, Dec. 28—(CP)—There now is a sufficient quantity of the new sterling silver discharge buttons to fill the needs of veterans who haven't yet got the button to replace the old red and silver enamel button previously issued, a Defence Department official said today.

"We now have a sufficient stock of buttons to ensure that everybody will be served and, as a matter of fact, this job is being cleaned up rapidly," he added.

The buttons go only to veterans who were volunteers in the armed forces. They do not go to NRMA men, even where such troops saw action and, in some cases, were wounded and received gallantry medals.

Each button carries a serial number and when an application is approved the veteran is issued with the button and a wallet-sized certificate which carries his description and describes his service. This is done to curb trafficking in the buttons and there also is a fine of $500 or the alternative of a six-month jail term for illegal possession.

There have been cases of theft of the buttons from overcoats hanging in restaurants or public places, and usually replacements are provided. But each report is carefully investigated and if carelessness or trafficking is suspected no replacements are given.

No Increase Expected In Subsidy on Milk

Ottawa, Dec. 28 (CP)—Government sources said there was little likelihood of any increase in the 3½-cent subsidy on milk to provide more money for milk producers.

They were commenting on a Winnipeg despatch which said the Manitoba government had promised support for a delegation representing the Manitoba Milk Control Board, producers and distributors which will seek to have Federal restrictions eased.

The Winnipeg report said the delegation would ask the Prices Board to raise the price to producers by either increasing the existing subsidy or eliminating the one-cent differential between store and wagon prices.

Spokesmen here noted that the control emphasis still is on keeping prices at or below their present level to avoid any inflation. This leaves little hope for any increase in the subsidy.

HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR WIFE'S DEATH

Kenogami, Que., Dec. 28—(CP)—A coroner's jury last night held Emile Theriault responsible for the death of his wife, Clare Violette, 25, who died Christmas night at the home of friends.

The jury returned a verdict that Mrs. Theriault died a violent death caused by blows received and by evident negligence in not obtaining medical care for her. The verdict added: "After deliberation, the jury attributes this negligence to Emile Theriault, who is held responsible for the death of his wife."

Crosby Greatest Box-Office Draw in 1945

Hollywood, Dec. 28 —(AP)— Bing Crosby was named the movie boxoffice leader again in 1945 in a poll of exhibitors conducted by the Motion Picture Herald.

Ranked in the top 10 in six of the 14 annual polls, Crosby scored heavily in "Going My Way," which the Herald said has grossed $8,000,000. Crosby also appeared this year in "Here Come the Waves," "East Side of Heaven," "Duffy's Tavern," and served as the voice of Eddie Bracken in "Out of This World."

Van Johnson was ranked as the No. 2 drawing power, followed in order by Greer Garson, Betty Grable and Spencer Tracy, with Humphrey Bogart and Gary Cooper tied for sixth; Bob Hope, Judy Garland, Margaret O'Brien and Roy Rogers.

From 10th place to 20th, here's how they finished:

Abbott and Costello, Betty Hutton, Ingrid Bergman, Bette Davis, Alan Ladd, Dane Clark, Joseph Cotten, Claudette Colbert, Walter Pidgeon, Fred MacMurray, Danny Kaye, Gregory Peck, Ginger Rogers, John Wayne and Mickey Rooney.

Crosby won the poll's top spot in 1944, Betty Grable in 1943. Abbott and Costello in 1942, Mickey Rooney in 1939, 1940 and 1941, Shirley Temple from 1935 to 1938 inclusive, Will Rogers in 1934, and Marie Dressler in 1932 and 1933.

Jap Communists Favor Postponement Of General Election

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec 28. (AP)—Communists are proposing postponement of Japan's general election for at least a month to allow time for "truly democratic" opposition to old-school politicians, Kyodo News Agency said today.

Date of the election has not been announced, pending approval by Supreme Allied Headquarters. It would be held in mid-January under the newly-passed election law which now is under study by occupation officials.

Although many Japanese have privately expressed belief the election should be postponed, the reported Communist proposal is the first advanced by a political organization. Government officials contend, however, that a speedy election is necessary to permit prompt convening of "a more representative diet" for consideration of a budget and other matters.

Meanwhile, Premier Kijuro Shidehara said the Japanese government would take drastic action against any government officials found meddling with the balloting.

A new political party, the Independent Socialists, appeared on the Tokyo scene and demanded that the Premier be elected by the people instead of appointed by the throne. The party's platform advocated "preservation of the Emperor system," however.

SUGAR and PRESERVES
Combined into
ONE RATION PLAN

To simplify Canada's rationing system, only one kind of coupon will be used in 1946 for the purchase of sugar or preserves, with a value of one pound of sugar per coupon, or the new value in preserves shown below.

1946 COUPON VALUES

Canned fruit	40 fl. oz.	or
Corn, cane and blended table syrup	30 fl. oz.	or
Honey (Extracted or cut comb)	4 lbs.	or
Jams, jellies, marmalades, fountain fruits, cranberry sauce, honey butter	24 fl. oz.	or
Maple Sugar	4 lbs.	or
Maple Syrup	48 fl. oz.	or
Molasses	80 fl. oz.	or
Sugar	1 lb.

There will be no reduction in the present sugar-preserves ration.

Effective January 1, all valid and unused pink sugar coupons will take the new ration values. On January 17, sugar coupons 68 and 69 will be declared valid, and in February the last of these coupons, No. 70, will become good. When pink sugar coupons are exhausted, "S" coupons will be used.

All unused preserves coupons, including "P" coupons, will keep their 1945 value for preserves or sugar and will expire for use by consumers on January 31, 1946.

HOME CANNING
To take care of home canning requirements, 10 separate coupons, good for one pound of sugar each, will become valid during the year on dates to be announced later.

The combined sugar-preserves ration plan is designed in part to reduce the number of coupons required for 1946 purchases of sugar and preserves to 38 from the 64 used in 1945, and extend substantially the life of Ration Book 5.

His Majesty to His Peoples

His Majesty King George in his Christmas Day address to the Empire placed before the young the duty of having faith in life. During the years of conflict the people have been upheld by a vision of the world at peace. "A great work has been done, a great evil has been cast from the earth and no peoples have done more to cast it out than you to whom I speak," said the King, as he brought greetings to the Empire and offered prayer to God by whose grace victory has been won that "this Christmas may bring to my peoples all the world over every joy they have dreamed of in the dark days that are gone."

His Majesty's reference to Christmas, as a real homecoming to a world "in which the homely and friendly things of life can again be ours," expanded the idea of homecoming which is so much a part of the Christmas that the Empire world knows. "The things that have been saved are beyond all price," he said. "In these homelands of Britain of the British peoples which we have saved from destruction, we still find them strengthened and deepened by fires of battle. Faith in these things held us in brotherhood through all our trials and has carried us to victory. Perhaps a better understanding of that brotherhood is the most precious of all the gains that remain with us after these hard years. Together all-our peoples round the globe have met every danger and triumphed over it;-and we are together still. Most of all are we together, as one world-wide family, in the joy of Christmas."

For the six years of war the King has spoken to the Empire words which cheered in the time of conflict. Now he is privileged to speak for the first time since 1938 his message to the Empire in a world of free men who have won victory over the enemy. In telling what has been achieved His Majesty pointed out the great joy of men and women of every race within the Empire returning home, of children freed from the dread of unnatural fears and a blacked-out world celebrating this Christmas in the light and happiness of the family circle once more reunited.

The King made a touching tribute to those who had given their all "to win peace for us. We remember them with pride and with unfading love pray that a greater peace than ours may now be theirs.

"Many are still far from home in the long and difficult task of restoring to shattered countries the means and manners of civilized life. But many anxieties have been lifted and the coming of peace brings you nearer to your heart's desire."

His Majesty pointed to the fact that there is "not yet the abundance of peace" and "we all have to make a little go a long way." Christmas brings its message of hope and fellowship to all men of good will, but in the liberated countries millions are living under hard conditions.

King George said of the future, "Bring now all that fine spirit to make it one of joyous adventure, a home where men and women can live in mutual trust and walk together as friends. Do not judge life by what you have seen in the grimness and waste of war, nor yet by the first years of peace. Have faith in life at its best and bring to it your courage, your hopes and your sense of humor. For merriment is the birthright of the young. But we can all keep it in our hearts as life goes on if we hold fast by the spirit that refuses to admit defeat; by the faith that never falters; by the hope that cannot be quenched."

His Majesty in his address summed up the British spirit and especially noted that "home life as we remember at Christmas, is life at its best" and showed how "in the trust and love of parents and children, brothers and sisters, we learn how men and nations too may live together in unity and peace."

Britain's gifts to the world have been many in the long course of history and she still has a message to humanity such as the King expressed.

The Christmas Day broadcasts of King George have been impressive in their sincerity and the high sense of responsibility he feels in the exalted office he holds. They voice the spirit of Britain's peoples.

A Great Naval Figure

One of the greatest figures in British naval history has just passed away, Lord Keyes, Admiral of the Fleet and pioneer of amphibious warfare. He was a hero of both wars in which Germany's attempt to dominate the world failed.

His name blazed forth in the First Great War when he planned and carried out the Zeebrugge raid. After long service he retired in 1935 but came back to serve the British Navy when Hitler struck at civilisation. Lord Keyes is credited with having been the pioneer of amphibious warfare and took an outstanding part in directing the organization of commandos.

He was a born fighter and a fearless leader. He impressed his character upon the navy and upon his age.

He is another Briton who has made a lasting contribution to the British navy and sea-power and through them to the world.

Prize British Song

(London Daily Mail)

Some day within the next few months, when a warm, sleepy tune in quick waltz time, "Cruising Down the River," finds its way across the Atlantic, Americans will be listening to a fairy tale come true.

Two middle-aged spinsters, dressmakers, of Lavender-hill, Southwest London, wrote the music and the lyric. It has brought them a $4,000 cheque in time for Christmas.

They are the winners of an All-British Write-a-Tune contest.

Here are the words:

Cruising down the river on a Sunday afternoon,
With one you love, the sun above, waiting for the moon;
The old accordion playing a sentimental tune,
Cruising down the river on a Sunday afternoon.

The birds above all sing of love, a gentle, sweet refrain,
The winds around all make the sound of softly falling rain;
Just you and I together plan a honeymoon,
Cruising down the river on a Sunday afternoon.

Friendly Road

Just 100 years ago, as a biting wind swept down the Connecticut Valley from Canada, chilling a crowd gathered in Windsor, Vermont, ground was broken and the Central Vermont Railway came into being, says The Christian Science Monitor.

Thirty months late its first locomotive was named "Abigail Adams." It was a wood burner, and had to stop every 30 miles or so while the whole crew helped to "wood up." Today, the Central Vermont boasts of its "Montrealer," a train that links two great nations.

The Central Vermont means to thousands of people summer vacation days among the Green Mountains and winter sports on snowy slopes. To its patrons it is a friendly railroad. Millions of famous, and obscure men and women have "ridden the plush" of the C.V. Presidents, statesmen, members of the British Royal Family, Prime Ministers, Governors-General and Ambassadors have travelled the line.

Complete rebuilding after the devastating flood of 1927 marked the beginning of a new era for the Central Vermont. This thrust the road into modern "bigtime" operations through close association with the Canadian National Railways, the continent's longest railway system.

ACCOMPLISHMENT

This is the truth of it, take it from me,
Little girls mostly are smart as can be.
Here's my deduction: from all I discern,
Little girls mostly are eager to learn.
Wisdom they gain with remarkable speed.
Ellen Elizabeth's started to read!

"I know that word!" she announces to me,
Pointing her finger and saying it's "tree!"
That one is "kitten" and that one is "gate."
There's an accomplishment truly that's great!
Proud of her? Promptly I answered: "indeed!"
Ellen Elizabeth's started to read.

Knows all her letters from A down to Z.
Picks them out promptly and names them to me.
Over my paper she carefully goes,
Seeking for new words to boast that she knows.
Clever? Well, that is a fact I concede.

Repeated bursts of water followed and in a short time there was so much water on the floor that the two decided to give up the idea of Christmas dinner at home and went to a hotel. Mr. Harris said the waves were the highest in 16 years.

British War Brides Starting for Can. End of January

Halifax, Dec. 28 — (CP)—The mass post-war movement of British war brides of Canadian servicemen through this port to their new homes in Canada will start at the end of January, it was learned here Thursday.

The Cunard White Star liner Scythia, one of four troopers slated for the bride carrying service, is due to land approximately 500 women and children here at that time.

Other ships to be engaged in bringing the women and children to Canada are the Lady Nelson, Letitia and the Lady Rodney.

The former hospital ship Letitia is now on her way from the Canadian west coast to England to take up her new duties but she will have to enter drydock in Britain for repairs.

Authorities said today that each of the four ships will carry some troops in addition to the brides and children. The troops will use lower deck space which is not suitable accommodation for women and children.

More than 32,000 brides of Canadian servicemen with their children are now waiting in Britain for transportation to Canada.

Mackenzie's Column

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 28 — (AP)—Britain's King seems, rather paradoxically, to fit supremely well into the frame-work of the new Socialist regime, the reason being that he not only is exceedingly democratic by nature but that he is said to have no personal ambitions.

And observers agree that the King owes a good half of his success and popularity to the Queen.

Right here we must record that the Royal partnership has been a love match from the beginning, and that the home life of the King and Queen and their two princesses has been wonderfully happy. This explains a great deal, for only complete and sympathetic understanding could produce such a successful combination.

The King, despite his appearance of smiling tranquility, is high strung. As a counter-balance we have the steady calm of his very Scottish Queen.

The Kingship of the British Commonwealth is one of the world's toughest jobs at best, and the present ruler was thrown into it by fate without having had full training. Virtually everything had been centred in his elder brother, who became Edward VIII and then abdicated so that he could marry Wallis Warfield Simpson, "the woman I love."

One of the King's hardest tasks of course, has been speech-making before great assemblages, or broadcasting addresses which have been heard around the world. On these occasions the King always wants the Queen with him, for she gives him courage. She is his real audience.

It would be a mistaken idea to think that the Queen's calm bearing is an indication that she is easy-going. She is gentle and sweet but she has a mind of her own and when her "Scotch" is made up, it is made up.

Eighteen - year - old Princess Elizabeth, who one day will be ruler of the Empire in the ordinary course of events, has inherited her mother's calm, and couples conscientiousness with this quality. She is being tutored in the wide field of learning which a ruling queen must possess, and is beginning to play her part at public functions.

That is the sort of Royal Family with which the Socialist government has to deal, and relations are said to be completely harmonious. The King shows absolutely no disposition to step outside his assigned role as constitutional monarch and the government is happy with the situation.

And that is a mighty big item in these days when continental thrones are being swallowed up by the Leftist tide.

Hero of Zeebrugge Dies in Sleep

London, Dec. 28 (CP)—Admiral of the Fleet Lord Keyes—distinguished pioneer of amphibious warfare in two world conflicts—died in his sleep Wednesday at his home in Buckingham after an illness of three weeks. He was 74.

A life-long proponent of British sea power, Lord Keyes, Baron of Zeebrugge and Dover, came out of retirement to save his country in the Second Great War and was credited with the creation of the navy's Commando forces. During the First Great War he planned and led the daring St. George's Day raid on Zeebrugge in 1918—an operation which partially blockaded a powerful Germany surface and submarine fleet which had been preying on Allied shipping.

He also was closely associated with the ill-starred attempt to force the Dardanelles in February 1915, in his capacity of chief of staff in the Eastern Mediterranean.

His successful Royal Navy career continued between wars and in 1925 he was appointed commander-in-chief of the navy's Mediterranean station. In 1929 he became commander-in-chief of the Portsmouth naval station and in 1930 was promoted to Admiral of the Fleet. In 1935 he retired.

After a spell as a Conservative member of Parliament, he rejoined the navy and at the beginning of the Second Great War was special liaison officer to King Leopold of Belgium. In 1940 he was associated with another attempt to blockade Zeebrugge and Ostend, Belgium, which failed.

Lord Keyes' career in the navy spanned a period of 60 years. He started as a midshipman in 1885 when 12 years of age, was a commander by the time he was 28 and a rear-admiral at 45.

His last illness, cardiac asthma, was brought on by fumes from a smoke screen laid down by a United States flagship during a dive-bombing attack at the Leyte landing in the Philippines in October, 1944.

Life Sentence At Hard Labor

Yokohama, Dec. 27 — (AP)—A life sentence at hard labor, instead of the death penalty the prosecution demanded, was returned Thursday against the first Japanese to be tried on the soil of his surrendered country as a war criminal.

The sentence, eliciting an expression of gratitude for Allied justice from a Japanese on the defence staff, was passed by a United States war crimes commission against Tatsuo Tsuchiya, a prison camp guard.

Among the crimes of which he was convicted was participation in the torture and killing of a prisoner of war.

The commission, after announcing its decision, reconvened to try Lieutenant Ken Yuri, charged with directing guards to bayonet to death an imprisoned American soldier while American officers watched.

Trial of Lieutenant Chotora Furushima, charged with beating prisoners and denying them clothing, will open before a second commission tomorrow.

The trial of these "small fry" precedes the first trials of high ranking war criminal suspects, such as ex-Premier Hideki Tojo, scheduled to open in February.

IF YOU'VE GOT IT YOU'RE STUCK WITH IT

I feel so sorry for the pretty girl or the goofy guy the philanthropists of Yankeeland picture in the act of gargling with our powerful germ killer. That sad situation stirs my emotions so deeply that I am scarcely able to bowl.

I' Ol' Doc Brady, do solemnly declare that no antiseptic, germicide (germ-killer) or disinfectant as yet discovered has any remedial or beneficial effect on any alleged "cold" or acute sore throat (tonsillitis, pharyngitis, diphtheria, quinsy, scarlet fever) when taken internally or used as gargle or spray.

Mind now, this is not to imply that one should never gargle. If you derive any comfort or relief from gargling it may be harmless, as an occasional practice, provided you do it gently and use no very irritating solution. But don't be silly about it—so far as the germs causing the trouble are concerned you might just as well rub the gargle on your internal melleolus, for, unless I am grievously misinformed in pathology, once you've got any such infection you're stuck with it and no germ-deterring or germ-killing remedy you can apply to the surface of the throat can have the slightest influence upon the activity of the germs that have invaded the tissues.

Don't run away with the notion that I condemn all gargles. Watch this column. In an early issue I'll tell you how to make and use an excellent gargle for huskiness, hoarseness and roughness of voice in speakers and singers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Infra Red

What is the difference between an ultra-violet ray lamp and an infra-red ray lamp? Can each be used on sore and swollen muscles with the same result? (A. V.)

Answer—Ultraviolet light or ray has no particular action or effect on muscles. Infra-red light or ray has the effect of heat on sore muscles—such as the heat given off by a glowing electric or gas heater.

Hormone Hokum

Do you believe that the hormones in face creams can be absorbed and. (S. H. E.)

Answer—don't be silly.

Asthma

I have received so much help from your pamphlet on Bronchial Asthma that I am sending the fee and stamped self addressed envelope for your booklet "Call it Cri." (O. E. H.)

Answer—I wish, friend, that you would specify what suggestion in the Asthma pamphlet you found helpful. I imagine it was the advice to supplement the diet with a suitable daily ration of calcium and vitamin D. That has brought great relief in many cases of asthma. The pamphlet is available to any reader who asks for it in writing and incloses stamped self-addressed envelope.

Cold Fish

I am another of those individuals who do not feel warm enough in the same room where everyone else is comfortable. I'd like information on taking iodine... (Mrs. H. A.—some of my friends call me "the cold fish")

Answer—Ask in writing for pamphlet "The Iodin Ration" and inclose stamped envelope bearing your address.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What does "crossing the Rubicon" mean?

Crossing the Rubicon means comitting oneself to a dangerous course from which there is no retreat.

In ancient times the Rubicon was a small stream forming the boundary between Italy proper and the Cisalpine Gaul, the province allotted to Julius Caesar. When the Roman Senate voted to recall Caesar in 49 B.C. he decided to march on Rome in violation of a law of the republic that forbade a general to enter Italy with his troops under arms. The act was tantamount to a declaration of war.

The Roman historian Suetonius who wrote in the second century A.D., says of Caesar:

"Coming up with his troops on the banks of the Rubicon, which was the boundary of his province, he halted a while, and, revolving in his mind the importance of the step, he turned to those about him and said: "We may still retreat; but if we pass this little bridge, nothing is left us but to fight it out in arms." While he was thus hesitating . . . a person remarkable for his noble mein and graceful aspect appeared . . . playing upon a pipe. When not only the shepherds but also a numbers of soldiers flocked from their posts to listen to him, and some trumpeters among them, he snatched a trumpet from one of them, ran to the river with it, and sounding the advance with piercing blast, crossed to the other side. Whereupon Caesar exclaimed: 'Let us go whither the omens of the gods and the iniquity of our enemies call upon us. The die is cast.'"

This may be merely a legend. The English historian James A. Froude says: "The vision of the Rubicon, with the celebrated saying that 'the die is cast,' is unauthenticated and not at all consistent with Caesar's character."

Be that as it may, Caesar's crossing the Rubicon with his troops precipitated civil war and made him master of Rome.

The stream known to the ancient Romans as the Rubicon cannot be identified positively. The preponderance of historical evidence, however, indicates that the Rubicon's upper course is represented by the modern Pisciatello and its lower course by the modern Fiumicino, which flows into the Adriatic near Rimini. These streams, geological evidence indicates, were once united. Some years ago the Italian government, after making an investigation, declared officially that the Fiumicino is the true Rubicon of the ancients.

Ketcheson was chairman and the program was splendidly given. It consisted of dialogues, recitations, plays, choral readings, drills, pantomimes and singing. Mrs. C. Smith was pianist for the evening and between numbers the audience sang Christmas carols. The program showed much work on the part of the teacher, and pupils, and Mrs. Smith and at the close a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to them. After the program Santa Claus appeared and in his usual jovial manner distributed presents to the pupils. There was a splendid attendance, showing the interest taken by the parents and friends.

BURR'S SUNDAY SCHOOL

BURR'S — On Christmas Eve members of Burr's Sunday School presented a Christmas pageant at the church. The main lights in the church were turned off. Miss Mae Brooks as the Spirit of Christmas with a lighted taper in her hand told the story of the origin of the use of candles at Christmas time. With the burning candle she lit the many candles at the back of the altar and surrounding the Manger. A group of carol singers accompanied by Mrs. Ewart Harns at the piano and Mr. Hugo Diggins saxophonist told the Christmas story in song between readings by Mrs. Floyd Huffman from Matthew and Luke as the following took their places in the pageant, Mrs. Don Parks, Madonna; Mrs. Don Osterhout, Angel; Mr. Gerald Brooks, Joseph; Mr. Floyd Huffman, Mr. Don Osterhout, Mr. Ronald Burr, Shepherds; Mr. Richard Hall, Mr. Douglas Harns, Mr. Sam Clark, Wise Men; Mr. Eric Edwards, Prophet Simeon; Mrs. Kenneth VanCott, Prophetess Anna; Mr. Cyrus Fulford, Landlord of the Inn.

During the pageant Mr. Diggins played "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" as a solo. Preceding the arrival of Santa Mr. Diggins played "Santa Claus is Coming to Town,"" and "Jingle Bells." Then to the delight of the children a very jolly Santa made his appearance coming up the aisle and distributing gifts from a beautiful tree the gift of Messrs. George and Floyd Huffman for the occasion. Mr. C. Fulford, supt. extended sincere thanks on behalf of the Sunday School to all who assisted toward the success of the evening. Mr. Ross Burr expressed appreciation from the Sunday School to Mr. Fulford for his untiring efforts, fine example and splendid leadership to the Sunday School. A silver collection was taken.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

ST. JOHN'S Mission held their annual Christmas Concert on December 21st. The beautifully decorated tree was given for the occasion by Mr. George Ellis. The splendid program of dialogues, recitations, and choruses was given by both juniors and seniors with Miss Redner at the organ. The teachers, Mrs. Gerow, Mrs. MacFee, and Mrs. Babcock were congratulated and have just cause to be proud of their pupils. It was regretted that the rector, Rev. Charles Heaven, and the Sunday School Supt., Mr. John Exley, were unable to attend because of illness.

Mrs. G. Spafford delighted all with a history of the singing of Christmas carols in the old country. Miss Jones gave some humorous notes of her winters spent in Nassau.

Santa Claus appeared and distributed gifts and treats for all.

Honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Darling, of the day school, who do so much to train the pupils. It was the occasion of the sixteenth anniversary of their wedding and they were heartily congratulated.

WALLBRIDGE W.M.S. - W.A.

Wallbridge.—On Sunday evening the W.M.S. and W.A. held a candlelight service in the church here as it was the Sunday without a regular preaching service. Mr. Charlie Elliott very kindly opened the service and read the Christmas story as told in Luke's gospel. Several carols were sung and the choir gave a special number. Some girls gave a pantomime, "Silent Night", which had been given at the school concert on Friday evening. Rev. Mr. Hillis came after the close of his service at Stone Church and gave a message from the story of the Wise Men as given in St. Matthew's Gospel. There was a good attendance and all felt the service was of great benefit.

Former Picton Couple Observe 70th Anniversary

Weyburn, Sask., Dec. 28. (CP) —Celebrating their 70th wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Howe of Hantoon, Sask., sat around with immediate friends and neighbors on Monday and talked about old times on the prairies and back in Ontario.

The weather was cold on December 23 and a storm the night before made the roads nearly impassable, but many friends battled through the drifts to convey their congratulations to the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Howe joined hands again as they had so many years ago and cut the first slice from the huge wedding cake. As the knife sliced the cake, Mr. Howe related how he had met and courted Della, as he calls his wife, and Della smiled.

The Howe home was decorated with flowers the oldest son, Arthur had brought from Regina.

Mr. Howe was born in Picton County, Ontario, in 1853, and when 19, started to teach school. Three years later he married. Mrs. Howe is also from Picton County. After teaching for 16 years, Mr. Howe went farming near his birthplace, and in 1906 took up a homestead near Huntoon, where they have lived since.

Mr. Howe was on the municipal council for 12 years and served as reeve for two years. He was president of the telephone company in the district and was instrumental in getting the co-operative elevator system instituted at Huntoon for marketing of grain.

He is also responsible for a school being erected in Huntoon district. The school is called Picton School, after his home county. He served as school trustee for many years and when he retired his son, Arthur, took over the position.

Mr. and Mrs. Howe have had five children, two boys and three girls.

Today there are 14 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

"BIG THREE" OF TOMORROW'S WORLD
Let's never forget, our surest hope of peace and progress in the future lies in the home training and the sturdy, healthy bodies we give the boys and girls growing up today. That's where mother comes in, and the family doctor… yes, and the milkman, too.

Rushed fresh from the farm to your table every day… milk is the foundation-food for happy health. Perhaps you've forgotten the old days, when milk was ladled out on the doorstep from the milkman's big tin can. Yet when you think back to that time not so very long ago, you realize what great improvements in cleanliness and sanitation your dairy has made for your protection. Today's pure, fresh, bottled milk is the food everybody trusts.

CHICAGO HAWKS HAVE A CHANCE TO HEAD LEAGUE

Play Canadiens on Saturday and Take on Rangers on Sunday

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawks, tagging along doggedly behind Montreal Canadiens and threatening occasionally to overhaul the National Hockey League leaders, have another opportunity to strengthen their runner-up position in a 4-game weekend program.

The high-scoring Hawks, with one game in hand over Canadiens, pick up the slack with two games in successive nights while Montreal has only one scheduled contest.

But that one game means much to both teams, because it's a straight showdown between them. If Canadiens defeat Chicago in that contest at Montreal Saturday, the N.H.L. championship would be almost certain to return to Montreal.

On the other hand a victory for Chicago, followed by a triumph for the Hawks against Rangers in New York Sunday, would lift coach Johnny Gottselig's club into first place one point ahead of Canadiens.

The only other club with two weekend dates is Boston, who now hold fourth place two points behind Detroit Red Wings. Bruins, seeking to retain their four-point edge over Toronto Maple Leafs, play in Toronto Saturday and in Detroit Sunday.

OMAHA TAKES SECOND PLACE

Omaha, Dec. 28 (CP)—Omaha skipped into second position in the United States Hockey League last night by virtue of a 5-1 victory over Dallas Texans.

Tied 1-all at the end of the second period after a scorless opener, Omaha staged a four-goal rally in the final frame to down the Texans and move within two games of the league-leading Kansas City Pla-Mors.

Carl Smith, Don Morrison, Gordon Howe and Conrad Poitras were responsible for the quartet of markers for the Knights in the last period. Lloyd Finkbeiner scored the lone Dallas goal in the second period to open the game's scoring, but his tally was followed by Smith's first of the game which tied the score.

LIKELY LAD

Chicago sports writers went all out in praises of the ability of 18 year old Roy Polmanter, formerly of this city, who won the 112 pound title in the Catholic Youth Organization of the Windy City recently. Polmanter won a decision over Milton Dockin, fast stepping colored fighter, after three rounds of furious milling. Polmanter is regarded as having a fine future in the ring according to the experts from across the border. He hopes some day to cross gloves with L'il Arthur King, Canada's outstanding 126 pounder.

DATE CHANGED

Latest info from the Redmen Intermediate "A" headquarters is to the effect that the first game in the O.H.A. schedule formerly tabbed for Saturday, Jan. 5, in Kingston, has been changed to Friday, Jan. 4. Seems as though some classy junior squad is playing in the Limestone City on the 5 and the lads here co-operated with "Dingo" Haynes and his Locos with respect to changing the date.

NEAT PICTURE

The Yuletide mail bag brought along a neat card from Phil "The Voice" Watson and Whipper Billy "The Figure" Watson. The smiling duo are pictured on the front of the card dressed up in their Sunday best and wearing smiles that would put any tooth-paste ad to shame. The same to "youse guys" and "lang may yer lum reek."

NAME TRAINER

"Lum" Carson, former softball star of these parts and overseas has been named trainer of the Belleville Junior "B" O.H.A. squad, team officials announced today. "Lum" has had plenty of experience in athletics and his acquisition by the junior mentors should result in a marked improvement in the condition of the beardless puckists. Incidentally the kids get their first taste of hockey battle when they entertain Campbellford here on January 2.

SPORT ODDITY

Meet the "Blimp", world's largest wrestler. Stands six feet one, weighs 640 pounds is bewhiskered and can wrestle. Born in Boston 31 years ago of a normal family, he was normal himself until he was 14 when he started to inflate until he reached his present dimensions. Is extraordinarily supple and agile, can kick over his head, do the "splits", is an excellent swimmer and dancer. As a swimmer he apparently can't drown; just floats with the tide and can be seen at some summer resort drifting lazily along smoking a cigar or reading a newspaper. Is married and has a healthy normal two-year-old daughter.

LO, THE POOR ARBITER

Arthur (New York Times) Daley recalls the following story of the poor baseball umpire whose life is not always balls, strikes or beer and skittles. "Take the experience which befell Tim Hurst, the huge two-fisted Irishman who ranked with the very best. One day he was umpiring a game in which the rowdy Baltimore Orioles were involved, handling the fray alone.

• • •

He did not have an easy decision to make. The base runner darted off first in a steal of second but, before he departed, he spiked Dan McGann, the Oriole guardian of the initial sack, who deftly retaliated by tripping him. The runner picked himself up, dusted himself off and sailed into second, spikes high and ready to gore Hughie Jennings, the Oriole shortstop. Meanwhile the batter hauled back his bat in an effort to crack the reaching fingers of Wilbert Robinson, the Baltimore catcher, and prevent him from making the throw to second.

By way of adding to the complication, Robbie trod on Hurst's toes with his spiked feet and shoved his glove in front of Hurst's face, all being moves designed to prevent the arbiter from seeing all the skulduggery which was involved. But the undaunted Tim punched Robbie in the ribs, called it a foul strike and sent the runner back to first."

• • •

Then there is the experience of another umpire who was having a tough time during a Southern Association game. His decisions were meeting with great protests from the crowd which was inordinately large. Finally some in the stand called the umpire a name, which was discreetly referred to as "foul language."

The umpire stung to the quick and pushed far beyond the point of accepting any more abuse, whipped off his mask, turned to the grandstand and announced in a very loud voice.

"The person who called me that foul language will stand up."

Everyone in the park stood up.

The umpire took one look, put on his mask, turned around and announced:

"Play ball."

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 28 — (CP) — After Regina Caps of the Western Canada Senior League dropped their 13th game, coach Kenny Stewart announced he wouldn't shave until Caps finally came through with a victory. It was a bright little story for the sport pages — but wearing a beard, it develops, is no new experience for Stewart.

The last time, though, it was strictly accidental.

Stewart was playing for Kansas City under Johnny Gottselig, now coach of Chicago Black Hawks. On one trip around the circuit, he advertently left behind his shaving gear.

Came the second game of the trip and Stewart had a fair crop of whiskers. He was idling along the boards during the game when a fan leaned over the boards and handed him a package.

As Scotty (Regina Leader-Post) Melville tells the story, Stewart accepted, deposited the parcel in the players' bench and opened it after the game.

It contained a razor.

Gottselig, a man with a sharp nose for news, headed for the nearest newspaper after ordering Stewart to retain the beard.

Well, the beard soon became famous around the circuit and every city Kansas City visited saw a repetition of the act — some fan or fans would lean over the dasher and hand Stewart a parcel.

"By Christmas time, I had dozens of shaving sets," Stewart told Melville.

"That was one year I solved the Christmas shopping problem!"

Dash Data:

On the heels of a reader's suggestion that this column contains too little information on such sports as squash, curling and badminton, Publicity Director Alfred Fenwick of the Hamilton Squash Club announces an international invitation squash racquet tournament will be held at that club Jan. 4-5. Clubs and cities slated for representation include the Detroit Athletic Club, the Genesee Valley Club from Rochester, N.Y., two Buffalo, N.Y., entries, the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, the Hart House Club, Toronto, the Carlton Club, Toronto and the Hamilton Thistle Club . . . National Hockey League referee Bill Chadwick told Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan Boston's Kitchener line is "looking better every time out and is going to cause plenty of trouble before the season is over."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—During all his years in hockey, Toronto's Connie Smythe says he has known only one player who wanted to refund part of his salary after a bad season though all of them holler when they think they deserve more dough for a good years. "It was Syl Apps," Connie explains. "He was hurt and missed a lot of games and at the end of the season he came into my office and tried to give me a $1,000 cheque because he didn't think he had earned his salary. After that I had to order players to stay out of my office. I couldn't stand it."

So Long Pop.

This writer has just received word of the death of Hugh Fullerton, senior, a great sports writer whose pointed comments occasionally have been related here second-hand . . . "Pop" started writing baseball when the reporters called themselves "Shills" because of their efforts to tell about a game they loved. . . It is a familiar story in newspaper circles how the Baseball Writers' Association of America was born because Hughie came into the Polo Grounds press box, found every seat filled and had to cover the game while sitting on the lap of Louis Mann, the actor . . . It is a great personal loss and an equally great loss to the sports fraternity . . . What he did was good for sports.

Hockey Sidelights

By ED FITKIN

Toronto—The Chicago Black Hawks were prepping for their current NHL campaign out west and one of the youngsters who had been invited to the camp was making quite an impression. Bill Tobin, president of the Hawks, walked over to the kid.

"I'm Mr. Tobin," Bill said. "Are you enjoying your stay here?"

"Yup," was the reply.

"Do you like playing hockey?"

"Yup."

"Would you like to play for the Hawks?"

"Yup."

Tobin looked at the youngster as if he were surveying the Sphinx. He changed his trend of conversation in an effort to get the boy to open up.

"Do you live with your parents?" he asked.

"Yup."

"Are you working?"

"Yup."

"What's your occupation?"

"I'm a Roman Catholic," the boy said, then realizing his faux pas, he added quickly: "Oh, you mean what do I work at—I'm a blacksmith!"

Veterans of hockey continue to recall, Elmer Ferguson says, some of the humorous stories and quips credited to Harry Mummery, the former giant defenseman who died recently in Brandon.

He tells of one when Canadiens were travelling to Shawinigan Falls by bus for an exhibition game. The bus broke down on a deserted stretch of highway and the players had to get out and start hoofing it. They came across a farmer and asked: "How far is it to Shawinigan Falls?"

"Seven miles," was the reply.

On and on the players trudged. An hour passed and still no sign of their destination. Finally they came across another citizen of the district.

"How far is it to Shawinigan Falls?" they queried.

"Seven miles," was the answer.

"Well," said the quick-witted Mummery, "thank the Lord we're not getting any further away!"

The sensational scoring sprees of the Chicago Black Hawks are vindicating Bill Tobin as a prophet. Before the season opened, Bill told me that the Hawks would score 80 more goals this season than they did last for the simple reason that the Bentleys were returning to the hockey wars. . . .Bill certainly wasn't talking through his hat. In their first 17 games last year, the Bentley-less Hawks collected only 53 goals. This year, for the same number of games, they have blinked the red light 81 times. A year ago their season's total was 141. At their present rate the Hawks are capable of running up 225 goals for the season. . .Toronto Maple Leafs have recalled Elwin Morris from Pittsburgh and are sending young Jim Thompson to the Hornets in exchange. . . Thomson has been out of the Leaf lineup for the past couple of weeks, during which time he visited Copper Cliff and Sudbury as the youngest Goodwill Ambassador in the team's history. . . .Morris has been playing great hockey in Pittsburgh and his work in the games Hap Day took in during the past week resulted in his recall by the Leafs. . . King Clancy finds air travel much more effective in getting from one N.H.L. city to the other for refereeing assignments. . . .Ernie Dickens, Leaf defense recruit, has an exceptionally heavy beard which caused Babe Pratt to comment the other day in Montreal: "I room with a guy who does nothing but shave. He must have started when he was eight. He could shave five times a day and after each shave you'd still think he needed one."

Murph Chamberlain's explanation for his remarkable comeback: "I'm in shape for the first time in my life. This league's a breeze when you're in condition."

Winnipeg Monarchs Defeat St. Michael's In Exhibition Tilt

Winnipeg, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Rallying after being one goal down Winnipeg Monarchs of the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association's Junior "A" division, edged out St. Michael's College of Toronto 2-1 here last night in the first of a two-game exhibition series.

It was the second defeat in 15 starts for the 1945 Memorial Cup champions. Second game will be played here Saturday night.

About 5,000 saw the teams battle in a close-checking, rugged contest that only once or twice touched a lightning tempo. Both squads traded lusty body checks at every opportunity and 10 penalties were handed out, six to St. Mike's.

Just one minute and two seconds after the start, Ted Sloan picked up a puck that came flying out of a scramble in front of Monarchs' goal and rifled it behind Gibson in the Winnipeg nets for the Easterners' only goal. For the remainder of the period the teams battled on even terms with Monarchs gradually gaining confidence.

Two quick goals midway thru the second period gave Winnipeg the victory. Eddie Marchant took Scott's passout for the first at 9:50 and Clint Albright picked up Beatty's pass for the winning counter at 11:51.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By GORDON MCKEAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 25—(CP)—L-Cpl. Danny Webb, Montreal's gift to British boxing, has decided to stay in England and go title-hunting among United Kingdom featherweights. He has been demobilized from the Canadian army, in which he served with the 17th Duke of York's Hussars.

As an opener to his fistic career as a civilian here, Webb has suggested a return match with Al Phillips at 126 pounds, for ($2,250) a side. He'll also be glad to discuss terms with any other featherweight.

Danny lost to Phillips in their first bout in the sixth round.

Newmarket's latest record-breaking bloodstock sales ended with buyers paying $2,723,309 for 728 lots during the five-day sale. Highest price on the closing day was 2,100 guineas ($9,660) which H. J. Joel paid for Fairholm, a six-year-old mare by Fair Trial. Lord Derby's three-year-old Blue Water was sold privately as a stallion and has been shipped to Ireland.

Edinburgh race fans are hoping the War Office will derequisition the racetrack stands and stables in time for a meet on April 15. Four meets have been planned—one in the spring, one in summer and two fall race programs—if, of course, the derequisition order comes through in time.

Tucked away in a little room in the concrete rafters of the great Stamford Bridge football stand, two women who have yet to see a game this season have become adept at interpreting the sounds of the crowd to learn what's going on in the stadium.

Mrs. F. A. Metcalfe, a football manager's secretary, and Mrs. C. Naylor, who serves tea to sports writers, listen to stamps, roars, exclamations, groans or figets of the crowd above their heads to follow the play.

"The stamping usually means the ball has been kicked out of play," they explained "and people are warming their feet until the game starts again."

Outside Brentford and Chelsea were playing. An echoing roar brought Mrs. Metcalfe's laconic, "Brentford goal, not enough noise for Chelsea."

Resignation of Willie Hall—one of the finest inside forwards to have played for England and the 'Spurs—as manager of Clapton Orient, was a blow to soccer fans. Hall took the job two months ago, but now is threatened with the loss of his right leg from thrombosis.

Moscow Dynamos took off for Russia with nearly two tons of luggage, including 17 racing bicycles presented to them by a South London firm.

LARGE GOLD SHIPMENT

Madrid, Dec. 27. (AP) — A United States Army transport plane, carrying $1,000,000 in German Gold, left the Madrid airport today en route for Frankfurt, where the money will be turned over to the Allied Control Council.

The gold, in British and United States coins, was surrendered to the Spanish government by the German Embassy when the Nazis capitulated. After lengthy negotiations, the Spanish government agreed about ten days ago to turn gold over to British and American representatives.

Vern Stephens of St. Louis Wins American League Home Run Crown From Nick Etten

Etten, However, Wins Runs-Batted-In Title From Same Player

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP)—Husky Nick Etten of New York Yankees yielded his home-run crown to Vern Stephens of St. Louis, but evened things up by wresting the runs-batted-in title from Stephens in the 1945 American League slugging race.

First sacker Etten grabbed the highly-prized "clutch - hitting" championship by belting across 111 runs — two more than Stephens' winning total of 109 last year—official statistics revealed today.

However, the dangerous Brownie shortstop, who had only 89 runs batted in, slammed 24 home runs to dethrone Etten in that department.

The 31-year-old Etten was the only American leaguer to drive across more than 100 base occupants, further emphasizing that it was a woefully weak offensive season for the junior circuit. Etten's team-mate, second baseman George (Snuffy) Stirnweiss won the hitting crown with a feeble .309 average, poorest league mark in 40 years.

Runner-up in runs batted in was outfielder Roy Cullenbine of Detroit with 93. Cullenbine also drew the most bases on balls—112. For the second straight year, Cleveland's Pat Seerey was the No. 1 strikeout victim, whiffing 97 times—two fewer than in 1944.

Rudy York, Detroit first baseman, grounded into the most double-plays, 23, while shortstop Frank Crosetti of New York, was plunked most by pitched balls, 10 times.

Outfielder Tom McBride of Boston tied the major league record for runs batted across in one inning with six Aug. 4.

In all, the nip-and-tuck American League pennant race tumbled or tied 27 records, compared with 22 in 1944.

Catcher Frank Hayes of Cleveland-Philadelphia, ran his string of consecutive games to 308 and participated in the most double plays by a catcher, 29, for two new major league records.

Seerey tied a pair of major league marks with three home runs in one game and four extra base hits in another tilt. Among the unusual record feats were Detroit winning the pennant with the lowest championship percentage, .575; the fewest league errors in a season, 1,302; and the fewest league .300 batters, three.

Cleveland Indians turned up with four club records. They played the fewest games by a team in one season, 145; had the fewest assists in a game, none; fewest assists by an infield, none; and fewest stolen bases in a season, 19.

London, Dec. 28—(CP Cable)—James Gardiner, Canadian Agriculture Minister, arrived here today for conferences with Sir Ben Smith, British Food Minister.

Skiing Boom Double Any Season in U.S.

North Conway, N. H., Dec. 28—(AP)—Bunks in the village jail are the only unoccupied sleeping quarters left in this little ski village. With wartime restrictions lifted the lid is off for a skiing boom double that of any previous season in the United States.

Even during the past four years this area, collectively called the "Eastern Slope Region," enjoyed a 25-per-cent increase in popularity every season.

Unique in the east is the new $100,000 base station of famed skimobile at Cranmore Mountain The station provides spacious quarters where "hut skiers" may relax, eat, warm up and view the slopes through wide windows.

The mile-long skimobile, only device of its kind in the world, makes riding uphill almost as pleasant as skiing downhill. The mountain climbing tramway has a capacity of 600 skiers an hour in small individual cars. Invented in 1937 by George W. Morton of nearby Bartlett, the skimobile makes a vertical ascent of 1,380 feet in about 14 minutes.

KENTUCKY DERBY WILL HAVE VALUE OF $100,000

$25,000 Increase Over Last Year and Will be Run May 4

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 28 (AP)—What promises to be the biggest Kentucky Derby of them all—the 72nd consecutive run—today was officially down for decision May 4.

It will be the richest, with an added value of $100,000, announced Col. Matt J. Winn, President of Churchill Downs track here. That is a $25,000 increase over 1945's wartime derby.

The 84-year-old Winn expects to see the dollar value matched by a 100,000 crowd. That would be a dream come true for the white-haired colonel who hasn't missed a derby since the little red horse, Aristides, copped the first one in 1875. Largest crowd recorded is the 95,000 which witnessed record - breaking Whirlaway's 1941 triumph.

Next year's derby date marks a return to the traditional first Saturday in May. This year's renewal won by Hoop Jr. was delayed a month by the government's ban on racing in the United States.

The 1946 nomination fee for the mile and one-quarter classic for 3-year-olds will be $500, double that for this year, with $1,000 being required for starters, instead of $500.

The gross money includes awards of $10,000, $5,000 and $2,500, respectively for the second, third and fourth horses, and $3,000, $2,000 and $1,000 for their respective trainers.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The University of Toronto hockey team is in Colorado Springs, Colo., for two exhibition games tonight and tomorrow night with the Colorado College sextette. The latter comprise an all-Canadian squad featuring prairie players.

Among the 11 2-year-olds forming the field for tomorrow's $25,000 California Breeders Champion Stakes are three from the Louis B. Mayer stable, Honeymoon, Moneyback and Charivari. The race is the opening feature for the Santa Anita meeting.

A pitcher for Winnipeg in the Northern League prior to enlistment in 1942, Cpl. Charles Etherton, Jr., a Pacific veteran of the U.S. Army, was found dead with his throat cut on board a troop train at Jefferson City, Mo., yesterday.

Erwin (Murph) Chamberlain, gashed in the right instep in a National Hockey League game against Toronto Maple Leafs, will be missing from the Montreal Canadiens' lineup for two or possibly three weeks, it was learned last night. The Shawville, Ont., forward suffered the injury in the first period of the game Wednesday night which Montreal won 4-2.

"I was trying to sneak through the Toronto defence," said Chamberlain, who broke into the NHL, after starring with Sudbury, Ont., Tigers in their drive to the Allan Cup in 1937-38. "The whistle sounded just as Goldham (defenceman Bob Goldham) started to throw a check at me. He fell down . . . Goldham's skate dug into my hockey boot, cut the instep and nicked a piece of bone."

An Intercollegiate Hockey League with two Montreal teams, an Ottawa entry and possibly a Quebec City squad will operate this winter with sanction of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, it was announced at Ottawa yesterday. Loyola College and Sir George William College of Montreal and St. Patrick's College of Ottawa are definite entries, while Laval University of Quebec may join the loop. No opening date has been announced.

Sports writers who "knew him when" are amazed at Mervyn (Red) Dutton's unusual reticence as president of the National Hockey League. The man who was always hot copy in his playing and coaching days stole quietly into Toronto yesterday on league and private business and left last night for New York without disclosing a morsel of news. Asked if his Toronto visit included search for proposed new league headquarters here, Dutton said there is little early hope for office space in Toronto.

One half of the six-furlong Jefferson purse at New Orleans fair grounds yesterday was won by Hy-Gato which defeated the favored Black Swan to pay $15.80 to $2. Winner of the other division was F. Wellens' Air Pan who finished two lengths better than William Helis' Zito. He paid $6.60 for $2.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 24. (AP)—This is quite a week for Joe E. Brown. Friday he was scheduled to open in Columbus, Ohio, in "Harvey", Mary Chase's play of the drunk and his boon companion, a six-foot rabbit. Joe's performance may very well open up an entirely new career for him. "Harvey" did just that for Frank Fay, who created the role on Broadway.

But today is a more important day to Joe. Christmas Eve marks the 30th year that he has been married to Kate McGraw. Thirty years ago, Joe married the Irish girl between shows in New York

The couple met on a train, Mrs. Brown recounts. "He was touring a vaudeville circuit and I was going to visit my sister. He was homely as a mud fence and wore a green shirt and the loudest plaid coat I've ever seen." Joe courted her despite her family's disapproval of acrobats.

The Browns saw many lean and prosperous days together. Joe became a comedian and rose in his profession. He broke into the movies and there he won his greatest fame.

Then in October, 1942, their son, Capt. Don Brown, was killed when his army plane crashed into the California desert. After that, his one burning purpose was to entertain boys in uniform. He would pop up in the Aleutians, or North Africa, or the South Pacific, and tell his funny stories and do his little dance for any laugh-hungry boy who was willing to listen and watch

Margaret O'Brien is learning an authentic Irish dialect from Mrs. Arthur Shields, sister-in-law of Barry Fitzgerald, for "Three Wise Fools". . . Susan Hayward is rearing her twin sons, Timothy and Gregory, as individuals, not as twins. The nine-months-old babies are not identical twins, and their mother has decided they will develop better if treated as individuals, so far as clothes, education and training goes. .. Color films have launched a series of experiments to produce acceptable screen blood, for use in accidents and such. When Ward Bond got hit by Dana Andrews in "Canyon Passage", the good old puree de tomato turned out to be better than any of the newer devices. Ketchup, to you; it's the oldest form of screen blood. . . .

Harpo Marx will do the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" as his harp solo in "Adventures in Casablana," and Chico at the piano will give the cash customers "The Beer Barrel Polka" and "Moonlight Cocktail" . . . Somerset Maugham won't have screen credit, but he's helping on "Somewhere in the Night", which his friend Anderson Lawler is producing. . . Her studio is squeezing in a shot of the beautiful Grable legs and feet although "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" is a costume film; in the story, Betty operates the first model Remington typewriter

COUNTY COURT

Suspended sentences for six months with orders to pay court costs and restitution amounting to $31.15 each was the penalty given in county police court Thursday to Lloyd Louis and Bruce Brant, both of Shannonville, following pleas of guilty on two charges of assault doing bodily harm.

Louis and Brant had boarded a Collacutt bus last December 10 to return to their homes in Shannonville when outside the city they became abusive to fellow passengers with result they were ordered by the driver to leave the bus. A fight ensued during which the driver George Knight had his glasses twisted, while LAC Roy Armstrong of Kingston suffered a broken nose when he went to the assistance of the driver.

In suspending sentence Magistrate T. Y. Wills ordered the accused men to pay restitution of $31.15 to Armstrong and to pay court costs of $25.90 each. Costs and restitution are to be paid in six weeks. Robt. Pringle acted as counsel for the accused.

Stirling Motorist Fined

A Stirling motorist was assessed $10 and costs on a careless driving charge, while Ralph Leavens, was assessed the minimum fine of $5 and costs when found guilty also of a careless driving charge. The charge arose out of a motor accident on the Foxboro road last December 3rd, when a truck driven by Leavens was in collision wiah a north-bound vehicle driven by Frank Lough of Foxboro. Mrs. Lough sustained a broken leg in the accident.

Settled Out of Court

Six other cases involving charges for infraction of the traffic act were settled out of court with fines and costs being paid, while still another charge of careless driving against David Keronhan of Madoc was enlarged until next week.

SAILS AFTER REPAIRS

Southampton, England, Dec. 7—(AP)— The United States aircraft carrier Wasp sailed for the United States today with 5,000 troops after temporary repair of damages received in an Atlantic gale last week. The crew expected to get into New York harbor early New Year's day.

3,000,000 Pounds Milk Processed At Foxboro Factory

Foxboro cheese factory at which veteran John Hall was the cheese maker during the past season, did $67,765 worth of business during the making season just closed, it was revealed at the annual meeting held last week.

Nearly three million pounds of milk was processed during the year, with 250,420 pounds of cheese being manufactured showing yield of one pound of cheese to each 11.61 pounds of milk. Total receipts at the factory were $67,765, of which $57,047 was paid to factory patrons. Milk drawing cost $3,046, while sales of cheese brought in $50,193.

A total of $15,123 was realized by patrons through provincial and federal bonuses. Money received through Dominion bonus on high scoring cheese amounted to $4,414, while the provincial bonus totalled $4,894. The twenty cent per cwt. milk subsidy brought in another $5,815.

In addition to the cheese manufactured a total of 6,786 pounds of whey fat was separated.

Horace Palmer of Plainfield has been hired as cheese maker at the Foxboro factory for the 1946 making season. Last season's maker, Mr. John Hall, has retired from the business.

REMANDED FOR WEEK

Timmins, Dec. 28—(CP)—Despite his plea for an immediate hearing, Louis Gauthier, 38-year-old dome miner, charged with theft of gold ore was remanded one week by magistrate S. Atkinson in police court here Thursday.

Magistrate Atkinson said he was remanding the case because of the seriousness of the charge and the fact that defense counsel Gregory T. Evans, retained only this morning was unfamiliar with the evidence.

The World is Like That

CHAPTER 25

"Norma, darling!" said this exquisite apparition.

"Mama!" Norma said, stupefied. She ran up the stairs, and the lady put her arms about her and kissed her.

"Precious," said Janet, Countess von Sturnberg, "I got worried about you and your daddy, and I wondered what on earth they were doing to you! I've been thinking about Daddy ever since he and I had a little talk in New York a few weeks ago, and wondering if perhaps Hill Acres wasn't the place I belong, after all! From what darling Granny and our marvelous Sandy have been writing me I haven't felt one bit happy about my big girl, so here I am, and if Daddy'll forgive me I think I'm ready to begin all over again!"

Jocelyn felt bitterly wounded, felt completely left out of it. From the moment Norma's mother appeared there was nothing for her to do except obliterate herself as much as possible.

Sandy, on the other hand, went into Mrs. Fordyce's room immediately after the countess and Norma had disappeared therein, and when Philip came home he was immediately summoned to join them. Jocelyn, loitering in Norma's sitting room, through the half-open door, saw him come upstairs and went impulsively across the hall to meet him.

"What's this Brooks was telling me? Janet here?" he said sharply. "Did you see here?"

"Yes, I was in the hall with Norma when she came downstairs."

"What'd she say " He was too deeply disturbed to smile at her, to say anything that would make the troubled situation easier for Jocelyn.

"Just that she had been worried about Norma, and wanted to see—I think she said what we were doing to her."

"Great Scott!" he said in angry desperation, under his breath. "This is my mother's work."

"And Sandy's," Jocelyn couldn't help saying.

"I suppose she had a finger in it, too. It makes it nice for Norma!"

He said nothing more, immediately crossing to his mother's bedroom. Jocelyn stood irresolute for a minute; then she went back into the sitting room.

She had always imagined Norma's mother to be a hard, flashy woman; flippant, insensitive, selfish. It was a shock to discover her in this gentle, gracious person with the caressing soft voice, the graceful slender body, the appealing eyes. Jocelyn felt suddenly forlorn and helpless. She had no defense against this sort of thing.

The countess had decided quite suddenly upon the Western trip, Jocelyn knew. She had heard her say affectionately to Norma, as the two had preceded her up the big stairway, "I'd no more idea of coming than you had at this time yesterday, sweet. But I had a letter from Granny that made me so unhappy…."

They had both ignored her. Natural enough, a mother and daughter reunited after months of separation. They would ignore her from now on. Why not? She had no place in the story. Sandy hated her, and unquestionably the countess was all ready to dislike her heartily, to resent her having ever been made a member of the household, Philip, trying to protect his child's interests, would be helpless, and Granny would always be for the line of least resistance, for the easiest course. Norma might say a word in defense of her beloved companion, but nobody would hesitate for a second to drown out her voice.

So Jocelyn loitered about the room in a miserable state of indecision and apprehension. What were they all saying, in that room across the hall? What attitude could Philip possibly take toward this woman who had deserted him for another man, fifteen years earlier, and who had twice married since? She had felt no maternal yearnings toward Norma when the poor child had been shuttled from school to school, from governess to governess. She had gone her giddy way then. Now, just as the child was developing a natural affection for her father, just as she was finding a suitable group of friends, this mother must turn up to wreck the whole scheme once again!

Norma's reaction to it would be all-important. Jocelyn was not long left in doubts as to what that would be. About an hour after the conference in Mrs. Fordyce's room began, she heard voices, opening and closing doors, and Norma's voice in the hall.

When the girl came in she was in the excited, talkative mood that Jocelyn especially disliked. She held out a hand upon which blazed a magnificent ring of two pearls and an oblong diamond.

"Look what Mama's given me, Jotsy! Did you ever see such a rock! My grandmother gave it to her when she graduated, and she had it reset for me. My dear, such goings-on! It looks as if my delightful parents were going to agree about me for once in their lives. A coming-out party in Honolulu this summer, instead of next fall, with people coming from all corners of the earth, China and London and everywhere! Mama says she's tired of worrying about me, and of course I am a handful, consequently the entire committee is going to camp on little Norma's trail—imagine the excitement when everyone around here gets news of the great, reconciliation!"

Jocelyn could make nothing of this jargon. It was Norma at her worst; Norma slipped back to the spoiled child of a few months ago; chattering glibly of what she knew nothing, tossing off airy references to distinguished persons Jocelyn did not know, elated with her own position and power, wild for freedom.

"Norma." It was Sandy's most triumphant, smoothest voice from the doorway. She came in, elderly and rustling, for the moment ignoring Jocelyn completely, speaking only to the younger girl. "My dear," she said, "I think Mama will want to sleep in here with you tonight. Did you speak to Mattress about the change? We are moving you back to your old quarters, which are quite ready," Sandy continued, turning to Jocelyn without looking at her. "The countess naturally wants to be with Norma. So I think, Mattress, if you'll see one of the girls about getting the room Miss Britton has been using in order, we'll move the countess in as soon as you're through. Have them help Miss Britton move her things back to her old room, will you? My dear child," the old governess added to Norma affectionately, "This is exciting, isn't it? To have our Mama suddenly appear with all these beautiful plans,"

"We're probably not sailing Saturday, Jotsy," Norma announced importantly, following Jocelyn to her room, as Jocelyn went in and began to gather her things together. "Mama wants to go down to Honolulu for three months, in a few weeks, and have my coming-out party there, with all the guests—about two hundred of them—invited to come down and stay two weeks! Can you imagine it, beach parties and dances and swimming! Mama says nobody ever did that before, and it'll make it different from any other party that ever has been!"

Jocelyn felt helpless and confused, uncertain what to do, what action would be wisest now. She walked restlessly about her rooms, now determined to pack up all her belongings and leave for her aunt's house in Sausalito, now fiercely determined not to be worsted at this first encounter but to wait and see how matters would shape themselves.

The Sunday afternoon faded into darkness, and night came down with chilling fog from the hills. There was a tap at Jocelyn's door at half past seven o'clock, and Lena came in with a supper tray, and stopped to light her fire.

"Et get colt," observed Lena.

"It is cold," Jocelyn agreed She was sitting in a big chair now with a book. The sudden warmth of the blazing logs was grateful indeed. Lena drew the curtains; the room assumed the snug, homelike air that Jocelyn remembered having loved when first she came to it.

Another tap at the door, while Lena was still busy. Jocelyn's heart rose. It must be Norma!

But instead it was Miss Sanderson who stepped in; inclining her head sideways with a bleak imitation of a frozen smile that was characteristic of her and that Jocelyn particularly disliked, and not meeting Jocelyn's eyes as she sidled to the chair opposite her. With a preliminary "hem!" as sharp as a bullet, Sandy was ready for battle.

"Miss Britton," the older woman began, as Lena went noiselessly into the bedroom and closed the door, "just a few suggestions. The countess has moved into Norma's room; you knew that. It seems as if she can't get near enough to the dear child, now that they're together again. I brought up Janet Lockey," Miss Sanderson continued, after another sharp "hem!" as Jocelyn said nothing, but sat watching her steadily. "You knew that? I had her from the time when she was eleven. She had lost her mother, dear child. I was with her everywhere. When they put her into a German school, an Italian school, I boarded there with her. And I think I may say I discharged my trust carefully. Hem! to the best of my ability, at least.

"She was very young, of course, when she married Mr. Philip. Too young, perhaps, but her father never refused her anything, and indeed he was very fond of Mr. Philip, too. Three years later, unfortunately, they quarreled, as young people will."

"I thought she left him for a man named Caverley," Jocelyn put in coldly at this point Miss Sanderson scowled.

"She was very young," she said frigidly, "and whatever she did was done more in mischief than in—in any spirit of— or recklessness. She had been dancing with Captain Caverley a good deal, and I suppose I may say flirting with him—"

"I suppose you may," Jocelyn said dryly in the pause. The other woman gave her a glance, and her face darkened with a dry flush.

"I heard them laughing one afternoon, down on the lawn. That very lawn out here, under your windows. And quite suddenly Miss Janet—as I called the countess then—came flying into the house and packed an overnight bag, and they were gone. It was an escapade, she herself had no idea how serious, and we know now that she afterward regretted it very deeply. She was only with the Captain two years, and after that," said Sandy, with the tone of one giving her great credit, "she did not marry anyone for seven years. Not anyone!"

"That was something," Jocelyn said approvingly. Again Miss Sanderson looked at her sharply. "How long before she and Mr. Fordyce were divorced?"

"A year. He applied for a divorce immediately, but under the California law it took a year. She wanted him to go to Reno, but he said he could not be spared for six months."

"She didn't go to Reno?"

"She couldn't. The Captain was stationed in some New York place. She lived near him, and after the year was up they were married. It was very uncomfortable for her, of course, but her father was with her."

"Oh, her father was with her?"

"Certainly. He joined her immediately. Otherwise— hem!" said Sandy elegantly, "it would not have looked very well."

PRAISES SYNTONA FOR RELIEF OF INDIGESTION GAS AND DIZZY SPELLS

Glad to be Able to Eat Once More Without Stomach Suffering. "Sleep Better and Feel Better in General," He says.

When the stomach is out of order and food fails to digest properly, but ferments causing sourness, gas and a full, heavy sensation; when poor kidney action brings on night rising, backache and rheumatic aches and pains; when you have headaches, dizzy spells and nerves are on edge, take a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound and you, too, may find this medicine to be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

Here, for instance, is the experience of Mr. Charles M. Mitchell, 508 Talbot Street, London, Ontario, as reported only a few days ago:

"My digestion was out of order and giving me so much trouble I suffered after every meal with gas and a heavy, full feeling across my stomach and chest. I would get very distressing attacks of heartburn and belch up a hot, sour liquid. Sometimes dizzy spells came over me when dark spots flashed before my eyes. This condition seemed to affect my entire system, because I couldn't sleep at night as I used to and I lacked energy and felt very tired in the mornings.

"But all this has changed since I began taking Syntona a few weeks ago. I got this medicine after reading how it was helping other people and, in fact, even after taking the first bottle I could feel a considerable improvement. So I kept right along with it and not only did it clear up the trouble with my digestion, but I am free from dizziness and those sickening spots before my eyes and I enjoy all my meals now without having gas, heartburn or any distress afterward. My sleep is much more restful now, so I feel refreshed from the time I get up in the mornings. This is a great medicine and I can highly recommend it."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it will help you, too.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box talking and arguing about whether it's more fun to stay up exter late and help to trim a Chrissmas tree or just to get up exter early Chrissmas morning and be all a ways surprised, and about who got the most useless Chrissmas present. Sid Hunt saying he got a box of writing paper and nothing could be more useless than that on account of him not having wrote a letter for 2 years and not expecting to write one for 2 more as far as he knows.

Well somebody gave me a book that's more useless than that, Skinny Martin said. It's called Berds of All Countries and How to Distingwish them, and holey smokes I never expect to leave this country unless there's another war, and even then I'll probably be too busy distingwishing enemies to try to distinwish any berds, and anyways I'm sattisfied if I can tell sparrows and pidgins apart, he said.

My ant gave me a more useless book than that, Glasses Magee said. It's called Great Speeches of Great Men and good night you never saw so many big words all in one book, except maybe a distionerry, and besides the darn thing is so high it wont fit on any of the shelfs of my bookcase, so it's always hanging around getting in my way or else I'm always losing things under it, and to make it even more aggravating what I really asked my ant for was the Sidney Sly Detecktive Series in 10 volumes, he said, and Puds Simkins said, Well my cousin gave me a half a dozen hankerchiffs, and that's the last thing I need, because my mother or my father is always sticking one of theirs in my pockit before I have a chance to really embarrass anybody by not having one of my own.

Being the end of the subject on account of Lucky Leroy Shooster coming out just then with his football, proving what a useful present is really like.

Indonesians Will Assist British On One Condition

By VERN HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 28 —(AP)— The unrecognized Indonesian government agreed today to co-operate with British authorities in restoring order in Java, on condition no more Dutch troops be brought into the strife-torn island.

The Indonesian position was set forth in a statement after the cabinet had considered a request by Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the East Indies, that units of the Peace Preservation Corps (T.K.R.) be assigned to assist the British command.

"We are prepared to co-operate on the basis of justice," the statement said, "to speed the accomplishment of tasks assigned to British forces by the United Nations, and to maintain peace."

Sutan Sjahrir, Indonesian premier, elaborating on the prepared statement, said details of Indonesian co-operation, such as the arming of Indonesian police on the basis of other police, still remained to be worked out.

Some units of the T.K.R., however, already were being equipped by the British command as auxiliary military police.

Alleged Confession Brings More Charges Of Conspiracy

Montreal, Dec. 28 —(CP)— Alleged confession of a youth, one of four accused on charges of theft with violence, yesterday resulted in further charges of conspiracy to perpetrate an armed robbery on the arsenal of the Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment) armory, and told of how one of the men had drawn plans of the arsenal, and of a plot to overcome the night watchman.

The accused, Claude Naubert, 19, whose alleged confession to police of neighboring Outremont was admitted as evidence at the preliminary hearing, told police a detailed plan of the arsenal had been drawn by one of the four accused who formerly worked there. The plot was to overcome the night watchman and force him to open the iron doors of the arsenal. Then it had been planned to pilfer guns stored there.

The three accused with Naubert are Robert Paquin, 21, Michel Benoit, 20, and Aime Chartrand. All were arraigned on the charge in connection with the arsenal, and were remanded without bail for preliminary hearing next week.

Foreign Observers May See Atomic Bomb Tests at Sea

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, Dec. 28 —(AP)— The forthcoming test by the United States army and navy of atomic bombs at sea poses a military-diplomatic question: should the precedent of the 1923 airpower - vs. - warships experiments be followed to permit foreign observers to attend?

The co-possessors of the bomb secret — the United States, Britain and Canada — apparently made no comment at the Moscow foreign ministers conference to share the secret with any other power at this time. This, however, does not necessarily preclude the possibility that foreign observers might witness phases of the ocean tests if visual observation is possible.

On another historic occasion— when the Army Air Corps' Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell bombed and sank German and United States warships off Cape Hatteras —world powers had their representatives there to learn what lessons they could.

There is this difference between the 1923 tests and those of the atomic bomb: the Mitchell experiment involved no truly secret weapon.

Whatever the decision on other observers, it is assumed that Britain and Canada will be invited to the atomic bomb tests.

Britain will share interest in the outcome. She, like the United States, is a great naval power, confronted with the problem of deciding now what changes the atomic bomb will dictate in the charter of future fleets.

Russia, never a top-ranking naval power, will not have the same high stakes. But she has expanded her naval strength during and since the war.

Whether or not Russian observers see the tests on naval craft, the Soviet government already is in a position to know the destruction wrought by atomic bombs on land structures and people. Russian military missions were in Japan after the atomic bomb attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Choral Celebration Holy Communion At Anglican Church

Marmora—The Christmas festival was observed at St. Paul's Church with a choral celebration of Holy Communion at 11.30 p.m. preceded by a carol service, which lasted half an hour. The church was decorated with unadorned evergreen. Upon the altar were choice chrysanthemums, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Neath, in loving memory of the latter's father, William Nuttall, who passed away in Toronto on October 9th, 1943. The church was almost filled to capacity with worshippers. A full choir rendered the musical portion of the services very effectively. J. H. Maunders' anthem "Christians Awake", Salute the Happy Morn" was sung, with Rev. J. M. Brownlie and Mrs. Percy Gray taking the solo parts. The rector's impressive discourse was based upon the hymn "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Approximately one hundred communicated

Midnight Mass was celebrated at Sacred Heart Church on Tuesday with Rev. H. J. Farrell as celebrant. A procession of the children carrying lighted candles wended their way to the crib singing Christmas carols preceding the High Mass. The church was filled to capacity. Rev. CANADA UNLIMITED – The Formative Years

First train Montreal to Toronto—By Jack Martin, O.S.A., C.P.E.

The Age of Steel Begins

NO LONGER WOULD THE TRAVELLER have to suffer the endless discomforts and dangers of the 5-day stagecoach trip from Montreal to Toronto, for in the '50's the age of steel had begun.

Mile by mile, the lines of steel had forged ahead, crossing valleys, bridging rivers, skirting lakes, until, in 1856 the first link in a mighty chain was forged. With wild celebrations all along the line the first clanking, fire-spitting locomotive, rocking over loose ended, inverted V-rails, swaying over wooden trestles, made the run from Montreal to Toronto. To the youngsters of the day, the railroad train with its autocratic conductor meant romance and adventure... distant places and heroic deeds.

To the visionary, to the men who built Canada, the railroad was the magic path of progress that was to bind these far-flung territories into a united whole... to enable all to benefit to the full by the interchange of resources in food and material between the East and the West. We have seen the results of these dreams and efforts... a nation immeasurably greater than was dreamed of a century ago... a nation that is destined to even greater things if we maintain the faith and courage of the pioneers.

We can build an even greater future for Canada Unlimited by keeping our Victory Bonds as a gilt-edged investment and buying more when we are asked to do so.

3 CHARGED WITH MURDER OF JEWISH MERCHANT

Terrorists Sought Among Nearly 2,000 Now Held

Biggest Roundup Staged By Police in Palestine

Jerusalem, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Terrorists responsible for explosions and shootings which resulted in 10 deaths in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv Thursday were sought by police today among nearly 2,000 persons arrested in the biggest roundup in Palestine's history.

The suspects, lodged in detention barracks, were picked up throughout yesterday. Every male under 60 years of age, including the entire guest list of the Eden Hotel, was arrested in the Bezalel section of Jerusalem.

The curfew was lifted until further notice today in the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv. But reports from the neighboring town of Ramth Gan told of a large-scale search by British troops for persons suspected of participating in the disorders.

In Jerusalem the curfew was to remain in effect tonight. Private telephones still were not operating in large sections of the city. Authorities said this was a security precaution.

British Tommies in full battle dress patrolled streets in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

Squads of workmen dig through wreckage at the police headquarters building in Jerusalem, where desperadoes who carried guns and bomb-filled haversacks caused a series of heavy explosions.

Simultaneous attacks were made on the district police headquarters at Tel Aviv and on the British military camp at Leavant Fair, Tel Aviv.

A British statement blamed Jews for the attack at the military camp, and said the attackers wore "steel helmets, British battle dress or khaki shirts."

Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, High Commissioner for Palestine, conferred yesterday with David Ben-Gurion, chairman of the Jewish agency's executive committee, and Moses Shertok, director of the agency's political department.

Butcher of Lidice Talks of Causes Of Nazi Failure

Prague, Dec. 28 — (AP) —Karl Hermann Frank, the butcher of Lidice, admitted today that the program of the Sudeten German party from 1933 had been "treason to Czechoslovakia" and a step in the Nazi program to re-Germanize Bohemia.

Interviewed in the prison where he awaits trial as Czechoslovak's No. 1 war criminal, Frank said he is convinced Nazism is "dead forever."

The man who was the Nazi chief in Bohemia-Moravia when all the inhabitants of the little town of Lidice were massacred or deported is a gloomy picture. He did not want to talk about Lidice. But he talked freely about what he regarded as the causes of the Nazi failure. In foreign affairs, he said, the Nazis erred worse through an "exaggerated notion of their own power."

"They attempted too much," he said.

"Their chief error in internal affairs was the Nazi system of dictatorship which became irresponsible, and could lead people away from their true nature."

Frank is a Czechoslovak citizen, although of German origin He was a leader of the Sudeten German party which helped to open the way for Hitler's troops to enter Czechoslovakia.

"Would it be justified if the Czechs, with understandable grievances, were to obliterate a German village and its inhabitants?" Frank was asked.

Frank pondered long, and then replied:

"No, that would not be justified — by the laws of humanity."

White Plains, N.Y., Dec. 29 (AP)—Bertha Alice Demers, 28-year-old stenographer formerly of St. Valerian, Que., yesterday was sentenced to a term of 20 years to life upon her plea of guilty to a charge of second degree murder in the slaying of New Brunswick-born Zalter J. Robichaud, 49, North Tarrytown painting contractor.

CANADA-BRITAIN LOAN TALKS MAY START ON JAN. 28

British Officials Will Come to Ottawa and Imperial Preferences Will be Discussed

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (CP)— Loan talks between Canada and the United Kingdom may not get under way until after the co-ordinating committee of the Dominion-Provincial Conference, which meets Jan. 28, concludes its sittings, it was learned Friday.

Finance department officials will be kept occupied during the meetings of the committee which is attempting to frame new financial agreements between the Dominion and the Provinces. The committee will be meeting for the third time since the conference originally was called last August.

British officials are expected to come to Ottawa for the loan talks and it is believed likely trade and imperial preferences will be discussed.

Both Canada and Britain have been invited to attend a trade conference in the United States next spring and it is understood the Dominion wants to discuss the matter of imperial trade preferences with the United Kingdom before going to the gathering.

Reduce Trade Tariffs

The conference will discuss the possibility of reducing trade tariffs and expanding world trade. It will be preliminary to a proposed world conference on trade and employment. The United States has urged that such a world conference be called for next summer by the United Nations organization.

Among others of the 14 nations invited to the spring conference are Russia, France, China, Brazil, Australia, Cuba, New Zealand, Belgium, Holland, Czechoslovakia South Africa and India.

Hector MacKinnon, chairman of the Tariff Board, who took part in the long negotiations in Washington when the last reciprocity agreement was being drawn up, likely will head the delegation of tariff experts which Canada will send to the United States conference. Hubert Kemp of the Trade and Commerce Department likely will lead the Canadian delegation of trade experts.

It is not known who may represent the External Affairs Department, but Hon. L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to the United States, is looked on as a possibility.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said a short time ago that no thought had yet been given to the type of delegation Canada would send to the conference. John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, had suggested the delegation be non-partisan.

There has been no indication given yet as to how much Britain wishes to borrow from Canada. It is understood attempts are being made to forecast what Britain's needs for Canadian dollars will be during the next few years while she is attempting to rebuild and expand her trade.

The Canadian government was said to be anxious to see that Britain did not lack the credit facilities to purchase in Canada the things needed to rebuild Britain and to provide the people there with a high standard of living.

There has been some speculation that Britain wants between $500,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 from Canada, but these figures have received no official confirmation.

Talks on trade between Canada and the United Kingdom are expected to follow the loan talks. Once the loan has been concluded, it is expected that Britain will be able to end or modify greatly her austerity program which now is limiting imports from Canada to bare essentials. The program was instituted because of a shortage of Canadian dollars.

GM SUSPENDS PRODUCTION IN OSHAWA DEC. 31

Due to Shortages of Material Available From United States Company Asserts.

Oshawa, Dec. 29 (CP)—Production in the General Motors plant here will be suspended Dec. 31 because of shortages of material available only from the United States, the company announced today.

The company said the shutdown, affecting some 1,200 men, came about through United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) union strikes throughout General Motors plants in the United States and was the second since the plant here completed conversion and began peacetime production of motor vehicles Oct. 30.

The plant was closed for two weeks starting Nov. 30 and at that time company officials said the closure was due to lack of necessary parts through a strike of employees of the General Motors engine plant at Windsor, Ont., in sympathy with Ford Motor Company strikers.

Banks Feed Lines

"Banks of United States material, built up during the previous shutdown, have enabled operations to be continued until now," a company statement said. "These supplies have now been exhausted and resumption of operations will depend entirely on outcome of the strikes over the border."

The statement added that a number of employees will remain at work in the "north plant" after Monday on "feeder operations" but the assembly line will be idle.

"The stoppages have seriously affected new car production schedules although sufficient have been produced to 'sample' most of the dealers across Canada," the statement added. "Production is, however, considerably below the figures promised for 1945.

"The effect may spread to some suppliers but to what extent is not seen clearly yet."

Declares Spanish Govt. 'Ready To Isolate Self'

Madrid, Dec. 29 — (AP)—The Spanish government said today that Spain would not tolerate "interference of the foreigner in its internal affairs."

The statement, issued by Francisco Franco's Council of Ministers, apparently was in answer to a projected meeting of Britain, the United States and France to review their relations with Spain.

The communique said Spain stood "ready to isolate itself" from countries which have used her as a "lightning rod to draw off internal storms," and accused Communists of waging a "campaign of defamation" to smear the Franco government.

Both the Allies and the Axis had planned during the war to violate Spain's neutrality, the statement said, but these "machinations" were defeated by her "firm, gentlemanly" foreign policy.

"It is being discovered by official statements of chancelleries and published documents that notwithstanding the Pacific and neutral position of Spain there existed projects on both belligerent sides to violate the neutrality of Spain, making it an object of aggression," the statement said.

U.S. Cartels Investigator Charges American Military With Pampering Industrialists

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

Berlin, Dec. 29 — (AP)—Russell A. Nixon, deputy director of the Division of Investigation of Cartels and External Assets of the United States military government, said today that military authorities in the United States occupation zone are "pampering" German industrialists.

Former instructor in the economics department at Harvard University and later C.I.O. Washington representative for the United Electrical Workers, Mr. Nixon said in an interview that German industries are not being destroyed and that industrialists are not being arrested as he believed they should under a directive of the joint chiefs-of-staff.

He also said that "pressure" forced his division to release from jail a number of leaders of the I. G. Farben Industrie, gigantic German chemical trust, after they had been interrogated.

Lt.-Gen. Lucian D. Clay, Deputy Military Governor of Germany, said, "I found out about the release of these Farben leaders only the other day. If any pressure was brought for their release, it certainly did not come from this office. We still have 10 in custody, however."

Col. E. S. Pillsbury, control officer for the Farben Industries, informed Mr. Nixon that "if and when this office obtains information which provides a basis for substantive charges against these officials or any of them, such charges will be presented promptly to the war crimes authority or to the counter-intelligence department, according to the nature of the accusation."

Full-Time Service

"Unless and until such information is obtained," Col. Pillsbury said, "This office will require the full-time services of these officials in the preparation of reports needed for the accomplishment of objectives of seizure of Farben property."

Mr. Nixon replied that "there is a duty to place under arrest the key men in industry and finance until such time as a determination of their culpability and punishment is made by the appropriate authority."

He insisted his department had experienced "pressure from the beginning in the form of inquiries and expression of views by army officers and military government officials."

"When our questioning was completed," Mr. Nixon said "we were told we no longer had the authority to hold the industrialists."

Have Their Freedom.

". . .These leaders may not be in the mandatory removal category, but they certainly are segments of the Society which collaborated with the Nazi party. We haven't done anything with most of them. They have their freedom."

Mr. Nixon said, "83 per cent of the Farben industries in the American zone existed at the end of the war, and all that they need now are raw materials and fuel to start production at an 80 per cent capacity.

"We have failed to take adequate steps to break it up, and as a result these foxy German businessmen are pulling together their staffs and forming a nucleus for operations right under the noses of control officers whose orders were to destroy it. It has become a case of the tail wagging the dog".

Full Employment Will Be Resumed At Ford, Jan. 2

Windsor, Dec. 29. (CP) Full employment will be resumed at the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., plant here Jan. 2, the company announced today.

All employees not yet called back to work following the end of a 99-day walkout for Union Security by some 8,500 production workers were instructed to report on their regular shifts on that date. Paid advertisements containing the instructions appeared in newspapers today.

The strikers, members of Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.), voted Dec. 19 to return to work pending negotiations between Company and Union officials with the aid of a government-appointed arbitrator.

Some employees, mostly maintenance men, returned to their jobs the following day and added numbers were called in each day as the sprawling plant readied itself for peacetime production.

The strike, called last Sept. 12, affected some 10,000 production workers. Some 1,500 of these were non-Union members affected by the general tie-up.

Meanwhile, negotiations, which opened yesterday, continued today at the Ford Plant offices where in early November a barricade of hundreds of vehicles was set up by strikes to forestall any effort of a special police force to cross the picket line and enter the plant.

Mr. Justice Ivan C. Rand, named arbitrator by Labor Minister Mitchell, is sitting in on the negotiations to arbitrate any points on which the company and Union cannot agree.

Acting as "umpire of labor relations" is H. R. Pettigrove, of Fredericton, N.B., industrial relations officer of the Federal Labor Department, for the Maritimes. He will not be called into the discussions—expected to last ten days or more—unless one or both of the parties to the dispute seek his advice.

Runs Into Vacant Lot But Can't Escape Car

Los Angeles, Dec. 29—(AP)—Charles Shamoon, 38, ran 150 yards down a sidewalk into a vacant lot but he couldn't avoid becoming a pedestrian casualty. Police said the car's driver told them she swerved to avoid a collision and lost control. She was not held. In hospital, where Shamoon was treated for a broken leg, he sighed: "It was just too fast for me."

Predicts Next Three Years Will Be Cooler, Wetter

Ottawa, Dec. 29 —(CP)— Dr. R. E. DeLury, Canada's No. 1 solar specialist, gave the sun-spot situation a quick once-over today and came up with some chilling news.

Solar physicist at the Dominion Observatory here, Dr. DeLury said his charts indicate this weather for the future:

1. The remainder of this winter will be colder, with more snow than last winter, and each winter from now until 1948 or 1949 will grow progressively more severe.

2. Next summer will be cooler and wetter than last summer, and each summer through to 1948 or 1949 will produce a little less heat and a little more rain.

For that sad state of affairs, said Dr. DeLury, blame the sun spots, whose gigantic solar eruptions which wax and wane in 11-year cycles and right now are approaching the peak of one of those periods.

For the Canadian coasts it will mean cooler weather with rain; for the prairies cooler weather with less rain, and for Ontario and Quebec cooler weather with progressively increasing rainfall.

WAR SERVICES OF CIVILIANS TO BE HONORED

Distinctive Canadian Order Will Be Formed To Recognize Devoted Service in War

Ottawa, Dec. 29. (CP) — A special Canadian honors list will recognize the "patriotic and devoted" services of Canadian civilians in the war effort and an announcement will be made "in due course" regarding the new Canada Medal and establishment of "a distinctive Canadian order", Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last night in a statement.

No civilians had been included in honors lists since the New Year's list of 1944 and none would be honored in the forthcoming New Year's list, Mr. King said, but the permission of the King would be sought "within the next few months" for the issue of a special Canadian honors list which would recognize civilians who had served during the war with "distinction".

The question of the new Canada medal and establishment of a distinctive Canadian Order also had been considered and the government's intentions would be announced later.

Mr. King recalled that it had been decided at the time of the 1944 Honors list that no further civilian awards in the Orders of Chivalry would be made until the matter had been "reviewed carefully with the intention of having appropriate action taken after the end of the war."

A Canadian Medal

". . .The government recognized that the war had called for patriotic and devoted effort on the part of Canadians in all walks of life, and in every part of the country, and that there were many men and women throughout Canada who, in connection with every phase of the war effort, had given inspiring examples of leadership," he said.

In reviewing the matter, the government had considered the authority which had been given previously for establishment of a Canada Medal and "suggestions which had been made from time to time for the establishment of a distinctive Canadian Order."

There was no elaboration in Mr. King's statement regarding the Distinctive Order, but consistently throughout his long political career he has opposed the granting of hereditary titles to Canadians. None have been granted during Liberal regimes since 1919.

During the recent parliamentary session a suggestion that Mr. King be the first to be granted the Canada medal was made by Social Credit Leader Solon Low.

Previously it was announced that the New Year's list this year, containing more than 1,000 names, would be the last to recognize services performed during the Second Great War by Canadian servicemen and members of the Merchant Marine.

Mother Confesses To Killing Teacher

San Bernardino, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP)—A 24-year-old schoolteacher was dead and police said a 31-year-old mother of two children confessed to the slaying because her husband "left me and our two children to care for ourselves."

The victim, killed as she sat in a car with the other woman's husband, was Mrs. Ruby Clark, teacher at a girls' school.

Booked on suspicion of murder was Mrs. Gwendolyn Wallis. Her husband, Don, 33, was unhurt, although one of two bullets struck his belt buckle and dropped into his watch pocket.

Wallis told police his wife approached the car, remarked "oh, here you are. You can have her," then levelled a pistol at Mrs Clark and fired twice. One bullet struck the teacher's chest, the other an arm.

Mrs. Wallis was arrested in the trailer in which she, her husband, and the children, Donald, jr., 11, and Judy, 7, occupied.

Six Are Arrested In Most Concerted Drive in Toronto

Suspects Linked With Many Holdups in East Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — The most concerted police drive in Toronto's history drew quick blood with the arrest last night of six youths, three of them on charges of murdering Meyer Tobias, 54-year-old Jewish storekeeper.

Charged with the murder are Donald Ernest Warner, 16, arrested in a pool room; Harold Norman Urquhart, 19, arrested at home; and Edward James Martin, 18, taken into custody in a public library.

Also arrested were Thomas William Ward, 18, and William Sidney Marshall, 18, of Scarboro, charged with armed robbery, and Donald Mitchell, 19, charged with having an offensive weapon. Police say Mitchell gave a gun to one of the men.

Police said they believed Ward is one of the men who held up two clothing stores on East-Central Danforth Avenue the night of Dec. 20.

Chief Constable D. C. Draper and other high-ranking police officials joined detectives in the questioning of the suspects.

Police said they would issue no statement on the case, other than the announcement of the capture, until their investigation is complete.

Offer no Resistance

As the entire Toronto police force from Chief Draper down to the newest rookie Constable swung into an all-out hunt for a gang which had terrorized the eastern part of Toronto and adjoining Scarboro and East York townships, the suspects were arrested in this order: Warner, Urquhart, Martin, Mitchell, Ward and Marshall. None offered any resistance.

Spur to the manhunt was $2,000 in reward money for the apprehension of the killers of Tobias. The city's Jewish community donated $1,000 and the police department put up a similar amount.

The close-range shooting of Tobias in his North Toronto store stirred public indignation and brought demands for a crackdown on a wave of lawlessness which had grown steadily since late summer. One armed robbery had followed another until the climax came when bandits felled the popular North Toronto merchant with a revolver shot and then pumped another bullet into him as his body lay on the floor.

Struck Down by Car

Another Christmas season shock to Toronto citizens was the death of 13-year-old Doreen Peterson, struck down by a motorist who drove on and left her dead or dying in a ditch.

The two deaths, plus continuing armed raids on downtown establishments by youthful criminals, many of whom carried souvenir guns of Belgian or German manufacture, gave rise to a widespread call for an end to crime and a suggestion that Toronto's police force be increased.

The suspects held by police have been linked with the holdup of two Danforth Avenue stores the night of Dec. 20. Three armed men entered Lichtman and Company's store and robbed manager Kenneth Lichtman at gunpoint. They took $170 from Lichtman's wallet and $180 from the cash register. The same thugs are believed to have held up Irving Sussman's men's furnishing store, robbing it of $256 in cash, a mantel radio and the proprietor's overcoat.

Weather Forecast

TRUMAN PLANS BROADCAST JAN. 3

Washington, Dec. 29 —(AP)— President Truman's radio report to the United States will be made between 10 and 10:30 p.m., E.S.T., Thursday, Jan. 3, the White House announced today. It said the speech will be carried on all American networks.

"As the President announced in Independence, it will be sort of a report to the people on his overall program," said Charles G. Ross, press secretary.

HOG PRODUCERS, MARKETING BOARD WILL BE SET UP

Six-Man Commission Will Organize First Joint Marketing Scheme

Toronto, Dec. 29. (CP)—A six-man hog producers' marketing board is to be set up within two or three weeks, to organize Ontario's first joint hog marketing scheme which has been approved by nearly 30,000 Ontario hog producers, Ontario Agriculture Minister T. L. Kennedy announced last night.

Composed of three producers and three representatives of the packers, chosen by the groups themselves, the Board will meet monthly to set prices and control marketing of all Ontario hogs sold to processors.

Plans call for dividing the province into seven districts. Each county is to have a county committee with a representative on the district committee.

Besides controlling prices, the marketing board will be able to control production in various areas according to demand. Subject to the approval of the marketing board, local boards may appoint marketing agencies.

Packers, processors and producers of hogs are to be licensed. Processors and purchasers are to pay an annual fee of $1, and hog producers two cents on every hog marketed.

Vote Unanimous

Of the 31,796 hog producers registered, 29,757 voted on the plan. The vote was 29,353 in favor, 205 opposed, and there were 199 spoiled ballots.

Col. Kennedy said a similar marketing scheme had worked successfully with fruit and vegetables, but had never before been applied to hogs in Ontario.

"The scheme will give producers greater control of their industry through their own elected representatives," he said. "It is hoped that it will improve the industry all along the line—producers, drovers, shippers and processors.

"No harm can come from producers and processors sitting down each month to discuss their common problems, and surely some good will result. It's in their hands now. With authority they have responsibility. Certain difficulties may arise, but, as minister, I believe I'll be able to help them overcome them."

Five Persons Burned in Fire

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 — (AP) —At least five persons were killed and seven injured last night in a fire that swept a Philadelphia transportation company trolley car after it was in a collision with an oil-truck in nearby Essington, Pa.

Police removed four charred bodies from the wreckage of the trolley and a body they believed to be the truck driver's was removed from the cab of the truck.

Condition of the bodies was such that it might take hours for identification.

A spokesman for the P.T.C. who declined use of his name, said the tank truck, with a 4,200-gallon fuel oil capacity, struck the trolley near the front, then burst into flames which enveloped the entire car.

Police said the bodies of the victims were so badly burned it was impossible to tell whether they were men, women or children.

Tickets for twenty turkeys were drawn with only eighteen winners being announced in the advertisement.

902 DOG LICENCES ISSUED IN CITY

While other phases of life in the city might fluctuate from year to year, the dog population remains practically on the same level, City Pound Inspector Thomas Thorne stated today in the annual review of hisactivities. Dog licenses amounting to 902 were purchased by dog owners of the city in 1945, which is approximately the same number as 1944.

Stray pooches numbering 230 were lethally disposed of during the year, while a large number of family pets which had strayed from the home precincts were returned or claimed by their owners.

Dog tags for 1946 are now on order and will be available at the first of the coming year.

Newton Wilbur Installed Pres. Of Kinsmen Club

Member of the club for the past eight years, Newton Wilbur was installed as president of the Belleville Kinsmen Club for the year 1946 at the club final meeting of the current year held at the Hotel Quinte Friday evening. He succeeds Harry Rollins as president of the Kinsmen club in this city.

In relinquishing the reins of the club after one of its most successful years, President Rollins paid tribute to members and to chairmen of the various committees for the splendid co-operation shown during the year. He felt that a free hand should be given by the president to committee chairmen in carrying out projects, thus the club would not develop into a "one man show".

Turning to President-elect Wilbur, Mr. Rollins pointed out that as result of his position he must expect criticism of the members, but at the same time assured there were many boosters in the club. As president of the club for the past year Mr. Rollins stated he had tried to emphasize "kinsmenship" and that the social aspect would be further carried out was assured by President-elect Wilbur.

"As I see it more sociability between members and members wives is needed in the Belleville Kinsmen club", stated President Wilbur in his inaugural address. In addition to the annual ladies' night, he said he would like to see a Father and Son night and also a Father and Daughter night. He paid tribute to the splendid job done by President Rollins during the present year and in asking for co-operation for the next year assured he would endeavor to fulfill his duty as president.

President Wilbur's first duty upon accepting the gavel was to present to past-president Rollins a Kinsmen past president's pin.

Two new members of the club Don Jackson and Harry Gourley were called upon to act as sergeant-at-arms and as song leader, while Phil Huddleston acted in his customary roll as pianist.

Belleville Boys Still Receiving Kinsmen Fags

Although the number of service personnel from the Belleville district still overseas is gradually being reduced as the big troopships continue to dock on the East Coast, there are still many Belleville boys in the occupational force in Germany, or awaiting draft home to Canada.

It is to these boys still overseas that regular shipments of cigarettes through the local Kinsmen Fag Fund are being forwarded. Cigarettes will continue to be shipped to Belleville boys as long as they remain overseas, it is assured by Kinsmen Club officials.

Expression of appreciation to the local club for its gesture in sending "cigs" overseas is unanimous on the part of boys of the three services who assert smokes are still in short supply overseas.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund:

R. W. Armitage, R. Asselstine, R. D. Burley, L. F. Campbell, F. S. Christopher, W. R. Chapman, A. A. Claske, H. E. Cory, A. Culloden, F. G. Dafoe, G. E. Donohoe, G. J. Elson, A. B. Gerow, R. E. Gilbert, R. J. Holland, F. D. Hopkins, R. Ialenti, A. F. Lake, C. C. Lathangue, J. I. Lee, N. Luscombe, B. R. Minns, C. Nixon, E. Poitras, E. F. Renouf, H. L. Rosebush, M. M. Sallans, B. R. Sills, R. R. Worrell, W. E. Worrell, W. G. Wright, H. N. Babcock, K. J. Both, J. B. Crouter, Ken Hollands, C. G. Ruttan, G. A. Thorne, B. Yanover.

Special Dinners Will Be Featured On New Year's

New Year's Eve celebrants who are fortunate enough to wake up the next, or the same morning with an appreciable appetite, and who do not want to bother with the culinary efforts necessary to producing the New Year's dinner, will be able to procure the same at city hotels and restaurants.

The Hotel Quinte is serving a New Year's repast with turkey and the trimmings or a variety of entrees at noon and at seven p.m. The Queen's Hotel will cater to its clientele at seven at night with the traditional fare on the menu.

The Guild restaurant is, also, featuring a full course turkey dinner at a moderate price.

A number of other city restaurants will also hold forth with tempting New Year's Day menus.

A number of private dinner parties have been arranged to follow in the wake of the "night before" and all indications point to one of the jolliest New Year's Day celebrations from a festive point of view in years.

BRITAIN'S SECRET WAR WORKERS HONORED

Colonel Clifton Brown, speaker of the British House of Commons, London, is shown addressing the members of the Westminster munitions unit, composed of officials and members of parliament staffs who were engaged in England's top secret war work in the vaults below the House of Parliament building, for the past three years. Now that the war has ended and their work finished, the unit gathered to hear the speaker bid them farewell and congratulate them on their work before the unit closed down. Among the unit's achievements were secret instruments for submarines.

New Year's Eve Promises To Be Gayest Since 1939

Local entertainment monarchs have gone all-out to make this, Canada's first peacetime New Year's Eve since 1939, the gayest ever. Special programs have been lined up for every entertainment "spot" in the city and indications are that record crowds will be in attendance to greet the New Year.

Managers of the three local theatres have announced special midnight stage and screen shows with fun and favors for all. Hit features have been procured for the Belleville film addicts who prefer the cinema to other forms of entertainment.

Club "Vanity Fair" will entertain a capacity house with Kaye Martin and his orchestra providing the rhythm. The management has promised "oodles" of fun for everyone with favors and noise-makers for all. A buffet supper will be served when 1946 is a mere thirty minutes old.

The Trianon Ballroom will be the scene of much gayety where the "Commodores" will dish up the dance rhythms. Celebrants at the Trianon are assured of a bang-up party with the usual favors and novelties thrown in.

"Teen-agers" will hold the spotlight at a special dance for the "younger set" in the Collegiate gymnasia. There will be a ten-piece orchestra in attendance for this informal party with dancing from nine 'till one.

Officers of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) will entertain their wives and guests amid the gayly colored streamers in the Armouries. Guests will be received by Lt.-Col. and Mrs. B. C. Sisler assisted by Major and Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson. A turkey supper will be served and music will be provided by "Billy" Grant and his orchestra.

The Belleville Club is holding its annual New Year's Eve party and a record attendance is expected.

The gayly decorated gymnasia of the Y.M.C.A. will form a colorful setting for the party and dance planned by the Y's Men's Club and their friends.

Officers of both Trenton and Mountain View air stations will entertain their wives and guests at special parties in their respective messes. Quite a number of Belleville residents are expected to attend these gala functions.

Innumerable private parties have been planned and, all in all, Belleville will be quite a gay city New Year's Eve and not a few people will "meet the milkman" while wending wearily but happily homeward in the wee small hours of the first morning of 1946.

Boys and Girls Greatly Enjoy Special Recreation Program at Y

Belleville Y.M.C.A. was the proverbial "hive of industry" Friday when the boys and girls of the city and district took full advantage of their Christmas vacation to indulge in the special recreation program planned for the holidays.

In the morning, the "prep" and "junior" boys and girls held the spotlight in a small games tournament. The youngsters, ages ten to fourteen, showed very keen interest in the checker, croquinole and ping-pong straight knock-out tournaments. Individual honors in the girls' contests were won by Donna McNish in the checker tournament while Barbara Grills and Shirley Fox were the winners in the croquinole and ping-pong tournaments respectively. John Houston proved to be the "draughts" expert among the boys while Billy Jordan and Douglas Soule showed their superiority in croquinole and the abbreviated tennis games.

The youngsters wound up the morning on the bowling alley and for most of them, it was their first taste of the popular indoor sport. Nevertheless, they really enjoyed themselves and came away singing the praises of their new-found form of recreation.

Four Teams.

The intermediate high school groups "took over" the building at noon when the "city" gang took on the "district" lads in "round-robin" tournaments in floor hockey, borden ball, basketball and various relay races. The boys were divided into four teams, the Reds, Purples, Yellows and Blues and points were given for the different championships.

The Purples led by Dick Martin took top honors. Other members of the winning team were: Don Jeffrey, Jack Empey, Roy Jeffrey, Edison Stairs and Larry Button. The Yellows with Tom Buchanan, capt., Ron Button, Lloyd Faulkner, Don Yateman, George Baldwin, Norm Leslie and Don Taylor were the "consolation" winners.

After the "set-to" on the gym floor, the boys took time out for a swim before their supper meeting. Dick Martin, captain of the winning team acted as chairman of the meeting, Lloyd Pigdon was song leader and Bill Navin supplied the piano accompaniment. Principal G. Currie of B.C.I. & V.S. and Mr. J. Wilson, chairman of the Y.M.C.A. Boys' Work Committee were honored guests of the evening.

Address by Dr. Scott

Mr. J. E. Shortt, General Secretary of the Belleville Y introduced the guest speaker Dr. Russell Scott, recently discharged from the Canadian Medical Corps. Dr. Scott told of his varied experiences as a medical officer overseas with emphasis on plastic surgery work being done for members of Canada's fighting forces overseas.

Gerald Boag thanked Dr. Scott on behalf of the boys for his interesting address.

Bill Navin entertained the gathering with several of his inimitable piano stylings which were well received.

Ed Shortt, physical and program secretary, presented Y.M.C.A. crests to the winning team in the afternoon gamefest and consolation prizes to the runners-up.

The meeting closed with the showing of several reels of sport movies by Don Yateman.

$100,000 FIRE LOSS

Farnham, Que., Dec. 29 — (CP) —Fire of undetermined origin today caused damages estimated at $100,000 with the destruction of a garage, two homes, a woodyard and two outbuildings in this eastern townships town.

The flames first broke out in a garage used as a waste paper storehouse, and in a few minutes the building was blazing fiercely. Firemen were summoned from St. Johns, Cowansville and the nearby Farnham military camp.

No Turkeys, Geese and Ducks Are Available for New Year's; Fresh Pork in Limited Supply

Those lovers of turkey, goose and duck who gorged themselves with the traditional seasonal poultary at Christmas and in the interim, will have to be satisfied with chicken, beef and a limited supply of pork for their New Year's Day feast, according to local butchers.

There was nary a gobbler nor a gander available at the local meat marts today and unless a housewife or her spouse is "in the know" with farmer friends, indications point to a turkeyless and gooseless, January 1.

However, the reliable Biddy has come to the rescue and Madam Hen and her crowing spouse will furnish the main entree in many a city home on Tuesday.

While other centres report a shortage of pork this city is experiencing some reduction in stocks, but this is mainly due to the fact that pork quotas for the month of December are showing signs of depletion.

Slaughterers of hogs, it was stated, are allowed to kill a certain quota while those retailers who purchase from slaughter-houses are likewise held down to buying restrictions.

There is no direct evidence that anybody will starve despite the turkey and goose shortage—but who wants to pick the bones of these noble birds for two weeks in succession, anyway?

Motorists Warned To Drive Carefully Over the Holiday

The time honored advice regarding drinking and driving was heard this morning from Police Chief Walter Probert in his annual appeal for safe and sane driving over the New Year holiday.

"If you must drive, don't drink. If you must drink, don't drive," stated the police chief. "It is not only fines and possible imprisonment that are in question. The chance is that some persons — perhaps a child — may be injured, or even killed."

In answer to the argument that a single drink does not dull the senses of a motorist to an appreciable degree, Chief Probert claimed that liquor taken in any quantity will leave a taint on the breath and if an accident occurs this will be used against the motorist.

On the other hand the motorist might be tempted to flee following an accident lest the trace of liquor on his breath be discovered. And if he yields, as many do in a panic, the charges become still more serious.

The slippery condition of local streets also requires that additional care be taken during the holiday period if the year end is to be reached without serious accidents involving pedestrians or between motor vehicles.

Saturday Market

Turkeys and geese were still a minus quantity on the local produce market Saturday morning with market customers being forced to be satisfied with chicken and the occasional duck which were offered for sale by district farmers.

Top grade, full dressed capons brought as high as 55 cents the pound, while lesser grade fowl was quoted at from 38 to 44c. The few ducks offered sold at from $2.25 to $2.50 each.

Eggs held at last week's prices with firsts bringing 38 and 40c the dozen with pullets' ranging down to 30 cents. A few "overweights" sold at 45c the dozen.

The outside market was rather slim with market gardeners stating their supplies were practically depleted. One vendor stated what vegetables he displayed were his last until the new growing season.

Carrots, beets and parsnips brought 50c the peck, while turnips sold at a nickel each. Sauerkraut brought 15 cents the quart. A few farmers offered potatoes at 50c the peck.

Only two farmers offered apples with good grade McIntosh and Talman Sweets bringing 75c the six-quart basket.

One load of green mixed stovewood was quoted at $14 the cord.

British Take Over Phone Exchanges

Batavia, Dec. 29 —(AP)— British troops took over telephone exchanges and police stations in Buitenzorg and Batavia today, and launched a drive throughout western Java to wipe out resistance in native settlements.

Sniper fire was met by troops who occupied a power station at Buitenzorg. No resistance was encountered, however, by paratroopers who marched into the telephone and police buildings in Batavia.

Aneta, Dutch news agency, said British troops also took over the electric power station and water supply system in Batavia. The only utility not placed under supervision was the railways.

The British command reported minor opposition in the Semarang area during a search of native settlements for weapons.

After occupying Batavian police stations, British troops disbanded the Indonesian police force and replaced it by a composite force of British, Indonesian and Dutch personnel. The new policemen will wear khaki uniforms with black armbands and will carry pistols.

The former Indonesian policemen were disarmed and held in temporary custody at their headquarters.

Cab Calloway Declared Not Guilty of Charges

Kansas City, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Cab Calloway, Negro band leader, was declared not guilty of charges of intoxication and resisting arrest today by Judge Earle Frost in the outcome of what police said was an argument over his entering a Kansas City ballroom last Saturday.

The case was dismissed.

Calloway testified at the trial that he and a friend, Felix H. Payne Jr., of Kansas City, purchased tickets to the ballroom after they had been invited to attend by Lionel Hampton, another Negro band leader. Hampton's orchestra was playing for the dance.

The "Hi-De-Ho" musician declared the two were stopped by a special officer employed at the ballroom and told that the hall did not admit Negroes. Mr. Payne said at the trial that he was pushed by the officer and when he recovered he saw the officer beating Mr. Calloway with a revolver.

William Todd, the ballroom officer, testified Mr. Payne struck at him and Mr. Calloway pushed him to the floor.

Messrs. Calloway and Payne received hospital treatment following the altercation Saturday.

Judge Frost, in his decision, declared the prosecution did not provide sufficient evidence to prove that the two men were intoxicated or that they had resisted arrest. He said the men had created a disturbance, but this was due to a misunderstanding.

EVACUATE FLOODED AREAS

Portland, Ore., Dec. 29—(AP)— Army headquarters here said today 800 evacuees were taken to Eugene, Ore., as the rain-swollen Villamette River flooded lowland areas in nearby Glenwood and West Springfield. A flood crest of 17.5 feet — .8 above the disastrous 1942 crest — was expected in the area by noon today.

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP) — Harold Jackson, young war veteran recently released after a year in military hospital here, returned to hospital last night after he was slugged on the head and robbed of $47.

Jackson was found unconscious in the vestibule of a downtown building. He said he had been hit on the head by a thug and his wages stolen. The injuries are not serious.

Gen. McNarney Criticizes French For Their Policy

By JAMES F. KING

Frankfurt, Dec. 29 — (AP) — Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Chief of the United States occupation forces in Germany, expressed belief Friday it would be virtually impossible to restore a minimum sustaining economy for Germany so long as the French hold out against treating the country as a single economic unit.

Gen. McNarney's view was set forth in his first monthly report as United States Military Governor.

Further progress has been made in eradication of Nazi influences, breaking up of German cartels, and setting up machinery for reparations, and there are no immediate threats of epidemics or revolt, he said.

But in the basic matter of establishing administrative agencies for Germany, Gen. McNarney conceded, Allied control authority is deadlocked.

"Restoration of a minimum sustaining economy is most difficult if not impossible as long as artificial zonal boundaries restrict legitimate movement and trade," he said.

Still Remain Aloof

While elections in the United States occupation zone are only a month off, Gen. McNarney said, it is apparent the "German masses still remain aloof from formal political life."

A more stabilized situation is developing in the maintenance of law and order, especially in the orderliness of displaced persons, who have been blamed for most of the crimes reported.

Incidents reflecting hostility toward occupation forces on the part of the German populace have continued, "as is to be expected." Gen. McNarney said. "However, such incidents and activity were still localized and largely unorganized," he added.

The German people were eating fairly well, but Gen. McNarney emphasized food imports provided the only way a 1,500 daily caloric diet could be maintained.

Industrially, Germany was making slow recovery. Through Dec. 1, about 33 per cent of the plants in the United States zone were authorized to resume production, but shortages in transportation, coal and power limit industrial production to from five to 10 per cent of normal capacity.

AN APPRECIATION
from the
SCHUSTER COMPANY, LTD.

In presenting our customary Christmas message of good wishes to our many valued customers, we wish also to express our sincere appreciation of the splendid spirit of co-operation displayed by our customers in cheerfully accepting during the trying times under war conditions of coal scarcity, strikes, and Government regulations, whatever fuel was available, under most difficult delivery conditions at times.

There still is a marked scarcity of coal and we can only hope, with you, that by next Spring conditions in connection with the supply of coal may be back to nearly normal and that there need be no more class "A", class "B" and class "C" fuel, but only the good old coals of pre-war years that have proven so satisfactory to our trade for many years.

We feel that we have made a record in keeping Belleville and district warm during the past four or five strenuous years, and it is our aim to continue this policy of Public Service during the peace years that lie ahead with more efficiency than ever.

At this season of "good-will to men" we wish you all a Very Happy New Year.

Political Power Of Jap Emperor To be Wiped Out

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec. 29 (AP)—Proposed constitutional revisions stripping the Emperor of all political power and limiting his activities to "ceremonial functions of the state" were submitted to the government Friday by a private group of Japanese constitutional experts.

The move followed by a few hours a statement by Gen. MacArthur's press relations officer that Japan's all powerful emperor system "is being destroyed—wiped out of existence" and that it is up to the Nipponese to found a democratic government.

Tokyo newspapers prominently displayed the experts' six-point recommendation, formulated by educationists and publicists. Their proposals are far more extensive than any made heretofore on limitation of imperial prerogatives.

The revisions would transfer the Emperor's prerogatives to the Diet and specify that final responsibility for state administration rests with the cabinet. Diet approval would be necessary for the Emperor's ascension to the throne or appointment of a regency Emperor. The Diet could be dissolved only by decision of a plebiscite. Premiers would be recommended by the speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the House of Peers.

Earlier today, Brig.-Gen. Frayne Baker, Allied press relations officer, summarized a series of Allied directives in a written statement which said:

"All of the controls now removed or destroyed, when exercised through the feudal bureaux, combined to constitute the tenno (Emperor) system. With their removal, the system will be destroyed and wiped out of existence.

"The project now before the Japanese, therefore, is to found a government on horizontal planes (the people and the government on the same levels in place of the vertical lines power stemming downward from the Emperor) previously known. It is a major operation which must be guided and closely supervised."

Allied Prisoners Tortured Horribly Says Witness

By DUANE HENNESSY

Yokohama, Dec 28. (AP)—Allied prisoners of war in Fukuoka Camp in Japan were tortured horribly, it was testified today at the war crimes trial of Lieutenant Chotaro Furushima, Camp commander.

Lieut. N. E. Churchill of Toledo, Ohio, one of the officers who liberated the prisoners, testified before the second United States Military Commission established in aJpan. Furushima is charged with responsibility in starving one prisoner to death and brutalities against others.

In an adjoining courtroom, the trial of Lieutenant Kei Yuri former commander of the Omuta Camp on Kyushu Island, proceeded with a series of affidavits describing the starvation death of Cpl. James Pavlokos, Chicago, Ill., and the bayoneting of Pte. Noah Heard of Salinas, Calif.

Churchill told of examining 13 men at the Fukuoka Camp last September. The prisoners had been burned on the stomach, ears, neck and elbows.

"They must have suffered horribly as Japanese guards placed burning punk on their bodies," he said.

Cpl. Donald North of Marion, Iowa, testified Heard was bayoneted by a guard known to prisoners as "Smiling Jack". Yuri is charged with ordering the bayoneting of Heard after the American was beaten by guards.

U.S. Troops Will Leave Iran Before January 1

Tehran, Dec. 29 — (AP)—All United States troops in Iran will be moved to a camp at Basra, Iraq, to fulfill an agreement with the Iranian government for United States forces to quit the country by Jan. 1. The last American troops left Tehran two weeks ago.

Meanwhile, at Kazvin, Iran, Camp Stalingrad, northern terminus of the United States lend-lease life line to Russia in the days when the Germans were battering at Moscow, was transferred twice in half an hour Friday.

The Russians who had occupied it as their North Iranian headquarters turned the camp over to a United States Military Mission. The Americans immediately transferred title and possession to the Iranian National Police.

The camp is at the gateway to troubled Azerbaijan Province. The transfers, however, were carried out without a hitch.

The Russians had held the camp for a year on a lease with a 30-day cancellation clause. Notice to vacate was handed to the Russians Nov. 27.

14 Municipalities To Nominate Candidates

Fourteen of the twenty-six municipalities of Hastings County will go to nomination meetings on December 31 to either acclaim former township reeves and councillors or name those for election.

While it is expected that the greater majority of present reeves will get acclamation, county council officials were of the opinion today that some new faces will be seen when the county body convenes on January 15.

Twelve of the county municipalities have already named their township bodies for the coming year having done so during the first week in December.

Those which will go to nominations next week include Sidney, Thurlow, Tyendinaga, Rawdon, Hungerford, Madoc township, Dungannon, Mayo, Monteagle-Herschel, Carlow, Bangor, McClure and Wicklow, Stirling village, Frankford village, Deloro village.

Warden J. Fred Wilson, reeve of Sidney has already announced his retirement from municipal life. Yesterday, Reeve W. J. Tanner, of Rawdon Township, 1945 chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee announced his withdrawal from township government. Reeve Ed. Roach, Deseronto, has intimated that he too will retire from the village civic forum.

Rescue Squads Face Big Fire

Pineville, Ky., Dec. 28 (AP)—Rescue crews trying to reach more than 30 coal miners trapped by an underground explosion Wednesday said on emerging from the pit today they faced their biggest fire yet encountered.

The men said a big timber fire was raging which would take some time to extinguish. They said 22 fires had been put out thus far.

The crews said they were at least 1,500 feet from the actual scene of the blast but at the point where they may begin to find some bodies.

As the search for the miners, entombed in the No. 1 mine of the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company, entered its third day, new crews were being called from the surrounding counties to relieve the exhausted toilers.

The rescue squads, working in relays in the debris-blocked tunnel, pressed forward 900 feet in a 12-hour period overnight. They held no hope of finding the miners alive.

Tire Restrictions Off

Restrictions on the sale of automobile tires come to an end with December 31st. and it was with a great sense of relief that car owners received the news. Even those whose tires have held out and may do a good bit of travelling yet over the highways and roads took the news gladly because sooner or later tires will wear out and there can be no doubt that many were taking the very best care of the tires to make them last until the ban would be lifted. Then there are those other owners whose cars have been off the roads because their tires were worn out or one or more of them out of use.

Anxiety is lifted by the good news for it is no pleasure to have a constant thought on the possibility that a tire may blow out and the car and its party be stranded and have to be hauled home.

With that load off their minds car owners will of course exercise moderation because it has been advised that it may be some time before all the demands can be met. It would be foolish to start an avalanche of buying new tires because the existing supply would not be able to fill it.

The most devastating war in history has ended, a war which used up so much material and energy and skill as well as claiming the lives of millions, those who lost their lives in action and as a result of war service in all countries and those who fell victims to the many ills which war creates because of conditions. There has been a great shortage of materials for civilian use. Rubber and tires have been among these. It takes time to catch up the lost years and to convert to civilian use. So it is the part of wisdom and fairness for every car owner to be moderate and defer purchase for as long as his tires give a reasonable guarantee of service. In this way there will be an opportunity for the dealers and manufacturers to supply cases most in need of new tires.

The restrictions which war placed upon so many phases of life are step by step being lessened or removed. The latest — that in respect to the purchase of tires — shows that the country is proceeding as fast as it can back to civilian status. People appreciate the removal of controls when feasible and this lifting of the restrictions is the assurance that production is now moving the peacetime way.

Man's inventiveness, ingenuity and quest for improvements have done a great deal towards the achievement of victory. The manufacture of synthetic rubber is evidence of what has been done through this means to stretch out the rubber supply through those years of war when the war's demands were so great and when yet the civil and war time needs of the country were so great. Those were anxious days when Japan's entry into the war made critical the rubber situation but synthetic rubber came into the breach and helped immeasurably to ease the situation.

Now the tension is steadily lessening and controls are being relaxed as rapidly as possible.

British Science Aids Reconstruction

Gearing of British science to industrial and economic reconstruction has been regarded since the first days of peace by the Government, Department of Science and industry and the general public as of the first importance. Recently Sir John Anderson, chairman of the advisory committee on atomic energy, defined the outlook for the application of science in industry during the reconstruction period as "extremely favorable."

Immense benefits were gained in the United Kingdom during the war by scientific and industrial collaboration, creating many inventions and developments largely instrumental in winning the war as radio location, mulberry ports, the ten-ton bomb, high octane fuel and the atomic bomb.

Similar and even greater results the United Kingdom intends to achieve in the application of peacetime science to industry. She has entered peace with many of her wartime advances applicable to non-military purposes, as in textile research, making clothing waterproof, and at the same time allowing for the passage of air. "In television," Sir John said, "we undoubtedly led the world before the war and we are probably still ahead. Before the war the United Kingdom gained all the speed records in the air, on water and on land, with British pilots and British machines, made in British shops. We now hold all these records again." He named many more developments of science. British industry is shown as highly efficient technically.

Personnel, finance and organization are the [illegible] main factors involved in large scale research expansion. British industry has given many fellowships for research.

Kitchen Duty Preferred

(Montreal Herald)

British women are indicating in no uncertain way that they prefer the home to the factory.

During the war, it was feared that their enforced mobilization into industry constituted a final exodus from the domestic environment, that independence and weekly wages would prove permanently more attractive than kitchen duty and struggling with meagre household budgets.

But now we are told that the feminine rush from the plant to the home is proving so precipitate as to seriously hamper British reconversion.

Until many thousands more male British workers than have yet been demobilized return to "Civvy Street," women workers are depended on to get industry into the post-war stride upon which Britain's future depends.

Yet since the end of the European war, more than 800,000 women have quit British factories, fields and offices.

The authorities have resorted to persuasion — a special propaganda campaign —to brake the back to domesticity rush.

Devised V Signal

Victor de Laveleye, former Minister of Education for Belgium, who devised the V signal, tapped out in Morse with three short beats and one long one, fell to the street and passed out in Brussels at 51.

Sitting in a London pub with a Flemish refugee in January, 1941, de Laveleye said: "We were searching for a sign the Belgians could put up everywhere to worry the Nazis. Finally we agreed it had to be one with the same meaning in French, Flemish and English. We went through the alphabet. I hit on the letter 'V' because it is the key in the French 'victoire,' the Flemish 'vrijhead' and the English 'victory.' It was the perfect symbol for the Anglo-British entente." And how! — (Windsor Star.)

Restoration of Churches in U.K.

Nearly seventeen thousands churches and ecclesiastical buildings suffered damage in Britain and Northern Ireland. The War Damage Commission has worked out an equitable compensation scheme with a committee representing all the main religious denominations. The Church of England alone has to restore sixteen hundred churches and rebuild six hundred which will cost nearly twenty million pounds. Each diocese has a reorganization committee working in close co-operation with the civil planning authorities.

May Have Glassless Greenhouses

(The Rotarian Magazine)

Unless United States Department of Agriculture scientists are mistaken, we may soon be using our basements for greenhouses, substituting fluorescent lighting for sunshine. Since temperature and humidity can be more easily controlled in conventional buildings than in greenhouses, why go to the trouble of having them if sunlight is unnecessary? Naturally the duration and intensity of lighting will vary with different plants, but these can easily be determined. With flourescent lights now readily available, many of us will be giving the new discovery a trial.

INVENTORY

Business men take inventory,
Just to know the past year's story,
For the owners and the bosses
Must add up their gains and losses
And their costs and selling prices,
Stock, and old and new devices,
And, when all is summed together,
From the total find out whether
There's a better way of doing
Than the one they've been pursuing.

In our own lives let us do it:
Take the year past and review it.
Did we all our courage give it?
Did we well and truly live it?
What, when disappointments crossed us,
Did our fits of temper cost us?
Does the total of our labors
Prove us faithful friends and neighbors?
Would less taking and more giving
Make a better way of living?

Toronto Votes on $55,000,000 Program to Speed Up Traffic

By JACK MITCHELL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP)—This city of nearly 750,000—nearly 1,000,000 if you count the straggling outskirts — will decide Jan. 1, as part of the civic elections, whether to move the big league of city transport and build rapid transit subways or continue surface transport over what have been called "horse and buggy" streets.

The $55,000,000 program to speed up traffic and relieve downtown congestion is being placed before voters in three sections:

1. The building of two subways —one north and south and one east and west at a cost of $51,750,000, the Dominion to assume one-fifth of the cost as a post-war employment project with the Toronto Transportation Commission handling the rest.

2. Construction of a speedway to eliminate a traffic bottleneck in Rosedale's district of winding streets and mansions.

3. Construction of a similar traffic artery northeast from the downtown section involving important construction in the Don Valley area.

The subway projects have caught public imagination. And everybody in town can vote on them. The two speedways, being presented as money by-laws, may be voted on only by property owners.

Mayor Supports Scheme

Mayor Robert Saunders, re-elected by acclamation for 1946, has given active support to the subway plan and none who travel Toronto's congested streets or ride jam-packed trolleys and busses but recognize the need for some up-to-date modernization in the system.

As things are now it becomes almost a day's journey to visit a friend on the far side of this city which has fanned outwards on 3 sides from the old site of York trading post on Lake Ontario. The Toronto Transportation Commission says things are so tangled now, what with automobiles, trolleys and buses using the same streets, that average rush-hour speed is only six miles an hour. It should be 15 or more.

The north-south subway, at a cost of $32,450,000 would run under Yonge Street, following the old "Rebel" route of the stormy days of 1837 from Union Station north about a mile to College St. and thence by private right-of-way, partly underground and partly by depressed roadbed to a terminal at Eglinton Avenue. The terminal would be near the historic site of Montgomery's Tavern where the 1837 Rebels planned their abortive uprising in what was Upper Canada.

The east-west line under downtown Queen Street would run from Trinity Park, 4½ miles east to Gerrard and Carlaw Streets. The downtown terminus would be at the original west-end site of Trinity College which John Strachan founded for the Church of England in 1852, in the "family compact" days. Most of the Queen route would be sunken roadbed.

The Toronto Transportation Commission figures on 10 years to complete the two subway projects, employing 3,000 workers in all trades.

DONATES $100,000

Charlottetown, Dec. 29 —(CP) —Robert L. Cotton, Charlottetown businessman, has donated $100,000 trust fund to be used by the Provincial Government for rural beautification, it was announced yesterday by Premier J. Walter Jones. Only the interest from the fund will be used, under the terms of the agreement.

The New Year

Our yesterdays, touched by the hand of pain,
Our days of loss and our days of gain,
Days, grim and old, touched by sin's dark stain,
God takes away, and gives us again,
Days pure and white as the fresh new snow,
The New Year's dawn with sky aglow,
And courage to meet the days to be
From the power of the past forever free.

We need not mourn o'er the days now dead,
No tears o'er their bier be it ours to shed;
We need not grieve o'er their loss and pain
For better days will come again:
Nor dread the dawn of the New Year's sun
With the chance of a prize when the race is run.
"For as thy days, thy strength shall be"
Is the promise of God to you and me.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—The results of the Big Three foreign ministers' conference at Moscow certainly give brighter hope of a happy New Year.

That hope rests not so much in any specific agreement — although there are some of high importance—as in the fact that the spirit of co-operation, which received such a knock at the last Foreign Ministers' conference in London, seems to have been recreated. Unity of purpose among the Big Three is the great essential for peace, because as things now stand the weight of the world rests upon their broad shoulders. Without their full co-operation the forthcoming meeting of the assembly of the United Nations peace organization here would be the beating of an empty tub.

So it is good to see the Big Three machine again running more freely, and there naturally is considerable speculation as to whether Premier Stalin's presence in the Soviet capital —handy for quick consultation by his ministers—may have had something to do with the better atmosphere. Be that as it may, the calamity of the last Foreign Ministers' conference was reversed.

The most important agreement of the conference was the decision to create a commission under the United Nations organization to eliminate all atomic weapons and to develop atomic energy for the benefit of mankind.

Of course the Moscow conference appears to have left some delicate and important difficulties unsolved. Among these are Russia's relations with Iran and Turkey, both questions of world importance and full of dynamite.

However, it would be absurd to expect the Big Three Foreign Ministers to be able to iron out all their differences at one sitting. It would be equally absurd not to expect the three to have any differences, because they are bound to exist, just as they do among the people of individual countries, or individual cities or even individual families.

So long as there is a spirit of real co-operation, the differences will take care of themselves.

Capital Closeups

Ottawa, Dec. 29—(CP)—Those reports of a year or so ago that helicopters would be used in air services to smaller centres in Canada are not confirmed in applications so far before the Air Transport Board.

Reports had indicated operators were considering use of helicopters to service larger towns and small cities which had not air fields. Pastures or race tracks would be used.

Services through the eastern townships of Quebec and the Ottawa Valley were specifically mentioned in these previous reports. An A.T.B. official said today no applications have indicated the use of helicopters for regular scheduled services.

However, he added, some bush applicants had intimated they intended to use helicopters for charter flights to areas which would be inaccessible to orthodox aircraft.

A survey of Canadian economic potential as it relates to air transportation has been completed and its publication in a few weeks will serve as a guide for the A. T. B. in issuing licenses.

It will provide a pattern which applicants will be asked to follow in taking over new routes as they become available.

"We are going to ensure," he said, "that all the juicy routes don't go to some operators while others get all the barren territory."

So far, applications have been handled for 22 regular scheduled services and 80 non-scheduled services.

Of the scheduled services only one license has been issued. Of the non-schduled or bush services, eight licenses have been issued, 13 will be issued as soon as the necessary requirements are met and 59 are pending.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed letters, not more than one page or 100 words long, pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease, diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Address Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

Readers addressing letters to Dr. Brady will please include the word "Canada" on their return envelopes, as these letters have to be forwarded to Dr. Brady. And it is requested that readers use standard size envelopes that will hold a small booklet

WINTER UNDERWEAR

This season, owing to the extraordinary balance of supply and demand, we shall be spared, I hope, the long wool underwear propaganda of former seasons. It was usually about this time of year that the heavy underwear industry persuaded a child specialist or two, who could use the publicity and the money, to give utterance to the quaint old granny notion that children whose legs or knees are exposed in the winter will probably have rheumatiz some day if not now.

I was sternly reproved by a well meaning reader recently because, an infant in the reader's neigborhood had been regularly put to bed in a room with wide open windows and the baby had very light or no covers—the parents asserted that it was by my advice.

Those parents may have been sincere in thinking so, but they were wrong. I have seldom failed to specify that enough clothing, bed covers, artificial warmth to keep one comfortable is always necessary. A young infant cannot tell you whether he is warm enough, perhaps, but if you are not an irresponsible dimwit you can determine that by simply feeling of the baby's hands and feet. If they are not warm the baby is not dressed warmly enough or the bed lacks sufficient cover or a foot-warmer should be placed in the bed or the bed should be screened against cold wind.

As for the hypothetical or imagined relation between "insufficient clothing" or "exposure" and "rheumatism" or rheumatic fever (acute infection arthritis), there is no evidence to support the notion that bare knees or bare legs or as light underwear or other clothing as the child likes to wear contribute in any way to the development of any so-called rheumatic ailment. That notion is becoming extinct.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Wintering in the Sahara

About this time every year my skin gets into a terrible condition in spite of constant use of the best creams. (Miss A.de'R.)

Answer—Life in the desert is pretty rugged, of course. The change from healthful humidity to extreme aridity or dryness of the desert (not the Mojave but the Great American Indoor Sahara) is tough on the skin even if you refrain from hot soap and water soaking. Send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "Save Your Skin." At same time ask for pamphlet on Humidification (tells you how to prevent extreme dryness of the air in the artificially heated office, store or dwelling.)

Bed-Wetting

Twelve years old. wets bed nearly every night. This has been going on for about four years. Physician says nothing wrong but weak muscles. (Mrs. M.C.L.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (not with clipping) for pamphlet on Bed-Wetting. Follow the instructions therein and I'll bet you a complete set of the works of Ol' Doc Brady against a brief written report from you, that before school closes for the summer vacation the child will have ceased wetting the bed, provided no one is permitted to censure or humiliate the child about it. Too often ignorant and malicious people scold, punish or even shame a child who wets the bed—as though any child who is not an idiot in fact would deliberately do so.

Temporary Teeth

Child aged 14 months has fallen and broken off part of front upper tooth (incisor). Should we take her to the dentist or just forget it? (Mrs. F. H.)

Answer—Take her to the dentist, of course. The permanent or second front teeth will be cut when the child is 7 or 8 years of age.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is "no man's land?"

"No man's land" as used during the First Word War was merely a new application of an old term.

In the 14th century no man's land was a piece of waste ground just outside the walls of London that was often used for executions.

Referring to this land about 1350, Thomas Fuller in his "Worthies of England" (1662) wrote: "There happened so grievous a pestilence in London, that . . . the dead might seem to jostle one another. . . . Whereupon this bishop bought ground near Smithfield. It was called No-Man's-Land, . . . as designed and consecrated for the general sepulcher of the diseased."

Later we find the term frequently employed to describe any debatable territory, especially on the border of two countries.

In "Robinson Crusoe" (1719) Daniel Defoe wrote: "This was a kind of Border, that might be called no man's land."

The term has been used as a specific name of districts in Great Britain, South Africa, Australia, the United States and other countries.

In the United States alone "No Man's Land" has been the name of several districts, including an island near Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts.

One of the most famous districts to bear the name was a large strip of territory north of Texas 35 miles wide and 167 miles long. This No Man's Land was ceded by Texas to the Federal Government in 1850, and between that date and 1890, when it was incorporated into Oklahoma, it had no particular form of government and became notorious as the refuge of outlaws and recalcitrant Indians.

There were also large tracts known as "No Man's Land" in Colorado, Louisiana and the Dakotas and Minnesota. Although not included in any of the specific purchases, the title of the United States government was established by treaties with the Ute Indians and the Spanish and British governments.

It was natural that a descriptive term so widely known should have been revived during the First World War to designate the narrow strip of unoccupied land lying between the front trenches of opposing armies. Trench warfare on a large scale made the term peculiarly apt. No Man's Land, which on the Western Front varied in width from a few yards to a quarter of a mile or more, was usually strewn with dead bodies, fragments of shells, broken fences, riddled trees and other wreckage of war. "No man's land" in this connection appeared in print in London as early as Sept. 15, 1914, in a narrative signed "Eyewitness."

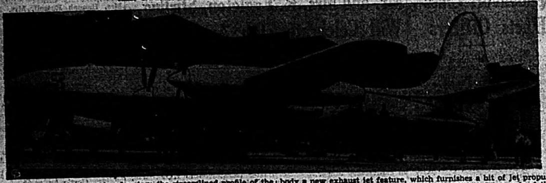
AIR-GOING PHOTO LAB WILL HAVE BIT OF JET PROPULSION



This photograph shows to advantage the streamlined profile of the New Republic XF-12, giant U. S. Army photo reconnaissance ship which has just been taken off the secret list after two years' development. It is expected to be test flown at an early date. The unusual engine nacelles, almost as big as the fuselage of the Republic's famous P-47 Thunderbolt fighters, show us here. The nacelles embody a new exhaust jet feature, which furnishes a bit of jet propulsion in addition to the 3,000 horse power delivered by each of the giant Pratt and Whitney Wasp Major engines. The big ship will operate in upper altitudes and at speeds comparable to those of World War III fighter craft.

Atomic Energy Brings New Era With War's End

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

History's most devastating war came to an end in 1945 and even as its last echoes died away the world found itself on the threshold of a new era heralded by the unlocking of atomic energy.

The conclusion of the Second Great War after six years of unparalleled bloodshed and destruction was overshadowed by the knowledge that scientists had found a means to harness atomic power.

The future of humanity depended on whether the discovery was channelled into constructive uses or employed in a war far more terrible than the one just ended.

The year 1945 also saw one gigantic stride taken towards maintaining peace—the birth of the United Nations Organization, designed to succeed the League of Nations. Representatives of 50 countries after two months of deliberations signed at San Francisco on June 26 the United Nations Charter setting up a security council, a general assembly and complementary organizations, and providing for the use of force in suppressing aggression.

Germany surrendered unconditionally on May 8 after the Russians smashing from the east and the other Allies driving from the west had joined forces on the Elbe River. Three months later, on Aug. 14, Japan capitulated after two of her cities had been devastated by atomic bombs.

The end of the costliest war in history left the United Nations with a colossal reconstruction problem. It left them also confronted with the urgent question of how to prevent another war in which atomic bombs might flatten the world's great cities.

Two Cities Levelled.

The United States, Britain and Canada collaborated in producing the atomic bomb through the splitting of uranium atoms. The revolutionary weapon, packing a greater punch than 20,000 tons of T.N.T., was produced in plants in the United States at a cost of $2,000,000,000. When the bomb was tested in the New Mexico desert July 16 a steel tower at the site of the explosion was vaporized and the blast was felt 250 miles away.

One atomic bomb was used against Hiroshima on Aug. 6 and another against Nagasaki on Aug. 9. Both cities were virtually obliterated.

Russia evinced keen interest in the weapon. Statements that the United States intended to keep the atomic bomb process as a "sacred trust" were countered by statements in Moscow that Russia soon would master the process herself.

In November the president of the United States and the prime ministers of Britain and Canada conferred on the subject in Washington. They announced they were prepared to share with other United Nations members detailed information on the practical application of atomic energy once effective enforceable safeguards against its use for destructive purposes were devised.

As the year ended the foreign ministers of Britain, the United States and Russia met in Moscow to discuss this proposal.

Axis might was shattered swiftly in 1945. As the year began Gen. Eisenhower's forces were poised along Germany's western frontier while Russian troops were deep in Poland and Hungary in their massive westward thrust. In March the Allies crossed the Rhine after bitter fighting on its approaches.

During the ensuing month they rolled west across Germany to the Elbe while the Russian armies swept across the eastern plains and hammered through the mountains of Czechoslovakia to meet them.

The Russians besieged Berlin and captured it May 2. The same day the Germans in Italy surrendered. On May 4 Field Marshal Montgomery accepted the surrender of the enemy forces in Holland, northwest Germany and Denmark. And on May 8 all German forces capitulated.

Burma Victory

In the final phases of the war in the Pacific, British, Indian and African forces smashed across Burma, capturing Mandalay in March and Rangoon in May. American forces invaded Luzon island, captured Manila on Feb. 24, and gradually cleared the Japanese from all the Philippines islands. Other American forces won toeholds nearer to Japan with the capture of Iwo Jima, March 17 and of Okinawa and surrounding islets June 21.

Australian troops invaded Borneo and seized most of the oil-rich Balikpapan district in June and July.

The British Pacific fleet teamed with the United States fleet in a series of smashing blows at Japanese possessions in the Pacific, culminating with the shelling by warships and bombing by carrier-borne planes, of targets in the Tokyo area in July.

Russia declared war on Japan Aug. 8, two days after the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, and six days later Japan surrendered unconditionally.

But the war left turmoil in its wake in many lands.

British forces entered Java in September to disarm the Japanese garrison and liberate Allied prisoners and internees. Armed Indonesian nationalists declared their independence of the Dutch and forcibly resisted British troops on the grounds they were restoring Dutch authority.

Fighting continued while British commanders sought to bring the Dutch and Indonesians together to settle their differences. A similar situation developed in Indo-China where Chinese and British forces sought to restore order.

Greece was torn by civil war in January and British forces there sided with the rightist government in quelling the insurrection by the left-wing national liberation front.

Chinese central government forces and Chinese Communists clashed as the Japanese threat was removed and the country was in the grip of undeclared civil war, as the year ended.

India and Palestine

Indian nationalists demanded immediate independence and Britain's labor government promised independence once the Indians themselves could agree on a constitution. There were riots in Palestine over the Jewish problem and Britain and the United States set up a joint committee charged with seeking a solution for the problem of Europe's Jews and of the future of Palestine.

The Big Three conferred twice during the year—at Yalta in February and at Potsdam in July.

At Yalta Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin agreed on a four-power occupation of Germany when she was defeated and resolved to disarm all German forces, break up her general staff and eliminate or control German industry that could be used for war purposes.

Poland's eastern boundary was set approximately at the Curzon Line, as proposed after the First Great War. Poland was to receive additional territory in the west and north. A Polish government on a broader basis was established in Poland and recognized by all the Big Three.

Death of Roosevelt

President Roosevelt died April 12 and Vice-President Harry Truman, who succeeded the man who had just begun his fourth term in office, went to Potsdam for the United States. A general election in Britain in which the Churchill government was overthrown caused the replacement of Mr. Churchill by Clement Attlee, the new prime minister, midway through the Potsdam talks.

At Potsdam agreement was reached on the division of German assets for reparations. Poland was given the part of Germany east of the Oder and Neisse rivers. East Prussia was divided between Russia and Poland, with Russia getting Koenigsberg.

But the end of the war saw a deterioration in the international harmony that held the great powers together. A meeting of the foreign ministers of Britain, the United States, Russia, France and China, called in September to consider post-war problems, broke up in failure to reach agreement on any major issue.

Retribution overtook two Axis leaders in the dying days of the war. Mussolini was executed by Italian patriots near Milan on April 29, along with his mistress, Clara Petacci. Though positive proof was lacking, there was every indication that Hitler and his mistress, Eva Braun, committed suicide in the ruins of the Berlin chancellery just before the city fell to the Russians.

Meanwhile the Allies set up an international tribunal at Nuernberg, Germany, to try a score of Nazi war criminals. Two notorious collaborators with Germany—Pierre Laval of France and Vidkun Quisling of Norway—were executed after treason trials.

WHY THIS TRIBULISM? ASKS AFRICAN NATIVE

Cape Town (CP)—The following letter appeared recently in the Bantu World, a paper for the Africans published in Johannesburg:

I am a Northern Transval African undergoing a course of training at the Cape among Cape Africans better known as Xosas. During my stay here, I have discovered that there is hardly any difference in their customs and those of other African tribes. All signs go to show that we are one in customs, rituals and rites.

This immediately raises the question—why perpetuate that hideous dragon called tribalism? Why should we call one another despicably: "You blanketed Xosa," "Cowardly Mosotho", "Uncircumcised Shangaan" and "Bloodthirsty Ndebele"? We live in enlightened times and we speak of progress; how are we going to achieve progress if we still worship the god of tribalism.

DIVORCED AFTER 50 YEARS

Weiser, Idaho, Dec. 29—(AP)—Elmer and Louanna Rock, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last June 3, have decided to call the whole thing off. Mrs. Rock, 69, charging that her husband, 70, has a "stingy nature," and has grown cantankerous," has been granted a divorce. The couple has nine children, all married.

GETS POLICE HELP QUICKLY

Tacoma, Wash., Dec. 29—(AP)—Cabbie Thomas Leggett made certain of getting police help fast. He drove his taxi directly into a couple of patrol cars parked at a police station door. The crash brought all the help needed to handle a passenger who, said Leggett, had threatened him.

FIGHTS FOR TIGER

Toichiro Araki addressed a crowd of Japanese in Tokyo, making a plea for signatures to petition to Gen. MacArthur in a fight to save the life of Lieut.-Gen. Yamashita, the "Tiger of Malaya," now under sentence of death by hanging after being found guilty of numerous war crimes committed in the Philippines.

NOTED LEADERS IN WORLD WARS DIED IN 1945

Roosevelt and Lloyd George Passed in Last Year of Second Great War; End of Hitler and Mussolini

(By The Canadian Press).

Death in 1945 struck down two of democracy's greatest champions and two of its arch-enemies.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 63, President of the United States for more than 12 years, whose name is linked with those of Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin in leading the United Nations to victory, died suddenly last April 12 following a cerebral hemorrhage.

Earl Lloyd George of Dwyfor, who as prime minister was Britain's champion in the First Great War and one of the formers of the subsequent Versailles Treaty, died at his modest, 400-year-old farm home in North Wales, on March 26. He was 82. As David Lloyd George he held a seat in the House of Commons from Carnarvon for 54 years and in tribite after his death Prime Minister Jan C. Smuts of South Africa said: "He was in that other war what Winston Churchill is in this one."

Dead the following month—by undisproved German account—lay Adolf Hitler, leader of the Axis attempt to dominate the world, in a bunker in blazing Berlin as Russian shock troops fought foot by foot through the doomed capital. His reported suicide pact with his mistress, Eva Braun, took place April 30. Dead in the same conflagration was reported Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda chief.

Hitler's paunchy co-plotter, Benito Mussolini, dead and desecrated, hung by his heels in a Milan market place while Italian guerillas punched, kicked and spat at him. He had been executed after summary trial at Denge, Italy, following his capture, April 26, while seeking to escape to neutral Switzerland.

Like Hitler, Mussolini was joined in death by a paramour, Clara Petacci.

Following Hitler in suicide were several notorious Nazis, includink Konrad Henlein, Sudetenland gauleiter who slashed his wrists in an American army prison cage May 10; Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief who took poison at Lueneberg, Germany, May 23, after capture by British troops; Robert Ley, labor front leader who hanged himself October 25 to escase trial as a war criminal at Nuernberg.

Executed were Europe's two greatest traitors: Vidkun Quisling of Norway, October 24; Pierre Laval of France, October 15.

Died in Action

Among high-ranking Allied war leaders who died in action were Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, R.N., navy commander-in-chief for D-Day operations, killed in a plane crash in France; and Lt.-Gen. Herbert Lumsden, British representative to Gen. MacArthur, killed aboard an American warship in the Pacific during a Japanese air attack.

Many Allied countries lost military leaders who did not fall in battle: Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, 50, former Canadian chief of staff in London; Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch, 56, who led the United States 7th. Army in Europe; Gen. Sir Henry Chayvel, 80, former Australian chief of staff; Sir Frederick Field, 73, Admiral of the Fleet and former First Sea Lord.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Henry Burstall, 74, who commanded the Canadian 2nd. Division, 1916-18, died in Hampshire, England.

Death come to several Allied war correspondents who followed fighting men into battle. Best known of these was Ernie Pyle, 44, widely-syndicated war correspondent whose homely chronicles of men under fire won a Pulitzer prize and millions of United States and Canadian readers; he was killed on the island of Ie off Okinawa, April 18. His widow, to whom he had always referred in his writings as "that girl", Geraldine Pyle, 45, died November 23.

Other journalists who died in 1945 were Lincoln B. Palmer, 79, general manager of the American Newspapers Association; Carl V. van Anda, 80, former managing editor of the New York Times; Joseph V. Connolley, 50, president of King Features Syndicate and International News Service; Harry Gould, 76, former chairman of the American News Company, Sir Bernard Partridge, 83, farmed political cartoonist for Punch.

Were Royal Physicians.

Lord Dawson of Penn, 79, royal physician who had treated three reigning British monarchs, and a former royal physician, Sir Thomas Barlow, 99, died. Other medical men and scientists dead in 1945 included Dr. Hans Fischer, 63, German chemist who discovered hematin; Sir Ambrose Fleming, 95, physicist and engineer; David Randall-MacIver, 71, archaelogist.

Churchmen of many denominations died in 1945 including Baron Lang, 81, former archbishop of York and Canterbury. He had had a large part in bringing about the abdication of King Edward VIII in 1937. Other clerics to die included Samuel Ot's Bennion, 70, Mormon leader; Joseph Cardinal MacRory, 84, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland.

The stage mourned Fay Davis, 72, American actress; George Black, 54, British producer and theatre-owner; Erno Rapee, 53, maestro of the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra, New York; Alla Nazimova, 66, stage and screen star; Edward Knoblock, 71, British dramatist; John McCormick, 61, Irish tenor; Gus Edwards, 70, song writer, actor, director; Jerome Kern, song writer.

Literature lost George W. Gilbert, 78, who wrote the Frank Merriwell stories under the pen-name of "Burt L. Standish"; Sir William Rothenstein, 73, British artist and writer; Alexei Tolstoi, 62, Russian novelist; Robert Benchley, 56, noted American humorist, and film actor; Franz Werfel, 54, novelist.

Prominent in Sport.

Most sensational death in the sports world was that of former boxer Al (Bunny) Davis, fatally shot while resisting a hold-up in a Brooklyn, N.Y., tavern. Freddie Fox, English jockey and racehorse trainer was killed in a motor accident.

Death came peacefully to other sports men: Steve Donoghue, 70, famed British jockey; John H. Farrell, 82, founder of the national association of professional baseball leagues; another British jockey, Charles Wood, 60

Australia's Prime Minister, John Curtin, 60, died at Canberra; Andre Tardieu, 68, three times premier of France, in the French Riviera and Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, 68, former president of Mexico, at Mexico City. From other walks of public life were lost Henrietta Szold, 84, founder of Hadassah; W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, 82, internationally-known prohibitionist; Vincent Bendix, 62, founder of the aircraft corporation bearing his name; Sir William Horwood, 82, Chief Justice of Newfoundland; Miss Agnes Baden-Powell, 86, founder of Britain's Girl Guides; Countess Baldwin, wife of a former British prime minister; the Countess of Oxford and Asquith, 81, widow of another British Prime Minister; Sir Ronald Lindsay, 68, former British ambassador to the United States; Sir Eric Phipps, 70, British ambassador to Germany and later to France; Norman McLarty, 56, former Canadian secretary of state.

Two men who figured in widely-different trials of other years died: Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, 84, intermediary in the Lindbergh kidnapping of 1932 who testified at the 1936 trial of Bruno Hauptmann for that crime, January 2; and Lord Alfred Douglas, 74, poet and friend of Oscar Wilde, poet and playwright convicted of immorality in a notorious 1895 Old Bailey trial in which Lord Alfred appeared as a defence witness.

LACK OF SHIPS

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 28—(AP)—More than 100 United States Army Air Corps men, protesting delay in redeployment, marched on United States Army Headquarters here yesterday, but dispersed when the army explained that a lack of ships held up their return to the United States.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 28—(CP)—Congressmen have gone home for a long Christmas-New Year holiday leaving virtually untouched a lengthy list of legislative proposals submitted by President Truman during the last six months.

All these proposals had to do with domestic affairs and the fact that they received almost no attention prompts one to wonder if the legislature will ever catch up with their work.

They left in various committee stages, or waiting submission to committees, such proposed measures as national health insurance, full employment, unemployment compensation and a national minimum wage measure, and numerous others sought by the president in successive messages to Congress.

Getting a contentious measure through Congress is a laborious process at best. It must be subjected to longer committee hearings in both Chambers and then run the gauntlets of political debate in the House with 435 members present and the Senate with 96 members.

This show of Congressional indifference to the president's wishes has been one of the surprises of the new administration. When Mr. Truman became president last April, it was widely forecast that because of his close association with Congress the gulf between Capitol Hill and the White House would be notably narrowed.

That seems to be an accurate forecast early in the Truman regime, but it did not last long and the new president has been placed in an unhappy and almost helpless position by successive rebuffs from his old colleagues.

The expectation is that President Truman will shortly take to the air in a series of broadcasts designed to rally public opinion to support with its influence on Congressmen the public welfare legislation he has sought, so far, in vain.

Canadian Ambassador L. B. Pearson came back from a visit to Hollywood with many interesting stories of his meetings there with Canadians in the moving picture industry. He went out to play host at a dinner and presentation of gifts to moving picture people who worked so hard to aid the Dominion's successive Victory Bond campaigns.

On one movie set he met young Johnny Coy, of Montreal, who is working on a picture in which he does the kind of dancing Fred Astaire made famous. He had been attempting a particularly difficult acrobatic dance stunt, but without success, when the Ambassador came along. After meeting Mr. Pearson he begged to be allowed to try once more under the inspiration of the presence of his country's ambassador. He went through the stunt without a flaw.

A tight glass stopper can nearly always be removed from a bottle by heating the outside of the bottle neck, preferably by wrapping around it a cloth wrung out of hot water. Soaking in vinegar is also very good to loosen the stopper. In every case, work the stopper gently.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Eggleton, Stirling, Will Celebrate 70th Anniversary Of Wedding on New Year's Day

New Year's Day, 1946 will be a memorable day in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eggleton of Stirling who will then be celebrating the seventieth anniversary of their wedding. They will spend the day at their home and in the evening at the residence of their son, Roy Eggleton, also of Stirling, they will be feted by the members of their family at an anniversary dinner.

On January 1st, 1876 the Rev. F. M. Finn, at the Episcopal Methodist parsonage, Stirling, united in marriage Robert Eggleton and Violet A. Carr, daughter of Daniel Carr of the Ridge Road. The ceremony was a quiet one and George Carr, brother of the bride and Annie Carr, her cousin, assisted the young couple.

The groom of seventy years ago is a hale and hearty man of 89 who will be observing his ninetieth birthday on June 30, 1946. Mrs. Eggleton also in good health will be 87 next June.

Lifetime in Stirling

Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton have always lived in Stirling which they have seen grow to become a village of importance in the life of the County of Hastings and of the entire district. Mr. Eggleton has helped in a very practical way in the development of the village and the surrounding country for as carpenter and contractor he has done a great deal of building. "I have built about two hundred barns in the neighborhood about Stirling and also a good many houses," he remarked the other day. Despite his great age, which he does not show, he takes a keen interest in the life of the village and the neighborhood and on Christmas Eve was on a visit to Belleville. While he has not been active in carpentry recently, he still cultivates his garden at Stirling. "We grow our own potatoes and all the garden stuff we want. But we keep no hens and no cow and so we are free to go about," he said.

Life has brought many blessings to this well-known couple. Ten children were born to them and the family circle remained unbroken until about two years ago when their son Gilbert, a railroad conductor, died in Western Canada. The nine surviving members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton are Mrs. Victoria Benson, West Huntingdon; Samuel Eggleton, Stirling, police officer of the village; Mrs. Amos Reid, Ottawa; Irvine Eggleton, contractor, Moira Street West, Belleville; Hector Eggleton, contractor, Stirling; Mrs. Will Blakley, Madoc; Mrs. Luther Phillips, Gordon Street, Belleville; Miss Ivy Eggleton, Belleville and Roy Eggleton, carpenter, Stirling.

Three of Mr. Eggleton's sons have followed in his calling and owe their training and skill to their father's thorough instruction.

11 Grandsons Served in War

Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton's family have a notable record of war service for eleven grandchildren have served in various branches of the armed services of Canada during the Second World War. Ten of them have already arrived home, one still remaining on duty. All passed through the great struggle unscathed.

Mr. Eggleton as a youth took an interest in the Orange Order and seventy-two years ago he joined at the age of eighteen L. O. L. No. 251 at Halloway and later transferred to L.O.L. 110, Stirling. He still pays visits to his lodge and delights to meet the brethren young and old.

Mr. Eggleton's ancestors lived in Norfolk, England. His father was David Eggleton and came out in 1834 to Canada, settling in Rawdon. It was there that Robert Eggleton was born.

The good health of Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton is a source of great happiness to their family and to their wide circle of friends. On the occasion of the anniversary of seventy years of married life they will have the best wishes of the entire district and countryside for many more anniversaries of that happy event in their lives.

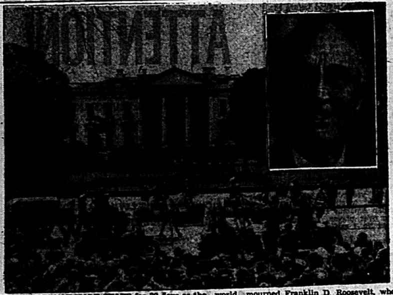
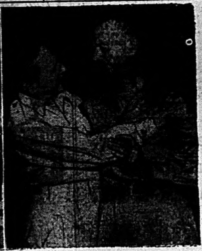
PICTURE PARADE OF NEWS IN 1945

CLEMENT ATTLEE and his Labor party won the first British election since 1935, when the people went to the polls July 5. Smiling happily the new Premier and his wife are being cheered by supporters at Mile End, London, after the sweeping victory.



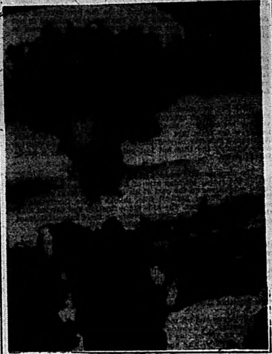
FLAGS FLEW AT HALF-STAFF for 30 days as the world mourned Franklin D. Roosevelt, who died suddenly on April 12 in his cottage at Warm Springs, Ga. His funeral cortege, approaching the White House, passes before a small part of the thousands of friends who gathered along the procession to pay final tribute to the only man elected to the U. S. presidency for four terms.

CITIES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD paid tribute following the war's victories to Allied commanders responsible for the defeat of the Axis Powers. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, home in the United States, returns a smiling victory wave as he drives at the side of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia through New York. Honored at receptions from Washington across the nation to his home town at Abilene, Kan., the General accepted the tumultuous ovations as a representative of the millions of men "I was honored" to command.



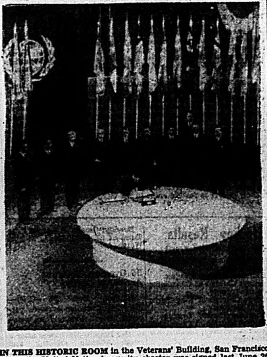
A DATE WAS KEPT in Yokohama, and two great generals were playing the stellar roles. It had been over three years since Gen. Douglas MacArthur had left Lieut.-Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright to defend "the Rock" on Corregidor. While MacArthur fought his way from Australia through the Philippines and on to Tokyo, itself, Wainwright, with thousands of his fellow men, were tasting the deprivations of captivity at the hands of the Sons of Heaven. His liberation was climaxed by the heartwarming reception given him by his former commander as they met in Japan before attending the Nip surrender ceremonies.

UNIQUE IN HISTORY is the Allied Military Tribunal at Nuernberg, Germany, where precedent is being set by Great Britain, the United States, Russia and France as 20 top-ranking Nazis are being tried for their war crimes. Shown in the prisoner dock at Nuernberg's Palace of Justice, are the defendants, LEFT to RIGHT, FRONT ROW, Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Wilhelm Keitel, Alfred Rosenberg. BACK ROW, Karl Doenitz, Erich Raeder, Von Schirach, Fritz Sauckel.



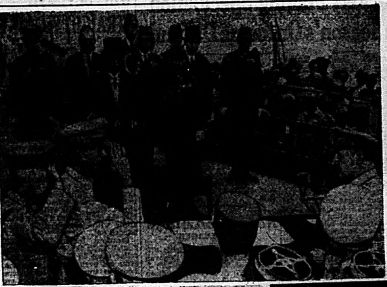
ON AUG. 6, the world was shaken by the news that scientists from Britain, the United States and Canada had harnessed atomic energy. The city of Hiroshima, Japan, was virtually wiped off the map as a lone atomic bomb was parachuted on Honshu Island. Two days later, a second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, and the following day the Japs were suing for peace.

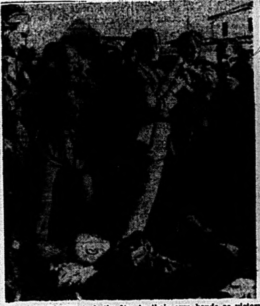
THE BIG THREE underwent a change of face in 1945, with Harry S. Truman, CENTRE, succeeding the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Clement Attlee, INSET, replacing Winston Churchill, LEFT. The lone member to continue in his nation's highest office, thereby representing his people both at Yalta in February and at Potsdam in July, was Premier Josef Stalin, RIGHT. Churchill lost to Attlee and his Labor party in the first British election since 1935.



IN THIS HISTORIC ROOM in the Veterans' Building, San Francisco, Calif., the United Nations' security charter was signed last June 26. From it the world drew hope for a working peace after a war which was fought to rid the universe of the Hitler-Hirohito-Mussolini tyranny. Here 50 nations wrote the nucleus of a plan for world government to prevent future wars. Dr. W. K. Wellington Koo of China, signing here, with members of the Chinese delegation lined up, is symbolic of the intention of all the nations to work for peace.

ALLIED VICTORIES went down on paper in a little red school house near Rheims, France, ABOVE, and aboard the U. S. battleship of the Third, Fleet, the U.S.S. Missouri, BELOW. The signal for VE celebrations came May 6, when the nullified Nazi commanders, Gen. Gustav Jodl and Gen. Adm. Hans George von Friendburg, affixed their signatures to surrender documents at Rheims, while four months later, on Sept. 2, the Japs officially joined the Germans in the role of the conquered and through his emissaries, Foreign Minister Shigemitsu and Chief of the Imperial Staff Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, Emperor Hirohito surrendered the whole of the Japanese empire to Allied officials aboard the Missouri in Tokyo Bay.





ITALIAN PATRIOTS took the law in their own hands as victory came to the one-time Axis country, and the result was the mob-execution of Benito Mussolini, the Fascist dictator who had aligned with Hitler to lead his people into the bloodiest war of Italy's history. The bald Il Duce lies dead on a Milan street, his head resting on the breast of his sweetheart, Clara Petacci, who died with him.

BLACK PETER was the name given Pierre Laval, chief of the French government during the Vichy regime, by his countrymen who convicted him of treason in a military court and executed him before a firing squad.

PRESIDENT HARRY TRUMAN of the United States, Prime Minister Clement Attlee of Great Britain and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canda, meeting in Washington, D.C., in November, announced a plan to reveal the mechanical mysteries of the atomic bomb production by stages. The three leaders are shown seated in the executive office of the White House. Behind them, LEFT to RIGHT, are Dr. Vannevar Bush, T. L. Rowan, Rep. Charles Eaton, Sen. Brien McMahon, Canadian ambassador Lester Pearson, James Byrnes and Rep. Sol Bloom.

Four Teams Crowd NHL Upper Brackets Making Speculation On Season's Outcome Difficult

Habitants Hold Rather Shaky Lead Trailed Closely by Chicago

(By The Canadian Press)

Baseball writers like to speculate that the standings of teams along about the beginning of July will approximate that of the leagues at the end of the season, and once upon a time it was possible to adopt the same method for determining the standing of the National Hockey League around New Year's Day, but not so in recent years, and especially this season.

With four teams crowding for the top spot, it is anybody's guess who will be ruling the roost when the schedule folds up St. Patrick's Day. So far, it has been mostly Montreal Canadiens, with Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings taking over the lead occasionally.

Canadiens Hold Shaky Lead

The Habitants hold a rather shaky lead on top, trailed closely by the Black Hawks whom they meet tonight at Montreal The Hawks are three points behind, but have one game on hand. A victory to Chicago would place them one point behind, and a further victory Sunday night against the lowly New York Rangers would lift the Hawks to the top.

Detroit currently is one game behind the Black Hawks, while one game below the Red Wings are the Boston Bruins. The Bruins have been idle since last Sunday, and are well rested for tonight's game at Toronto against the Maple Leafs. From Toronto, the Bruins leave for a Sunday night game at Detroit.

Will be at Full Strength

The Black Hawks will be at full strength tonight for the game against the Habitants, and coach Johnny Gottselig is counting much on the speed of his forward lines, led by the high-scoring trio of Max and Doug Bentley and Bill Mosienko. The Montreal coach, Dick Irvin, will have to shuffle his lineup as a result of a foot injury suffered Wednesday night in Toronto by Murph Chamberlain. This injury will keep Chamberlain out of play for about three or four weeks.

Irvin will move Bobby Fillon into Chamberlain's position along with Billy Reay and Jimmy Peters of the third string line, but otherwise the Canucks' roster will be intact.

Hap Day's harassed household of hockey talent is none too well fitted to give Bruins their best shot, because the schedule makers have had Leafs flying at a tremendous pace lately.

Leafs have barely had time for a cup of coffee between train jumps and home stands, and will be lacking the services of big Basil Pratt, their ace defenceman. Pratt is still bothered by a leg injury, and Day isn't counting on him for a while yet.

Pratt Sidetracked

With the honest brakeman sidetracked, Day will dress Elwin Morris to team with Ernie Dickens as one defensive pair, while Rockin' Robert Goldham and Wally Stanowski will be the other rearguard duo.

Mel Hill, who was bopped about the eye in a game against Jack Adams' robust Wings, will get back into action after missing last Wednesday's brush with Les Canadiens.

"We have been pretty sorely tried by the schedule of late," Day said last night, "but we'll give Ross and company all the hockey they want."

Manager Art Ross of the Bruins hasn't yet said who he will have in goal tonight. Paul Bibeault may get the call, but if Brimsek does start, it will be his first game in Maple Leaf Gardens in more than three years.

There are only the four week-end games, but Montreal will play in the first Monday night game of the season when they meet Rangers at New York New Year's Eve.

HAMILTON TIGERS WIN SEVENTH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Defeat Patricias While Owen Sound and Stratford Indians Tie

Defending champions of the senior O.H.A., Hamilton Tigers last night added a seventh scalp to their unblemished string of victories with a 2-1 decision over their hometown rivals, the Patricias. The latter accepted their fifth setback in eight appearances but continued to hold third spot in the standing, four points below the second-place Toronto Staffords.

Dillon Brady and Shillington shoved Tigers to the fore with first-period goals and it was not until the third frame that Pats scored when Fritz rifled a shot into the coop. It was a fairly brisk affair with six penalties being handed out.

Stratford Indians and Owen Sound Mohawks fought for the cellar place in the standing and came out even-stephen when the Redskins trounced the Sounders 4-1, the scramble taking place on Owen Sound ice. The Western Ontario rivals are tied for the bottom rung with two wins and six defeats for each.

Enio Sclisizzi of the visitors was the only one to find the target in the first session and the Indians held a 3-0 advantage in the second while the third round was even at one each.

McQuade was the ace with two goals and Macey earned the odd counter. Junkin, a newcomer, was the Mohawk scorer. Burdett of Stratford drew the only penalty.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP)—Sport seems set for the beginning of another "golden age" in 1946.

The boom days that promoters and officials began building for when war winnowed playing ranks are just around the corner.

The first full year of peace may not topple Canada's war attendance records in many lines of sport, but from the spectator's bird's-eye view the scene should be much brighter. The example of football and hockey in the six months following VJ-Day proves that.

Straws-in-the-wind for the future included hints of new horizons for hockey, the promise of a full-fledged football "war" in Eastern Canada and indications of a more realistic approach to the old "shamateur" problem.

With the transition period almost over, sports which failed to survive the war were on their feet or getting ready for a comeback. Curling enthusiasts looked to revival at Saskatoon in March of the Macdonald's Brier Tankard, uncontested since 1942; tennis officials shaped a Canadian entry for first Davis Cup competition since 1939; Winnipeg golfing interests talked up a $10,000 Canadian Open; basketball hinted an east-west final at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens.

Skiing activities burgeoned in Quebec, squash and badminton clubs announced international competitions, rowing organizations reformed their ranks. Announcements from authorities in lacrosse, rowing and swimming were symptomatic of the same expansion.

Even ping pong perked up. In Toronto, league officials gravely decreed the game had emerged from the "rumpus room" with players in tournaments ordered to wear whites.

But the most significant augury for 1946 came from the major sports:—

Football: Toronto Argonauts, comprising almost 100 per cent service personnel, forced revival of the "import" issue by routing Winnipeg Blue Boombers 35-0 in the Grey Cup final. Sportsman Joe Ryan promptly hollered that Montreal's tailend Hornets would return to the pre-war policy of luring football stars across the international boundary If the Canadian Rugby Union objected, Ryan said, Montreal would wage a break-up-the-Argos campaign.

Winnipeg, conceding it might be forced to adopt the east's wide-open style of play, pondered a possible change in grouping to link with Eastern Canada teams. Further west Regina, Calgary and other western centres talked of excluding Winnipeg from the western setup and forming a compact group of their own.

Meanwhile plans proceeded for a remodelling of the grand stand at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition grounds to seat possibly as many as 30,000 for some future east-west final.

Hockey: National League President Mervyn (Red) Dutton announced 1945-46 attendances higher even than 1944-45's record year. And Dutton disclosed an expending vista for Canadian hockey talent by saying the Dominion should be able to supply 150 players needed for a revival of hockey in Britain next winter.

Thus, as sports sights into 1946, the theme everywhere is expansion. Most of the players are back and the spectators are set. The only problem seems that of providing a bigtime setting suitable for the improved quality of competition.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

IN RETROSPECT

When the 1945 cherub pushed aside the bewhiskered predecessor of 1944 last January 1, he unknowingly ushered in not only a Victory Year, but one that saw a pronounced boom in all phases of sport in this city and district.

It was a year that saw practically the same athletic bill-of-fare dished up on the sports platter with an added dessert of baseball. The latter carried a special spicy tang for the diamond faithful who hadn't seen their favorite sport hereabouts since away back when, with the exception of the District Baseball Loop which operated in the outlying districts.

• • • • •

With the exception of senior mens' softball, nearly all the major sports saw an appreciable increase at the box offices. The veteran mushballers, through some internal disharmony did not draw the gates that they did in previous years. The Point Ann squad however carried the torch for the city and district after winning the title but lost out to Oshawa after a hard-fought series.

• • • • •

The championship orchids go to the Columbian Squires who behind the sturdy pitching arm of Don Boyle, and some sensational exhibitions on the part of his team-mates went on to win the Ontario Junior Softball title, thanks to the timely aid of some outside sponsors. The kids did a fine job and carried high the banner of Belleville sportsmanship on their successful jaunt down the junior mushball championship trail.

• • • • •

Ladies softball played on the Armouries diamond and outside points attracted large crowds of evening fans and the gals came through an exciting season with another feather of success in their figurative softball caps. The Mountain View Bomberettes with "Iron Woman" Vicky Hillier, doing a spectacular seasonal job of hurling won the city title, not to mention a couple of service crowns to boot. They went on to the Ontario semi-finals in the O.W.S.A. but met defeat at the hands of the starry Peterborough Westclox lassies who eventually won the provincial crown.

• • • • •

Cliff Argue and his merry men and women of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club swung high the burgees of Belleville bowldom with an outstanding tournament for mens' rinks held here on Civic Holiday. The annual get-together of the bowlers attracted the largest number of rinks in years, and the function went down in the archives of the local club as one of the most successful since Hector was a pup. The season as a whole proved one of enthusiasm and success.

• • • • •

Injected with some life-giving vitamins of public interest, baseball wakened from its former lethargic state and from a prone position of senile old age, sprung into a healthy youngster who is now looking forward to a future of activity. Thanks to President Jack McVeigh, Secretary Ernie Summers, and the managers of the participating squads, baseball was revived here in a manner that augurs well for its future success. City teams sprung up. Outside squads entered the newly formed City and District Loop and the game got off to a start that surprised its most ardent supporters.

• • • • •

True, the loop had its troubles. But since the new baby must crawl before it can do the hundred in ten flat, these were to be expected. However, the wrinkles were satisfactorily ironed out and the league closed its operations with the word "Success" in big letters marked in its first year book. Lateness of the season prevented the scheduled finals series, but since the Batawa squad defeated the Belleville juniors in the first game the title was awarded them with the sanction of all concerned.

• • • • •

The junior baseballers came through with a creditable performance under the guidance of Speedy St. Louis. They fought their way to the Ontario Junior O.B.A. finals going down to defeat in the third game of a well-fought series before the more experienced Dresden club. To Mr. Arthur Young, and members of his staff of the Stewart Warner Alemite Corporation here must go a lot of credit for getting behind the youngsters and assisting them in many ways to overcome that bugbear of all young teams, transportation. And when you consider that Dresden lies in the vicinity of Chatham, Ont., that was no small effort.

The outstanding sports performance of the year in the district occurred in what proved to be a "two-man" series when Frank "Smoky" Smith, of Thornbury and Jack "Lefty" Garten of Batawa, two of Ontario's outstanding intermediate southpaws engaged in a three-game hurling duel that had the fans standing on their collective ears. The two flingers, who look alike as the proverbial peas in the pod, struck out 104 batters between them in 36 innings of play, allowing but one walk. Thornbury copped the Intermediate "A" title in the third game by a one run margin.

Albert College junior gridiron gladiators loomed brightest on the football horizon defeating B.C.I. in a drawn-out series for the C.O.S.S.A. junior district title. The collegians went on to defeat Peterborough but lost the provincial crown to the starry Welland High School team. The Beach-coached youngsters proved themselves an outstanding well-balanced squad with lots of reserve power and their efforts proved a credit to their coach, their school and their city. The seniors after winning the southern sectional title lost out to the Tweed squad in two straight games.

Rejuvenated interest in hockey has become apparent with the advent of cold weather. The Belleville Redmen, coached and managed by themselves, formed a co-operative organization ~~that is~~ doing well in the Kingston Van Horne series thus far. At present they are tied for the series leadership and on Jan. 7 start operations in an Intermediate O.H.A. "A" grouping with Kingston, two Oshawa squads, Peterborough and Whitby. The Belleville juniors are also well organized and under "Toots" Holway and Bill Dennis are looking forward to a banner season. They are entered in a seven-team junior O.H.A. loop.

There will be plenty of hockey fare for the fans this winter. Three air force teams and Batawa are entered in an Intermediate "B" grouping and will play their games here. There are rumors at present to the effect that a city mercantile league will be organized, and will likely play "OWL" schedule.

Community-spirited and sports-minded Arthur Young, and his staff of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation here, introduced a sports innovation to the public that should go a long way in fostering interest in various forms of athletics. They built a baseball diamond out of the "wilderness" and installed flood-lighting, back-stops and bleacher accommodation that was greatly appreciated by baseball fans. The lighting system will be used extensively during next season, and with this in operation, a number of fans who otherwise have been deprived of an evening's sport entertainment due to employment will be able to enjoy their favorite outdoor pastimes. Mr. Young will also complete, and it is expected, light a softball diamond in close proximity to the baseball field. He and his staff have set a worthy example of civic endeavor, and are to be commended on their efforts to further sport in the city.

55 Overseas Veterans Arrive on Carrier

Halifax, Dec. 29 —(CP)— Fifty-five Canadian overseas veterans arrived Friday from overseas aboard the auxiliary aircraft carrier Empire MacAlpine after a rough Atlantic crossing and Christmas turkey dinner at sea. The ship took almost nine days to cross.

Originally scheduled to arrive before Christmas the carrier was forced back to England on her second day out when packing in the propeller started to leak.

FRESH TROUBLES APPEAR AHEAD FOR NHL PREXY

Scheduled to Confer With Kilpatrick, President of Gardens in New York

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP) — Fresh troubles appeared today to be piling up on Mervyn (The Red) Dutton, President of the National Hockey League who, in his playing prime thrived on such trouble as taking and dishing-out some of the league's more rock-ribbed body checks.

Not that these difficulties appear insurmountable. But they serve to make the Dutton tenure as president anything but dull.

Today Mervyn the Red was scheduled to confer in New York with Brig.-Gen. J. R. Kilpatrick, President of Madison Square Gardens, where they play a lot of hockey. ust what, if any trouble was involved, was not known.

But here are some of the other pieces of bother facing Dutton as league chieftain:

1. A challenge, as it were, by President Al Sutphin of Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League that could be the first shot in a clash between this powerful minor pro circuit and the N.H.L.

Sutphin Quoted.

Sutphin was quoted in Cleveland as saying the N.H.L. and American League are working independently of each other this season and that unless affiliation agreements are signed before the end of the season there will be no player draft by the National League in the spring of 1946.

2. A distributing situation developing from pro hockey players wanting amateur reinstatement on the plea that they can do better financially as non-professionals—get from $100 to $4,500 a season, so they say.

3. Finding a Toronto home for league headquarters.

"Added to all this was the report, unchecked directly with Lester Patrick at this writing, that the Old Mister Hockey of New York Rangers(may be retiring. If so, that would end 38 years for Patrick as player, coach, manager, league executive and general master-mind in many of the N.H.L. doings."

Dutton, at conclusion of a meeting here yesterday when the N.H.L. got together with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association over player agreements, brushed No. 1 easily.

Not Concerned With Remark.

He said all dealings with the American League on behalf of the National League had been conducted with the American League President and he was not concerned with remarks of any individual club owner or manager.

Not only that, Dutton said if it came to a showdown, and the American League wanted to discard present arrangements whereby it gets $7,500 for every player drafted by the National League, "there's nothing to stop our league going into the open market and offering biger salaries to draw players from the minors."

Dutton and Patrick left Toronto toether for the scheduled meeting with Gen. Kilpatrick of Madison Square Gardens but Dutton said he knew nothing of the nature of the conference.

Ontario Liquor Ration Will Remain in Jan.

Toronto, Dec. 29 —(CP)— There will be no change in the Ontario ration of any alcoholic beverage for the month of January, Liquor Commissioner W. G. Webster announced Friday.

"The unprecedented demand," he said, "for all types of liquor over the holiday season has seriously depleted our store inventories. These are being replenished as rapidly as possible and no ration change can be contemplated until this has been achieved. Meanwhile, the present Ontario ration compares favorably with that in other provinces."

New Drug Provides Freedom From Malaria

Canberra, Dec 29 (CP)— A group of Australian scientists who allowed themselves to be bitten repeatedly by malarial mosquitos announced Friday that a new drug, paludrine, rendered malaria no more harmful than the common cold.

Members of the group, including physicians, pathologists and entomologists, remained fit despite repeated infection by taking doses of a tablet of 1½ grains of the drug, they said. Some of the members were bitten 200 times by mosquitos carrying the parasite of tertiary malaria.

The scientists said results of their study indicated that the taking of one or two paludrine tablets each week-end would give complete freedom from malarial attacks. Paludrine in therapeutic doses also controls malarial fever and cures malignant malaria, they added.

'Racing-F.B.I.' Formed to Stamp Out Malpractices

(By The Canadian Press)

Following recent turf suspensions at Baltimore over alleged stimulation of horses at Pimlico, the Thoroughbred Racing Association at New York opened a clean-up drive with announcement yesterday of the appointment of Spencer Drayton, for 14 years with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as head of a special detective force. It was stated, however, that the "Racing F.B.I." would not deal with the many small bookmakers who operate away from the tracks.

Drayton, 35, is reported to have the support of 28 member racetracks and he has been authorized to built up an organization of special sleuths to stamp out malpractices.

Playing members of the Buffalo Bisons decided yesterday to donate the $1,500 bonus, promised by the club if they landed first place in the American Hockey League's Eastern Division, to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. President Maurice Podoloff of the circuit had threatened a $10,000 fine for the club if the gratuity were distributed among the players.

A former champion pole-vaulter, Hugh H. Baxter, 85, died at his home in New Rochelle, N.Y., yesterday. He had donated the Baxter mile trophy for the indoor games of the New York Athletic Club each year since 1910.

Santa Anita track is opening its ninth racing season today with a run of 55 days scheduled during which 15 stakes are to be featured with purses totalling a record $650,000. Nine two-year-olds are expected to make up the field for today's California Breeders' Champions Stake for a gross value of $36,575.

Freddie Schott's string of 43 straight victories came to an end last night at New York when the Paterson, N.J., heavyweight lost a one-sided 10-round decision to Joe Baksi, 214-pound Pennsylvania coal miner.

Returning to London from New York by plane yesterday, Promoter Jack Solomons announced a three-year agreement with Mike Jacobs of Madison Square Garden for the exchange of fighters. First is to be Willie Pep, New York featherweight champion, who is booked for a London engagement in March.

AT THE BELLE — Eddie Bracken, Diana Lynn and Veronica Lake featured with Cass Daley in "Out of This World," Paramount's funniest and most unusual musical comedy hit, now entertaining large Belle Theatre audiences.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 28 —(CP)— When Broadwayites and their country cousins foregather for the arrival of 1946 and concomitant elbow-bending they will find the main stem offering a New Year's Eve binge that costs more for less return than in any year since the torrid twenties.

One new little bistro, the Embassy Club, has announced the town's most pocket-agonizing tariff — $40 a couple, cover charge. With 20 per cent Federal tax and one per cent city tax, it means that for $48.40 you and the dream-girl can sit down.

If you get thirsty, that will be about $1.15 a quaff. Count in the minimum $10 one must needs slip the headwaiter and similar stipends for other lackeys and consider the splendid headache you can amass just by staying home and thinking about it.

Other spots on the saloon circuit average a cover of about $30 a couple, and in most cases demand patrons do their frolicking in white ties and ermine jackets. The Stork Club, El Morocco, Leon and Eddie's, the Copacabana and similar de rigueur dives fall into this category.

Of three recent theatrical openings, one is pretty poor fare, one is all right if you like it and the third verges on the excellent.

The poor-fare entry, "Brighten the Corner," stars Charles Butterworth, a funny comedian if given the minimum number of funny lines and situations. Here he has neither.

The all-right extravaganza is "Billion Dollar Baby," a musical which satirizes — without too much understanding, but with a nice sense of sparkle — the bootleg decade between the First Great War and the depression.

Adolph Green and Betty Comden—who wrote "On The Town" —have supplied a hard-hitting book and lyrics. Morton Gould's music is not for the bathtub whistler, but goes well with its setting. Mitzi Green, Hollywood moppet, and Joan McCracken, late of the casts of "Oklahoma!" and "Bloomer Girl," have the leads in this much-better-than-fair piece about unpleasant people.

The top offering of recent nights is Elmer Rice's "Dream Girl," interpreted by Betty Field, who doubles offstage as Mrs. Rice.

Miss Field has one of the longest and most demanding roles in recent stage history in this light —but not unimportant — play about the imaginings of a young girl.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 29 (AP)—Bob Waterfield returned to Los Angeles this week, but not as Mr. Jane Russell.

Bob and his actress bride left town for the east a few months ago and at that time his own substantial fame was overshadowed by Jane's. He was known as a star football back for University of California and she was the champ pin-up girl, a star who had never been seen by the general public in a movie.

Then Bob got a pro football contract with the Cleveland Rams. His performance this season has been described as atomic. He was considered the most outstanding rookie in the National League and was given a contract which may make him the highest paid United States football player. No one is happier over his success than Jane.

Jane's career is also due for an upsurge. Her two pictures will be released in the next three months. They are Hunt Stromberg's "Young Widow" and Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," the latter made four years ago and finally given Johnston (Hays) office approval.

The John Garfields are expecting a child momentarily. Twentieth-Century Fox wants Jennifer Jones to play "Daisy Kenyon" in the film version of the Elizabeth Janeway novel.. Ed Wynn will return to his old spot as fire chief on the radio comedy program.

Superstition dept.... Victor Francen was scheduled to be photographed in a coffin for a scene in "The Best With Five Fingers." He pleaded to be relieved because he is so superstitious. But the director insisted that the scene was necessary to the picture. A few days after the shot, Francen became ill with bronchitis and influenza and now is in Arizona recuperating.

Oscar Levant had to reverse his whole life to work in "Humoresque". He now rises at six or seven in the morning, the time he is ordinarily going to bed in New York. He still gets his customary 40 to 50 cups of coffee a day.

STILL SEWS FOR EUROPE'S NEEDY

Clifford, Dec. 29 —(CP)— Still sewing for the needy of Europe is Mrs. Edith Yost, 91, Clifford's oldest resident. Her eyesight remains good, and she likes to read her Bible and play Chinese checkers. During the war she made many quilts and garments for the Red Cross.

VANDALS SET FIRE TO ALTAR

Detroit, Dec. 29 —(AP)— Police today sought vandals who slugged the assistant pastor and set fire to the altar of fashionable Trinity Methodist Church in suburban Highland Park shortly after noon yesterday.

AT THE CAPITOL — Tough guy Leo Gorcey, a favorite with movie audiences, delights his legion of fans in Paramount's "Midnight Manhunt," Pine-Thomas mystery-comedy, coming next to the Capitol Theatre. The film stars William Gargan and Ann Savage in reporter roles. On the same program in technicolor "Bathing Beauty." Matinee daily for these attractions.

Montreal, Dec. 29 (CP)—Three men, two of them armed, held up Henry Hapkin, Papineau Avenue fish merchant, in his store last night and escaped with $325. Police said the men entered the establishment and while two kept the customers at bay, the other one went through the cash register, which contained $250. Hapkin was releived of $75 which he had on his person.

GLASGOW M.P. KILLED IN COLLISION

Glasgow, Dec. 29 (Reuters)—Francis Beattie, 80, Conservative member of parliament for the Cathcart Division of Glasgow, was killed yesterday when his car collided with a beer truck near here.

Mr. Beattie's death will necessitate a by-election to choose his successor. Four other by-elections are pending as a result of deaths of labor members of parliament.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 26.

"Under the circumstances how was it she got Norma for a quarter of the year?"

"Under what circumstances? There was nothing extraordinary in the circumstances."

"When I first worked for Fordyce, Sawyer & Fordyce," Jocelyn said, "the girls in the office said it was an elopement with

To this Miss Sanderson made

"To this Miss Sanderson made no reply. "It was because of her father that she got the baby some of the time," she said shortly. "But indeed, we musn't gossip this way," she interrupted herself, drawing her shoulders up primly "I came to say that Mrs. Fordyce and Mr. Philip and the Countess and Norma have all gone to the club for dinner. I see Lena's brought you yours."

"All together!"

"Certainly. The countess has a great many friends here, and she said she wanted to give them a surprise."

"But—good heavens! Fourteen years after their divorce!"

"They have seen each other in that time. As a matter of fact Mr. Fordyce saw her in New York the last time he was there, in the banker's office," Miss Sanderson said stiffly and uncomfortably.

Jocelyn was silent for a moment, looking into the fire, her head whirling, and the other woman was silent, too. Suddenly Jocelyn asked over a sick sense of defeat, "And what is the plan now?"

"I dare not hope for a reconciliation now, although I pray for it, as his mother does," Sandy said piously. "But I do dare to hope that there will be a friendly adjustment. It is my confident belief that Mr. Philip has never loved any other woman, and I think her coming to him tonight stirred him to the soul. Hein! Stirred him to the soul!"

"Norma said something tonight of taking a place in Hawaii and having a coming-out party there"

"Her mother wants to take her there for a few months, her father perhaps joining them later. Just what the arrangement will be, I don't know. But Mrs. Fordyce asked me to give you this."

She leaned forward, a pink slip in her hand. Jocelyn looked at it blankly; looked up. "What's this? she asked, her cheeks reddening.

"That's the countess's check for three months' services, Miss Britton, and she asked me to express thanks for all of them for the kindness you have shown to Norma."

A dozen phrases came to Jocelyn's mind; she discarded them all and sat silent, staring at the paper. Sandy was not worth her fire.

"Now, when would you want to go?" Miss Sanderson pursued it gently, inflexibly. "Any one of the men can drive you into town whenever you like. Tuesday? Wednesday?"

"I would like to say good-bye to Norma and Mrs. Fordyce tomorrow." Jocelyn said after a moment "I could leave in the afternoon."

"I'll arrange that, then," Miss Sanderson's voice sounded as if she strove to conceal her content. "You see none of us will be wanted since the countess herself is taking Norma in charge," she went on tactfully. "Of course, she's always been devoted to the child, but moving about so much—"

"I may accompany them to the island," she recommenced after a moment, as Jocelyn remained silent. "But that would only be as the countess's companion. She may want me to go."

Jocelyn was too crushed to speak. But she would not give Sandy the satisfaction of witnessing her agitation. She stood up, folded the check and put it under the mantel clock. Her look indicated to the other woman that the interview was over. Sandy rose, too, and moved to the door; her grizzled head was inclined toward Jocelyn, but her eyes as always evaded the other's eyes.

"I'll tell Mrs. Fordyce and Norma that you'll see them in the morning?" she said on a rising inflection.

"Please." That was all.

Jocelyn was alone. For a few minutes she would not let herself think. She stood in the center of the room, deliberately routing her thoughts, denying the swarming emotions as fast as they rose.

"I'll read," she said aloud. She seated herself, picked up her book. The fire crackled softly, and the spring night wind whispered about her windows. Jocelyn turned a page; turned another page.

It was no use! She flung aside the book and went to the window and opened it, kneeling down with her elbows on the sill and her eyes straining out into the dark.

"I've fallen in love with you," Philip had said. "The most natural thing in the world for anyone who is in your neighborhood at all is to fall in love with you."

And now—now—! Jocelyn suddenly put her head down into her hands and began to cry.

In the morning she had her breakfast upstairs and finished her packing, hoping, praying every minute that Philip would send for her. But ten o'clock came, and eleven, and there was no word.

It was almost noon when Lena came in to say that Mrs. Fordyce would like to see her, and Jocelyn, with a fast beating heart, went to the big beautiful bedroom to find the mistress of the house at her dressing table, Annette busy with her hair.

"Yes," said Mrs. Fordyce, lightly, nervously, as Jocelyn came in. "Good morning. What's it trying to do, rain? Well, I suppose Sandy told you last night that all our plans have changed."

"That's what we must get used to, in this world," Sandy herself said with a resigned smile. She was sitting knitting industriously in a chair close to the dressing table.

"The countess is going to take Norma with her to Honolulu," said Mrs. Fordyce. "Whether they'll sail as soon as Saturday or not I do not know. Phil could turn his reservation over to Janet I should think."

"Mr. Fordyce isn't going?" Jocelyn asked, instantly heartened by the thought.

Mrs. Fordyce made no answer to this. Miss Sanderson held off her knitting and eyed a row of purling. "He will follow later," she explained.

"Then there's nothing to do but say good-bye," Jocelyn said. She extended a hand to Mrs. Fordyce, who wiped cream from her own hand on Annette's apron before taking Jocelyn's hand and saying, through the mirror, "Good-bye, and thank you so much!"

"Good-bye, Miss Sanderson." Jocelyn said, retreating.

"Good-bye, and good luck I'm sure," said Sandy, sweetly, and without punctuation. She did not look up from her knitting.

Across the hall in Norma's rooms Jocelyn found the girl scribbling away madly at her desk in a new gold-bound diary that, she explained, her mother had bought her.

"No more lessons!" Norma exulted. "Mama says I'm too advanced for them. After all, travel educates, Mama says, and meeting all the strange people I do, and having my own way of judging them. Mama laughs and laughs at me, she says I'm not quite like anyone else, and I guess that's true, because I remember when I was only a tiny baby...."

It went on and on. The old mad childish babble of things she didn't understand, didn't remember correctly, was quoting from some boasting tale of her grandmother or mother. Jocelyn listened for a while, a careful half-smile on her face, and then asked Norma if she would say good-bye for her to her mother and father.

"It's a shame about Honolulu!" Norma said, by way of reply to this. She looked pale this morning, last night's lip red still smeared on her mouth; her rich dark hair giving off a scent of tobacco smoke, her breath indicating that nobody last night had limited her as to liquor. "But of course we'd only have a week there," she went on, "and Mama and I intend to stay for months, rent a beach place with lots of garden, or maybe buy one, and have parties! If I have a coming-out party Dad'll come down, and loads of yachts—the fun! Mama says it just suddenly occurred to her, 'Why' here's my little girl, the most interesting personality I ever knew, and I'm letting everyone else have the fun of her!' It seems a letter I wrote her—remember that funny letter I wrote the day I just felt funny—"

The stream this time was interrupted by the entrance of the countess, who also looked pasty of face and seemed weary in manner. A beautiful dressing gown trailed about her, her hair was in a tumbled disordered mass of curls.

"She really is beautiful, Jocelyn thought. Immediately she was under the spell of the cultured, lazy voice.

"Miss Britton, I'm so glad you came in. You had my check? And Sandy tells me you're going today. That's not hurrying you? I'm afraid I've upset your plans and Norma's for the Honolulu trip, but my little girl here has forgiven me and I know you will. I just got what I call 'Norma hungry,' and out I had to come to see her for myself. What I didn't realize was that I was going to find a little beauty for my daughter. Anyway, I'm going to give her just the bestest—bestest—"

Norma had gone to take one wing of her mother's chair as a seat and was cuddling up against her. The countess punctuated the last words with little bitelike kisses against the girl's cheek.

"Yes; she's going to have a happy summer," the countess pursued. "You know it never stops, down there. Dances, beach parties, fascinating men playing ukeleles. She's only seventeen, but that will make the girls of nineteen and twenty perfectly wild, and I think it might be fun! Darlin'," said the lady, rubbing her temple against Norma's, "you've not had a very good Mommy so far. But she's going to make it up to her little princess, who's going to have the happiest time of her life. But we musn't keep Miss Britton, darling. Say good-bye and trot along and have your bath.

"Miss Britton," the countess went on, when she and Jocelyn were alone, "I want to explain this situation to you. You, of course, think of me as a frivolous, selfish woman who has neglected her child all these years. I haven't," Janet said, tears of maternal devotion in her eyes, "I've always tried to do what was best for Norma, for I've realized that she was an unusual and excitable child, and ought to have careful handling. Two years after I eloped—I divorced Captain Caverley because I knew he was a completely unfit father for Norma. As to Count von Sturnberg, he fell in love with the child long before he did with me. He simply followed that seven-year-old baby about like a slave. She adored him, then. She hates him now, of course."

Jocelyn wondered contemptuously why they always had to justify themselves, deceive themselves. Janet must know in her heart that she had destroyed Norma's life, and that of Norma's father as well. But she was presently in tears of self-pity as she described effort after effort, sacrifice after sacrifice gladly made for her child, and so often futile.

96,000 TRAFFIC DEATHS

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—An estimated 96,000 deaths were caused in the United States by traffic accidents in 1945, statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. said.

This is an increase of 1,000 over 1944 accidents and was attributed to the rise of motor vehicle fatalities following the end of gasoline rationing.

CONTINUE SIX MONTHS

Vancouver, Dec. 28 — (CP) — Federal Labor Minister Mitchell said in an interview here Thursday that he sees no likelihood of wartime wages and price controls being "washed out" in the next six months.

Puebla, Mexico, Dec. 29 (AP)—Thirty-six persons were killed yesterday in a bus accident between Tepenene and Matamoros Izucar, about six miles west of here. Twenty-nine others were seriously injured.

Theodore Dreiser, Novelist, Dies Of Heart Attack

Hollywood, Dec. 29 (AP)—Theodore Dreiser, one of America's leading modern novelists, is dead.

A heart attack last night claimed the 74-year-old writer, an outstanding realist who came in with the present century and rose to literary eminence through critical derision after abandoning a newspaper career which he claimed was "too brutal."

Physicians said the writer, whose novel, "An American Tragedy" published 20 years ago, was one of his greatest literary works, appeared to rally after the first attack early yesterday, but succumbed to the second, 15 hours later.

At his bedside was his second wife, Helen. His first wife, the former Sarah Osborne White of St. Louis, died in 1942 at the age of 63. There were no children.

Born at Terre Haute, Ind., in 1871, the son of a German couple, John and Sarah Dreiser, Theodore began early to brood over the "brutalities" of everyday life—a despair that soon etched itself firmly into his writings, which consistently ran to tragedies.

Beginning in Chicago about 1890 a journalistic career he once said he hoped would "crystallize my vague dreamings and imaginings," he worked on newspapers and magazines in St. Louis and New York before he wrote "Sister Carrie," a tragedy of a village maiden. Suppressed by publishers at first, it later became one of his greatest works.

Dozens of Stories.

Later he turned out dozens of volumes of stories, long and short; plays and essays. Reflecting his obsession with the "brittle cruelty" of life, many were met by a public chorus of adverse criticism.

Others of his works included "Jennie Gerhardt," "The Genius," "A Hoosier Holiday," "A Book About Myself," "Moods, Cadenced and Declaimed," "Dreiser Looks at Russia" and "A Gallery of Women."

Since he established his home here 10 years ago, Mr. Dreiser remained in semi-seclusion, but recently completed two more novels, "The Bulwark" and "The Stoic," which are not yet off the press.

Three years ago he openly criticized Britain's war effort and for a while was barred from making speeches in Canada because of his utterances. Later he branded as a misquotation a declaration credited to him that he would rather see the Germans, instead of British aristocracy, in Britain.

EIGHT SURVIVE TWO DAYS IN BURNING MINE

Fate of 21 Miners Left in Mine Unknown and Fierce Fires Still Rage

By KYLE VANCE

Pineville, Ky., Dec. 29 —(AP)—The severely burned body of a miner, one of an estimated 31 trapped Wednesday by a tremendous explosion in a coal tunnel near here, was discovered today by rescue workers.

The miner, too severely burned for immediate recognition, was the second known victim of the explosion. Eight others, discovered in a corridor off the main tunnel, were removed to hospital last night. The fate of the other 21 is unknown.

The second known casualty was identified as Albert Bennett, 44, of Pineville, who was found alive but died before he could be brought to the surface from the mine.

Hospital officials said today that seven of the first patients reaching there appeared on their way toward recovery. Another, identified as Tom McQueen of Pineville, was reported in a serious condition.

A crowd of close to 200 men, women and children huddled around the mine entrance throughout the night, waiting anxiously for some word about the fate of the miners still inside the long tunnel. That word was expected momentarily.

A wave of excitement spread through the crowd outside the mine entrance when first reports were sent from the tunnel that some of the men had been found alive. Emergency calls were sent out for all available doctors and ambulances.

Surge Close to Entrance.

Men, women and children surged closer to the entrance but soon gave way for doctors and other assistants to make their way through the crowd.

Occasionally, a sob was heard or a handkerchief was used. But mostly there was comparatively little show of emotion. Relatives of some of the survivors followed their "men folks" to the hospital.

Others resumed the vigil for the remainder of the night. There was more optimistic talk that some of the others might be rescued alive.

Members of one crew told of finding a "log" written by the rescued men on a wooden board inside the corridor where they were found. The "log" said the men were still able to walk at 11:30 p.m. yesterday and had barricaded themselves in a corridor Wednesday to seal off the foul air.

The writings became less legible and finally dwindled off into marks which were illegible. Rescue workers said the men, weakened by shock and lack of oxygen would have been unable to survive much longer.

LEAVES FOR ENGLAND

Victoria, Dec. 29 (CP) — The Donaldson liner Letitia, former Canadian hospital ship, which brought American and Canadian repatriates from Hong Kong to this coast last month, and which has been undergoing engine repairs and overhaul here, will leave Saturday for England by way of the Panama Canal. She is under charter to the Canadian government and will be used to bring British brides of Canadian servicemen to Canada. The Letitia is expected to reach the United Kingdom late in January.

INCREASE PRICE CEILING

Vancouver, Dec. 29 (CP)—The Dominion government has agreed to increase the price ceiling on canned salmon purchased from canners on the Pacific coast, it was announced yesterday by representatives of the operators.

Tweed—The annual meeting of the ratepayers and trustees of the Consolidated school area met in the school on Wednesday, Dec. 26, to appoint three trustees whose term of office had expired. Mr. C. E. Way was elected by acclamation for two year term to replace Mr. T. C. Graham who wished to retire after eleven years on the Board.

Mr. Wm. Woods replaced Mr. C. E. Way and Mr. Stanley Eaton replaced Mr. Woods for the country section No. 3.

Mr. Percy Blakely, chairman and Mr. John Sager, secretary-treasurer are the other two members whose terms have not expired.

Mayoralty Contest Again Back in News

Toronto, Dec. 29 — (CP)—The mayoralty election in nearby Mimico settled in favor of Reeve A. D. Norris over Mayor A.H. Waites by a one-vote margin in a judicial recount, is back in the news today.

Waites charged last night at the final 1945 meeting of town council that a vote counted for Mr. Norris "never saw the inside of a ballot box." He added that he has an affidavit from one of the deputy returning officers that he accepted a vote after the polls closed and added it to the total.

The two candidates tied with 1,103 votes in the Dec. 3 election. Town clerk L. J. Ferris broke the deadlock by casting the deciding vote for Mayor Waites. Reeve Norris asked for a recount and Judge T. H. Barton ruled that the Reeve won by 1,104 votes to 1,103.

U.N.O. Committee Will Visit 6 Cities.

London, Dec. 29 (CP)— A United Nations Committee, after deciding that the capital of the world peace organization would be near the North Atlantic coast of the United States, met today to attempt to narrow the field to six proposed sites.

The committee, a seven-man investigating group appointed by the United Nations Organization Preparatory Commission, announced the capital would be in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey or Delaware.

The six sites selected will be visited by members of the committee, who plan to fly to the United States Jan. 3 or 4.

Toronto, Dec. 29 —(CP)— The Canadian Red Cross Society, which has announced establishment of a free national blood transfusion service for civilians, said yesterday it expects to obtain its supply of blood from volunteer donors.

5-Year Contracts To Supply Food Will be Discussed

London, Dec. 28 — (CP Cable)—Five-year contracts for supplying Canadian bacon, eggs, cheese and wheat to the United Kingdom will be discussed during a forthcoming visit to Britain of Agriculture Minister Gardiner and experts from the Canadian Agriculture Department.

Two-year contracts were the longest obtained during the war, but five-year agreements may fit both Canadian and United Kingdom policies. Canada has an agricultural floor prices organization and its work would be facilitated by long-term contract price arrangements. The United Kingdom is following a long-term food policy with detailed plans to be worked out for each foodstuff and the continuation of wartime bulk buying is likely.

The Canadians are seeking the retention of prices near the wartime levels and even in a long-term contract they would not like a wheat price much less than $1.25 a bushel — minimum now paid in Canada.

GM. Corporation Withdraws From Truman's Board

Washington, Dec. 29 (AP) — General Motors Corporation withdrew Friday from President Truman's fact-finding proceedings in the G. M. automobile strike.

The fact-finding board promptly announced it would continue its hearings regardless.

"We have withdrawn permanently, and I'm going back to New York," Walter Gordon Merritt, G. M. lawyer, told reporters.

General Motors withdrew because it challenged the inclusion of its profits as a factor in settling the 30 per-cent wage-increase demand of the Automobile Workers Union (C.I.O.)

Mr. Merritt announced G. M. had withdrawn from the hearing after first submitting a 10-page explanation of the company's position on the fact-finding proceedings. He told the hearing:

"The Corporation is unwilling to participate in the proceedings of this fact-finding board so long as its prices, profits and ability to pay—which are not facts but forecasts and estimates for the future—are to be regarded as proper factors in determining wages as applied to individual business."

Declaring that the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) in seeking the wage increase and demanding that profit figures he made public, were attempting to enter into management of the company, Mr. Merritt added that G. M. felt congressional action would be required before the Corporation would "blaze a trail in this direction."

Foxboro—Guests at the Parsonage during the Christmas holiday included Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Day, Kingston, Mr. Robert Shorten, Queen's University, Mr. Richard Brittain, of Kingston and Nova Scotia, and Mr. Keith Hamilton, Toronto.

Last week a very successful community Christmas concert was presented in the Sunday School Hall of the United Church. The different numbers, well presented were given by the pupils of the public school rooms, assisted by some of the Sunday School scholars.

Those responsible for this fine concert, for which Mr. S. C. Gay, Superintendent of the Sunday School was chairman, were Mrs. Hayton and Mrs. Sine, the two Foxboro teachers and Miss Atkinson, the instructress of music in the school.

CANDLELIGHT SERVICE

White's District—A very pretty "Candlelight" service was conducted at White's Church by Mrs. Glen Meyers, the president of the Bayside Women's Missionary Society on Sunday evening. The front of the church was decorated with Christmas greens and candles were placed on a table in front of the altar. As Mrs. Mooney read the verses "Candle Light Burning Bright", Mrs. Bilham lighted the candles. Mrs. Clapp sang a solo "O Sing a Song of Bethlehem." Miss Mary Rush sang "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Scripture readings were given by Mrs. Rutter, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Mellow. Mrs. Mooney and Mrs. R. Ketcheson took up the offering which was dedicated by singing two verses of "As With Gladness Men of Old." The Rev. A. C. McCallum gave a short Christmas address. The Mission Band sang "Away in a Manger." Mrs. Rush sang a solo. Christmas carols were sung by the congregation throughout the service.

DRAMATIC POLICE HUNT YIELDS MURDER SUSPECT

Big 3's Control Plan Said To Be Confusing Japanese

Tokyo, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Sources close to Gen. MacArthur reported today that the Big Three's new control plan for Japan already has caused confusion among the Japanese and may cause the General to lose face in a country where face is all important.

The control plan, which Gen. MacArthur bluntly stated yesterday had been made over his protest and behind his back, may result in a slacking of Japanese efforts to put into effect directives already issued — and which they had accepted only slowly and grudgingly — the sources said.

MacArthur's Statement.

Gen. MacArthur's 150-word statement said "the statement attributed to the Far Eastern Commission press officer (Thomas Blake in Washington) that I 'did not object to the new Japan control plan before it was approved at Moscow' is incorrect. On Oct. 31 my final disagreement was contained in my radio to the Chief-of-Staff for the Secretary of State, advising that the terms 'in my opinion are not acceptable.' Since that time my views have not been sought."

The General also denied that he had been consulted during the Moscow conferences. However, he concluded that "whatever the merits or demerits of the plan . . . the issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down . . . It is my fervent hope that there will be no insuperable obstacles . . . It is my full purpose to see it through."

A Headquarters spokesman said Gen. MacArthur "did not even know Japan was being discussed at Moscow until he saw it announced in the daily press."

Gen. MacArthur received his first word of the Moscow decisions from The Associated Press, which delivered its report of the communique to him. Hours later, the complete text came through.

The Moscow plan created a four-power council of the United States, Britain, China and Russia to advise Gen. MacArthur and review his actions and set up an 11-country commission to fix policies concerning Japan. The council has power to veto his policies. Although the General did not so state, it was believed here that his objection principally was to the veto power.

Japanese Ask Questions.

Although grudgingly, the Japanese have gone along with Gen. MacArthur as occupation boss. Now they are asking whether his past directives may be subject to review and whether they will be required to make a new start under the council setup.

NUERNBERG WITNESS

Lieut.-Col. Otto Skorzeny, daredevil parachute rescuer of Benito Mussolini from threatened capture by the Allies, and reputedly the would-be assassin of General Eisenhower during the Battle of the Bulge, enjoys an American cigarette in his cell in the witness wing of the Nuernberg jail. Skorzeny, who is 38, denies that Von Rundstedt sent him to kill Eisenhower and other high-ranking U. S. officers. He is appearing as a witness at trial of Nazi war criminals.

HITLER LEFT LEGACY OF HATE, REVENGE IN WILL

Adolf Built Himself Up As Martyr, Expelled Goering and Himmler From Nazi Ranks

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Hitler's last political testament, apparently prepared as Berlin tottered before the Russian onslaught, was revealed as a masterpiece of propaganda in which he built himself up as a martyr and bequeathed to the German people the Nazi creed of loyalty to state and hatred of Jews.

His final admonition was:

"Above all, I enjoin the government of the nation and the people to uphold the racial laws to the limit and resist mercilessly the poisoner of all nations, international Jewry."

The testament, dated April 29, 1945, also disclosed that Hitler expelled Reichsmarshal Goering and Gestapo Chief Himmler from the Nazi ranks for attempting to seize control of the state, and "negotiating with the enemy without my knowledge."

Text of the testament — together with texts of Hitler's will, an appendix to the testament by Propaganda Minister Goebbels and a document recording Hitler's marriage to Eva Braun — was released yesterday by Allied authorities.

Preferred Suicide.

Hitler's testament indicated he preferred suicide in a Reichschancellery bunker to trial before an Allied court.

"I shall not fall into the hands of an enemy who requires a new spectacle presented by the Jews to divert their hysterical masses," he said.

Urging Germans to keep alive Nazi doctrine, Hitler said the "establishment of a National Socialist state represents the work of centuries to come and obliges each individual person always to serve the common interest before his own advantage."

"The seed has been sown that will grow one day in the history of Germany to the glorious rebirth of the National Socialist movement," the document added.

Throughout the testament, Hitler built himself up as a martyr who wished to join in death the troops who had fallen on the battlefield.

"I cannot forsake the city that is the capital of this state," he

France Struggling to Regain Her Feet Economically Says Correspondent

Montreal, Dec. 31 — (CP)—A description of France as a country struggling to regain her feet economically was given today by Maurice Desjardins, correspondent of the French-language daily newspaper members of The Canadian Press who has just returned home to Montreal after seven months in Paris.

Desjardins arrived here Saturday from New York where he landed the previous day from the troopship Queen Elizabeth. Prior to his Paris assignment he reported for more than two years the training and battle experiences of French-speaking Canadian servicemen in the United Kingdon, Sicily, Italy and on the Western front.

"Helplessness, futility and despair are the characteristics of Paris today," Desjardins said in an interview in which he told of "a country choked by the reddest red tape ever registered on a color meter and the blackest black market."

"Some of the most severe restrictions in Europe are to be found in the French capital," Desjardins said, remarking that he was "spellbound" upon returning to a country "where you can obtain meat, bananas, olives, potatoes, cheese — practically anything you can name that you can't get in Paris."

He referred to "most intricate political controversies" and said each of the three major French parties is suspicious of the other. All parties, however, look to president deGaulle and the opinion of most Frenchmen is that the country is fortunate to have such a leader as a steadying influence.

"Petain and Laval have been relegated to the past," said Desjardins who was present at the trials of the Vichy leaders. "What France wants now is to get back on her feet economically and devaluation of the franc is the first step."

France still has many luxury goods, despite the lack of necessities, and Desjardins understood that De Gaulle is anxious for France to produce more and export more of these goods to bring money into the French coffers. The French, however, are being discouraged from buying such goods themselves.

Desjardins predicted a grim winter for France. When he left two weeks ago the prospects of sufficient fuel were dim and he expected there would be a repetition of last winter "when three and four families lived in the same room."

"The gravest problem, however, is the mass discouragement of youth," Desjardin said. "The majority of young men want to leave the country for they don't feel equal to the colossal task ahead of them. Canadian and American embassies are besieged by young men asking for visas.

"Old Frenchmen consider this deplorable but they don't blame the youth for they say there is no incentive to stay in France."

Desjardins' trip home was his second since he went overseas in September, 1942. He was back last winter during the lull on the Canadian army front, returning to the continent in time for the finish of the war.

SAYS CONFERENCE WILL CONTRIBUTE TO LASTING PEACE

Byrnes Declares Machinery Will Not Obstruct MacArthur in Control of Japan

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP) — State Secretary Byrnes prepared today for his fourth trip abroad in six months after telling in a broadcast why he believes his third trip contributed to lasting peace.

In his radio report last night on the Moscow conference of foreign ministers, Mr. Byrnes assured his listeners that new international machinery set up for control of Japan will not obstruct "the outstanding and efficient administration" of Gen. MacArthur. It will, he insisted, leave the United States in a top policy-making role.

The cabinet officer ignored a tartly-worded statement Gen. MacArthur issued in Tokyo earlier in the day in which the supreme commander said he had not been consulted during the Moscow talks and declared: "I have no iota of responsibility for the decisions which were made there."

Speaking from the conference room of the state department, Mr. Byrnes described how the United States, Russia and Britain reached agreement on issues involving Japan, atomic energy, peace treaties, China, Korea, Romania and Bulgaria.

He said too he and Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia almost agreed on a three-power commission to study problems in troubled Iran. He was "not discouraged" by the near-miss.

To Meet in London.

He might have said they will have another opportunity to agree on an Iranian policy in London at the first meeting of the United Nations assembly next month. That will be conference No. 4 for Mr. Byrnes in the half-year he has held the top cabinet position.

The Iranian government has said it will lay before the assembly its charges that the Azerniajan revolt was assisted by Russian occupation forces.

The state secretary declared frankly that some of the Moscow decisions "do not go as far as I should have liked." But he emphasized his belief that the agreements reached "should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands."

He also expressed confidence in the cumulative value of Big Three foreign ministers' meetings. The next one is scheduled to be held in Washington at an undecided date.

Mr. Byrnes went into greatest detail on the two Moscow decisions most discussed in Washington—the plans for governing Japan and controlling atomic energy.

Of Japan, he said the United States has planned from the beginning to make control of that defeated nation an Allied responsibility. He supported his contentions that the 11-country policy commission and the four-power control council would neither minimize the United States role, nor hamstring Gen. MacArthur.

KOREAN HOTHEADS THROW ROCKS AT U.S. SOLDIERS

Violently Protest Against Big Three's Five-Year Trusteeship Plan

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Korean hotheads fought in the streets of Seoul and threw rocks at United States soldiers Saturday in violent protest against the Big Three's five-year trusteeship plan for their country.

Rightist speakers addressed a mass meeting which demanded immediate recognition of a Korean provincial government, called for a strike of Koreans employed by the United States military government, and branded opponents to the Independence-Now movement as traitors.

In an attempt to forestall more demonstrations against the trusteeship program, announced after the Russian - British - American conference at Moscow last week, United States military authorities who control southern Korea ordered an 8 p.m. curfew.

(There was no report of the Korean reaction to the program in northern Korea, where the Russians are in control.)

Koreans craving independence after nearly a half century as a colony of Japan, were inflamed by the Big Three program for a trusteeship by the United States, Russia, Britain and China while Korea learns to walk unaided among nations.

Huge posters on Seoul buildings charged the Communist party with responsibility for the trusteeship plan.

Hundreds of Koreans employed by the United States military government walked off the job; a mob attacked the office of a newspaper which Rightists declared had Communist leanings; banks closed and policemen left their posts.

A Communist party spokesman blaming the Rightists for the outbreaks, said all Leftist groups, including the Communists, had been advised to limit their actions to peaceful protests.

Lt.-Gen. John R. Hodge, American commander in southern Korea, explained to Korean newspapermen that the plan did not mean that trusteeship of their country would be imposed immediately.

Gen. Hodge said that the plan was drafted for Korea's own protection, and he gave his opinion that the nation's Patriots and Nationalists had nothing to fear from it.

MARTIN BORMANN REPORTED HELD IN BRITISH ZONE

Security Officers in Nuernberg Decline To Confirm or Deny The Report

Nuernberg, Dec. 31 (Reuters) —Czechoslovak newspapers reported today that Martin Bormann, Hitler's former deputy and one of the Nazi war criminals named in the Nuernberg indictment, had been arrested in the British zone of Germany.

Security officers here declined to confirm or deny the report and would not say whether, if Bormann had been arrested, he would appear with the 21 other major war criminals now on trial before the international tribunal in Nuernberg.

Bormann is being tried in absentia.

The trial resumes Wednesday after a Christmas and New Year's recess.

"If Bormann has been arrested we can say nothing until he is safely in jail," one security official said.

"His transfer here would probably involve a plane journey and then a secret trip in a strongly guarded vehicle."

One suggesiton here was that the mysterious man who was arrested by British intelligence officers with a copy of Hitler's testament in his possession was either Bormann or a man who gave information leading to Bormann's arrest.

This, it was thought, might be the reason why British intelligence officers were able to inform United States intelligence men of the whereabouts of Frederick Wilhelm Paustin, who was Bormann's adjutant and confidant.

Admiral Stark Urged U.S. Entry Into War When Nazis Attacked Russia

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP) — Pearl Harbor investigators learned today that Admiral Harold R. Stark urged United States entry into the war when Germany attacked Russia, yet expressed hope that Russia and Germany "may break upon each other."

With Admiral Stark in the witness chair, the Senate-House committee investigating the attack that opened the Pacific war received a voluminous file of letters the 1941 chief of naval operations wrote to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific fleet commander, and others.

Many were personal, intimate, chatty—some so much so that Admiral Stark suggested the recipients burn them.

The letter concerning Russia was dated July 31, 1941, and was addressed to "Dear Savvy," the nickname of Capt. Charles M. Cooke, Jr., then attached to the Pacific fleet. Admiral Stark customarily used nicknames — Kimmel was "Dear Mustapha"— in his personal letters. He signed himself "Betty."

Admiral Stark began the Cooke letter by saying it would be short and should be burned after being shown to Admiral Kimmel. He wound up some 1,500 words later by saying he had decided to send copies to Admirals Kimmel and Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Far Eastern fleet.

In between, there were such statements as these:

"Within 48 hours after the Russian situation broke, I went to the president, with the secretary's approval, and stated that on the assumption that the country's decision is not to let England fall, we should immediately seize the psychological opportunity presented by the Russian-German clash and announce and start escorting immediately, and protecting the western Atlantic on a large scale; that such a declaration, followed by immediate action on our part, would almost certainly involve us in the war and that I considered every day of delay in our getting into the war as dangerous, and that much more delay might be fatal to Britain's survival.

"I reminded him that I had been asking this for months in the State Department and elsewhere, etc., etc., etc. I have been maintaining that only a war psychology could or would speed things up the way they should be speeded up; that strive as we would it just isn't in the nature of things to get the results in peace that we would, were we at war.

"The Iceland situation may produce an 'incident.'...

"We shall give aid to Russia. I hope she and Germany may break upon each other. Europe dominated by the Communists is no more an attractive picture, in fact less so, than a Europe dominated by the Nazis. Here's hoping we have neither, but rather that they exhaust themselves."

In a letter April 19, 1941, to Admiral Kimmel, Admiral Stark referred to a cruise by American warships to Australia. He quoted the late President Roosevelt as telling him: "Betty, just as soon as those ships come back from

William Mullen, 20, Found Crouching In Upstairs Closet

Alleged One of Four Youths Who Shot Jewish Merchant

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—Thin, pale and peaked, 20-year-old William Mullen, charged with the murder of Meyer Tobias, 54, North Toronto storekeeper who was shot to death Dec. 28, appeared in police court early today and was remanded until Jan. 7.

Police allege Mullen is one of four youths who killed Tobias after an attempted hold-up of his women's wear store failed. Also charged with murder in connection with the slaying are Donald Ernest Warner, 16, Edward James Martin, 18, and Howard Norman Urquhart, 19, who were arrested Friday night. They appeared in court Saturday and were remanded to the same date.

Mullen was captured Saturday night after a dramatic police manhunt that covered the city's east and central portions. He was found crouching in a closet at a Chisholm Avenue home and surrendered without a struggle.

2 Held as Material Witnesses

Arrested as material witnesses were Mrs. Noreen Blanche Watson, 20 and her husband Stewart Thomas Watson, 22. Both appeared in court today and were also remanded until Jan. 7. Police said Mullen went to the Watson home the night of the slaying and gave Mrs. Watson his pistol as a souvenir.

Bail for the two material witnesses who appeared today was set at $2,000.

Mullen said he had been in the army, but police said he had been discharged without going overseas.

armed robbery of a taxi-driver, John Clyde, Dec. 15.

Also picked up in a police dragnet Friday were Thomas William War, 18, and William Sidney Marshall, 18, charged with armed robbery, and Donald Mitchell, 19, charged with having an automatic pistol.

Ward, Marshall and Mitchell appeared in court Saturday with Warner, Martin and Urquhart as members of the East Toronto gang and were remanded to Jan. 7. None of the six was represented by counsel.

Traced to One Home.

As the youths were led out for the return trip to Don Jail, photographers' bulbs flashed on news cameras and one of the youths was heard to say:

"You'd think we were a bunch of criminals."

Police Friday traced Mullen to the Watson home but when they reached there he had left.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Watson were arrested as material witnesses and questioned about the gun. Mrs. Watson sent police on a wild goose chase by telling them she had thrown the gun into the Don Valley ravine. After the police had made a flashlight search of the ravine early Sunday morning, she told them her story was false. Police then searched the Pape Avenue home of Watson's grandmother and found the pistol hidden in a dunnage bag.

A second gun identified by police as having been used in the slaying was found Friday by children playing near a garage on Withrow Ave. A street cleaning department employee turned it over to police after discovering the youngsters playing with it.

Eluded Police for Hours.

Mullen told police after his capture that he had eluded them for hours in a desperate game of hide-and-seek Friday night and Saturday morning.

Later in the day the approach of a police cruiser interrupted him at a hasty meal at the home of relatives in East York. As he fled, a woman told police she had seen a man climbing a fence and running down a lane.

Dusk found him tramping aimlessly on a golf course. Then he walked to the main street and entered a greenhouse boiler room. He stayed there for some time and was on his way outdoors when he met Mrs. Welmar Haight, a former Canadian Women's Army Corps member, wife of the greenhouse owner.

Slouching Against Door

Mrs. Haight switched on her flashlight and caught him in its beam. She asked him: "What are you doing here?"

He was slouching against the door, smoking a cigaret.

"I've had a couple of beers and I guess I'm in the wrong place," the youth replied.

"I told him he had better get going down the lane," Mrs. Haight later related to police. "As he started to go, he asked me if that was Main Street out there. I said it was. He was quite nonchalant as he walked out, and he did not seem to be any the worse for liquor. Instead of turning on Main Street, he went across a field. My suspicions were aroused by this time and I telephoned police."

Within a few minutes two detectives struck out on the trail which led across the field. Footprints in the soft crust of snow led them over fences and across streets to a yard at the rear of a house on Chisholm Avenue. The cellar window of the house stood open.

Telephoned for Help

Sensing that the end of the hunt was in sight, the officers telephoned for reinforcements. As they waited, they peered through downstairs windows and saw no one in the lower part of the house.

When other policemen arrived, the detectives climbed through the cellar window, made a tip-toe search of ground floor rooms and started upstairs with guns at the ready.

A clothes closet on the second floor landing attracted their attention.

They whipped open the door and found the closet filled with women's clothing. A pair of shoes showed beneath.

"Come out," one officer ordered.

"All right, don't shoot," came a muffled reply, and Mullen emerged. Haggard and unkempt, he made no effort to resist as the police snapped on the handcuffs.

OWNERS REQUESTED TO RE-REGISTER REVOLVERS

Although Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters early in the year asked for the re-registration of all revolvers there are still thousands of these weapons which have still not been registered by their respective owners, according to a circular received by local police authorities.

Dates for re-registration of revolvers had been set from March 1st to July 1st, 1945 and in keeping with R.C.M.P. feeling, local police consider there were many revolvers in the Quinte area which were not re-registered at this time.

Local police have been advised to check previous registration lists to ascertain those which have not been re-registered and urge all district residents having revolvers not registered to bring them immediately to police to have this attended to.

The annual meeting of the Sidney Junior Farmers' Association was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Nicholson, Frankford R.R. No. 2, on Thursday evening. Mr. Ray Hall, Trenton R. R. No. 5, who has been president for the past two years presided over the meeting. The meeting was well attended.

The treasurer's report showed total receipts for the year of $945, the balance at the present time being $425.

The Junior Farmer Conference to be held at Kemptville January 3rd and 4th was discussed. Carl Sine and Edison Sine, Frankford R. R. No. 2, were appointed delegates.

Considerable interest was shown in grain and livestock judging and extra efforts will be made to encourage boys from Sidney Township to attend the County Grain and Livestock Judging Competitions.

It was decided to enter a hockey team in the Centre Hastings Rural Hockey League. All games in this league are double headers and are played in the Stirling arena on Tuesday and Friday nights. The schedule will open on Tuesday, January 8th.

It was decided to obtain thirty reservations for the 1946 Icecapades at the Maple Leaf Gardens. Part of the expenses for a trip of this kind is borne by the Sidney Junior Farmers' Association. Last year twenty-five Sidney Junior Farmers attended one of the N.H.L. Hockey League finals at the Maple Leaf Gardens under the same plan.

Lynn Fair, agricultural representative, was present and addressed the meeting on Junior Farmer work. He also took charge of the election of officers which resulted as follows:

Business and Financial Outlook for 1946

By Roger W. Babson

1946 in a Nutshell

BONDS:	Steady	FOREIGN TRADE:	Competitive
BUILDING:	Increased	LABOR:	More Strikes
COMMODITY PRICES:	Mixed	REAL ESTATE:	Higher
COST OF LIVING:	Higher	RETAIL SALES:	Values Up
TOTAL BUSINESS:	Lower	RE-CONVERSION:	Increased
INFLATION:	Evident	STOCKS:	Higher
FARM PRICES:	Uncertain	TAXES:	Lower

POLITICS: President to take middle-of-the-road

1. The great event of 1945 was the ending of World War II. A great event of 1946 will be the start at harnessing atomic energy to bring about a new industrial era.

General Business.

2. A year ago the United States Babsonchart Index of the Physical Volume of Business finally registered 145. Today it is estimated at 128 justifying my forecast of a year ago. The Canadian Babsonchart Index of the Physical Volume of Business finally registered 205 a year ago; today it is estimated at 190. 1946 will show a further over-all decline in both United States and Canadian business. Furthermore, most of the following comments apply to both countries.

3. The re-conversion of industry from war to peace business will increase during much of 1946. However, time required for re-conversion will not be as great as most people believe.

4. Inventories, quoted both at their price values and their volumes, will increase during 1946. Both raw material piles and manufactured goods will be larger.

Commodity Prices.

5. Some rationing may continue through most of 1946; but it will rapidly be eliminated. Price restrictions will gradually be lessened.

6. The retail prices of most manufactured products will be higher during 1946 than at present. The prices of some of the food products may decline.

7. The unit sales of some department stores will begin to decline some time during 1946; but the sales of the food and variety chains may continue at peak figures.

8. The great question mark of 1946 will be how, to whom and at what price the government will dispose of its billions of dollars worth of unneeded supplies.

Farm Outlook

9. Pending a weather upset, more bushels of corn and wheat and more bales of cotton will be raised in 1946 than ever before in our history. Although some prices may slide off, the total farm income for 1946 should hold up fairly well.

10. There should be an increase in certain fruits, fish products and vegetables with a decline in prices. The U.S. will have more to eat in 1946 than in 1945. The per capita consumption should be 10 per cent above the prewar level of 1935-1939.

11. Dairy and poultry products will continue to increase in volume with no increase in price. There will be a great surplus of eggs; but fats, sugar and some canned goods will continue short.

12. Farmers will start in 1946 to work to extend legislation on their parity program due to fear of a postwar collapse in farm prices.

Taxes

13. Taxes will not be increased during 1946; and there may be further reductions. Some nuisance taxes will be eliminated altogether.

14. The Federal Debt will continue to increase during 1946, but I expect no War Bond Drives.

15. Whatever is done about taxes, the cost of living will continue to rise during 1946 due largely to increased wages.

16. Providing jobs for returning soldiers at satisfactory wages will be the big political task of 1946 .There will be jobs for all, but not at the wages desired.

Retail Sales

17. The volume of retail sales will be about the same as in 1945. Sales of ladies' apparel and general luxuries will suffer, but many items now unavailable will be purchased.

18. The total dollar retail sales should exceed 1945 with an increased demand for woolen and cotton textiles.

19. There will be a great demand for men's clothing and especially for shirts with honest standard length "tails."

20. Wise shoppers will buy only what they need and not grab to stock up unnecessary supplies.

Foreign Trade

21. The United States will own over 50 per cent of the world's shipping in 1946.

22. We will make England and some other countries loans provided they will agree to spend a fair proportion of the money in the United States.

23. Both the British Empire and Russia will keenly compete for foreign trade during 1946; but cartels and government monopolies will be frowned upon.

24. Russia, Germany and England may try to "gang up" against the United States but we will fearlessly oppose such actions if they occur.

Labor

25. The Little Steel Formula will be forgotten during 1946. The year will be noted for strikes and labor troubles.

26. Industrial employment during 1946 will be off both in hours and in pay rolls, labor leaders' efforts notwithstanding.

27. Many industries, now operating on a forty-eight-hour week, will return to a forty or forty-five-hour week during 1946.

28. Hourly wage rates will increase, but "take-home" income will be less. Labor will demand better management and closer labor-management relations.

Inflation

29. The inflation Era which I have been forecasting for several years will be very evident in 1946. The purchasing power of the dollar will continue to decline.

30. Both wage and price controls will gradually be removed during 1946 until the government throws up its hands and lets nature take its course.

31. Some time after 1946, production will catch up with consumption, people will have spent their money and then there will be a surplus of goods. By 1950 there may be much unemployment. Then may come the severest inflation by Congress attempting to check the decline by printing currency. But this is something we need not worry about for two or three years.

32. If Stalin's health continues good, he will be the world's most powerful man in 1946 and may be a factor in determining world prices as well as production. The markets may even witness a "communistic scare" during 1946; but they should recover soon thereafter.

Stock Market

33. The rails will decline some time during 1946. Certain airplane manufacturing, shipbuilding and other war stocks may decline; but the Dow-Jones Industrial Averages will reach higher figures some time during 1946 than at present.

34. The safest stocks to buy — considering value, income and safety — will continue to be the merchandising stocks, especially chain store stocks.

35. 1945 saw a large increase in the demand for inflation stocks with a lesser demand for non-inflation stocks; but 1946 should witness both groups moving more or less together. Switching has been over-done in many cases.

36. Stock markets will continue to witness creeping general inflation, although the stock market as a whole may appear to have reached its peak before December 31, 1946.

Bonds

37. Although bank loaning rates should have an upward tendency, interest rates in general will remain low through 1946. The money supply is now 25 per cent above normal and government financing demands continued low rates.

38. Anticipating the expected decline in Federal taxes, 1946 should see a falling off in the price of most municipal and probably other tax-exempt bonds.

39. The high-grade corporation bonds may hold steady but sooner or later decline considerably. Whether this will start in 1946 I do not know. Investors will give more attention to diversification and staggering maturities during 1946.

40. More public utilities will be taken over by Municipalities and "Authorities" during 1946. Wise investors will consider this possibility when selecting public utility bonds. Some stocks such as "Eastern Utilities Associates Convertible Shares", in which I am personally interested, should be helped by public ownership.

Real Estate

41. Suburban real estate will be in much greater demand with higher prices during 1946.

42. City real estate should hold its own, excepting in the former congested war production areas where declines may set in.

43. Small productive farms will continue to increase in price; but large commercial farms may sell for less in 1946 than in 1945.

44. Building will show a considerable increase. Contracts will be up with advancing prices due to scarcity of lumber, cement, bricks and labor.

45. Office and residential rents during 1946 may be expected to increase.

46. 1946 may see the beginning of a real building boom. The pessimists will make little money in 1946.

Politics and Post-war Peace

47. President Truman may lose control of Congress, but he will try to take a middle-of-the-road position. I believe that all wise Republicans and Democrats should support his efforts.

48. Our foreign headaches will become worse and more frequent during 1946. What we are going through to reorganize Germany will be repeated in other countries.

49. The Latin American honeymoon has passed its peak. The attitude of Argentina will extend to other countries. Our South American troubles will increase during 1946.

50. 1946 will see more religious interest, including more church-going, than did 1945. People gradually are realising that without a Spiritual Awakening no peace or other plans will be much good. Nations cannot be depended upon to co-operate and stick to their agreements unless they recognize God as their real Ruler and Guide.

Icy Pavements Cause of Grief For Large Trucks

Slippery pavement conditions on highway routes leading out of the city held more than a fair share of grief for Smith Transport trucks over the weekend with two of their tractor-trailer jobs being involved in accidents over the weekend.

Early Sunday morning when streets were a glare of ice as result of rain which fell during the night, a Smith transport driven by Russell McKinney of Toronto failed to make the grade on West Bridge Street hill and slid back down the hill to crash into the Denton residence at the corner of James and Bridge streets. Icy street condition prevented the driver from completing an attempted turn into James Street as he backed down the hill with result the truck crashed into the blank wall of the Denton building. No glass was reported broken but a portion of the wall was caved in about a foot.

Some time later there was a tie-up of vehicles on East Dundas Street when another Smith transport failed to make the grade and skidding back down the hill was struck in the rear by a Goodrich gasoline truck which was proceeding up the grade. Later a light panel truck driven by William J. Roberts of this city, bumped into the Smith truck when the truck went into a skid as the driver applied the brakes. Roberts was driving west on Dundas Street at the time.

Lack of sand on the grades was stated by drivers to be the cause of the accidents. In the latter mix-up only fender and other minor damage to vehicles resulted.

Purses Given Returned Vets

In connection with the annual Christmas concert at the town hall, Ameliasburg, the following returned veterans of World War II, were presented with an address and purses, also an inscribed card with name and rank. Sgt. W. Soble; Pte. A. Corfield; Gnr. O. T. Sills; Gnr. K. Wannamaker; Driver Archie Cannon; Pte. R. D. Kirby; Cpl. A. Masters.

Sgt. W. Soble thanked one and all of the vicinity, in a well-timed speech, for the purses for all, and voiced the thanks of one and all for the fine boxes sent overseas to them, while there, by the ladies of the Red Cross of Ameliasburg.

The thanks of the committee is also given to Mr. E. T. Casson of Ameliasburg for the fine inscriptions, in Old English, on the cards given with the purses.

Man and Woman Wanted for Forgery

Local police officers are on the look-out for two persons giving their names as Mr. and Mrs. William Sloan of Toronto, who within the past few days have victimized two city merchants and one local automobile dealer.

Expressing a desire to purchase a certain article in the store the man and woman would show a bank book on the Imperial Bank, Queen and Yonge Street Branch, Toronto, and would write a check covering the cost of the article. The checks in each case have been returned to the city declared as forgeries and it has now been determined that the bank book shown by the two persons had been stolen from its rightful owners. The bank book showed a very substantial balance.

Police stated the couple are driving a 1934 green Pontiac coupe bearing licence number 87-U-76 and described the man as being between 30 and 35 years of age, about five feet ten inches in height, of medium build and presenting a well dressed appearance in a beige coat. The woman is about five feet, two inches with dark hair and sharp features. She wears a black coat, but no hat.

In each case where Belleville business persons were victimized, the woman had written the checks.

Any information leading to the whereabouts of the man and woman would be appreciated by the local city police.

New York:—

Plenty of Idle Money Helped Boost Stocks to New Highs

By VICTOR EUBANK

New York, Dec. 31 (AP) — The big bull stock market, third longest on record, roared through 1945 to establish a string of 15-year average highs in the final months.

The list began its recovery from the war lows of 1942, and, despite frequent interruptions caused by technical and other factors, the direction has been upward ever since with volume and strength accentuated in the year just closed.

Reasons for the upsurge varied. Inflation psychology, predicated mainly on the fact that liquid assets of the United States in 1945 reached an historical aggregate; that there was more idle money than stocks or consumer goods, together with exceptionally low interest rates, probably furnished the principal prop.

The boosting of margins by the Federal Reserve Board during the year, with issues selling under $10 eliminated from the borrowing column entirely, made for a virtually cash market. The result was that stocks were bought and taken out of brokerage offices. This brought the "thinnest" condition in the memory of the financial sector. Jumps of $1 to $5 on single sales eventuated and fluctuations of $10 to $30 on the day became commonplace.

At the same time one analyst sized up the situation thusly: "We liquidated 90 per cent of the errors of 1929." He meant that, in the "era of wonderful nonsense" of 1929, the brokers' loans barometer hit a high of $8,549,383,979, most of which was used in the purchasing of stocks on margin. On April 1, last year, the total fell to a low of $831,917,170, of which a sizable proportion was for the acquisition of war bonds. The figure mounted in the latter part of the year as the Victory Loan drive broadened.

Overcame Peace Setback.

The momentum of the market during the last three years was shown by estimates that industrials, over that stretch, jumped approximately 125 per cent, railroads some 170 per cent and utilities about 130 per cent.

The market recorded its bottom of 1945 late in January as the end of the European conflict was foreshadowed and reconversion doubts touched off selling. The death of President Roosevelt in April failed to unsettle prices and a sharp rise quickly got under way when the new administration took over on the idea that business and industry might get a better break. Talk of Washington taking steps to stem speculation was blamed for some subsequent relapses.

Collapse of Germany saw considerable liquidation due to the feeling that the forthcoming corporate transition period might depress earning appreciably. The retreat was brief. There was another drop in July as the Japanese wobbled. Again trends soon negotiated a comeback when Russia entered the war. Reception of the Nipponese surrender on August 14 was comparatively steady.

The advance really got going in the last quarter with heavy speculation in low-quoted utilities dominating the ticker tape and putting many daily turnovers well above the two million share total. Later steels, motors, rails, liquors, mail orders, rubbers, coppers, aircrafts and specialties attracted strong demand although gathering strikes and price-wage controversies occasioned subsequent stumbles.

Throughout the year the curb emulated the big board but with greater relative activity. Aided by large-scale dealings in penny warrants, this market in one November session exceeded the number of shares changing hands in the stock exchange. The curb volume in the week of November 17, of about 8,000,000 shares, was one of the largest in the annals of the district.

Canadian Industrial and Gold Stocks Up 32 Per Cent in 1945

By ALEX PRINGLE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP) — The stock market's upward cycle, starting in 1942 when the war turned against Germany, is progressing with apparently unabated confidence as it enters its fourth year. During 1945 prices were highest in eight years.

A sign of the times is the current high bid of $60,000 for a seat on the Toronto Exchange, just about five times the price paid in 1942. Share turnover on the exchange in 1945 totalled 436,000,000 shares, compared with 38,805,347 shares in 1942. The record volume since the exchanges were amalgamated in 1934 was chalked up in 1936 at 450,848,705 shares valued at $699,261,852. Stocks traded in the last year were valued at about $600,000,000.

Brokers' loans, made chiefly on the security of stocks owned by the brokers' customers and indicating the extent of marginal trading have expanded in the last three years from around $6,000,000 to about $36,000,000.

The advance achieved by industrial listings on the Toronto Exchange in 1945 equalled 32 per cent which may have been a record for the group. Many stocks more than doubled their final 1944 prices with leaders appearing in the food, paper, utility and liquor groups. Industrials as a whole posted new high index prices in evry month of the year with exception of July and August.

The gold share listings also advanced 32 per cent, as measured by the index, setting their high point in November. From the high of 142.56 the market slipped back in December to 136.85, but there was a tendency in the final sessions of the year to recover the lost ground.

Pennies Active.

The index advance did not reflect fully the appreciation of prices for the gold group as a whole. Heavy trading in recent months was in issues not included in the index group. These are largely the so-called drill-hole stocks and the shares of new mines preparing to start operations underground. Some of this list show gains of 200 to 300 per cent or more.

Advancement made in probing the Yellowknife and Red Lake fields brought a lot of action into the market and several stocks representing these fields are now front-line traders. In 1945 the Toronto Exchange listed 84 new stocks and more than 75 per cent of them were new golds.

Base metal stocks had a setback when the war ended on the assumption that the market for copper would fade out for a time. Of late, however, the news has suggested the British market will absorb considerable Canadian copper in 1946 and share prices consequently have shown a tendency to recover.

From the June index high of 87.13, base metals weakened to 78.86 by the middle of September. From that level it recovered to show a new high for the year at 89.81.

Western oil stocks had an off year, trading at a dull tempo most of the time and showing a price appreciation over the year of only nine per cent. They posted their high price level early in November and the low last January.

Available Grain Supplies In Canada Smallest in 10 Years

By GEORGE FINLAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Dec. 31 (CP) — Problems of war ended, Western Canada's farmers have turned to a peacetime production program to meet demands of home and overseas trade in 1946.

Grainmen have accepted Dominion government proposals for a program holding the west's vast wheat acreage at the 1945 level, but an immediate problem is Canada's export position.

Supplies available in Canada are the smallest in ten years, and a wheat shortage before the next crop is harvested is a possibility. It is possible the carry-over at the end of the next crop year, July 31, 1946, may be less than 75,000,000 bushels. The carry-over at the end of the last crop year was only 258,394,000 bushels of wheat and the new crop added available supplies totalled about 567,000,000 bushels. Canada's wheat has been moving into world markets at the rate of more than 40,000,000 bushels a month.

Production in 1945 fell far short of the big wartime yields. For all-Canada the total was 308,600,000 bushels of wheat, compared with 435,500,000 in 1944. The prairies produced 284,000,000 against the 1944 total of 410,600,000. Coarse grains also showed a sharp decline in yield.

Farmers, with supplies still to market, hold the key to the export picture. Feed requirements and prospects for the 1946 harvest are other factors in a complex problem.

Moving toward export channels, record lake shipments were made from Port Arthur and Fort William in the 1945 navigation season. Shipments of all grains totalled 483,732,469 bushels compared with 455,964,184, in 1944.

Fed Europe.

Millions of bushels of grain have left Canada's shores, to feed starving millions in Europe; to re-fill war-empty bins in the United Kingdom and for far away India. Shipments have been made from ports on the east and west coast, and trade through the port of Vancouver, halted by war, was resumed with the commerce of the Pacific freed.

Throughout the growing season the Prairies were plagued by weather hazards, drought taking a heavy toll in sections in Saskatchewan and Alberta with crops retarded by unfavorable conditions during the spring planting season.

Trading in wheat remained suspended on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, the marketings since 1943 being handled through the Canadian Wheat Board, but open trading in rye futures held attention late in the year with price records established. The December future advanced to $2.02 a bushel, the highest price in 25 years. In December, 1944, it was $1.06¼ a bushel. Short supplies brought keen buying, with United States buyers the chief purchasers.

Farmers' cash income showed a sharp decline in 1945, with the wheat crop valued at $326,000,000, a drop of $133,600,000 from 1944. But the heavier crops of earlier war years brought debt easement to many farmers, diverting cash incomes to channels of commerce.

Growers have been guaranteed by the Dominion government a long-term floor price of not less than $1.00 a bushel, and they will also share in any profits on export sales. Wheat for export is sold at $1.55 a bushel, basis No. 1 northern at Lake Head terminals, well below present world prices.

The production program for 1946 calls for a wheat acreage of 23,414,100 acres with Prairies' acreage set at 22,566,000 acres. Barley acreage has been set at 8,000,000 acres, an increase of 650,000 acres, to meet export demands, but other grain acreage will show little change.

Industrial World Moves To Supply Demands of Peace

By ALEX PRINGLE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP) — This was a year of sail-trimming to the dangers and opportunities of sudden squalls for Canadian business.

The end of the war in Europe, the atomic bomb, bringing on the collapse of Japan a year sooner than was anticipated, the need for quick conversions of plants back to the demands of a peacetime population, the shortages of skilled help and the growing demands of labor for wage increases under a price ceiling economy kept the captains of industry thinking hard and shifting nervously.

Almost overnight the clear sailing in the sea of war orders and cost-plus returns was ended and the fight for profits in a competitive market and falling national income was one. For about two-thirds of the year business operated under almost full war conditions but in the final four months the war business faded out and production figures dropped sharply in some lines. Nevertheless authoritative estimates place the volume of business at the year end down only about 15 per cent from the figures for the end of 1944.

Manufacturing generally continued throughout the year the slow slump that started in 1944, interrupted by a short-lived rally in the spring of 1945. Plans for a flying start on motor-car production at the cessation of hostilities were snarled by the strike in the industry that began in September, affecting likewise dozens of plants producing accessories.

Had it not been for this development, over-all production had a good prospect of climbing out of the year-long decline late in 1945. The November drop in the total of production was the smallest since the end of the war.

Labor Problem.

The total of unemployed in Canada is still growing and is likely to expand further before there is any construction. It is estimated that the first two months of 1946 will see the low and the start of an upturn as the conversion of plants to the production of civilian needs becomes an accomplished fact. Year-end reports indicate there were about 100,000 more workers than jobs with close to 40,000 ex-servicemen seeking employment. The situation was said to be more favorable than had been expected. Since V-J Day 350,000 war workers and 250,000 discharged ex-servicement have been thrown on the labor market.

National income has, of course, declined in recent months but the heavy distribution of money to discharged men has helped to maintain consumer purchasing at a high level. Retail trade was estimated to be eight per cent greater in 1945 than in 1944.

Iron and steel production recorded minor declines. Pig iron production in the first 10 months of 1945 totalled 1,508,100 tons compared with 1,566,500 tons in 1944, a drop of 3.7 per cent and steel production of 2,451,100 tons in the same period was down 2.5 per cent.

Shoe manufacturing plants achieved production greater by 7 per cent than in the previous year and the textile mills held at a high rate of production close to the peak 1944 figures.

Farm income was off about 10 per cent from the 1944 total to an estimated $1,500,000,000 despite the higher price level. Nevertheless the total was the second best in Canada's history. Having greatly reduced their mortgage obligations in the last two years, farmers possibly found their net income improved in 1945. Cattle marketings increased 34 per cent and hog marketings were down 30 to 35 per cent.

Mining Awaits Manpower.

The mining industry is still hampered by a shortage of help but the growing surplus of manpower should soon right that situation. Mineral production for 1945 was down about 10 per cent from the $485,800,000 total of 1944. There was a smaller production of nickel, copper, zinc and gold. Production of gold showed a drop of about 10 to 12 per cent but the final period of the year brought signs that the low had been reached and that gold production could be expected to expand in future. There also were indications in the final weeks of the year of an early improvement in the demand for copper and nickel for civilian needs.

Lumbering is also restricted by the help shortage although it is estimated there are thousands more men in the bush this winter than last. In Ontario and the eastern provinces the increase is estimated at 2,500.

Newspring plants continued their high level of production in 1945, turning out 3,250,000 tons, a gain of nearly nine per cent over the 1944 production. Exports of newsprint for eleven months of 1945 totalled $163,610,000, a gain of 13 per cent over the total for the corresponding months of 1944.

Building proceeded on a large scale. Contracts awarded showed a total greater by 30 per cent than in the preceding year and the total of permits issued was up 45 per cent. Cement production increased 15 per cent.

Sea fisheries expanded sharply when the war ended. The landed value of the haul was about 70 per cent more than the total for the previous year.

Canada's external trade was sharply affected by the conlusion of hostilities. The total of exports and imports for the year was down about nine per cent from 1944. Exports in the first 11 months totalled $2,983,504,000 compared with $3,173,074,000 in the same months of 1944, a drop of six per cent.

Railway carloading declined narrowly in recent months, showing a loss of about 1.5 per cent for the year and railway revenue suffered correspondingly.

New Year's

New Year's brings the dawn of another year, the first to open in the era of peace. Early in the year all members of the Canadian armed forces will be back home except for the occupational forces. This new twelvemonth will show clearly the signs of the new times. Former servicemen will be back in the civilian life of the Dominion. The entire country with other countries of the world will be making strides in the first peacetime year. Wartime restrictions will likely be lessened.

It will be a year in which people will seek to begin to enjoy the fruits of peace and security won in the great struggle of 1939-1945. This new twelvemonth carries with it a sense of expectancy with a new meaning to everyone.

For the first time since January 1st. 1939 the familiar salutation will be voiced without the undertone and restraints of the feeling of wartime. "Happy New Year" becomes an actuality with a message for everyone. People are looking for the return to many things they enjoyed and appreciated before 1939 and 1941. They too are looking for continuance of the growth which was seen even in the period of war. The new year will bring the building of many new houses to satisfy the demand which has been so great during the war and since the war's end.

Canadians look forward with the brightest hopes for the future and at no time do they feel this prompting of hope so much as at the opening of a new year and especially a year which is the first year of peace in over six years. They are taking on their task with their full strength and hope that the new year will be one of progress and expansion, the filling of many needs and the satisfaction of many desires. From the standpoint of New Year's the people of Canada feel optimistically of the coming era.

Momentous Year Ends

The year's turn has come and 1945 goes out taking with it a record of history-making events which will for generations be known to the world of the future. 1945 saw the salvation of the world from tyranny and the aggressions.

When New Year's 1945 came while it was expected that the Second Great War would soon come to an end, no one could have foretold how suddenly it would come in June in Europe and in August in the Far East. 1945 was the year of the atomic bomb, the first harnessing of atomic energy. The invention may exert a mighty influence upon the course of history for it is believed its potentialities are so great that it may be the end of war.

So 1946 comes with the war over in the two spheres of conflict and will no doubt be a year of great discussions such as might be expected to follow a world war, and the beginning of an era of peace following the end of the most farspread war of history.

1945 gave such inspiration as the sudden ending of German military might and the crack-up of German militarism and Nazism and the sensational passing from the world scene of leading Nazis, Hitler, Goebbels and Himmler and others who ended their lives. 1945 saw the beginning of trials of enemy leaders charged with the offences as war criminals. Much has been done with the prosecution and the major German leaders are being tried. Into the year 1946 is now projected the continuance of this great trial which will have an abiding influence upon humanity's course and may have much to do with the prevention of war since the United Nations are making very definite what their views are in regard to nations and men who deliberately waged war for the sake of aggression. On the other hand the dictators who spread the policy of aggression are gone, both passed out in shame and ignominy, Mussolini by execution at the hands of Italian patriots and Hitler dying by his own hand after scenes in the last days of Berlin with no semblance of honor about them. Both endings of both aggressors were an apt commentary on the lives of evil these men had led.

The year 1945 saw the United Nations serving humanity well, crushing the two villainous enemies, the German Nazis and Japanese militarists and offering the world hope of a peace that will endure. The United Nations are taking their task seriously as the recent meeting of the Big Three foreign ministers at Moscow shows. Here there is revealed what is a definite effort to see unitedly in the case of problems that are bound to come up at the close of so great a struggle and in the future. Every effort is seen being made towards international understanding. Such an achievement follows the disappearance from the earth of the tyrannous forces which Germany and Japan sent forth into the world. The atomic energy problem will be placed under United Nations organization commission.

Now there is seen evidence of mutual trust and its importance. How different is this from the world which Hitler and Japan tried to create, a world of tyranny and return to savagery and uncivilized forces! The world feels a sense of great relief at the success of the Moscow meeting.

1946 comes with the world facing many problems and seeking understandings. It comes to a world which has the making of a new era. One of the immediate great tasks is the rehabilitation of Europe's nations which have escaped the hands of the aggressors. A hard winter is pressing these peoples but the rest of the world is lending a helping hand in their dire straits. 1946 brings great hopes because great hopes must come out of the Allied triumphs over the tyranny and benighted ideas of Germany and Japan.

1945 lived up to the hope of mankind, it brought victory and great hope for the world.

Plowshares Plus

(New York Herald Tribune)

It used to be that on the attainment of victory we beat our swords into plowshares. But times have changed, whether for the worse is a question which the reader can decide for himself. Let him consider that very shortly he will have the opportunity of buying a midget washing machine calculated to launder automatically half a dozen diapers while mother bathes the baby, or a choice of eight face towels, four bath towels, four men's shirts, one pair of work pants or 12 pieces of woman's lingerie.

The capacity varies with the make and size. But all models are portable and can be stuffed into an overstuffed apartment of one or two rooms with bath or into the luggage compartment of a family automobile picnic-bent. It may be that not all the manufacturing companies about to market these interesting gadgets were turning out lethal weapons in the late war, but one, we have been told about has reconverted from producing aircraft landing gear and hydraulic jacks.

Somehow the civilization we face seems to be epitomized in this transition. We still need plowshares, to be sure — more than all the swords (even including those worn by Japanese officers) could supply us with the materials for. And, meanwhile, we also need midget washing machines, perhaps even more so, which can be beaten out of aircraft landing gear and hydraulic jacks, whose abundance is far greater than that of swords. Indeed, we are lucky in the vast variety of gadgets for peace use that, besides plowshares, can be beaten out of the instruments of mechanized warfare.

YEAR'S END

Farewell and Hail! and so it goes,
The old year coming to a close;
The new, with its tomorrows all,
Already at the entrance hall.

Farewell unto the dying year,
And scarcely time to shed a tear
Before the new is ushered in
And all the welcoming cheers begin.

Farewell! In just a few hours more
The old joins all the years before.
Then hail! Forget what's come and gone!
The show called Life must still go on.

The residents of portions of Coleman, Everett and Moira Streets, who were inconvenienced yesterday owing to water surrounding their houses, were free today of the unpleasant situation. During the night the weather became cooler, the rain ceased and the water had an opportunity to drain away. The water in the river also took a decided drop.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 31ST, 1895

A severe wind storm broke over the city about one o'clock this morning, accompanied by snow and sleet. The telephone and telegraph linemen were kept busy all today repairing lines. The telephone line between here and Picton is down and all through this section more or less confusion of the lines prevails. The wind made things lively at Rathbun's lumber yard, the lumber being blown in all directions. The same took place at Bolton's lumber yard. Small trees and innumerable branches were blown down and fences were levelled all over the city. Several citizens had exciting experiences this morning; a member of the Intelligencer staff was picked up by the wind, carried across the street and dashed against a barn. He sustained several cuts and bruises. A young man was coming up Front Street when a young lady was blown into his arms and they were carried along together for some distance. The water in the bay is white with foam and dashing high upon the shores. A portion of the roof of the old Grand Junction Railway Station, now occupied by McCargar and Brenton cheesemen was blown off.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By the Ottawa Bureau of The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Dec. 31—(CP)—The handling of awide range of international and domestic problems is evpected to make 1946 one of the most active years Canadian parliamentarians and government officials have had to face.

A delegtion of cabinet ministers, parliamentarians and government officials will participate in the United Nations general assembly conference opening in London Jan. 10.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner now is in Britain surveying the possibilities for continued trade markets in Britain. He will be joined later by Trade Minister MacKinnon and senior officials of the trade department. They are expected to be absent one month.

The co-ordinating committee of the Dominion-Provincial conference meets Jan. 28 and there is no indication yet as to how long the meetings will last. These talks are to be followed by loan negoiations between Canada and the United Kingdom.

When the lona negotiations are completed trade talks are expected to be started.

A general peace conference is scheduled to be held before May 1 and Prime Minister Mackenzie King and top officials are said to be most certainly in attendance.

The United States is scheduled to urge the United Nations organization to hold a world trade and employment conference in June. If such a conference is held Canada will send representatives.

The organization is expected to set up a commission to control the use of atomic energy and Canada is to be a member of that commission when she is not a member of the security council.

The International Monetary Bretton Woods agreement is ex- organizations set up under the pected to call a meeting for the election of officers and for the purposes of putting the proposed monetary stabilization machinery into operation.

The handling of Japanese and German peace surrender terms likely will be causes for other international meetings at which Canada might be invited to participate.

There has been no official suggestion of an Empire conference during 1946, but some look on it as a possibility.

On the home front, the government will be faced with problems arising out of the demobilization of the armed forces and the building of peacetime services. As more materials and manpower become available, the government is expected to undertake much of the work put off during the war.

CORNWALL'S WELCOME

Cornwall, Dec. 31 (CP)—Cornwall gave a tumultuous reception Saturday to the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, home after nearly 4 1-2 years of service overseas. Officials had asked citizens to greet the unit along the parade route or at the armories, but a large crowd gathered at the station.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—Preservation of world peace is a burning issue in this Britain which so recently was at bloody grips with the Nazi monster, and the debate has been given fresh impetus by the auspicious Big Three parley in Moscow and the impending meeting of the United Nations Organization Assembly here.

One of the most unusual approaches to this subject I've encountered comes from Sir Richard Paget, distinguished British scientist, with whom I discussed the matter. He holds that peace depends primarily on the solution of two problems, one economic and the other judicial, and on the economic side his ideas are a sizzling challenge to "economists."

"The economic problem" he told me, "is that of discovering the best 'machinery' for enabling every nation to use and distribute their wealth producing powers—that is, their power to produce goods and render services.— to the utmost and to exchange their surplus wealth with other communities which need them, without artificial restriction of any kind.

"This will need many changes in the present economic system and can, I believe, only be arrived at by an intensive scientific research to be carried on by teams of the most intelligent economists, statisticians, psychologists, historians, legal experts, etceters, working with the same freedom, team spirit and intensity as that which produced the atomic bomb.

No Answer to Problem

"At present it is not an exaggeration to say that nobody in the world knows how the problem of the production and distribution of real wealth could be handled. Man's powers of production have completely outstripped his "orthodox" methods of handling the problems of exchange and distribution of real wealth by means of monetary tokens, etc. A better and more scientific method is urgently required.

"Thus it is obviously crazy that the world's best metal for fine craftsmanship—gold—should be laboriously extracted from the earth at great expense of manpower and then be reburied in the vaults of the national banks. Gold should of course be used for the development of a real 'golden age' by the world's finest craftsmen.

"It is equally crazy that the great manufacturing nations should be constantly striving to export more goods and services than they import, and that any sudden accretion of real wealth should be looked upon as a national danger, to be guarded against by tariffs.

"In this particular case the reason is clear. The increase of real wealth is not automatically accompanied by a corresponding increase in the tokens of real wealth that is, money or credits, so as to enable the new wealth to be consumed by the community which has received it. Hence such tragic anomalies as the burning of "surplus' wheat, the plowing in of cotton, the throwing of 'miraculous draughts of fishes' back into the sea.

"So long as tariffs, currencies and monetary questions are dealt with as matters of international politics and rivalries there is little hope that a rational and scientific solution will be found, and the risk of future wars will continue to increase.

"Intensive scientific research might find the proper solution in two or three years—instead of 20 or 30, if ever."

Sir Richard believes that the judicial problem is one of discovering a method "that of selecting from among all the nations a panel of men and or women of the greatest wisdom, courage, clarity and impartiality, to form a world supreme court to which all nations would be willing to submit their gravest differences and accept without question the decision of the court."

This world-panel, he said, should be made strictly on the merits and without any question of national representation.

"With the discovery of a rational economic system and a truly impartial world supreme court," he declared, "the prospects of world peace would be very good."

Mental torpor! That was no doubt the reason why it never occurred to me that your description of the common complaints of persons with iodine deficiency was the very spit and image of myself— constant tired feeling and no refreshment from rest or vacations, lack of former ambition, bleak and melancholy outlook, accumulation of slacker flesh, mental torpor, tendency to doze off even among cheerful friends and to lie abed too long, and especially poor memory — this was so noticeable that all my friends wondered if I was getting old prematurely. My comeback since I began taking the Iodine Ration is the occasion of constant amazement and no little envy on the part of my friends. In fact most of the ladies I meet these days vow they are going to begin right away . . . (Mrs. A. E. W.)

Whoa, Topsy! Now, Ma'am, all I ask you in return for any benefit you may have received from the Iodine Ration, is that you refrain from getting me in wrong with your friends. I do hope your alertness of mind and your memory may have improved enough to make you clearly conscious of the fact that the Iodine Ration is not medicine, but just food, nutritional material which is essential for health—that is enough to say here, without going into detail for which we haven't space. You and your friends must take the Iodine Ration, if you take it at all, wholly upon your own responsibility—I can't say at your own peril because I'm convinced there is no peril involved in any instance. But just try to remember that I do not offer any one any assurance or guarantee of any effect from the Iodine Ration. I tell what I know and believe about it, in the pamphlet "The Iodine Ration"—available on written request (no clipping will suffice) if you provide stamped self addressed envelope—and it is entirely up to the poor geek who reads the pamphlet to take it or let it alone.

I repeat here what I have said many times before: In my opinion—and I'm still just a common, one-horse-and-Whitfield - low - sill-patent-leather - dash-rubber-tired-buggy— yes, sir, genuine cushion tires, too—practitioner—in my opinion, for what it may be worth to you, every man, woman and growing child in the North American continent who is not or should not be under the care or treatment of a physician should take a suitable daily ration of iodine to supplement the inadequate amount of iodine present in the water, soil and food grown on the soil in most regions of this continent. Furthermore I believe the regular daily intake of an iodine ration as described in my pamphlet can do no harm even if you happen to get enough iodine in the water you drink, the food you eat or the iodized salt you use in place of ordinary salt.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Wait For Me

Does the milk of cows fed on hay and grain grown on soil with a low limestone content, or the meat of pigs fed on corn grown in limestone-poor areas, contain less calcium and phosphorus than standards? (A. F)

Answer—Huh? Why bring up such worries? I'm sorry, but I haven't any scientific knowledge, have noticed no studies in nutrition literature, and, until now, have assumed that the calcium and phosphorus content of milk is practically constant everywhere. Neither pork nor beef is a significant source of calcium and phosphorus. Milk is the best source of both, for infant, youth, adult or aged person.

Hospital Spreads Disease

Believe your advice about having babies at home is good sense. Friend's new-born baby broke out with dreadful contagious impetigo in the hospital, and there were several other cases there at the time. (Mrs. C. H. E.)

Answer—That is unpleasant, but one of the least of the hazards of hospital delivery and confinement, as compared with the safety of home delivery and confinement.

Late to Learn

This will be our first child, so we want to learn all we can before the bundle arrives next June. Twenty cents (clean) inclosed, with stamped self addressed envelope, for booklets "Preparing for Maternity" and "Brady Baby Book." (J. & D. S.)

Answer—I suppose it is never too late to learn, but it seems too bad your education was neglected in your grade school, and high-school years.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are civilian clothes called "muftis?"

When a person in the military or naval service dons civilian dress (civvies) he is said to be "in mufti."

"Mufti" pronounced "MUFF-tee") in the sense of "plain clothes" as distinguished from a uniform came to us by way of the British army in India.

It is an Arabic word literally meaning "magistrate" and is the title of a chief expounder of Mohammedan law.

Formerly the chief judge of Islam at Constantinople was known as the Grand Mufti. He was the real head of the Mohammedan religion in the Ottoman Empire, and, with the body of learned theologians known as the "Ulema," constituted the theocratic element of the Turkish government.

The principal Mohammedan judge in any country, district or city was also known as a grand mufti. For instance, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem was the head of the Pan-Islamic movement.

Strictly speaking, Islam has no church organization, clergy or liturgy, and the muftis are merely highly respected authorities on Moslem law to whom the Mohammedan judges of the ecclesiastical courts apply for expert opinion.

Just how "mufti" acquired the slang or colloquial sense of "civilian clothes" is not clear.

The conventional attire of the Oriental mufti formerly consisted of turban, loose, flowing robes and sandals.

In "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" (1670) Moliere, the great French writer of comedies, portrayed a mufti on the stage dressed in a plain dressing gown, smoking cap and slippers.

It appears that when British officers in India dressed informally their costume was compared to that of the muftis.

Later the term came to be applied to any civilian clothes worn by a person who ordinarily wears a military uniform.

END OF WAR FAILS TO EASE BRITISH FINANCEPROBLEMS

Market Bullish Despite Government Change But Many Factors Complicate Switchover to Peace Footing.

Written for The Canadian Press
by GEORGE ABRAHAMSON

London, Dec. 31 (CP) — Britain's financial problems have been accentuated, rather than eased, by the end of the war and the switchover to peace conditions.

To reconcile the rival claims of housing, export trade and industrial reconversion against the background of limited supplies of goods calls for the utmost care in the allocation of long-term funds.

With the Bank of England nationalized and thus in form as well as fact under treasury control and a national investment board to decide priorities for competing claimants for capital, the chancellor of the exchequer will be well-equipped to cope with technical problems.

But there is widespread belief that the nationalization of basic industries and the conversion of higher-interest loans by the new Labor government under Prime Minister Attlee will complicate the technical difficulties.

Financial interests took the change of government in stride. The upward swing in stock prices which began with the end of the European war has continued and in early December the industrial shares index was at all-time record levels.

Expenditure on war services passed its peak two years ago and has been declining since then, but the end of hostilities brought no immediate sharp drop. Late in November the supply branches still needed £15,000,000 ($67,500,000) daily. Tax relief must therefore wait until the next fiscal year and the treasury's floating debt keeps increasing.

Demobilization and the reaction from wartime austerity have raised home market sales so that, despite substantially unchanged prices, the banknote circulation has risen by one-eighth from 1944 and banking turnovers show a correspondinfg expansion.

Continue Controls.

To keep the increase in home sales in check, the government is relying on proven wartime policies; stabilization of the cost-of-living by such methods as rent control, food subsidies and the extension of the "utility" range of textiles and household goods at closely calculated prices; and retention of the purchase tax to lessen the demand for other merchandise until supplies increase.

To meet its financial needs the treasury still depends on borrowing for approximately half the government expenditure. The cheap-money screw is being turned tighter. The rates for bank and treasury bills have been cut by one-half of one per cent and medium and long-term rates are likely to follow soon.

In the field of foreign currency the end of lend-lease necessitated immediate sharp retrenchment since the new Anglo-American financial agreement took months to complete. In the sterling bloc a similar abrupt termination of wartime arrangements was avoided, and the European countries linked to sterling before the war have shown their willingness to resume their former close co-operation with the United Kingdom.

The big gap in Britain's balance of trade and payments revealed by post-war trade returns and the accumulation of large sterling accounts in London by the Dominions and Empire countries will call for special settlements even if the 50-per-cent increase in export volume sought by the government is achieved.

During 1945, however, these problems of domestic and foreign finance did not attain their full extent and for the future it is anticipated that the government's powers will prove extensive enough to keep the supply of finance in line with any big changes which may occur in the direction and volume of production.

said. " . . . I wish to share my fate with that of millions of others. . . . . I die with a joyful heart in my knowledge of the immeasurable deeds and achievements of our soldiers at the front, of our women at home, the achievements of our peasants and workers and of a contribution unique in history, of our youth that bears my name."

In his personal will, also dated April 29, Hitler told of plans for suicide after marrying his 35-year-old mistress Eva.

"She will go to her death with me at her own wish as my wife," the will said. "This will compensate us for what we have both lost through my work in the service of my people."

Wished to be Cremated

"My wife and I choose to die in order to escape the shame of overthrow or capitulation," the will added. "It is our wish for our bodies to be cremated immediately. . . . "

Hitler left his personal possessions "in so far as they are worth" to the Nazi party, and said that paintings he had collected should be placed in a gallery "in my home town of Linz on the Danube."

Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, was named executor. Bormann, Goebbels and Nicolaus Von Below witnessed the will.

The Goebbels appendix, also dated April 29, said the propaganda minister had rejected Hitler's command to leave Berlin and become chancellor of a new government.

"In the nightmare of treason which surrounds the Fuehrer in these most critical days of war, there must be some people to stay with him unconditionally until death," the appendix said.

Berlin fell three days later, and Red Army soldiers identified the charred bodies of Goebbels and his family.

BBB.ll .Bly SHRDLU NNNNNN dian service casualties in the six years of the Second Great War totalled 104,925, including 41,371 dead, compared with casualties of 190,092, including 62,817 dead, in the four years of the First Great War, it was shown in figures obtained from Defence Headquarters.

These figures, covering the war just ended, and complete up to Nov. 30, show 97,022 casualties suffered in Europe, 2,486 in Asia and 5,417 in the Western Hemisphere. By categories the grand total breaks down to 41,371 killed and died, 43,178 wounded, 10,044 prisoners now released and 332 missing.

Of the three services, the army had by far the greater number of killed and died—22,712. The air force total in that category was 16,694, and the navy 1,965.

United Kingdom Hopes To Treble Overseas Trade

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 31 (CP) —Bottlenecks in the supply of manpower and material and the need of continued large scale production of war supplies for British armies around the world are plaguing industry in the switchover to peacetime output.

The restocking of British homes after six years of war and the recapture of world trade markets disrupted by hostilities both are being delayed.

Completion of the Washington loan negotiations is expected to result in amelioration of the materials situations but labor shortages will continue for months.

Nearly 5,000,000 men and women have dropped out of the armed services and munitions work as the year ends but half the number are needed to replace those who retire from work altoservices will still be 2,000,000 short of their pre-war labor.

Basic industries and construction—the latter concentrated primarily on urgently-needed housing—are getting more than their normal share. Manufacturing industries which provide most of Britain's export goods will remain short-handed.

The government's announced gether. Civilian industries and export target is an increase in volume by 50 per cent over 1938. During the third quarter of this year shipments abroad totalled £98,600,000 ($442,700,000). Just under one-half of 1938 when compared on a volume basis.

Thus exports still must be trebled to meet the official target.

Shortage of Help.

Despite the statement by Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, that "good progress" has been made in the change to peace production, complaints of the slowness of reconversion have been coming in from all parts of the country.

Shortages of suitable help is everywhere termed the principal bottleneck, even though considerable localized unemployment has been caused by cancellation of munitions contracts in highly industrialized areas. Other major worries for British industry are the taxation position, wartime increases in cost of production through higher wage rates and a sharp boost in coal prices and uncertainty over the life of remaining war orders.

Uncertainty has been created, too, by the change of government, putting into office a Labor administration which makes public ownership a major policy. Nationalization of fuel and power, iron and steel and inland transport will bring 15 to 20 per cent of British industry under state control.

But there is general confidence among business men that Britain will in time reach prosperity again. Hundreds of new factories are being built by private companies and hundreds more government war factories have been leased by industry for peace time use.

SHIPPED WIFE OVER IN GLIDER

Lieut. Jean Goppert of the airborne troops greets his wife shortly after her arrival on airliner DC-4 at LaGuardia airport, New York. They were married in London on May 11, 1945, and shortly after he was ordered to France. Lieut. Goppert packed his wife in a box and shipped her over in a glider. For this impetuous gesture the paratrooper was fined $200. Goppert is on a 20-day leave from his Florida base. After spending Christmas in New York, his wife will go to the home of his parents in Edna, Texas.

New York Bids Mixed Goodbye to La Guardia

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 31 (CP) — Undoubtedly he was the best mayor New York City ever had. Regret at his departure will be sincere, the farewells nostalgic.

Yet, now that it's definite, many a sigh of relief will go up from Gotham's millions when Fiorello H. La Guardia steps out of office Monday. Even for New Yorkers, who like color and punch in civic government, he was a little hard to take. And they've taken "Butch" and his idiosyncrasies for 12 years.

"The Hat" was honest. He governed the city well, brought it from the fringe of bankruptcy to solvency, changed its face, erected children's playgrounds, eradicated slums, built parks, tore down the hideous elevated railways, made many other civic improvements.

Only man in 276 years of New York history to be elected mayor three times, he stood on the sidelines in last month's election rooting for one of Mayor-elect William O'Dwyer's opponents and when his man lost, gracefully welcomed the victor.

New York will miss the pudgy, five-foot-two La Guardia, most colorful mayor since the tenure of debonaire Jimmy Walker in the roaring, golden 1920s. New York won't be allowed to forget him. He is taking a position in radio at a reputed $100,000 a year —$75,000 more than he received as mayor of the world's second largest city.

Mr. La Guardia always was copy for the newspapermen with whom in recent years he often was on the outs. This squat little man with the high-pitched, squeaky voice, a mop of unruly black hair and a penchant for large black hat was a newspaperman's delight. He was the "Little Flower," "The Hat," "Butch" — he was the man of many accomplishments, of a half-dozen languages and, perhaps not unconsciously, mangler of the King's English.

Advice to Winston.

Anecdotes were innumerable about this son of an Italian immigrant who seven times was elected to the House of Representatives where he once waved a 25c pork chop and a $3 steak to emphasize the high cost of living in the United States. New York probably will best remember him as La Guardia the fireman, always on hand at fires, directing the firemen, barking orders and, on occasion, handling hose lines.

To the fore in La Guardiana was his advice to Winston Churchill on the Atlantic Charter: "Winston, if I may use the language of, say, Shakespeare or Browning or Shelley or Dante, Gabriel Rossetti or other British classicists, please don't louse it up."

He was self-appointed father confessor and guardian of New York's 7,500,000 citizens. In his last four years in office he never missed a Sunday broadcast — admonishing the citizenry, advising them on current problems, lambasting "chiselling tinhorns" and, during last summer's newspaper strike, fervently reading the Sunday comics.

He used no script, his extemporaneous oratory being filled with dangling sentences, tangled grammer and mispronounced words. He yelled, squeaked, whispered, scolded, hurled sarcasm. He told the people to buy fish when it was cheap, to wear their rubbers on a rainy day, urged housewives not to shake dust mops out of apartment windows. He lectured on good manners.

He threatened a known criminal by name: "we'll throw him in the clink, that's what"— citing case, name and address. To "tinhorns" he said: "Cut it out right now! That kind of monkey business don't go in New York. Not while I'm mayor. Get me?" He praised "good and patriotic" industries, unions and individuals.

Attacked for being a "Jew hater", he challenged his opponent to a debate in Yiddish, making three speeches in that tongue, acquired on the East Side when he entered civic politics. He also speaks Italian, German, French and Croatian, learned in Europe while with the consular service in the early 1900s.

Once Bomber Pilot.

Born in New York December 11, 1882, Mr. La Guardia spent several years in Europe after graduation from high school. Later he graduated in law, becoming deputy attorney-general of New York State. Elected to Congress, he voted for entrance of the United States into the First Great War and enlisted in the air force. A bomber pilot in Italy, he still likes to be called "major."

Following the war, he was re-elected to Congress where he spent his time attacking the Ku Klux Klan, making beer on the sidewalks to demonstrate the futility of prohibition and needling his own party, the Republicans. In his stormy years in public office he has used 14 political parties.

In 1929 he made an unsuccessful campaign for mayor of New York bowing to the popular and dapper Jimmy Walker. He came back in 1933, gave Tammany Hall a beating as the Republican-Fusion candidate and took over the City Hall in a major political upset.

While in office he was president of the United States conference of mayors. As chairman of the United States section of the United States-Canada Joint Defence Board he was a familiar figure in Ottawa and Montreal. For a time during the United States' participation in the war he was director of the Office of Civilian Defence.

But New York now turns to William O'Dwyer, the former policeman.

CLAIMS SURPLUS STOCK

Ottawa, Dec. 31 — (CP) — A shortage of sugar in Canada was an "economic monstrosity" as long as surplus stocks exist in South America, Ross M. Brown, acting for what he descdibed as three South American sugar interests, said in a prepared statement here last night. The interests were not identified.

Banks, trust and loan companies rely on newspapers to keep in touch with the public; they spend more than twice as much on daily newspaper advertising as in any other medium.

NEWSPAPER OFFICE BURNS

Newcastle, N. B., Dec. 31—(CP) —The building containing the Union Advocate, a weekly newspaper, was destroyed by fire Saturday. Much of the plant's machinery also was lost and damage was estimated at $15,000. The newspaper was established in 1868.

'STILL CHRISTMAS SEASON'

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)— Fiorella H. La Guardia, whose 12 years as mayor of New York ends today, said yesterday on his farewell "talk to the people" over Municipal radio station WNYC that it was still the Christmas season and therefore he wouldn't say "a lot of things I wanted to say."

Women's Activities

PHILLIPSTON ZION W.I.

The District President, Mrs. A. Mitchell gave a very instructive and interesting talk to the members, at the home of Mrs. Percy Ray. The Tweedsmuir village history was discussed and Mrs. Mitchell advised the convener of historical research to start one at once to be ready for W.I.'s fiftieth anniversary in 1947. She stressed the need for people to realize that the foundation of peace lies with themselves. Another thought was to make the Christmas spirit last through the year and make the day happy for others rather than a day for feasting.

The topic "Scatter gladness, joy and mirth, but forward still that more may be" was ably dealt with by Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson stressing the family circles that would be complete this year for the first time since the war was declared and the chance to cheer the lonely ones that will always be incomplete. After the singing of Christmas carols Mrs. Ralph Sills told the story of the Shepherd, who didn't go.

During the business period a letter was read from the Institute in Australia that has been exchanging with this Institute for some time. This exchange is very interesting.

Ten dollars were voted to the Christmas Cheer fund for British Children.

After a few remarks from the visitors the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

FASHION FLASHES

COLOR marks new snakeskin belt and glove sets. They are seen in such shades as Kelly green, bright scarlet, shocking pink and chartreuse.

New Beauty is forecast for the crop of Spring hats. Worn posed at a three-quarter angle is a beret in white pique with red, red roses and a black lace veil, indicative of allure and fresh charm.

A good silk suit can be worn almost the whole year round. A good suit of satin, moire or faille is a fine investment since it is quietly dressy on its own, and can be really dressed up for big occasions. Burnished, copper-colored satin makes a handsome suit, with high, collarless closing and intricate seamed detail at the easy armholes. Skirt is slightly flared.

Slim Janes and not-so-slim Jills will be glad that the well-defined waist will be a feature of the new Spring coats. A very smart topper is finely checked in black, white, red and light blue woollen and is belted in black patent leather. A wide belt is drawn tight to cinch the waist. The slim midriff look is also helped by wide, round shoulders and deep armholes. The top part of the bodice is marked by a big-yoke treatment achieved with selvedge bands of the fabric.

It's nice that some pure silk blouses are beginning to appear again. Black silk crepe with superimposed lines of white, primary blue, chartreuse and pink—in a wide, geometrical design—should make an exciting suit companion.

Simple styles in fine fabrics always star with smart women for resort wear. Pure silk shantung in pale green makes a lovely afternoon or spectator sports dress. It is a two-piece model with elbow-length circular capelet in lieu of sleeves, and the deep peplum on the slightly longer skirt that marks most of the new fashions. Both capelet and skirt are scalloped.

It's about time to plan to be warm these long Winter nights, and in gay fashion. Whip up a skirt of checked tweed and a jersey blouse to match a color in the tweed. Sew sequins or beads, the color of blouse, all over skirt.

Believes Liquor Involved In Many Accidents

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario, said he believed 25 per cent of Ontario's traffic fatalities resulted from accidents involving liquor.

More Chic Than Fabric

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THAT fabric restriction order known as L85 has done this frock no harm. Made of a soft, lightweight wool, it uses less than the law allows, and gains chic as it saves fabric.

The sole elaboration is two embroidered discs of palliettes which match the wool's color, and there are lovely colors available. The belt, less conspicuous than is usual this season, is of self fabric.

The gold touch appears frequently in accessories such as the box bag of black satin appliqued all over with gold kidskin leaves. Then there are gloves of black suede with detachable, flared cuffs of gold kidskin. Gold kidskin belts studded with big stones add verve to the simplest frock.

The Marry Go Round

Sparks from the Yule Log

How we mortals love to be fooled! The little gods of whom we're fondest are those who spend their time deceiving us—Dame Fortune, Santa Claus and Cupid.

For eleven months of the year, we may laugh satirically at love and life and the world in general. But at this magic time, something gets into the dullest imagination; the bleakest heart and the weariest pulses quicken their tempo and stir it to a joyous rhythm. That's the well known "Christmas Spirit!"

The dangerous woman in a bachelor's life is not the "temptress" who is trying to lure him to the altar, but the innocent-looking matchmaker who is determined to marry him off, and is always inviting him to dinner to meet some "sweet girl." The average woman simply cannot bear to see an eligible bachelor lying around loose.

It is not always fair to judge a man by his Christmas gift. Because—for 364 days in the year—a man may understand a woman perfectly; but on Christmas Day, she suddenly becomes an anomaly, a mystery —a total stranger to him.

Next to the paralyzing problem of what to give a girl, the most perturbing and irritating thing about Christmas, to a man, is the terrifying thought of what she may give him. Between this Scylla and Charybdis, it is no wonder that so many good husbands, lovers and bachelors begin drowning their sorrows on Christmas Eve!

Many a popular man-about-town, glancing over his Yuletide offerings on Christmas morning, wonders why God gave women so much heart and so little common sense.

Some husbands observe Christmas—and others just close their eyes and cross their fingers until the excitement and danger have passed.

Christmas Day, like the first kiss, is sometimes just a little disappointing. The sweetest part of either is that ecstatic anticipatory time — just before.

Happy New Year!

"THIS IS GOING TO BE THE BEST NEW YEAR'S DAY OF MY LIFE," said a young veteran to us recently, "BECAUSE IT'S THE FIRST ONE AT HOME IN SIX YEARS. LAST NEW YEAR'S DAY I WAS IN A FOXHOLE IN ITALY........"

Last year .... and the year before .... and for four years before that, New Year's Day for thousands and thousands of young Canadian men and women was just another day in which to dream longingly of home; and for those at home.... another day in which to poignantly miss the loved ones who were far away.

How thankful all Canada is that NEW YEAR'S DAY, 1946, finds families re-united, and places at the holiday table which were vacant for so long, no longer vacant! Canadians celebrate with joyful hearts this happiest of New Years!

Yet, in her joy, this country does not forget those who gave their lives in the cause of righteousness.... THEIR NAME LIVETH FOREVERMORE." May the cause for which they died win Everlasting Peace.

BEFORE: Above you see the type of dreary basement laundry in which many a housewife, even in this modern age, spends at least one morning a week. No wonder wash day is usually called "Blue Monday!"

GLAMOUR LAUNDRY

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

While modern home-makers have realized for some time the advantage of making the kitchen a gay and cheerful place in which to work, there's many a household still with a needlessly cheerless basement laundry.

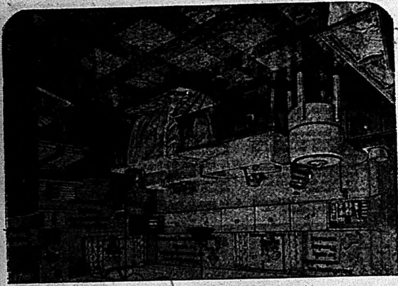
Pictured above is one of this kind, bare and strictly utilitarian; a place in which work is no fun at all.

But just look below! Never recognize the old room, would you?

Yet it's exactly the same one, all done up in a brand-new dress and given new, convenient shelves, cupboards and places to put things, like the hamper at left, the camp stool to hold the laundry basket at right, and the tricky business under the ironing board to keep the ironing off the floor.

A colorful paint job on the walls and cupboard, and new asphalt tile on the floor, did the rest.

AFTER: Below, is the same room given a whole new personality with colorful painted walls, floor covered in asphalt tile in a harmonizing three-colored plaid design, curtains at the windows and many new cupboards.



Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's a Chap Who "Can't Understand" His Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Several weeks before I came into the Navy I met a most wonderful girl on a blind date. She was nineteen and I twenty. We had some very good times together which she seemed to enjoy as much as I.

While I was away I sent her many very nice gifts. She wrote at least once each week and I twice a week at least. About a month ago I was home for several weeks. I saw her often and we had lots of fun together.

One night we had a family dinner (my family) and I wanted her to come, but she wouldn't. She didn't have any particular reason for not wanting to go. This has me stumped. Several other times she had very poor reasons for not going out when I wanted her to. I now know that she went out quite a lot with other fellows. I like her to have a good time, but would like her to be a little more interested in me. I tried to get her to wear my ring, but she would not. She already had a soldier's class ring, although she did not get this until after I left.

Being a sailor, I have met many girls, but none I think as much of as this one back home. She is everything I could want in a wife, but sometimes she has me stumped. I have never been serious with her. Perhaps that is my trouble. We are both old enough to be thinking of getting married but we have never mentioned this to each other.

I like her very much and she likes me, I think, by the way she talks and acts, but I would like for her to like me more. Sometimes I can't understand her.

S. L. S.

Don't you think, S.L.S., that you have perhaps put your finger on the most likely trouble spot yourself, when you say you have "never been serious" with this girl? It could be that she feels as puzzled by your attitude as you say you are about hers. Since, by your own admission, you have never mentioned marriage, she may be wondering if all your letters, visits and gifts really mean business or just reflect a passing fancy on your part.

Her refusal to join in your family party under these circumstances seems to me to indicate that you've been fortunate enough to pick a girl with very good sense. When a man invites a girl to be one of an intimate family gathering, relatives are very likely to take it for granted that she will eventually become a member of the family and the man is taking that opportunity to introduce her. Why should your girl run the risk of giving a false impression and perhaps being put in an embarrassing position?

And why should she give up friendships with other men if you have never even tried to get her to be your "one and only?" For all she knows, you may be making just as many dates with other girls as you are with her.

If, as you say, this girl is just the kind of wife you want, my advice would be to tell her so at once and get it on the record. Don't waste any more time thinking about how you can't understand her. Maybe she can't understand you either.

IT'S ABOUT TIME to have these accessories to relieve that all-one-color look. A length of grosgrain ribbon to pin at neckline and a pair of matching gloves. These to be the color which does most for your eyes. Your largest pin anchors the ribbon.

TAXIMAN AND PASSENGER ROBBED

Just Ahead—A Year of Beauty

Jeanne Crain has made her New Year's beauty pledges.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT HAS been a bad year for the world. Let us be thankful that it has ended. And it is the proper time to take inventory of appearance. If old meanie 1945 has got you down, it is even more necessary than ever to make good looks resolutions, and to keep them.

One must make up for the ravages of anxiety and the toil of the past twelve months. So here goes, lady! Read each one and solemnly say "I will".

Be mindful of the importance of nutrition. Eat at regular hours of simple nourishing foods that will not disturb the digestive motors, or keep you from sleeping restfully at night. Good nutrition has an effect upon the hair, complexion and fingernails as well as the rest of the human mechanism.

Get out of doors every day of your life and, if possible, have a brisk walk of at least one mile to keep your lungs air washed and your figure young. If you must skip your fresh air exercise, do your calisthenics for fifteen minutes, like a good girl.

Don't take for granted that your glorious crown will remain as is; sometimes the years take a toll, bringing grey fuzzers, thinning the growth at the temples. Brush your hair every night of your life; shampoo it every fortnight.

Be not content to put the highlights on your finger nails, neglecting proper care of the pink shells. Anoint them frequently to keep them in good condition and to soften the surrounding flesh so hangnails will not form.

Don't forget to be kind to the little footies. Select shoes with care so you will not be cursed with corns, calloused spots or ingrowing nails. Endeavor to find a shoe salesman who will help you select the correct last.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 28—(AP)—Maybe Paris fashion designers have decreed longer skirts, but they're not going to get away with it, says photographer Bob Coburn.

Nylons are coming back and legs will be in their old shape again, moaned Coburn, director of cheesecake art for Columbia Pictures, and now the Paris modistes are trying to cover them up. He won't take the edict sitting down.

Nudged on by the publicity department, the photographer enlisted Rita Hayworth, Evelyn Keyes, Jinx Falkenburg and other eminently suitable subjects to cable French courtiers in protest.

"We haven't seen good-looking legs to advantage in years," wept Coburn, "and now these designers decide to put a bushel over the most interesting subject in photography."

Brazil's bid for the international movie market is being planned by Robert Chust, who has lined up financing—49 per cent United States money, 51 per cent Brazilian—for a motion picture studio in Rio De Janeiro. The first production will be "Rhapsody in Samba," a spectacle that will be recorded in Portuguese, dubbed in Spanish and titled in English.

At a time when awards are being tossed around, Peggy Ryan would like to throw a bouquet at swooning, clothes-ripping, bobby-soxed youths. She loves 'em.

"They're just fans," she said, "and where would many of us be without them?"

From the 'teen-age front, young Peg informs me the calisthenic type of jitterbug dancing is on the way out and the smooth type of "lindy" in on the upsurge.

Jack Benny may play the Japan United Services Organization circuit to entertain occupation troop next summer if he isn't doing a picture. . . George Montgomery, who weathered Alaskan weather in the services with nary a sniffle, came down with a cold. . . Cathy O'Donnell, who spent a year losing her Oklahoma accent, will need it back to play a midwestern in "Glory to Me". . . Edward Arnold takes a needed vacation to Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies near Calgary next year. . .

In the film palaces. . . "San Antonio" (Warner Brothers—112 Minutes) is again Errol Flynn at his bravest. This time he is battling the lawless forces in Texas. The picture is a rip-snorting western. As usual with horse operas, its best feature is its action.

Hollywood, Dec. 31 (AP)—This week movie town welcomed back the star who has been away to the wars the longest. David Niven returned to Hollywood after six years in his native Britain.

Niven's return was marked by a flurry of parties, principal of them being a luncheon which his boss, Samuel Goldwyn gave on a fir-lined, blue-lighted sound stage. When I met David there, he was more nervous than he ever could have been on a commando raid.

"I may even have to make a speech," he said.

He found out he did not have to make a speech and couldn't eat the corn-fed beef lunch because of worry. I suggested that he consult another Goldwyn employee, playwright Robert Sherwood, sitting nearby. He has written speeches for some important people—including the President of the United States.

But David made his own speech: He told about visiting a field in France where 27,000 boys were laid under white markers. He said those were 27,000 reasons for keeping his mouth shut when folks asked him to tell stories about the war.

He was ordered to bed a few hours after his speech. He has had the flu ever since his arrival.

The last six years hold many memories for him. He left Hollywood Oct. 1, 1939. Goldwyn says Niven faked a cablegram reading: "Return to your regiment immediately. Adjutant." He showed it to the producer and made his escape.

Niven arrived in England Oct. 10 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the British infantry. He later switched to the commando and was also on Gen. Eisenhower's staff. He served from Normandy through France, Belgium and Holland to Germany.

The actor starts work on a loan-out to Hal Wallis in "The Perfect Marriage" with Loretta Young. Or he will if Wallis can have some clothes for him to wear by that time.

Mrs. Niven and the children will come here in six or seven weeks. David explained the delay: The children's nursemaid is still in the British army manning an anti-aircraft gun at Antwerp. That's what he said anyway.

An advertiser received more than 40,000 requests for a catalogue, each enclosing 10 cents, as a result of one advertisement in Canadian daily newspapers.

MURDER VICTIM

Christmas Gifts From St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E.

Christmas Cheer donated by St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. was as follows:

$100.00 to British Children's Clothing Fund; $100.00 to Sailor's and Minesweeper's Fund; $50.00 to Evening Telegram British Children's Christmas Treat Fund; $25. to Overseas Cigarette Fund; $25.00 to Navy League Sea Cadet Fund; $50.00 to I.O.D.E. Endowment Fund; Christmas monetary donations and boxes to the Chapter members boys still in the service.

Three large cartons containing 12 ditty bags, fruit cake, candy, mixed nuts, peanuts, chocolate drinks, sweaters, six, seaboot-stockings, tuckins and helmets and reading materials were sent to the Chapter's newly adopted ship "H.M.C.S. "Gleneagle."

To the Kingston Veterans' Hospital two Stewart-Warner radios were presented.

Mrs. E. J. Neate, president of the Chapter, has received from Medical Superintendent M. E. Gorman, M.B., of the Kingston Veterans' Hospital, a letter acknowledging the Chapter's letter and the radios. Dr. Gorman noted that "it must have been most difficult to get these fine radios and I can assure you that I greatly appreciate your kindness in donating them to the hospital. Nothing you could have sent would have given the boys more pleasure or helped more to make their stay in hospital less tedious and I know that they will be most grateful for them."

Dr. Gorman said he was appreciative of the Chapter's interest in the hospital and only wished that the members could see the preparations which had been made for the veterans who were unable to go home for Christmas. Kingston I.O.D.E. branch had erected Christmas trees in the sunrooms in each ward and gave a special dinner for Christmas Day.

Trig and Trim

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S NOTHING nicer for everyday wear than a smartly fashioned separate blouse and skirt, the twain linked by a dashing belt. It's an outfit that is trig and trim, yet not too tailored. An ideal blouse for this type of costume is this neat Glenwear model. It is of wash-and-dry-in-a-jiffy nylon and has a well-handled bow neckline and easy shoulders.

Mosienko Injury Blasts Chicago's N.H.L. Hopes To Head Canadiens for Lead

Fired Winning Goal Against Habitants but Hawks Are Beaten by Rangers

(By The Canadian Press)

Players pressed jubilantly around Bill Mosienko Saturday after the 160-pound right wing on hockey's hottest line fired the shot which felled Montreal Canadiens 5-4. Nothing could stop Chicago Black Hawks now.

Less than 24 hours later, Mosienko slumped to the ice in Madison Square Gardens with injured knee tendons suffered when blocked by defenceman Bill Moe of New York Rangers.

Thus did calamity strike at the height of a seven-game undefeated streak which brought Chicago's month-long objective — leadership of the National Hockey League — within easy grasp.

All they had to do was defeat the tailend Rangers, who hadn't won a game in a month. But Mosienko's injury, crippling the striking power moulded around Bill and the two Bentley Brothers, helped pave the way for a surprise 3-2 victory for New York.

Two goals by Grant Warwick and one by Tony Leswick, all in the first period, brought Rangers their fifth victory in 22 starts and prevented Hawks from closing the one-point margin which separated them from the leading Canadiens. With Mosienko gone, Doug and Max Bentley were held scoreless. Pete Horeck's first-period goal and Alex Kaleta's tally early in the third weren't enough for the Hawks.

Battle to Tie

In Sunday's only other N. H. L. game, Boston Bruins battled Red Wings to a 3-3 tie at Detroit after scoring twice within 37 seconds in the last period.

Don Gallinger and Milt Schmidt produced the tying tallies for Boston after Detroit had built up a 3-1 lead in the first two periods on two counters by Adam Brown and one by Ted Lindsay against Herb Cain's single for Bruins. The deadlock — third straight between these two teams — left them tied for third place three points behind Chicago.

In one of two Saturday games which opened the N.H.L.'c 10th weekend of competition, Bruins shaded Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3 as the Leafs suffered their third straight setback to sink further into fifth place, 3½ games behind Boston and Detroit. Alert netminding by Frank Brimsek, who didn't have a chance on the three shots that beat him, and a two-goal performance by veteran Bill Cowley, helped Boston maintain their seasonal undefeated record against Toronto.

Terry Reardon and Johnny Crawford also scored for Bruins. Nick Metz, Sweeney Schriner and Ted Kennedy were the Leaf marksmen.

Canadiens Outscored

In Montreal Saturday, Chicago outscored Canadiens by one goal in each of the first two periods, watched Montreal tie the count 4-4 with two goals midway thru the third period, and then went ahead for the final time at 17:40 when Mosienko's low shot from close range foiled Bill Durnan.

Maurice Richard with two goals and Buddy O'Connor and Dutch Hiller with one apiece led Canadiens. Centre Max Bentley, league-leading scorer, also had 2. Clint Smith, George Gee and Mosienko fashioned the other tallies for Chicago.

GALT RED WINGS WITHIN GAME OF LOOP LEADER

Defeat Marlboros 1-0, While Young Rangers Take Barrie Flyers

(By The Canadian Press)

While St. Michaels were playing an exhibition series in Winnipeg, Galt Red Wings crept to within one game of the league-leading Collegians in the O. H. A. junior "A" standing Saturday by taking a 1-0 decision from Marlboros at Toronto. It was not until the third period that the issue was settled and to Bill Curik went the credit of the game's only goal.

In the other half of the Toronto matinee bill, Toronto Young Rangers registered their second win of the season by blanking Barrie Flyers 2-0 for the visitors' ninth setback in 14 starts. Bus Gagnon rifled the disc into the enclosure in the second period for the first tally and George Drysdale counted No. 2 soon after the start of the third chapter.

Oshawa Generals went to St. Catharines for the first time this season Saturday night and a tempestuous struggle ensued with the Generals being sent home with the short end of a 5-2 score. The result found both teams tied for third place with seven wins and six losses.

It was not until the second stanza that Falcons went into a 2-1 lead via Tom Smelle and the homesters outscored the motorists 3-1 in the final session. Falcons' scorers were Dawdy, Bury, Peterson and Cameron, in addition to Smelle. Oshawa marksmen were Eric Pogue and Ross Low. The game was repeatedly held up by showers of litter on the ice from the crowd of more the 2,600.

Unbeaten Alabama Trojans in Rose Bowl Favored to Beat

With 13 bowl games scattered over the western and southern states, college football tomorrow is giving 1946 a spectacular start on what is expected to be a sport boom in the United States. Unbeaten Alabama will trot out the team favored to beat the Trojans in the Rose Bowl fixture for which a 90,000 crowd is assured. The only other unbeaten squad, the Oklahoma Aggies, will march into the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans to take on St. Mary's from the West Coast. A throng of 72,000 fans is expected for that contest.

Although overseas forces have dwindled appreciably in recent months, a variety of holiday grid features are being staged between service teams, notably an Atom bowl game, at Nagasaki, Japan.

Louis B. Mayer made a clean sweep of Saturday's inaugural at Santa Anita Park, the California breeders champion stakes, when Honeymoon, Moneybags and Charivari were one-two-three at the finish. The Mayer entry, which paid $2.80 to win, collected $29,165 in prize money.

The eighth annual blue-gray football game before 20,000 fans at Montgomery, Ala., Saturday resulted in a 26-0 whitewash for the northern team of college stars. The fourth period was played under the arc lights because of darkness.

The National Football league played to a record gross attendance of 1,918,631 patrons at the 68 pro grid games during the past season. Green Bay Packers led all teams with a gross attendance of 521,426 at their 14 fixtures at home and around the circuit.

With 124 winners to his credit, Stanley Lipiec, 30, has sewn up the title of champion trainer of the U. S. turf year. Ontario born, he saw race horses for the first time at Long Branch, not far from his father's farm, when he was 11 years of age. Second to Lipiec among the year's trainers is L. Sierra with 99 while Hirsch Jacobs, long a leading trainer ,is third with 95 winners.

With Wally Halder turning in four goals, the University of Toronto Senior hockeyists won their second straight game 8-2 Saturday night from Colorado College Tigers at Colorado Springs. Toronto copped the first exhibition contest 11-2 on the previous night.

24 Head Jerseys Burned in Fire

Aurora, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Twenty-four head of jersey cattle, a large barn, pig pen and the year's crops were destroyed last night in a fire of undetermined origin on the farm of Johnny Coulson, Toronto oarsman who won the diamond sculls several years ago. The fire brigade from this town 20 miles north of Toronto saved the farmhouse and other buildings.

The livestock and crops were property of Steven Risebrough, farm tenant.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

1946

Tonight, sharp at the stroke of twelve, a cherubic, youngster clad in diapers and bearing the figures "1946" will be ushered into the world and with a smiling "O.K. chum, I'll take over from here," nudge a tottering bewhiskered 1945 out of the picture of Time.

He might as a surcease from the blaring horns, gay crowds, dancing bobby-soxers and oldsters, and the general whoopee that is a traditional herald of his arrival, gaze into a magic crystal and dream of what his tenure of activity along the endless road of Time might bring.

He might, from a sports point of view, cock a quizzical eye, wink the other one, and looking deeply into the ball, visualize floodlights in the Exhibition Grounds. But let's take a look.

• • •

"See that smiling gent over in the corner" says his Cherubic Majesty. "That is Parks Commissioner Cleo Colling, who has intimated that the lights are a foregone conclusion."

• • •

The picture changes. He sees a well-lighted baseball field near the Stewart Warner Alemite Grounds with surging crowds cheering players. Across the road beneath the glare of other lights, supporters of softball are yelling as girl athletes cavort around their scene of activity.

• • •

The scene shifts to a fan-packed arena. Beneath the bright lights hockey stars flash over the ice. It is early in the winter. 1946 slyly closes an eye. "It might be, and should be, that those kids are playing on artificial ice. Wait and see," he smiles.

• • •

The picture fades. Then comes a bright sunny scene. Fleecy clouds wisp a blue sky. On the bay, boats large and small dash about in a scene of frenzied activity. Suddenly the crowd-packed shore bursts into roars of acclaim. Trim power-boats ripping over the water at 0 miles an hour turn into the stretch for world title honors.

• • •

It is a regatta scene. "That, too", states his 1946 Majesty, "is a strong possibility."

• • •

The crystal fades into a dull bluish glow then gradually brightens as the picture of a crowded grandstand and bleachers come into view. Roars of acclaim greet slow-moving baseball players who with creaks and groans, but plenty of enthusiasm re-enact their playing days of long ago.

"That", whispers 1946, is also a strong possibility. They are the old boys of the C.O.B.L. from all parts of the district who are here to re-live the grand old days, and pay tribute to a distinguished figure of the district."

• • •

Then in panoramic sequence there flits by, tennis courts, golf links, baseball and softball diamonds, bowling greens all thronged with sports-loving humanity who have turned to their favorite outdoor recreations in an unprecedented post-war boom.

• • •

"1946 will be one of the best sports years in Belleville since my great-great-great grandfather took over years ago," the New Year representative smiled. "But it will need strong men at the helm and proper organization. Major sports will flourish, but there might be a tendency to neglect the activities of the youth of your city along these lines. There are men good and true here who could lend a hand, but they appear to be lethargic. The youngsters of today are the stars of tomorrow, and that applies to citizenship as well. The best foundation for strong sturdy leaders of tomorrow is proper handling and training in their youth. And I know of no better foundation than competitive recreation under the supervision of men who have weathered the storm of life and come through with flying colors."

• • •

At this point the little fellow rose on sturdy legs, stretched and smiled, "I must go and say goodbye to 1945. He did a swell job. He brought us victory and peace of a kind. He brought thousands of boys and girls back home from overseas for Christmas. He has tried to re-arrange the poor old war-weary world which even now is hanging a bit battered, over the ropes. But I guess he didn't have the time."

• • •

"That will be my job. But I won't be able to do it alone. The peace the world wants is far from being won. It is not one man's job but that of every man and nation in this world. If man and nation co-operates, develops tolerance and an unbiased opinion of the other fellow's merits, abilities and possibilities, then who knows, I may go down in history as the best year of all time."

And with a flourish of white arms and legs he disappeared to take up a job fraught with not a little danger, one that will tax the efforts of all, if that "enduring peace" thus far a more or less hazy possibility, is to become one of pleasant reality.

• • •

Rarin' To Go.

Toots Holway's Juniors went through a heavy practice at the arena the other night and appear to be developing into a smart hockey machine. Upwards of thirty youngsters turned out and Toots and his assistants had a hard task in their final selection of the players who will represent the club in the forthcoming Junior O.H.A. group.

• • •

Between the pipes will be seen Dick Fitzgerald with Bill Holway and Doug. Green out there in front of him. The starting forward line will likely be Don Barrett, centre, Jack Wardhaugh and Al Meagher, while assisting will be George Reeves, Jerry Moher. Ron Lyall, Doug. Day, Murray Wardhaugh, Winch Adams, York, Soules and Stew Woods, "Moe" Rollins will be the alternate goalie.

That appears to be a sturdy junior team and should give a good account of themselves in the hockey wars. They start puck hostilities here on Wednesday night against the strong Campbellford squad.

• • •

Arbiters Conclave

Representatives of the northern squads in the Junior O.H.A. grouping here failed to turn up at the scheduled meeting of league referees on Friday eventide. Picton, Trenton and Belleville were here and didn't waste any time. They discussed several matters pertaining to rules, regs. etc., and it has been suggested that a Referee Association be formed. That, dear reader is one for the book.

However, it has strong possibilities and Hizzoner the Umps, can air his opinions with his brother of the whistle at intermittent conclaves of the body. A meeting has been scheduled for next Sunday afternoon at the Arena.

Splinters

Redmen Intermediates trek to Kingston Wednesday evening, to do Van Horne Series battle with the Kingston Locos. . . They meet the same team in the opening intermediate "A" game at Kingston on Friday. . . This game was originally scheduled for Saturday, but due to circumstances down east was changed to the night previous. . . Rumor has it that Clare Williamson, starry Redmen defence player will be seen in a Locas uniform in the near future. . . Same old story, no job available here so to faraway pastures, which, as far as employment is concerned, are much greener than hereabouts, goes a good hockey player. . .The Reds, 'tis said, have signed a smart Stirling puckist, one by the name of Bastedo who has had plenty of hockey experience. . . Incidentally, the Reds claim they have signed Al. Meagher and Harry Wardhaugh, but have lost Jerry Moher and Don Barrett to the juniors. . . Tsk,Tsk, lads, let's co-operate. . .Gordie Fyfe, starry forward of the Barrie Colts, who is going great guns with that team, played last year for the Hastings Norwood Combines, in the junior OHA group in this district.

A Happy New Year.

And so to all sports fans, and readers in general of this newspaper, with a special flash to Ken J. Colling, down Kingston way, may the forthcoming year be the brightest, happiest and best of all time. May it bring the joy, happiness and contentment a war-weary world so richly deserves. The staff joins us in wishing to all.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR."

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — There may be a few challengers, but surely not many, to Harold St. C. Silver's claim that he stands alone as Canada's oldest active curler. The accent is on the active.

At 86, he's been "delivering stones" as the curlers say, for the last 59 years at Halifax Curling Club. In three hours at a recent spiel he delivered more than a ton and a quarter of stones which is a lot of stones though the chances are he was a trifle more spry back in 1910 when he visited Scoland with Scotland with a Canuck curling group and did the Old Land up in brown.

The Canadians at that time played three test matches against all-Scotland and won the Lord
Retire? Not old Harold St. C. Silver — "not while I'm able to deliver stone."

Now, to get on with more curling . . . the official city handouts about this big curling frolic set for Saskatoon in March refer to it as the "Macdonald Brier." Will anybody bet a little something, an old broom or a worn-out stone, say, that at least up to now, "Macdonald's Brier" was considered correct?

Out Winnipeg way 87-year-old Ed Low renewed a 26-year-old curling feud Christmas Day with son Harry. They've been playing each Christmas since 1919 and though Ed won this year Harry claims an edge on the series.

Canadian sports generally in '46 should show large improvement over the first peacetime sports year after the First Great War. One reason is that Canadian athletes who came home in 1918-19 had, many of them, been through long years of miserable trench warfare that left a heavy mark on them. This time the "dirty fighting" covered a shorter period of time and 20 years' progress had brought forth a lot of newfangled things to cut down ailments.

The voice in the background? That's the regular "Snapshotter," Alan Harvey, muttering from behind his mustard plaster — "Happy New Year!"

KANSAS CITY STILL ON TOP IN U.S. LEAGUE

Scores Pair of Victories Over Omaha Knights During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors consolidated their lead in the United States Hockey League during the weekend with two victories over the third place Omaha Knights. The Omaha team was down 6-4 Saturday and 7-0 in a Sunday shutout.

The first league shutout of the season was marked up to the credit of Kansas' 21-year-old goalie, Doug Jackson. The team also established something of a record with its 11th straight victory.

Dallas Texans and Fort Worth Rangers split the honors on two weekend games, with the Texans winning a Sunday scramble 4-3 and the Rangers taking a Saturday game 5-3. Ross Kopak and Vernon Jones led the Rangers in their Sunday victory, each scoring two goals. Peewee Read's 3 goals for Dallas in the last 12 minutes of play were the high points of the Saturday game.

Fights on the rink and in the bleachers featured a St. Paul game in which the home team defeated Tulsa 7-6. Joe Shack of St. Paul and Red Kane of Tulsa tangled in the third period and the Saints' Bobby Dill and Morris Hamilton of Tulsa were at it hot and heavy seconds later. While the players were scoring up the ice, several fights broke out among spectators and police had to escort the participants out of the arena. The referee succeeded in stopping the players' wrangles without help from the authorities.

It was Tulsa's second defeat of the weekend. They had gone down under the Minneapolis Millers when the latter broke their eight-game losing streak Saturday to pound out a 7-4 victory. Fans gave their longest pplause, however, to Tulsa's Bud Lamarche in the nets who made some sensational saves as the Millers turned in their best hockey of the season.

$4,000 in Cash Taken From Office

Windsor, Dec. 31—(CP)—Loot totalling $4,000 in cash and cheques was taken last night when burglars entered the Red Robin shop on Quellette Avenue, and ransancked the office. An attempt to gain entry to the safe of the Moodery coal company was unsuccessful.

At the Red Robin shop, an iron gate and an inner door were signs that the burglar used a jimmy.

The money and cheques were in a desk drawer in the office and that drawer was forced open.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Manager Bill Daly claims he has one-third of the crop of white heavyweights in Freddie Schott, Lee Savold and Pat Comiskey. . . The Association of College Baseball Coaches, at its first "annual" meeting in St. Louis next month, will award honorary memberships to a group of old-timers, most of whom have retired from active coaching. . .Joe (Chattanooga) Engel took the simple, direct approach when he picked a name for his new hound dog. He loaded the poor animal with the appellation of "Wrinklepuss".

Hope Springs Eternal Dept.

Lynn Patrick, Rangy Ranger and son of Manager Lester of that cellar-dwelling N.H.L. Club, brushed off a nice long limb for himself in a recent interview and climbed way out on it.

"Honest—we actually played as well against Detroit Wednesday night as we did at any time during the year we led the league. I know how silly that may sound, when you consider we lost, 3-2. But if it hadn't been for Harry Lumley's great saves we would have won by five goals. That's how much we really outskated them."

Coach Frank Boucher contributed: "We're playing well enough to win. Why we're losing is something I just can't explain. . . but the goals are going to start coming our way—and the wins, too."

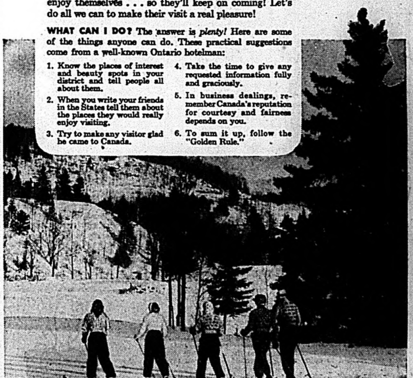
Ontario's ski trails mean fun for hundreds of friendly visitors from the States every year. We want them to enjoy themselves . . . so they'll keep on coming! Let's do all we can to make their visit a real pleasure!

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. These practical suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman:

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people all about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would really enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came to Canada.
4. Take the time to give any requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."



IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The Province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

CAPITALS SHOOT INTO LEAD OF WEST DIVISION

Thump Pittsburgh Hornets Twice Over Weekend; Buffalo Wins Twice

Indianapolis Capitals shot into the lead of the Western Division of the American Hockey League by thumping Pittsburgh Hornets 6-3 at Pittsburgh Saturday and further strengthened their hold on first place last night by edging out Hornets 3-2 in the return engagement at Indianapolis.

In the Saturday fixture the Hornets battled the Capitals to a 3-3 standstill until the last half of the final period when Jimmy Conacher, Gerry Brown and Steve Wochy made it a walkaway by shooting three goals past Goalie Baz Bastien. In the Sunday night win, Leslie Douglas broke up another closely-contested match by his late third period marker on passes from Wochy and Conacher.

Buffalo Bisons swept a week-end series with Cleveland Barons to stretch their winning streak to four games. John Moreck paced the Bison to a 5-3 victory at Cleveland, Saturday, with a brace of goals while Tommy Cooper performed the hat trick performance to help Buffalo turn back Barons 6-3 in the return game."

Gino Rozzini scored three goals as Hershey Bears pounded out a 5-1 victory over St. Louis Flyers Saturday before an approximate crowd of 7,000 home fans but Bears bowed to Providence Reds 5-4 after Oss Knipfel blasted a 40-foot drive past Goalie Lick Damore in the Hershey nets less than six minutes before the end of the game.

St. Louis Flyers, cellar-dwellers in the Western Division, proved superior to their Eastern Division counterpart and edged them out 3-2 before 3,800 spectators. Eddie Brown and Jean Paul Gladu fired the St. Louis counters while Joe Bell potted the sole New Haven tally.

ALLAN CUP SERIES REVIVED; FINALS FOR WEST CANADA

Memorial Cup Series for Hockey's Junior Title to be Played in Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—The Allan cup playoffs for Canada's senior hockey championship, suspended in 1944-45 because of war conditions, will be renewed this season with the final round in western Canada, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced today.

The announcement, sequel to the association's semi-annual meeting here this weekend, said the final round will be played in Vancouver if a British team qualified. Otherwise the final would be played in the "eligible" prairie city.

The memorial cup series for hockey's junior championship has been awarded to Toronto, starting April 13.

The announcement, containing a complicated Allan cup "draw," also said the C.A.H.A. has accepted a British Columbia offer to have the association's annual meeting in Vancouver May 2-4, that past president Frank Sargent and vice-president Al Pickard would supervise western senior and junior play-offs, and that president Hanson Dowell and vice-president Norman Dawe will similarly supervise eastern play-offs, all to be on a point basis.

The Allan cup draw for preliminary competition:

Western Canada

Series A—Manitoba V Thunder Bay all games on Thunder Bay ice.

Series B—Saskatchewan—Alberta winner V series A winner.

Series C—British Columbia winner V series B winner.

Series D—Allan cup finals.

Eastern Canada

Series A—Ontario Association winner at Maritimes. Best-of-three series, on point basis, probably starting March 19.

Series B—Series A winner V Ottawa and district, best-of-three, opening March 26.

Series C—Series B winner V Quebec association winners, best-of-five, opening April 1 or April 3.

(If O.H.A. wins series A, first game of series B to be played in Ottawa and rest on O.H.A. ice. If Maritimes wins series A, first game played in Ottawa and rest on O.H.A. ice. In series C if O.H.A. wins series B first game to be on O.H.A ice and rest on home-and-home basis. If Maritimes enter series C all games to be on Quebec ice. If Ottawa wins series B games will alternate between Ottawa and Quebec with first game on Quebec ice. Arrangements subject to change).

Memorial Cup Draw:

Western Canada

Series A—Thunder Bay V Manitoba, on Manitoba ice.

Series B—Alberta V British Columbia.

Series C—Saskatchewan V series B winner.

Series D—series C winner V series A winner for western Canada title.

Eastern Canada

Series A—Ottawa and district at Maritimes, best-of-three, starting March 18.

Series B—Series A winner at Quebec, best-of-three starting at Quebec with rest of series on Ottawa ice if Ottawa wins series A or on Quebec ice if Maritimes wins series A.

Series C—Series B winner V Ontario winner, best-of-five, starting on Ontario ice April 1 with second game on Quebec or Ottawa ice April 3, remaining games on home-and-home basis on Toronto, Montreal or Ottawa ice April 6, 8 or 10.

Johnny McReedy To Enter School

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 31 — (CP) —Johnny McReedy, hockey star who came out of Winnipeg to make a name for himself in amateur and professional leagues, is going to hang up his skates and go to college. He wants to become a mining engineer.

The 26-year-old player who has been a member of championship teams in Eastern Canada, is in Sydney today with his wife and daughter, visiting relatives. He explained that after the holiday season, he will enter University of Toronto.

Johnny said he has been interested in the hard rock mining industry ever since he played with Kirkland Lake Blue Devils when they won the Allan Cup. He came to Sydney Millionaires when the Cape Breton League was at its peak, later joining Toronto Maple Leafs, playing with them the year they won the Stanley Cup in a bristling series against Detroit Red Wings.

The Winnipeg youngster left the Leafs to join the R.C.A.F. and continued his winning ways in the service.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 872
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

As far back as I can remember, there have been no-trump hounds. If they had a long minor suit, they would bid no-trump. If they had a yen to play the cards, they'd slip in a no-trump bid fast.

With an evenly distributed hand, many players step right into a no-trump contract. Even when they have a biddable suit to show. It is their contention that it belongs in a no-trump contract.

This seems logical enough to those who fail to consider all the angles. But when you dig deep into bidding politics, you begin to get another slant on the subject.

Partners with combined hands that should end in no-trump will wind up there. Starting with a suit bid should not prevent it. If no-trump is where they belong, correct bidding will get there.

Meantime, with a biddable suit, a player should first show the suit. It gives partner a cheaper chance to show what he has. It gives a pair time to learn if a suit contract is better for them.

In the course of events there came this deal:

NORTH
♥9 6 3
♠7 3
♦A 7
♣K J 10 9 6 3

WEST	EAST
♥K 8 4	♥Q 10 5 2
♠J 10 9 8 5	♠A 6 2
♦10 9 8 2	♦K 6 3
♣7	♣A 5 4

SOUTH
♥A J 7
♠K Q 4
♦Q J 5 4
♣Q 8 2

South might have opened with one no-trump and reached the same result. But the bids went like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	2 C
2 NT	3 C
3 NT	Pass

The two unassisted bids in clubs by north show the suit is a rebiddable one. Although south has support for it, his tricks are not enough for a raise. His two jacks prompts his stretch to a game in no-trump.

But what I want to show you is a cute defence. It is a clever play by defenders that defeated this contract after west led a heart.

No doubt you can see it without my help. But I'll be back.

Galt Wants Increase In Player Limit For Junior Games

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, following its semi-annual meeting here this weekend, announced today that delegates tabled for discussion at the C.A.H.A.'s next annual meeting a request from the Galt junior team of the Ontario Hockey Association for an increase in the player limit for junior games.

The request came from Al Murray, coach of Galt Red Wings who have won their last 11 games in junior A competition. Murray asked that teams be allowed to dress 14 players, exclusive of sub-goalie, instead of 12 as now allowed.

The C.A.H.A.'s annual meeting will be held in Vancouver in May.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 27

"Spotty wrote me such a happy, funny letter about her Easter trip to Honolulu," Janet said. "It waked me up, suddenly, I mean it really did. I thought how affectionate and forgiving Mr. Fordyce always was, and that perhaps we might have a home together down there someday, in the islands, with Spotty. That's the way it ought to be, and that's the way I hope it will be. He worships Spotty, and Bert—his mother—tells me that he's never quite forgotten his bad Janet. So," she finished sweetly, "you understand, don't you? That we do appreciate your goodness to Spotty, and that you've perhaps done something to reunite a family that was just a little bit off the track. And now, I'm sorry, but I must run and dress."

That was all. Jocelyn was out in the hall again, with nothing to do but find a butler to carry her bags downstairs, and to follow them to the waiting car. She moved through her good-byes to the staff automatically, with a queer numbed feeling inside her, and as she drove away she seemed to be driving into a great void, in which nothing mattered.

With a last gesture of luxury she asked the man to drive her all the way to Sausalito and descended at the gate of Maple Den shortly after one o'clock, weary and dispirited and fighting a maddening impulse to cry. But five minutes in the household of the Partridges were enough to dissipate any self-pity, and to plunge her at once into the roaring life of the household. It appeared that in the middle of Tot's wedding plans for June, Ned Whitehouse, who had for several years been Sissy's beau, had burst in upon the family only an hour earlier with the news that he had been promoted, that he was to be in charge of the Bakersfield office and that he wanted eighteen-year old Sissy.

This had thrown all six sisters into a very ecstacy of excitement, a mad readjustment of plans. Immediate efforts must now be transferred from Tots to Sissy, announcements must be sent to the papers; Sissy must notify the manager of the shoe store in which she worked that she was leaving at the end of the week.

Awakening babies were given their afternoon glasses of milk to an enthusiastic description of their aunt's plans. They were going to have an uncle Ned in three weeks, how did they like that? Sissy dashed back to the store to pay what attention she might to afternoon sales.

It was decided that Sissy herself should tell her father, and as he came in, genial and weary from office hours, half an hour before Sissy did, there was a terrible thirty-minute interval in which all the girls were bursting with the great news, whispering in corners, and exploding into apparently causeless laughter at the slightest word from him.

Eventually Sissy was back, and in his arms, and all the others were gathered about to laugh and cry and exclaim over the youngest bride.

The old doctor kept his arm tight about his fourth daughter; now and then with his free hand he wiped his eyes. Jocelyn, looking at him, benign and gentle and wise, with blooming girls swarming all about him, kissing him, curled at his knee, hanging over the back of his chair, contrasted the parenthood in this shabby house with the other example she had so recently had a chance to study, and wondered once again if just too little money were not, after all, a better condition than much too much.

Ned, of course, came back to dinner. They sat down fourteen to a wild meal of not enough of any one thing to go around, but of plentiful variety. Aunt Nell had expected only seven of them. Jocelyn sat next to her aunt, and gathered details of family news under cover of the wedding chatter.

Aunt Nell paid but a kindly, indifferent attention to such portions of the news from Hill Acres as Jocelyn chose to give her. Norma was going to Honolulu with her mother, was she? Never mind, Jocelyn, you'll get your chance another time, dear. Jocelyn could see that her aunt's mind was already working on the number of presentable napkins that the family could rally for the wedding, the probability that there must be overnight provision for Ned's folks, who lived in Portland.

"Sis," Jocelyn said, "why not have Miss Snyder tighten the upper part of your bridesmaids' skirts and sort of full out the lower part and put rick-rack braid all around? That's what I saw at the Freeman wedding last month, and it was awfully smart."

"Oh, Jocelyn, that sounds like an inspiration!"

"I gave Tots three hundred, and I'll give you three hundred," said the doctor, "but anyone who asks me for more wrings my old carcass dry!"

"Daddy, what an angel you are!"

"Ned wired his mother this afternoon, Mom."

"Sis, don't have it Thursday. Have it Saturday and then all the boys can come."

It was all so good, Jocelyn thought, and so good for her. This joyous, wholesome home talk; these pretty eager sisters outvying each other in suggestions and generosities in some way had the effect of soothing her spirits. These were her own people; this was the world in which to find realities and peace.

After dinner everyone but the brides-elect, Tots and Sissy, who were already planning the newspaper notices that should dignify them into Madeleine and Ellen, flew upstairs to find the bridesmaids' dresses of two years ago, and see what their possibilities were. The other attacked the dishes, put the dining room in order, and were ready with suggestions when the younger girls came downstairs wearing the discussed garments, prepared for criticism.

Jocelyn crouched on the floor at her cousin's knee.

"Look, Aunt Nell. A row of fine tucks, see, to lift it? And then chiffon, fluffing out—"

She had gotten so far when a voice from the open parlor doorway said mildly, "What goes on?"

The world turned upside down in a burst of stars. Her heart stood still, began to race deliriously. She scrambled to her feet, laughing, exquisite, her face April. Philip Fordyce came into the room.

"'The Dancing Lesson,' by Degas," he said, on a rising inflection. They all laughed, and the girls, more like a high tide of roses than ever, clustered about him and explained that while they had been absorbed in the thrill of Tot's approaching wedding, quite suddenly little Sissy had taken the center of the stage. Eighteen days to her wedding!

Philip entered into the spirit of the occasion wholeheartedly. He took out a notebook and said that if Totos and Sissy had picked their silver patterns yet he would send them each a berry spoon.

"Everyone gets berry spoons," he told them seriously, "and everyone thinks they are perfectly useless. But believe me you can do wonders with a berry spoon. Mush, you know," elaborated Philip, "and milk toast."

They were all in such spirits anyway that they found this irresistibly amusing, and Jocelyn's sweet liquid laughter had in it a note that, for some reason she could not understand, brought tears to her aunt's eyes.

Just how she knew not — for everything had gone rosy and bewildering and vaporous and she was hardly conscious of what she said or did—Jocelyn found herself and Philip Fordyce wandering down the steep garden path to the side gate, and standing there in the dusk.

"I came to say I'm sorry it all broke like this," said Philip. "I telephoned home today to get in touch with you, and found you'd gone. I don't blame you. I know you're angry. But I wanted to say that I'm sorry."

"I'm not angry," said Jocelyn. "I came away because Miss Sanderson didn't leave me in any doubt that that was what I was expected to do. She was kind enough to say she'd say good-bye to you for me."

"Sandy," he said thoughtfully, and for a minute he did not speak again. "Jocelyn," he went on then, "what did they tell you?"

"Why, when you all went to the club last night—" she was beginning, when he interrupted her.

"Clubs," he said briefly.

"Didn't you go to the country club?" she stammered.

"With all of them?" he demanded in turn, equally amazed.

She said you did.

"Sandy did?"

"Well, she may not have said it in so many words. But she said —she certainly implied, that you and the countess were friends again—"

"Friends again!" he interposed on an impatient laugh, as she hesitated. "My dear girl, we've been divorced for fourteen years, and in all that time she hasn't made a friendly gesture toward me! There can't be any talk of a reconciliation between Janet and me; it would be absurd! If I was angry when she walked out on me my mother and a little girl of two, fifteen years ago, I've had cause to be a hundred times angrier since. She kidnapped Norma—oh, we kept it out of the papers, but that was what it amounted to. She left her in Paris with three nurses and five doctors, down with scarlet fever, and went with friends to Cairo.

"I didn't," he added in a more moderate tone, as Jocelyn merely waited in silence, her eyes starry in strengthening moonlight, "I didn't want even to be in the house with Janet overnight. They were all planning to go to the club, I went into town to my club and stayed there. You knew that?"

"No, I—I didn't know that." Suddenly she felt weak and small and helpless, and putting her elbows on the gate rail and covering her face with her hands she began to cry.

Instantly his arms were about her. His kisses on her mouth, his words close to her ear, her whole crying, laughing self leaning against him, safe in his big hold —never had she known such a heaven of ecstasy.

Presently Jocelyn could dry her eyes, and listen and laugh and cry, although she was still shy of words.

"And her coming doesn't make any difference?"

"Why should it? It makes this difference," Philip admitted, on second thought, "that we don't go to Honolulu Saturday. She'll probably go and take Norma. And after they're gone we'll be married. You'll come down and visit my mother, and we'll have a little dinner for the few people who matter, and after that we'll be married."

"Oh, but your mother'll hate me!"

"You know my mother. The minute you're established there she'll take you entirely into her confidence, gossip about Janet, go to her card games and dinners, and go off to her place on the Rogue River in July. Nothing matters to my mother except that she's amused."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, William, do you realize the most critical crisis in the country today is the housing shortage? Do you realize how many homeless people haven't got a dry roof over their heads or a simple floor under their feet?, she said.

How many? pop said, and ma said, Countless. And what's more, I've got a practical solution for the problem, she said.

Well, this sounds like good news, pop said. With a slogan like "A home for everybody and everybody at home" you could make yourself national dictater, he said, and ma said, It's simple enough, in fact that's what makes it so practical. Just let me ask you one question, William? When war was declared and so many peaceful men had to be taught to fight, what was the first thing the government did? she said.

It bilt camps that cost billions and were werth millions, pop said, and ma said, Exactly, the government spared no expense to take men out of their comfortable homes and put them in uncomfortable barricks. Well, now that they have no homes at all and not even barricks, why can't the government throw expense to the winds once more and work 24 hours night and day the same as war time until enough new houses are bilt for everybody? I mean nice little houses if possible, but at least houses? she said.

By gollies you're right, that's the most practical idea I've heard on the subject so far, pop said, and ma said, Do you mean it would werk?

My dear, there's not a chance in a million, pop said, and ma said, But William, why not?

It's too practical, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

H.W. Charlesworth Dies Suddenly At Toronto Home

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—Hector Willoughby Charlesworth, sometimes described as the best known of Canadian journalists, died at 73 as he hoped he would —"in harness."

The tall, light-haired dean of Canadian music and drama critics, who started a diversified newspaper career at 18, attended the Toronto Symphony "Pops" concert Friday night as critic for the Globe and Mail, though he did not feel well.

He died early Sunday. The sudden passing recalled a comment he made on his 40th anniversary in newspaper work:—

"We keep going and then we finish quickly..."

An author of note, Mr. Charlesworth's sonnets are included in "Oxford Book of Canadian Verse." He wrote several books, including "Candid Chronicles" and wrote numerous magazine articles and editorials.

The career that was to make him one of Canada's most colorful newspaper personalities started in 1891 with Saturday Night, Toronto's social and cultural weekly. Successively after that he served with four of the seven Toronto dailies of his time, covering the top news events of his generation.

He was first chairman of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission, now the CBC, created the "Theatre of the Air" and introduced British programs. After four years he retired in 1936 when the Commission was reorganized.

Born in Hamilton

Born at Hamilton of English and Scottish stock, he was educated in Toronto, took private tuition in music, spent three years as accountant and married Katharine Ryan in 1897. Mrs. Charlesworth predeceased her husband in 1944.

It was while working as accountant that he began submitting material to Saturday Night under the pen name 'Touchstone.' The weekly published a notice requesting the anonymous writer to call at the office — and a job for young Charlesworth quickly followed.

A year later he became a reporter for the Toronto World, and in the years that followed went to the News, the Mail and Empire where he became city editor as well as music critic, and finally back to Saturday Night in 1910.

Colleagues often exclaimed at his "incredible memory for names, events, dates and phrases."

His only daughter, Mrs. L. A. Mackay lives in Vancouver and his only son, Lionel V., is an engineer in Bogota, Colombia. A brother, Lionel C., is in Victoria and a sister, Mrs. H. P. Thorneloe, lives in Toronto.

SAYS CONFERENCE

Because of the Big Four veto power on the commission, no basic Allied policy for Japan can be adopted without United States approval.

The secretary emphasized that no atomic energy secrets were disclosed at Moscow and that none would be until effective safeguards are set up.

The subject of atomic energy was placed last on the Moscow conference agenda at Russia's suggestion and discussions were confined to the British-American-Canadian proposal for a control commission set up under the United Nations.

"At no time did we discuss any technical or scientific matters, nor were we asked by the Soviet government about the new weapon," he said.

ADMIRAL

Australia and New Zealand, or perhaps a little before. I want to send some more out. I just want to keep them popping up here and there, and keep the Japs guessing.

The letter continued:

This, of course, is right down the State Department's alley. To my mind a lot of State Department's suggestions and recommendations are nothing less than childish (don't quote me) and I have practically said so in so many words in the presence of all concerned, but after 13 months they finally got it going."

"LITTLE GLASS EYE" GETS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Scene in the court at Kokohama, Japan, during arraignment of Tatsuo Tsuchiya, former Japanese war prison guard. Tsuchiya — known as "Little Glass Eye" — was convicted of slaying Pte. Robert Gordon Teas om Streator, Ill., and was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. Left to right are: Prosecution Attorney Major Louis Geffen; Prisoner Tsuchiya; an American Nesei interpreter and Major Harold H. Emmons, defence counsel.

An Anxious Moment

He stepped carefully, oh, so carefully, along the ice-sheathed pavement of Bridge Street East. In his hand he clutched a bottle of New Year's cheer.

He slid and slithered along lest the treacherous footing be a means to disaster. Head bowed, he looked neither to the right nor the left.

Then it happened.

A buxom lady, likewise afraid of the precarious footing, came bravely along the street in the opposite direction. There was a bump, a cry, and both slid to the pavement.

The lady's handbag flew through the air and landed in the road. The bottle of cheer described a beautiful parabola while a wide-eyed owner closed his eyes and waited for the crash.

The "Heather Dew" struck a small heap of ice, rolled a few inches and came to rest. The man assisted the lady to her feet. She was unhurt.

He approached his purchase. It lay in the pile of snow, its wrapper intact. Gingerly he picked it up, held it for a moment, shook it, and with a triumphant smile, continued his way along the slippery pavement. It was unbroken.

Prices Board Tightens Clothing Rules

Ottawa, Dec. 31 — (CP) — The Prices Board moved Saturday to tighten the control through which demobilized servicemen get their "civvy" suits on the tight clothing market.

The board announced a new order effective Dec. 31 which "provides a general tightening up" in the use of suit priority certificates issued to servicemen to assure them of at least one civilian suit.

Board officials said the new order consolidated previous orders and amendments of the board and was considered necessary to simplify regulations, regarding purchase of "civvies" by veterans.

The order also abolishes the need for interim suit priority certificates, which were issued to servicemen due to be discharged as they might have a suit on leaving the service. The board said the fact priority certificates now were being issued on commencement of a serviceman's 30-day disembarkation leave precludes further issuance of interim certificates.

Three Robbers Escape After Looting Springbrook Garage

Interrupted as they were making their getaway after looting the Reginald McKeown garage at Springbrook, of a cash register, three unknown men made good their escape early Monday morning with only a few cigarettes for their trouble.

As the men were leaving the garage with the cash register they were accosted by Emerson Reid, nearby barber, who called to them. Firing a revolver the men dropped the cash register and sped southward in an automobile.

According to Provincial Police from Belleville who investigated the breakin, it appeared that three men had driven up in a car, two of them getting out and entering the service station office by way of a rear window as the car drove away to cover the noise. Later the car drove back as the two were emerging from the office with the cash register.

Disturbed by the noise of the two men leaving the garage, Mr. Reid glanced through his window but was unable to see because of the frosted pane. He pushed up the window and called to the men who dropped the cash register and disappeared in a car after firing one shot from a revolver.

Whether or not the shot was directed at him Mr. Reid could not tell police. He stated he did not know where the shot had gone as he had quickly got out of range.

Although it was still dark when the incident occurred, Mr. Reid was able to see the two men leaving the garage by the lumination of a street light at that point. He was unable, however, to see clearly enough to give police a good description of the men.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—The Toronto Stock market staged an active session today and the general price tone was strong. All four groups recorded index gains. The session ended at 12 noon to give brokers' staffs more time to pre-holiday preparations. Volume for the two-hour market was around 1,700,000 shares.

Liquor stocks featured the industrial section. Distillers Corporation Seagram advanced 11 points to 104, Hiram Walker gained 7 3/4 to 116 and Canadian Industrial Alcohol A firmed 2 points to 22. Alcohol B gained 1 3/4. Utilities, senior oils, papers and steels recorded a margin of gains over losses. Canadian Oil gained 7/8 and McColl 3/8. The Winnipeg Electric issues, Consolidated Bakeries, Eastern Steel, English Electric A, B.C. Pulp and Paper, Bruck Silk and Silknit all recorded substantial gains.

Some gold stocks changed hands in volume. Joliet-Quebec sold up to 1.38 and closed holding a small part of the gain. Hasaga firmed about 15 cents on good volume and other golds gaining 5 cents or more included Frobisher, Siscoe, Trans-Resources, Upper Canada, Buffadison, Conwest, Hedley-Mascot, Inspiration, Stadacona and Little Long Lac. Kirkland-Hudson lost 10, O'Brien 5, Preston 5 and Bear 7.

Sherritt-Gordon was again active on a small net gain, Mining Corporation added 10 cents, Labrador 5 and Lake Dufault 2. Nickel and Golden Manitou were other strong base metals.

WALL ST.

New York, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Liquors tried to rally today's New Year's Eve stock market but even the potables eventually slipped and scant stimulation was evident in other departments.

Pre-holiday apathy ruled from the start and declines of fractions to about two points were a shade in the majority near the 4th hour.

Mild profit cashing, year-end tax sales for "cash" and doubts regarding wide-scale labor strife served as the principal handicaps.

Falling tendencies were displayed by Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Kennecott, Schenley, National Distillers and Montgomery Ward. Resistant were American Distilling, Distillers Corp., Woolworth, American Telephone and American Waterworks.

Plus signs were numerous among Canadian issues at mid-day. Hiram Walker at that time was up two points while Distillers Seagrams gained 3/4. Lake Shore was off 1/8.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Dec. 31 —(CP)— Undertone to hogs was stronger and to sheep and lambs weaker and other classes were steady today on the livestock markets. Receipts: Cattle 751, calves 377, hogs 351, sheep 481.

In active trading, cattle were steady. There were no top steers. The best steers offered brought up to 13. Good quality offerings were 12-12.50. Medium 10-11 and common lights 8 up. Heifers 6.50-10.50, a few making 11. Good butcher cows 9.50-10 and common 6.50 up. Canners and cutters 5-6.25. Good bulls 9-10. Bologna bulls 6.50 up.

Veals ranged from 10 to a top of 15.50. Grassers and drinkers in mixed lots 6-9.50, mostly 9.50-9.60. Hogs were around 20 for Grade A. Sows 17-18.

There was a fair percentage of bucks on the lamb markets. Generally, offerings sold on a flat basis from 13-14, mostly 13-13.50. Sheep 3-8.

Question Males In Shaare Chessed Area in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Dec. 31 — (Reuters) —Palestine police today finecombed the Jewish quarter of Shaare Chessed here, removing to a detention camp for further questioning all males between the ages of 16 and 50.

Early reports of the search, which was covered by British troops who cordoned off the area, suggested that some equipment used by Palestine terrorists was found.

The search was covered by machine-gun units, while soldiers watched from rooftops and armored cars and Bren gun carriers patrolled the streets.

Mine detectors were also at work on waste land.

Jerusalem and Tel Aviv have been quiet, but official quarters were increasingly concerned about their inability to track down the terrorists responsible for Thursday's outbreak in which 10 persons were killed and 12 injured.

Jewish leaders have asked for lifting of the Jerusalem curfew, but so far the ban remains in force.

Nellie McClung Reviews Career in Latest Book

By JEAN THOMPSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Women with hobbies have brighter outlooks than those without them, Nellie L. McClung discovered in the early years of her married life in Manitou, Manitoba. Her own double hobby of consuming interest in public life and writing is vividly reflected in The Stream Runs Fast (Thomas Allen), the second volume of her autobiography.

Picking up the thread of her life where the first volume, Clearing the West, left off, Mrs. McClung carried her own story through almost 50 years, from 1896, the year she was married, to 1945 when she wrote the closing chapter of The Stream Runs Fast in her present home at Lantern Lane, near Victoria, B.C. She surveys her work as homemaker, crusader for women's right, Alberta legislator and author of eight books.

The book reflects the rugged life of the prairie and the women who make homes there. It carries with it the atmosphere of the land's "purple twilights, her phantom breezes, the smell of burning leaves, the ripe tints of autumn, the slanting snow . a land of sudden changes of weather and killing frosts."

There are human and heartening incidents — the reading of Dickens' Christmas Carol in Manitou Orange Hall, a draughty place heated by one stove in the middle of the room, the stirring of Mrs. McClung's ambition to be a public speaker after making an address of welcome to a W.C.T.U. convention and the successful petition to the privy council by five Canadian women headed by Judge Emily Murphy to have women declared persons.

No woman who reads The Stream Runs Fast can fail to be stirred by the sincerity and energy with which Nellie McClung approached every adventure and opportunity which her crowded life offered. Rich in experiences of Western Canadian life, this straightforward, modest book traces not only the years but also the growth of a philosophy of life based upon concern for others and the ideal of a better world.

Most of all, the book is witness to the author's conviction that "Canada is destined to be one of the great nations of the world and Canadian women must be ready for citizenship. No nation ever rises higher than its women."

FORMER HERO TO DIE

Paris, Dec. 31 (Reuters)—Jean Giot, 24, hero of Gen. Jacques Phillilipe Leclerc's Chad (Africa) force which ended its campaign in Alsace in eastern France, was sentenced to death on Friday by a Paris court after one of the strangest purge trials on record.

Charges against him concerned the arrest and torture of 60 French patriots, some of whom appeared in court to give evidence.

The prosecution said that in 1942 Giot joined a special brigade known for its cruelty in hunting down and torturing French patriots. In 1944 he enlisted in Gen. Leclerc's force and distinguished himself in fighting the Germans. Later in the fight for Strasbourg he lost both legs.

In a letter addressed to the court, Gen. Leclerc—who now commands French forces in the Far East—wrote: "Giot's heroic conduct has fully atoned for whatever accusations may be brought against him."

Dear Friends:

Nineteen Forty-five, with its triumphs and its troubles, is coming to a close.

Nineteen Forty-six, with its hopes and its promises, is just ahead.

It seemed to us that, as business resumes a more normal aspect, this would be a particularly happy time for us to make some public expression of appreciation to our suppliers for their splendid co-operation in the past difficult years.

You had many problems: Most of you tried to maintain some civilian production along with the production of war necessities all of you have been faced with stringent shortages in materials and labour, while the perplexities and embarrassments of a fair distribution of limited supplies was an added concern.. We think you did an outstanding job.

On behalf of our customers, our buyers and our entire Canada-wide organization, we wish you a good New Year with the hope that the same spirit of helpfulness will mark our relationship in the days ahead.

Big 3's Control Plan Said To Be Confusing Japanese

Tokyo, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Sources close to Gen. MacArthur reported today that the Big Three's new control plan for Japan already has caused confusion among the Japanese and may cause the General to lose face in a country where face is all important.

The control plan, which Gen. MacArthur bluntly stated yesterday had been made over his protest and behind his back, may result in a slacking of Japanese efforts to put into effect directives already issued — and which they had accepted only slowly and grudgingly — the sources said.

MacArthur's Statement.

Gen. MacArthur's 150-word statement said "the statement attributed to the Far Eastern Commission press officer (Thomas Blake in Washington) that I 'did not object to the new Japan control plan before it was approved at Moscow' is incorrect. On Oct. 31 my final disagreement was contained in my radio to the Chief-of-Staff for the Secretary of State, advising that the terms 'in my opinion are not acceptable.' Since that time my views have not been sought."

The General also denied that he had been consulted during the Moscow conferences. However, he concluded that "whatever the merits or demerits of the plan . . . the issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down . . . It is my fervent hope that there will be no insuperable obstacles . . . It is my full purpose to see it through."

A Headquarters spokesman said Gen. MacArthur "did not even know Japan was being discussed at Moscow until he saw it announced in the daily press."

Gen. MacArthur received his first word of the Moscow decisions from The Associated Press, which delivered its report of the communique to him. Hours later, the complete text came through.

The Moscow plan created a four-power council of the United States, Britain, China and Russia to advise Gen. MacArthur and review his actions and set up an 11-country commission to fix policies concerning Japan. The council has power to veto his policies. Although the General did not so state, it was believed here that his objection principally was to the veto power.

Japanese Ask Questions.

Although grudgingly, the Japanese have gone along with Gen. MacArthur as occupation boss. Now they are asking whether his past directives may be subject to review and whether they will be required to make a new start under the council setup.

NUERNBERG WITNESS

Lieut.-Col. Otto Skorzeny, daredevil parachute rescuer of Benito Mussolini from threatened capture by the Allies, and reputedly the would-be assassin of General Eisenhower during the Battle of the Bulge, enjoys an American cigarette in his cell in the witness wing of the Nuernberg jail. Skorzeny, who is 38, denies that Von Rundstedt sent him to kill Eisenhower and other high-ranking U. S. officers. He is appearing as a witness at trial of Nazi war criminals.

HITLER LEFT LEGACY OF HATE, REVENGE IN WILL

Adolf Built Himself Up As Martyr, Expelled Goering and Himmler From Nazi Ranks

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Hitler's last political testament, apparently prepared as Berlin tottered before the Russian onslaught, was revealed as a masterpiece of propaganda in which he built himself up as a martyr and bequeathed to the German people the Nazi creed of loyalty to state and hatred of Jews.

His final admonition was:

"Above all, I enjoin the government of the nation and the people to uphold the racial laws to the limit and resist mercilessly the poisoner of all nations, international Jewry."

The testament, dated April 29, 1945, also disclosed that Hitler expelled Reichsmarshal Goering and Gestapo Chief Himmler from the Nazi ranks for attempting to seize control of the state, and "negotiating with the enemy without my knowledge."

Text of the testament — together with texts of Hitler's will, an appendix to the testament by Propaganda Minister Goebbels and a document recording Hitler's marriage to Eva Braun — was released yesterday by Allied authorities.

Preferred Suicide.

Hitler's testament indicated he preferred suicide in a Reichschancellery bunker to trial before an Allied court.

"I shall not fall into the hands of an enemy who requires a new spectacle presented by the Jews to divert their hysterical masses," he said.

Urging Germans to keep alive Nazi doctrine, Hitler said the "establishment of a National Socialist state represents the work of centuries to come and obliges each individual person always to serve the common interest before his own advantage."

"The seed has been sown that will grow one day in the history of Germany to the glorious rebirth of the National Socialist movement," the document added.

Throughout the testament, Hitler built himself up as a martyr who wished to join in death the troops who had fallen on the battlefield.

"I cannot forsake the city that is the capital of this state," he

France Struggling to Regain Her Feet Economically Says Correspondent

Montreal, Dec. 31 — (CP)—A description of France as a country struggling to regain her feet economically was given today by Maurice Desjardins, correspondent of the French-language daily newspaper members of The Canadian Press who has just returned home to Montreal after seven months in Paris.

Desjardins arrived here Saturday from New York where he landed the previous day from the troopship Queen Elizabeth. Prior to his Paris assignment he reported for more than two years the training and battle experiences of French-speaking Canadian servicemen in the United Kingdon, Sicily, Italy and on the Western front.

"Helplessness, futility and despair are the characteristics of Paris today," Desjardins said in an interview in which he told of "a country choked by the reddest red tape ever registered on a color meter and the blackest black market."

"Some of the most severe restrictions in Europe are to be found in the French capital," Desjardins said, remarking that he was "spellbound" upon returning to a country "where you can obtain meat, bananas, olives, potatoes, cheese — practically anything you can name that you can't get in Paris."

He referred to "most intricate political controversies" and said each of the three major French parties is suspicious of the other. All parties, however, look to president deGaulle and the opinion of most Frenchmen is that the country is fortunate to have such a leader as a steadying influence.

"Petain and Laval have been relegated to the past," said Desjardins who was present at the trials of the Vichy leaders. "What France wants now is to get back on her feet economically and devaluation of the franc is the first step."

France still has many luxury goods, despite the lack of necessities, and Desjardins understood that De Gaulle is anxious for France to produce more and export more of these goods to bring money into the French coffers. The French, however, are being discouraged from buying such goods themselves.

Desjardins predicted a grim winter for France. When he left two weeks ago the prospects of sufficient fuel were dim and he expected there would be a repetition of last winter "when three and four families lived in the same room."

"The gravest problem, however, is the mass discouragement of youth," Desjardin said. "The majority of young men want to leave the country for they don't feel equal to the colossal task ahead of them. Canadian and American embassies are besieged by young men asking for visas.

"Old Frenchmen consider this deplorable but they don't blame the youth for they say there is no incentive to stay in France."

Desjardins' trip home was his second since he went overseas in September, 1942. He was back last winter during the lull on the Canadian army front, returning to the continent in time for the finish of the war.

SAYS CONFERENCE WILL CONTRIBUTE TO LASTING PEACE

Byrnes Declares Machinery Will Not Obstruct MacArthur in Control of Japan

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP) — State Secretary Byrnes prepared today for his fourth trip abroad in six months after telling in a broadcast why he believes his third trip contributed to lasting peace.

In his radio report last night on the Moscow conference of foreign ministers, Mr. Byrnes assured his listeners that new international machinery set up for control of Japan will not obstruct "the outstanding and efficient administration" of Gen. MacArthur. It will, he insisted, leave the United States in a top policy-making role.

The cabinet officer ignored a tartly-worded statement Gen. MacArthur issued in Tokyo earlier in the day in which the supreme commander said he had not been consulted during the Moscow talks and declared: "I have no iota of responsibility for the decisions which were made there."

Speaking from the conference room of the state department, Mr. Byrnes described how the United States, Russia and Britain reached agreement on issues involving Japan, atomic energy, peace treaties, China, Korea, Romania and Bulgaria.

He said too he and Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar Molotov of Russia almost agreed on a three-power commission to study problems in troubled Iran. He was "not discouraged" by the near-miss.

To Meet in London.

He might have said they will have another opportunity to agree on an Iranian policy in London at the first meeting of the United Nations assembly next month. That will be conference No. 4 for Mr. Byrnes in the half-year he has held the top cabinet position.

The Iranian government has said it will lay before the assembly its charges that the Azermiajan revolt was assisted by Russian occupation forces.

The state secretary declared frankly that some of the Moscow decisions "do not go as far as I should have liked." But he emphasized his belief that the agreements reached "should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands."

He also expressed confidence in the cumulative value of Big Three foreign ministers' meetings. The next one is scheduled to be held in Washington at an undecided date.

Mr. Byrnes went into greatest detail on the two Moscow decisions most discussed in Washington—the plans for governing Japan and controlling atomic energy.

Of Japan, he said the United States has planned from the beginning to make control of that defeated nation an Allied responsibility. He supported his contentions that the 11-country policy commission and the four-power control council would neither minimize the United States role, nor hamstring Gen. MacArthur.

KOREAN HOTHEADS THROW ROCKS AT U.S. SOLDIERS

Violently Protest Against Big Three's Five-Year Trusteeship Plan

Seoul, Korea, Dec. 31 —(AP)— Korean hotheads fought in the streets of Seoul and threw rocks at United States soldiers Saturday in violent protest against the Big Three's five-year trusteeship plan for their country.

Rightist speakers addressed a mass meeting which demanded immediate recognition of a Korean provincial government, called for a strike of Koreans employed by the United States military government, and branded opponents to the Independence-Now movement as traitors.

In an attempt to forestall more demonstrations against the trusteeship program, announced after the Russian - British - American conference at Moscow last week, United States military authorities who control southern Korea ordered an 8 p.m. curfew.

(There was no report of the Korean reaction to the program in northern Korea, where the Russians are in control.)

Koreans craving independence after nearly a half century as a colony of Japan, were inflamed by the Big Three program for a trusteeship by the United States, Russia, Britain and China while Korea learns to walk unaided among nations.

Huge posters on Seoul buildings charged the Communist party with responsibility for the trusteeship plan.

Hundreds of Koreans employed by the United States military government walked off the job; a mob attacked the office of a newspaper which Rightists declared had Communist leanings; banks closed and policemen left their posts.

A Communist party spokesman blaming the Rightists for the outbreaks, said all Leftist groups, including the Communists, had been advised to limit their actions to peaceful protests.

Lt.-Gen. John R. Hodge, American commander in southern Korea, explained to Korean newspapermen that the plan did not mean that trusteeship of their country would be imposed immediately.

Gen. Hodge said that the plan was drafted for Korea's own protection, and he gave his opinion that the nation's Patriots and Nationalists had nothing to fear from it.

And New Year's Day, the weather man opined cheerfully, will be more of the same.

MARTIN BORMANN REPORTED HELD IN BRITISH ZONE

Security Officers in Nuernberg Decline To Confirm or Deny The Report

Nuernberg, Dec. 31 (Reuters) —Czechoslovak newspapers reported today that Martin Bormann, Hitler's former deputy and one of the Nazi war criminals named in the Nuernberg indictment, had been arrested in the British zone of Germany.

Security officers here declined to confirm or deny the report and would not say whether, if Bormann had been arrested, he would appear with the 21 other major war criminals now on trial before the international tribunal in Nuernberg.

Bormann is being tried in absentia.

The trial resumes Wednesday after a Christmas and New Year's recess.

"If Bormann has been arrested we can say nothing until he is safely in jail," one security official said.

"His transfer here would probably involve a plane journey and then a secret trip in a strongly guarded vehicle."

One suggesiton here was that the mysterious man who was arrested by British intelligence officers with a copy of Hitler's testament in his possession was either Bormann or a man who gave information leading to Bormann's arrest.

This, it was thought, might be the reason why British intelligence officers were able to inform United States intelligence men of the whereabouts of Frederick Wilhelm Paustin, who was Bormann's adjutant and confidant.

William Mullen, 20, Found Crouching In Upstairs Closet

Alleged One of Four Youths Who Shot Jewish Merchant

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—Thin, pale and peaked, 20-year-old William Mullen, charged with the murder of Meyer Tobias, 54, North Toronto storekeeper who was shot to death Dec. 26, appeared in police court early today and was remanded until Jan. 7.

Police allege Mullen is one of four youths who killed Tobias after an attempted hold-up of his women's wear store failed. Also charged with murder in connection with the slaying are Donald Ernest Warner, 16, Edward James Martin, 18, and Howard Norman Urquhart, 19, who were arrested Friday night. They appeared in court Saturday and were remanded to the same date.

Mullen was captured Saturday night after a dramatic police manhunt that covered the city's east and central portions. He was found crouching in a closet at a Chisholm Avenue home and surrendered without a struggle.

2 Held as Material Witnesses

Arrested as material witnesses were Mrs. Noreen Blanche Watson, 20 and her husband Stewart Thomas Watson, 22. Both appeared in court today and were also remanded until Jan. 7. Police said Mullen went to the Watson home the night of the slaying and gave Mrs. Watson his pistol as a souvenir.

Bail for the two material witnesses who appeared today was set at $2,000.

Mullen said he had been in the army, but police said he had been discharged without going overseas.

armed robbery of a taxi-driver, John Clyde, Dec. 15.

Also picked up in a police dragnet Friday were Thomas William War, 18, and William Sidney Marshall, 18, charged with armed robbery, and Donald Mitchell, 19, charged with having an automatic pistol.

Ward, Marshall and Mitchell appeared in court Saturday with Warner, Martin and Urquhart as members of the East Toronto gang and were remanded to Jan. 7. None of the six was represented by counsel.

Traced to One Home.

As the youths were led out for the return trip to Don Jail, photographers' bulbs flashed on news cameras and one of the youths was heard to say:

"You'd think we were a bunch of criminals."

Police Friday traced Mullen to the Watson home but when they reached there he had left.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Watson were arrested as material witnesses and questioned about the gun. Mrs. Watson sent police on a wild goose chase by telling them she had thrown the gun into the Don Valley ravine. After the police had made a flashlight search of the ravine early Sunday morning, she told them her story was false. Police then searched the Pape Avenue home of Watson's grandmother and found the pistol hidden in a dunnage bag.

A second gun identified by police as having been used in the slaying was found Friday by children playing near a garage on Withrow Ave. A street cleaning department employee turned it over to police after discovering the youngsters playing with it.

Eluded Police for Hours.

Mullen told police after his capture that he had eluded them for hours in a desperate game of hide-and-seek Friday night and Saturday morning.

Later in the day the approach of a police cruiser interrupted him at a hasty meal at the home of relatives in East York. As he fled, a woman told police she had seen a man climbing a fence and running down a lane.

Dusk found him tramping aimlessly on a golf course. Then he walked to the main street and entered a greenhouse boiler room. He stayed there for some time and was on his way outdoors when he met Mrs. Welmar Haight, a former Canadian Women's Army Corps member, wife of the greenhouse owner.

Slouching Against Door

Mrs. Haight switched on her flashlight and caught him in its beam. She asked him: "What are you doing here?"

He was slouching against the door, smoking a cigaret.

"I've had a couple of beers and I guess I'm in the wrong place," the youth replied.

"I told him he had better get going down the lane," Mrs. Haight later related to police. "As he started to go, he asked me if that was Main Street out there. I said it was. He was quite nonchalant as he walked out, and he did not seem to be any the worse for liquor. Instead of turning on Main Street, he went across a field. My suspicions were aroused by this time and I telephoned police."

Within a few minutes two detectives struck out on the trail which led across the field. Footprints in the soft crust of snow led them over fences and across streets to a yard at the rear of a house on Chisholm Avenue. The cellar window of the house stood open.

Telephoned for Help

Sensing that the end of the hunt was in sight, the officers telephoned for reinforcements. As they waited, they peered through downstairs windows and saw no one in the lower part of the house.

When other policemen arrived, the detectives climbed through the cellar window, made a tip-toe search of ground floor rooms and started upstairs with guns at the ready.

A clothes closet on the second floor landing attracted their attention.

They whipped open the door and found the closet filled with women's clothing. A pair of shoes showed beneath.

"Come out," one officer ordered.

"All right, don't shoot," came a muffled reply, and Mullen emerged. Haggard and unkempt, he made no effort to resist as the police snapped on the handcuffs.

Admiral Stark Urged U.S. Entry Into War When Nazis Attacked Russia

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP) — Pearl Harbor investigators learned today that Admiral Harold R. Stark urged United States entry into the war when Germany attacked Russia, yet expressed hope that Russia and Germany "may break upon each other."

With Admiral Stark in the witness chair, the Senate-House committee investigating the attack that opened the Pacific war received a voluminous file of letters the 1941 chief of naval operations wrote to Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Pacific fleet commander, and others.

Many were personal, intimate, chatty—some so much so that Admiral Stark suggested the recipients burn them.

The letter concerning Russia was dated July 31, 1941, and was addressed to "Dear Savvy," the nickname of Capt. Charles M. Cooke, Jr., then attached to the Pacific fleet. Admiral Stark customarily used nicknames — Kimmel was "Dear Mustapha"— in his personal letters. He signed himself "Betty."

Admiral Stark began the Cooke letter by saying it would be short and should be burned after being shown to Admiral Kimmel. He wound up some 1,500 words later by saying he had decided to send copies to Admirals Kimmel and Thomas C. Hart, commander of the Far Eastern fleet.

In between, there were such statements as these:

"Within 48 hours after the Russian situation broke, I went to the president, with the secretary's approval, and stated that on the assumption that the country's decision is not to let England fall, we should immediately seize the psychological opportunity presented by the Russian-German clash and announce and start escorting immediately, and protecting the western Atlantic on a large scale; that such a declaration, followed by immediate action on our part, would almost certainly involve us in the war and that I considered every day of delay in our getting into the war as dangerous, and that much more delay might be fatal to Britain's survival.

"I reminded him that I had been asking this for months in the State Department and elsewhere, etc., etc., etc. I have been maintaining that only a war psychology could or would speed things up the way they should be speeded up; that strive as we would it just isn't in the nature of things to get the results in peace that we would, were we at war.

"The Iceland situation may produce an 'incident.' . . .

"We shall give aid to Russia. I hope she and Germany may break upon each other. Europe dominated by the Communists is no more an attractive picture, in fact less so, than a Europe dominated by the Nazis. Here's hoping we have neither, but rather that they exhaust themselves."

In a letter April 19, 1941, to Admiral Kimmel, Admiral Stark referred to a cruise by American warships to Australia. He quoted the late President Roosevelt as telling him: "Betty, just as soon as those ships come back from

OWNERS REQUESTED TO RE-REGISTER REVOLVERS

Although Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters early in the year asked for the re-registration of all revolvers there are still thousands of these weapons which have still not been registered by their respective owners, according to a circular received by local police authorities.

Dates for re-registration of revolvers had been set from March 1st to July 1st, 1945 and in keeping with R.C.M.P. feeling, local police consider there were many revolvers in the Quinte area which were not re-registered at this time.

Local police have been advised to check previous registration lists to ascertain those which have not been re-registered and urge all district residents having revolvers not registered to bring them immediately to police to have this attended to.

Business and Financial Outlook for 1946

By Roger W. Babson

1946 in a Nutshell

BONDS:	Steady	FOREIGN TRADE:	Competitive
BUILDING:	Increased	LABOR:	More Strikes
COMMODITY PRICES:	Mixed	REAL ESTATE:	Higher
COST OF LIVING:	Higher	RETAIL SALES:	Values Up
TOTAL BUSINESS:	Lower	RE-CONVERSION:	Increased
INFLATION:	Evident	STOCKS:	Higher
FARM PRICES:	Uncertain	TAXES:	Lower

POLITICS: President to take middle-of-the-road

1. The great event of 1945 was the ending of World War II. A great event of 1946 will be the start at harnessing atomic energy to bring about a new industrial era.

General Business.

2. A year ago the United States Babsonchart Index of the Physical Volume of Business finally registered 145. Today it is estimated at 128 justifying my forecast of a year ago. The Canadian Babsonchart Index of the Physical Volume of Business finally registered 205 a year ago; today it is estimated at 190. 1946 will show a further over-all decline in both United States and Canadian business. Furthermore, most of the following comments apply to both countries.

3. The re-conversion of industry from war to peace business will increase during much of 1946. However, time required for re-conversion will not be as great as most people believe.

4. Inventories, quoted both at their price values and their volumes, will increase during 1946. Both raw material piles and manufactured goods will be larger.

Commodity Prices.

5. Some rationing may continue through most of 1946; but it will rapidly be eliminated. Price restrictions will gradually be lessened.

6. The retail prices of most manufactured products will be higher during 1946 than at present. The prices of some of the food products may decline.

7. The unit sales of some department stores will begin to decline some time during 1946; but the sales of the food and variety chains may continue at peak figures.

8. The great question mark of 1946 will be how, to whom and at what price the government will dispose of its billions of dollars worth of unneeded supplies.

Farm Outlook

9. Pending a weather upset, more bushels of corn and wheat and more bales of cotton will be raised in 1946 than ever before in our history. Although some prices may slide off, the total farm income for 1946 should hold up fairly well.

10. There should be an increase in certain fruits, fish products and vegetables with a decline in prices. The U.S. will have more to eat in 1946 than in 1945. The per capita consumption should be 10 per cent above the prewar level of 1935-1939.

11. Dairy and poultry products will continue to increase in volume with no increase in price. There will be a great surplus of eggs; but fats, sugar and some canned goods will continue short.

12. Farmers will start in 1946 to work to extend legislation on their parity program due to fear of a postwar collapse in farm prices.

Taxes

13. Taxes will not be increased during 1946; and there may be further reductions. Some nuisance taxes will be eliminated altogether.

14. The Federal Debt will continue to increase during 1946, but I expect no War Bond Drives.

15. Whatever is done about taxes, the cost of living will continue to rise during 1946 due largely to increased wages.

16. Providing jobs for returning soldiers at satisfactory wages will be the big political task of 1946. There will be jobs for all, but not at the wages desired.

Retail Sales

17. The volume of retail sales will be about the same as in 1945. Sales of ladies' apparel and general luxuries will suffer, but many items now unavailable will be purchased.

18. The total dollar retail sales should exceed 1945 with an increased demand for woolen and cotton textiles.

19. There will be a great demand for men's clothing and especially for shirts with honest standard length "tails."

20. Wise shoppers will buy only what they need and not grab to stock up unnecessary supplies.

Foreign Trade

21. The United States will own over 50 per cent of the world's shipping in 1946.

22. We will make England and some other countries loans provided they will agree to spend a fair proportion of the money in the United States.

23. Both the British Empire and Russia will keenly compete for foreign trade during 1946; but cartels and government monopolies will be frowned upon.

24. Russia, Germany and England may try to "gang up" against the United States but we will fearlessly oppose such actions if they occur.

Labor

25. The Little Steel Formula will be forgotten during 1946. The year will be noted for strikes and labor troubles.

26. Industrial employment during 1946 will be off both in hours and in pay rolls, labor leaders' efforts notwithstanding.

27. Many industries, now operating on a forty-eight-hour week, will return to a forty or forty-five-hour week during 1946.

28. Hourly wage rates will increase, but "take-home" income will be less. Labor will demand better management and closer labor-management relations.

Inflation

29. The inflation Era which I have been forecasting for several years will be very evident in 1946. The purchasing power of the dollar will continue to decline.

30. Both wage and price controls will gradually be removed during 1946 until the government throws up its hands and lets nature take its course.

31. Some time after 1946, production will catch up with consumption, people will have spent their money and then there will be a surplus of goods. By 1950 there may be much unemployment. Then may come the severest inflation by Congress attempting to check the decline by printing currency. But this is something we need not worry about for two or three years.

32. If Stalin's health continues good, he will be the world's most powerful man in 1946 and may be a factor in determining world prices as well as production. The markets may even witness a "communistic scare" during 1946; but they should recover soon thereafter.

Stock Market

33. The rails will decline some time during 1946. Certain airplane manufacturing, shipbuilding and other war stocks may decline; but the Dow-Jones Industrial Averages will reach higher figures some time during 1946 than at present.

34. The safest stocks to buy — considering value, income and safety — will continue to be the merchandising stocks, especially chain store stocks.

35. 1945 saw a large increase in the demand for inflation stocks with a lesser demand for non-inflation stocks; but 1946 should witness both groups moving more or less together. Switching has been over-done in many cases.

36. Stock markets will continue to witness creeping general inflation, although the stock market as a whole may appear to have reached its peak before December 31, 1946.

Bonds

37. Although bank loaning rates should have an upward tendency, interest rates in general will remain low through 1946. The money supply is now 25 per cent above normal and government financing demands continued low rates.

38. Anticipating the expected decline in Federal taxes, 1946 should see a falling off in the price of most municipal and probably other tax-exempt bonds.

39. The high-grade corporation bonds may hold steady but sooner or later decline considerably. Whether this will start in 1946 I do not know. Investors will give more attention to diversification and staggering maturities during 1946.

40. More public utilities will be taken over by Municipalities and "Authorities" during 1946. Wise investors will consider this possibility when selecting public utility bonds. Some stocks such as "Eastern Utilities Associates Convertible Shares", in which I am personally interested, should be helped by public ownership.

Real Estate

41. Suburban real estate will be in much greater demand with higher prices during 1946.

42. City real estate should hold its own, excepting in the former congested war production areas where declines may set in.

43. Small productive farms will continue to increase in price; but large commercial farms may sell for less in 1946 than in 1945.

44. Building will show a considerable increase. Contracts will be up with advancing prices due to scarcity of lumber, cement, bricks and labor.

45. Office and residential rents during 1946 may be expected to increase.

46. 1946 may see the beginning of a real building boom. The pessimists will make little money in 1946.

Politics and Post-war Peace

47. President Truman may lose control of Congress, but he will try to take a middle-of-the-road position. I believe that all wise Republicans and Democrats should support his efforts.

48. Our foreign headaches will become worse and more frequent during 1946. What we are going through to reorganize Germany will be repeated in other countries.

49. The Latin American honeymoon has passed its peak. The attitude of Argentina will extend to other countries. Our South American troubles will increase during 1946.

50. 1946 will see more religious interest, including more church-going, than did 1945. People gradually are realizing that without a Spiritual Awakening no peace or other plans will be much good. Nations cannot be depended upon to co-operate and stick to their agreements unless they recognize God as their real Ruler and Guide.

Icy Pavements Cause of Grief For Large Trucks

Slippery pavement conditions on highway routes leading out of the city held more than a fair share of grief for Smith Transport trucks over the weekend with two of their tractor-trailer jobs being involved in accidents over the weekend.

Early Sunday morning when streets were a glare of ice as result of rain which fell during the night, a Smith transport driven by Russell McKinney of Toronto failed to make the grade on West Bridge Street hill and slid back down the hill to crash into the Denton residence at the corner of James and Bridge streets. Icy street condition prevented the driver from completing an attempted turn into James Street as he backed down the hill with result the truck crashed into the blank wall of the Denton building. No glass was reported broken but a portion of the wall was caved in about a foot.

Some time later there was a tie-up of vehicles on East Dundas Street when another Smith transport failed to make the grade and skidding back down the hill was struck in the rear by a Goodrich gasoline truck which was proceeding up the grade. Later a light panel truck driven by William J. Roberts of this city, bumped into the Smith truck when the truck went into a skid as the driver applied the brakes. Roberts was driving west on Dundas Street at the time.

Lack of sand on the grades was stated by drivers to be the cause of the accidents. In the latter mix-up only fender and other minor damage to vehicles resulted.

Purses Given Returned Vets

In connection with the annual Christmas concert at the town hall, Ameliasburg, the following returned veterans of World War II, were presented with an address and purses, also an inscribed card with name and rank. Sgt. W. Soble; Pte. A. Corfield; Gnr. O. T. Sills; Gnr. K. Wannamaker; Driver Archie Cannon; Pte. R. D. Kirby; Cpl. A. Masters.

Sgt. W. Soble thanked one and all of the vicinity, in a well-timed speech, for the purses for all, and voiced the thanks of one and all for the fine boxes sent overseas to them, while there, by the ladies of the Red Cross of Ameliasburg.

The thanks of the committee is also given to Mr. E. T. Casson of Ameliasburg for the fine inscriptions, in Old English, on the cards given with the purses.

Man and Woman Wanted for Forgery

Local police officers are on the look-out for two persons giving their names as Mr. and Mrs. William Sloan of Toronto, who within the past few days have victimized two city merchants and one local automobile dealer.

Expressing a desire to purchase a certain article in the store the man and woman would show a bank book on the Imperial Bank, Queen and Yonge Street Branch, Toronto, and would write a check covering the cost of the article. The checks in each case have been returned to the city declared as forgeries and it has now been determined that the bank book shown by the two persons had been stolen from its rightful owners. The bank book showed a very substantial balance.

Police stated the couple are driving a 1934 green Pontiac coupe bearing licence number 87-U-76 and described the man as being between 30 and 35 years of age, about five feet ten inches in height, of medium build and presenting a well dressed appearance in a beige coat. The woman is about five feet, two inches with dark hair and sharp features. She wears a black coat, but no hat.

In each case where Belleville business persons were victimized, the woman had written the checks.

Any information leading to the whereabouts of the man and woman would be appreciated by the local city police.

New York:—

Plenty of Idle Money Helped Boost Stocks to New Highs

By VICTOR EUBANK

New York, Dec. 31 (AP) — The big bull stock market, third longest on record, roared through 1945 to establish a string of 15-year average highs in the final months.

The list began its recovery from the war lows of 1942, and, despite frequent interruptions caused by technical and other factors, the direction has been upward ever since with volume and strength accentuated in the year just closed.

Reasons for the upsurge varied. Inflation psychology, predicated mainly on the fact that liquid assets of the United States in 1945 reached an historical aggregate; that there was more idle money than stocks or consumer goods, together with exceptionally low interest rates, probably furnished the principal prop.

The boosting of margins by the Federal Reserve Board during the year, with issues selling under $10 eliminated from the borrowing column entirely, made for a virtually cash market. The result was that stocks were bought and taken out of brokerage offices. This brought the "thinnest" condition in the memory of the financial sector. Jumps of $1 to $5 on single sales eventuated and fluctuations of $10 to $30 on the day became commonplace.

At the same time one analyst sized up the situation thusly: "We liquidated 90 per cent of the errors of 1929." He meant that, in the "era of wonderful nonsense" of 1929, the brokers' loans barometer hit a high of $8,549,383,979, most of which was used in the purchasing of stocks on margin. On April 1, last year, the total fell to a low of $831,917,170, of which a sizable proportion was for the acquisition of war bonds. The figure mounted in the latter part of the year as the Victory Loan drive broadened.

Overcame Peace Setback.

The momentum of the market during the last three years was shown by estimates that industrials, over that stretch, jumped approximately 125 per cent, railroads some 170 per cent and utilities about 130 per cent.

The market recorded its bottom of 1945 late in January as the end of the European conflict was foreshadowed and reconversion doubts touched off selling. The death of President Roosevelt in April failed to unsettle prices and a sharp rise quickly got under way when the new administration took over on the idea that business and industry might get a better break. Talk of Washington taking steps to stem speculation was blamed for some subsequent relapses.

Collapse of Germany saw considerable liquidation due to the feeling that the forthcoming corporate transition period might depress earning appreciably. The retreat was brief. There was another drop in July as the Japanese wobbled. Again trends soon negotiated a comeback when Russia entered the war. Reception of the Nipponese surrender on August 14 was comparatively steady.

The advance really got going in the last quarter with heavy speculation in low-quoted utilities dominating the ticker tape and putting many daily turnovers well above the two million share total. Later steels, motors, rails, liquors, mail orders, rubbers, coppers, aircrafts and specialties attracted strong demand although gathering strikes and price-wage controversies occasioned subsequent stumbles.

Throughout the year the curb emulated the big board but with greater relative activity. Aided by large-scale dealings in penny warrants, this market in one November session exceeded the number of shares changing hands in the stock exchange. The curb volume in the week of November 17, of about 8,000,000 shares, was one of the largest in the annals of the district.

Canadian Industrial and Gold Stocks Up 32 Per Cent in 1945

By ALEX PRINGLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP) — The stock market's upward cycle, starting in 1942 when the war turned against Germany, is progressing with apparently unabated confidence as it enters its fourth year. During 1945 prices were highest in eight years.

A sign of the times is the current high bid of $60,000 for a seat on the Toronto Exchange, just about five times the price paid in 1942. Share turnover on the exchange in 1945 totalled 436,000,000 shares, compared with 38,805,347 shares in 1942. The record volume since the exchanges were amalgamated in 1934 was chalked up in 1936 at 450,848,705 shares valued at $699,261,852. Stocks traded in the last year were valued at about $600,000,000.

Brokers' loans, made chiefly on the security of stocks owned by the brokers' customers and indicating the extent of marginal trading have expanded in the last three years from around $6,000,000 to about $36,000,000.

The advance achieved by industrial listings on the Toronto Exchange in 1945 equalled 32 per cent which may have been a record for the group. Many stocks more than doubled their final 1944 prices with leaders appearing in the food, paper, utility and liquor groups. Industrials as a whole posted new high index prices in evry month of the year with exception of July and August.

The gold share listings also advanced 32 per cent, as measured by the index, setting their high point in November. From the high of 142.56 the market slipped back in December to 136.85, but there was a tendency in the final sessions of the year to recover the lost ground.

Pennies Active.

The index advance did not reflect fully the appreciation of prices for the gold group as a whole. Heavy trading in recent months was in issues not included in the index group. These are largely the so-called drill-hole stocks and the shares of new mines preparing to start operations underground. Some of this list show gains of 200 to 300 per cent or more.

Advancement made in probing the Yellowknife and Red Lake fields brought a lot of action into the market and several stocks representing these fields are now front-line traders. In 1945 the Toronto Exchange listed 84 new stocks and more than 75 per cent of them were new golds.

Base metal stocks had a setback when the war ended on the assumption that the market for copper would fade out for a time. Of late, however, the news has suggested the British market will absorb considerable Canadian copper in 1946 and share prices consequently have shown a tendency to recover.

From the June index high of 87.13, base metals weakened to 78.86 by the middle of September. From that level it recovered to show a new high for the year at 89.81.

Western oil stocks had an off year, trading at a dull tempo most of the time and showing a price appreciation over the year of only nine per cent. They posted their high price level early in November and the low last January.

Available Grain Supplies In Canada Smallest in 10 Years

By GEORGE FINLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Dec. 31 (CP) — Problems of war ended, Western Canada's farmers have turned to a peacetime production program to meet demands of home and overseas trade in 1946.

Grainmen have accepted Dominion government proposals for a program holding the west's vast wheat acreage at the 1945 level, but an immediate problem is Canada's export position.

Supplies available in Canada are the smallest in ten years, and a wheat shortage before the next crop is harvested is a possibility. It is possible the carry-over at the end of the next crop year, July 31, 1946, may be less than 75,000,000 bushels. The carry-over at the end of the last crop year was only 258,394,000 bushels of wheat and the new crop added available supplies totalled about 567,000,000 bushels. Canada's wheat has been moving into world markets at the rate of more than 40,000,000 bushels a month.

Production in 1945 fell far short of the big wartime yields. For all-Canada the total was 308,600,000 bushels of wheat, compared with 435,500,000 in 1944. The prairies produced 284,000,000 against the 1944 total of 410,600,000. Coarse grains also showed a sharp decline in yield.

Farmers, with supplies still to market, hold the key to the export picture. Feed requirements and prospects for the 1946 harvest are other factors in a complex problem.

Moving toward export channels, record lake shipments were made from Port Arthur and Fort William in the 1945 navigation season. Shipments of all grains totalled 483,732,469 bushels compared with 455,964,184, in 1944.

Fed Europe.

Millions of bushels of grain have left Canada's shores, to feed starving millions in Europe; to re-fill war-empty bins in the United Kingdom and for far away India. Shipments have been made from ports on the east and west coast, and trade through the port of Vancouver, halted by war, was resumed with the commerce of the Pacific freed.

Throughout the growing season the Prairies were plagued by weather hazards, drought taking a heavy toll in sections in Saskatchewan and Alberta with crops retarded by unfavorable conditions during the spring planting season.

Trading in wheat remained suspended on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, the marketings since 1943 being handled through the Canadian Wheat Board, but open trading in rye futures held attention late in the year with price records established. The December future advanced to $2.02 a bushel, the highest price in 25 years. In December, 1944, it was $1.06¼ a bushel. Short supplies brought keen buying, with United States buyers the chief purchasers.

Farmers' cash income showed a sharp decline in 1945, with the wheat crop valued at $326,000,000, a drop of $133,600,000 from 1944. But the heavier crops of earlier war years brought debt easement to many farmers, diverting cash incomes to channels of commerce.

Growers have been guaranteed by the Dominion government a long-term floor price of not less than $1.00 a bushel, and they will also share in any profits on export sales. Wheat for export is sold at $1.55 a bushel, basis No. 1 northern at Lake Head terminals, well below present world prices.

The production program for 1946 calls for a wheat acreage of 23,414,100 acres with Prairies' acreage set at 22,566,000 acres. Barley acreage has been set at 8,000,000 acres, an increase of 650,000 acres, to meet export demands, but other grain acreage will show little change.

Industrial World Moves To Supply Demands of Peace

By ALEX PRINGLE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP) — This was a year of sail-trimming to the dangers and opportunities of sudden squalls for Canadian business.

The end of the war in Europe, the atomic bomb, bringing on the collapse of Japan a year sooner than was anticipated, the need for quick conversions of plants back to the demands of a peacetime population, the shortages of skilled help and the growing demands of labor for wage increases under a price ceiling economy kept the captains of industry thinking hard and shifting nervously.

Almost overnight the clear sailing in the sea of war orders and cost-plus returns was ended and the fight for profits in a competitive market and falling national income was one. For about two-thirds of the year business operated under almost full war conditions but in the final four months the war business faded out and production figures dropped sharply in some lines. Nevertheless authoritative estimates place the volume of business at the year end down only about 15 per cent from the figures for the end of 1944.

Manufacturing generally continued throughout the year the slow slump that started in 1944, interrupted by a short-lived rally in the spring of 1945. Plans for a flying start on motor-car production at the cessation of hostilities were snarled by the strike in the industry that began in September, affecting likewise dozens of plants producing accessories.

Had it not been for this development, over-all production had a good prospect of climbing out of the year-long decline late in 1945. The November drop in the total of production was the smallest since the end of the war.

Labor Problem.

The total of unemployed in Canada is still growing and is likely to expand further before there is any construction. It is estimated that the first two months of 1946 will see the low and the start of an upturn as the conversion of plants to the production of civilian needs becomes an accomplished fact. Year-end reports indicate there were about 100,000 more workers than jobs with close to 40,000 ex-servicemen seeking employment. The situation was said to be more favorable than had been expected. Since V-J Day 350,000 war workers and 250,000 discharged ex-servicement have been thrown on the labor market.

National income has, of course, declined in recent months but the heavy distribution of money to discharged men has helped to maintain consumer purchasing at a high level. Retail trade was estimated to be eight per cent greater in 1945 than in 1944.

Iron and steel production recorded minor declines. Pig iron production in the first 10 months of 1945 totalled 1,508,100 tons compared with 1,566,500 tons in 1944, a drop of 3.7 per cent and steel production of 2,451,100 tons in the same period was down 2.5 per cent.

Shoe manufacturing plants achieved production greater by 7 per cent than in the previous year and the textile mills held at a high rate of production close to the peak 1944 figures.

Farm income was off about 10 per cent from the 1944 total to an estimated $1,500,000,000 despite the higher price level. Nevertheless the total was the second best in Canada's history. Having greatly reduced their mortgage obligations in the last two years, farmers possibly found their net income improved in 1945. Cattle marketings increased 34 per cent and hog marketings were down 30 to 35 per cent.

Mining Awaits Manpower.

The mining industry is still hampered by a shortage of help but the growing surplus of manpower should soon right that situation. Mineral production for 1945 was down about 10 per cent from the $485,800,000 total of 1944. There was a smaller production of nickel, copper, zinc and gold. Production of gold showed a drop of about 10 to 12 per cent but the final period of the year brought signs that the low had been reached and that gold production could be expected to expand in future. There also were indications in the final weeks of the year of an early improvement in the demand for copper and nickel for civilian needs.

Lumbering is also restricted by the help shortage although it is estimated there are thousands more men in the bush this winter than last. In Ontario and the eastern provinces the increase is estimated at 2,500.

Newspring plants continued their high level of production in 1945, turning out 3,250,000 tons, a gain of nearly nine per cent over the 1944 production. Exports of newsprint for eleven months of 1945 totalled $163,610,000, a gain of 13 per cent over the total for the corresponding months of 1944.

Building proceeded on a large scale. Contracts awarded showed a total greater by 30 per cent than in the preceding year and the total of permits issued was up 45 per cent. Cement production increased 15 per cent.

Sea fisheries expanded sharply when the war ended. The landed value of the haul was about 70 per cent more than the total for the previous year.

Canada's external trade was sharply affected by the conlusion of hostilities. The total of exports and imports for the year was down about nine per cent from 1944. Exports in the first 11 months totalled $2,983,504,000 compared with $3,173,074,000 in the same months of 1944, a drop of six per cent.

Railway carloading declined narrowly in recent months, showing a loss of about 1.5 per cent for the year and railway revenue suffered correspondingly.

New Year's

New Year's brings the dawn of another year, the first to open in the era of peace. Early in the year all members of the Canadian armed forces will be back home except for the occupational forces. This new twelvemonth will show clearly the signs of the new times. Former servicemen will be back in the civilian life of the Dominion. The entire country with other countries of the world will be making strides in the first peacetime year. Wartime restrictions will likely be lessened.

It will be a year in which people will seek to begin to enjoy the fruits of peace and security won in the great struggle of 1939-1945. This new twelvemonth carries with it a sense of expectancy with a new meaning to everyone.

For the first time since January 1st. 1939 the familiar salutation will be voiced without the undertone and restraints of the feeling of wartime. "Happy New Year" becomes an actuality with a message for everyone. People are looking for the return to many things they enjoyed and appreciated before 1939 and 1941. They too are looking for continuance of the growth which was seen even in the period of war. The new year will bring the building of many new houses to satisfy the demand which has been so great during the war and since the war's end.

Canadians look forward with the brightest hopes for the future and at no time do they feel this prompting of hope so much as at the opening of a new year and especially a year which is the first year of peace in over six years. They are taking on their task with their full strength and hope that the new year will be one of progress and expansion, the filling of many needs and the satisfaction of many desires. From the standpoint of New Year's the people of Canada feel optimistically of the coming era.

Momentous Year Ends

The year's turn has come and 1945 goes out taking with it a record of history-making events which will for generations be known to the world of the future. 1945 saw the salvation of the world from tyranny and the aggressions.

When New Year's 1945 came while it was expected that the Second Great War would soon come to an end, no one could have foretold how suddenly it would come in June in Europe and in August in the Far East. 1945 was the year of the atomic bomb, the first harnessing of atomic energy. The invention may exert a mighty influence upon the course of history for it is believed its potentialities are so great that it may be the end of war.

So 1946 comes with the war over in the two spheres of conflict and will no doubt be a year of great discussions such as might be expected to follow a world war, and the beginning of an era of peace following the end of the most farspread war of history.

1945 gave such inspiration as the sudden ending of German military might and the crack-up of German militarism and Nazism and the sensational passing from the world scene of leading Nazis, Hitler, Goebbels and Himmler and others who ended their lives. 1945 saw the beginning of trials of enemy leaders charged with the offences as war criminals. Much has been done with the prosecution and the major German leaders are being tried. Into the year 1946 is now projected the continuance of this great trial which will have an abiding influence upon humanity's course and may have much to do with the prevention of war since the United Nations are making very definite what their views are in regard to nations and men who deliberately waged war for the sake of aggression. On the other hand the dictators who spread the policy of aggression are gone, both passed out in shame and ignominy, Mussolini by execution at the hands of Italian patriots and Hitler dying by his own hand after scenes in the last days of Berlin with no semblance of honor about them. Both endings of both aggressors were an apt commentary on the lives of evil these men had led.

The year 1945 saw the United Nations serving humanity well, crushing the two villainous enemies, the German Nazis and Japanese militarists and offering the world hope of a peace that will endure. The United Nations are taking their task seriously as the recent meeting of the Big Three foreign ministers at Moscow shows. Here there is revealed what is a definite effort to see unitedly in the case of problems that are bound to come up at the close of so great a struggle and in the future. Every effort is seen being made towards international understanding. Such an achievement follows the disappearance from the earth of the tyrannous forces which Germany and Japan sent forth into the world. The atomic energy problem will be placed under United Nations organization commission.

Now there is seen evidence of mutual trust and its importance. How different is this from the world which Hitler and Japan tried to create, a world of tyranny and return to savagery and uncivilized forces! The world feels a sense of great relief at the success of the Moscow meeting.

1946 comes with the world facing many problems and seeking understandings. It comes to a world which has the making of a new era. One of the immediate great tasks is the rehabilitation of Europe's nations which have escaped the hands of the aggressors. A hard winter is pressing these peoples but the rest of the world is lending a helping hand in their dire straits. 1946 brings great hopes because great hopes must come out of the Allied triumphs over the tyranny and benighted ideas of Germany and Japan.

1945 lived up to the hope of mankind, it brought victory and great hope for the world.

Plowshares Plus

(New York Herald Tribune)

It used to be that on the attainment of victory we beat our swords into plowshares. But times have changed, whether for the worse is a question which the reader can decide for himself. Let him consider that very shortly he will have the opportunity of buying a midget washing machine calculated to launder automatically half a dozen diapers while mother bathes the baby, or a choice of eight face towels, four bath towels, four men's shirts, one pair of work pants or 12 pieces of woman's lingerie.

The capacity varies with the make and size. But all models are portable and can be stuffed into an overstuffed apartment of one or two rooms with bath or into the luggage compartment of a family automobile picnic-bent. It may be that not all the manufacturing companies about to market these interesting gadgets were turning out lethal weapons in the late war, but one, we have been told about has reconverted from producing aircraft landing gear and hydraulic jacks.

Somehow the civilization we face seems to be epitomized in this transition. We still need plowshares, to be sure — more than all the swords (even including those worn by Japanese officers) could supply us with the materials for. And, meanwhile, we also need midget washing machines, perhaps even more so, which can be beaten out of aircraft landing gear and hydraulic jacks, whose abundance is far greater than that of swords. Indeed, we are lucky in the vast variety of gadgets for peace use that, besides plowshares, can be beaten out of the instruments of mechanized warfare.

YEAR'S END

Farewell and Hail! and so it goes,
The old year coming to a close;
The new, with its tomorrows all,
Already at the entrance hall.

Farewell unto the dying year,
And scarcely time to shed a tear
Before the new is ushered in
And all the welcoming cheers begin.

Farewell! In just a few hours more
The old joins all the years before.
Then hail! Forget what's come and gone!
The show called Life must still go on.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 31ST, 1895

A severe wind storm broke over the city about one o'clock this morning, accompanied by snow and sleet. The telephone and telegraph linemen were kept busy all today repairing lines. The telephone line between here and Picton is down and all through this section more or less confusion of the lines prevails. The wind made things lively at Rathbun's lumber yard, the lumber being blown in all directions. The same took place at Bolton's lumber yard. Small trees and innumerable branches were blown down and fences were levelled all over the city. Several citizens had exciting experiences this morning; a member of the Intelligencer staff was picked up by the wind, carried across the street and dashed against a barn. He sustained several cuts and bruises. A young man was coming up Front Street when a young lady was blown into his arms and they were carried along together for some distance. The water in the bay is white with foam and dashing high upon the shores. A portion of the roof of the old Grand Junction Railway Station, now occupied by McCargar and Brenton cheesemen was blown off.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By the Ottawa Bureau of The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Dec. 31—(CP)—The handling of awide range of international and domestic problems is evpected to make 1946 one of the most active years Canadian parliamentarians and government officials have had to face.

A delegation of cabinet ministers, parliamentarians and government officials will participate in the United Nations general assembly conference opening in London Jan. 10.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner now is in Britain surveying the possibilities for continued trade markets in Britain. He will be joined later by Trade Minister MacKinnon and senior officials of the trade department. They are expected to be absent one month.

The co-ordinating committee of the Dominion-Provincial conference meets Jan. 28 and there is no indication yet as to how long the meetings will last. These talks are to be followed by loan negotiations between Canada and the United Kingdom.

When the lona negotiations are completed trade talks are expected to be started.

A general peace conference is scheduled to be held before May 1 and Prime Minister Mackenzie King and top officials are said to be most certainly in attendance.

The United States is scheduled to urge the United Nations organization to hold a world trade and employment conference in June. If such a conference is held Canada will send representatives.

The organization is expected to set up a commission to control the use of atomic energy and Canada is to be a member of that commission when she is not a member of the security council.

The International Monetary Bretton Woods agreement is ex- organizations set up under the pected to call a meeting for the election of officers and for the purposes of putting the proposed monetary stabilization machinery into operation.

The handling of Japanese and German peace surrender terms likely will be causes for other international meetings at which Canada might be invited to participate.

There has been no official suggestion of an Empire conference during 1946, but some look on it as a possibility.

On the home front, the government will be faced with problems arising out of the demobilization of the armed forces and the building of peacetime services. As more materials and manpower become available, the government is expected to undertake much of the work put off during the war.

CORNWALL'S WELCOME

Cornwall, Dec. 31 (CP)—Cornwall gave a tumultuous reception Saturday to the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, home after nearly 4 1-2 years of service overseas. Officials had asked citizens to greet the unit along the parade route or at the armories, but a large crowd gathered at the station.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—Preservation of world peace is a burning issue in this Britain which so recently was at bloody grips with the Nazi monster, and the debate has been given fresh impetus by the auspicious Big Three parley in Moscow and the impending meeting of the United Nations Organization Assembly here.

One of the most unusual approaches to this subject I've encountered comes from Sir Richard Paget, distinguished British scientist, with whom I discussed the matter. He holds that peace depends primarily on the solution of two problems, one economic and the other judicial, and on the economic side his ideas are a sizzling challenge to "economists."

"The economic problem" he told me, "is that of discovering the best 'machinery' for enabling every nation to use and distribute their wealth producing powers—that is, their power to produce goods and render services — to the utmost and to exchange their surplus wealth with other communities which need them, without artificial restriction of any kind.

"This will need many changes in the present economic system and can, I believe, only be arrived at by an intensive scientific research to be carried on by teams of the most intelligent economists, statisticians, psychologists, historians, legal experts, etcetera, working with the same freedom, team spirit and intensity as that which produced the atomic bomb.

No Answer to Problem

"At present it is not an exaggeration to say that nobody in the world knows how the problem of the production and distribution of real wealth could be handled. Man's powers of production have completely outstripped his "orthodox" methods of handling the problems of exchange and distribution of real wealth by means of monetary tokens, etc. A better and more scientific method is urgently required.

"Thus it is obviously crazy that the world's best metal for fine craftsmanship—gold—should be laboriously extracted from the earth at great expense of manpower and then be reburied in the vaults of the national banks. Gold should of course be used for the development of a real 'golden age' by the world's finest craftsmen.

"It is equally crazy that the great manufacturing nations should be constantly striving to export more goods and services than they import, and that any sudden accretion of real wealth should be looked upon as a national danger, to be guarded against by tariffs.

"In this particular case the reason is clear. The increase of real wealth is not automatically accompanied by a corresponding increase in the tokens of real wealth that is, money or credits, so as to enable the new wealth to be consumed by the community which has received it. Hence such tragic anomalies as the burning of "'surplus' wheat, the plowing in of cotton, the throwing of 'miraculous draughts of fishes' back into the sea.

"So long as tariffs, currencies and monetary questions are dealt with as matters of international politics and rivalries there is little hope that a rational and scientific solution will be found, and the risk of future wars will continue to increase.

"Intensive scientific research might find the proper solution in two or three years—instead of 20 or 30, if ever."

Sir Richard believes that the judicial problem is one of discovering a method "that of selecting from among all the nations a panel of men and or women of the greatest wisdom, courage, clarity and impartiality, to form a world supreme court to which all nations would be willing to submit their gravest differences and accept without question the decision of the court."

This world-panel, he said, should be made strictly on the merits and without any question of national representation.

"With the discovery of a rational economic system and a truly impartial world supreme court," he declared, "the prospects of world peace would be very good."

Mental torpor! That was no doubt the reason why it never occurred to me that your description of the common complaints of persons with iodine deficiency was the very spit and image of myself— constant tired feeling and no refreshment from rest or vacations, lack of former ambition, bleak and melancholy outlook, accumulation of slacker flesh, mental torpor, tendency to doze off even among cheerful friends and to lie abed too long, and especially poor memory — this was so noticeable that all my friends wondered if I was getting old prematurely My comeback since I began taking the Iodine Ration is the occasion of constant amazement and no little envy on the part of my friends. In fact most of the ladies I meet these days vow they are going to begin right away . . . . (Mrs. A. E. W.)

Whoa, Topsy! Now, Ma'am, all I ask you in return for any benefit you may have received from the Iodine Ration, is that you refrain from getting me in wrong with your friends. I do hope your alertness of mind and your memory may have improved enough to make you clearly conscious of the fact that the Iodine Ration is not medicine, but just food, nutritional material which is essential for health—that is enough to say here, without going into detail for which we haven't space. You and your friends must take the Iodine Ration, if you take it at all, wholly upon your own responsibility—I can't say at your own peril because I'm convinced there is no peril involved in any instance. But just try to remember that I do not offer any one any assurance or guarantee of any effect from the Iodine Ration. I tell what I know and believe about it, in the pamphlet "The Iodine Ration"—available on written request (no clipping will suffice) if you provide stamped self addressed envelope—and it is entirely up to the poor geek who reads the pamphlet to take it or let it alone.

I repeat here what I have said many times before: In my opinion—and I'm still just a common, one-horse-and-Whitfield - low - sill-patent-leather - dash-rubber-tired-buggy— yes, sir, genuine cushion tires, too—practitioner—in my opinion, for what it may be worth to you, every man, woman and growing child in the North American continent who is not or should not be under the care or treatment of a physician should take a suitable daily ration of iodine to supplement the inadequate amount of iodine present in the water, soil and food grown on the soil in most regions of this continent. Furthermore I believe the regular daily intake of an iodine ration as described in my pamphlet can do no harm even if you happen to get enough iodine in the water you drink, the food you eat or the iodized salt you use in place of ordinary salt.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Wait For Me

Does the milk of cows fed on hay and grain grown on soil with a low limestone content, or the meat of pigs fed on corn grown in limestone-poor areas, contain less calcium and phosphorus than standards? (A. F)

Answer—Huh? Why bring up such worries? I'm sorry, but I haven't any scientific knowledge, have noticed no studies in nutrition literature, and, until now, have assumed that the calcium and phosphorus content of milk is practically constant everywhere. Neither pork nor beef is a significant source of calcium and phosphorus. Milk is the best source of both, for infant, youth, adult or aged person.

Hospital Spreads Disease

Believe your advice about having babies at home is good sense. Friend's new-born baby broke out with dreadful contagious impetigo in the hospital, and there were several other cases there at the time. (Mrs. C. H. E.)

Answer—That is unpleasant, but one of the least of the hazards of hospital delivery and confinement, as compared with the safety of home delivery and confinement.

Late to Learn

This will be our first child, so we want to learn all we can before the bundle arrives next June. Twenty cents (clean) inclosed, with stamped self addressed envelope, for booklets "Preparing for Maternity" and "Brady Baby Book." (J. & D. S.)

Answer—I suppose it is never too late to learn, but it seems too bad your education was neglected in your grade school and high-school years.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are civilian clothes called "muftis?"

When a person in the military or naval service dons civilian dress (civvies) he is said to be "in mufti."

"Mufti" pronounced "MUFF-tee") in the sense of "plain clothes" as distinguished from a uniform came to us by way of the British army in India.

It is an Arabic word literally meaning "magistrate" and is the title of a chief expounder of Mohammedan law.

Formerly the chief judge of Islam at Constantinople was known as the Grand Mufti. He was the real head of the Mohammedan religion in the Ottoman Empire, and, with the body of learned theologians known as the "Ulema," constituted the theocratic element of the Turkish government.

The principal Mohammedan judge in any country, district or city was also known as a grand mufti. For instance, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem was the head of the Pan-Islamic movement.

Strictly speaking, Islam has no church organization, clergy or liturgy, and the muftis are merely highly respected authorities on Moslem law to whom the Mohammedan judges of the ecclesiastical courts apply for expert opinion.

Just how "mufti" acquired the slang or colloquial sense of "civilian clothes" is not clear.

The conventional attire of the Oriental mufti formerly consisted of turban, loose, flowing robes and sandals.

In "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" (1670) Moliere, the great French writer of comedies, portrayed a mufti on the stage dressed in a plain dressing gown, smoking cap and slippers.

It appears that when British officers in India dressed informally their costume was compared to that of the muftis.

Later the term came to be applied to any civilian clothes worn by a person who ordinarily wears a military uniform.

END OF WAR FAILS TO EASE BRITISH FINANCEPROBLEMS

Market Bullish Despite Government Change But Many Factors Complicate Switchover to Peace Footing

Written for The Canadian Press
by GEORGE ABRAHAMSON

London, Dec. 31 (CP) — Britain's financial problems have been accentuated, rather than eased, by the end of the war and the switchover to peace conditions.

To reconcile the rival claims of housing, export trade and industrial reconversion against the background of limited supplies of goods calls for the utmost care in the allocation of long-term funds.

With the Bank of England nationalized and thus in form as well as fact under treasury control and a national investment board to decide priorities for competing claimants for capital, the chancellor of the exchequer will be well-equipped to cope with technical problems.

But there is widespread belief that the nationalization of basic industries and the conversion of higher-interest loans by the new Labor government under Prime Minister Attlee will complicate the technical difficulties.

Financial interests took the change of government in stride. The upward swing in stock prices which began with the end of the European war has continued and in early December the industrial shares index was at all-time record levels.

Expenditure on war services passed its peak two years ago and has been declining since then, but the end of hostilities brought no immediate sharp drop. Late in November the supply branches still needed £15,000,000 ($67,500,000) daily. Tax relief must therefore wait until the next fiscal year and the treasury's floating debt keeps increasing.

Demobilization and the reaction from wartime austerity have raised home market sales so that, despite substantially unchanged prices, the banknote circulation has risen by one-eighth from 1944 and banking turnovers show a correspondinfg expansion.

Continue Controls.

To keep the increase in home sales in check, the government is relying on proven wartime policies; stabilization of the cost-of-living by such methods as rent control, food subsidies and the extension of the "utility" range of textiles and household goods at closely calculated prices; and retention of the purchase tax to lessen the demand for other merchandise until supplies increase.

To meet its financial needs the treasury still depends on borrowing for approximately half the government expenditure. The cheap-money screw is being turned tighter. The rates for bank and treasury bills have been cut by one-half of one per cent and medium and long-term rates are likely to follow soon.

In the field of foreign currency the end of lend-lease necessitated immediate sharp retrenchment since the new Anglo-American financial agreement took months to complete. In the sterling bloc a similar abrupt termination of wartime arrangements was avoided, and the European countries linked to sterling before the war have shown their willingness to resume their former close cooperation with the United Kingdom.

The big gap in Britain's balance of trade and payments revealed by post-war trade returns and the accumulation of large sterling accounts in London by the Dominions and Empire countries will call for special settlements even if the 50-per-cent increase in export volume sought by the government is achieved.

During 1945, however, these problems of domestic and foreign finance did not attain their full extent and for the future it is anticipated that the government's powers will prove extensive enough to keep the supply of finance in line with any big changes which may occur in the direction and volume of production.

United Kingdom Hopes To Treble Overseas Trade

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 31 (CP) —Bottlenecks in the supply of manpower and material and the need of continued large scale production of war supplies for British armies around the world are plaguing industry in the switchover to peacetime output.

The restocking of British homes after six years of war and the recapture of world trade markets disrupted by hostilities both are being delayed.

Completion of the Washington loan negotiations is expected to result in amelioration of the materials situations but labor shortages will continue for months.

Nearly 5,000,000 men and women have dropped out of the armed services and munitions work as the year ends but half the number are needed to replace those who retire from work altoservices will still be 2,000,000 short of their pre-war labor.

Basic industries and construction—the latter concentrated primarily on urgently-needed housing—are getting more than their normal share. Manufacturing industries which provide most of Britain's export goods will remain short-handed.

The government's announced gether. Civilian industries and export target is an increase in volume by 50 per cent over 1938. During the third quarter of this year shipments abroad totalled £98,600,000 ($442,700,000). just under one-half of 1938 when compared on a volume basis.

Thus exports still must be trebled to meet the official target.

Shortage of Help.

Despite the statement by Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, that "good progress" has been made in the change to peace production, complaints of the slowness of reconversion have been coming in from all parts of the country.

Shortages of suitable help is everywhere termed the principal bottleneck, even though considerable localized unemployment has been caused by cancellation of munitions contracts in highly industrialized areas. Other major worries for British industry are the taxation position, wartime increases in cost of production through higher wage rates and a sharp boost in coal prices and uncertainty over the life of remaining war orders.

Uncertainty has been created, too, by the change of government, putting into office a Labor administration which makes public ownership a major policy. Nationalization of fuel and power, iron and steel and inland transport will bring 15 to 20 per cent of British industry under state control.

But there is general confidence among business men that Britain will in time reach prosperity again. Hundreds of new factories are being built by private companies and hundreds more government war factories have been leased by industry for peace time use.

SHIPPED WIFE OVER IN GLIDER

Lieut. Jean Goppert of the airborne troops greets his wife shortly after her arrival on airliner DC-4 at LaGuardia airport, New York. They were married in London on May 11, 1945, and shortly after he was ordered to France. Lieut. Goppert packed his wife in a box and shipped her over in a glider. For this impetuous gesture the paratrooper was fined $200. Goppert is on a 20-day leave from his Florida base. After spending Christmas in New York, his wife will go to the home of his parents in Edna, Texas.

I die with a joyful heart in my knowledge of the immeasurable deeds and achievements of our soldiers at the front, of our women at home, the achievements of our peasants and workers and of a contribution unique in history, of our youth that bears my name."

In his personal will, also dated April 29, Hitler told of plans for suicide after marrying his 35-year-old mistress Eva.

"She will go to her death with me at her own wish as my wife," the will said. "This will compensate us for what we have both lost through my work in the service of my people."

Wished to be Cremated

"My wife and I choose to die in order to escape the shame of overthrow or capitulation," the will added. "It is our wish for our bodies to be cremated immediately. . . . "

Hitler left his personal possessions "in so far as they are worth" to the Nazi party, and said that paintings he had collected should be placed in a gallery "in my home town of Linz on the Danube."

Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, was named executor. Bormann, Goebbels and Nicolaus Von Below witnessed the will.

The Goebbels appendix, also dated April 29, said the propaganada minister had rejected Hitler's command to leave Berlin and become chancellor of a new government.

"In the nightmare of treason which surrounds the Fuehrer in these most critical days of war, there must be some people to stay with him unconditionally until death," the appendix said.

Berlin fell three days later, and Red Army soldiers identified the charred bodies of Goebbels and his family.

New York Bids Mixed Goodbye to La Guardia

By R. J. ANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 31 (CP) — Undoubtedly he was the best mayor New York City ever had. Regret at his departure will be sincere, the farewells nostalgic.

Yet, now that it's definite, many a sigh of relief will go up from Gotham's millions when Fiorello H. La Guardia steps out of office Monday. Even for New Yorkers, who like color and punch in civic government, he was a little hard to take. And they've taken "Butch" and his idiosyncrasies for 12 years.

"The Hat" was honest. He governed the city well, brought it from the fringe of bankruptcy to solvency, changed its face, erected children's playgrounds, eradicated slums, built parks, tore down the hideous elevated railways, made many other civic improvements.

Only man in 276 years of New York history to be elected mayor three times, he stood on the sidelines in last month's election rooting for one of Mayor-elect William O'Dwyer's opponents and when his man lost, gracefully welcomed the victor.

New York will miss the pudgy, five-foot-two La Guardia, most colorful mayor since the tenure of debonaire Jimmy Walker in the roaring, golden 1920s. New York won't be allowed to forget him. He is taking a position in radio at a reputed $100,000 a year—$75,000 more than he received as mayor of the world's second largest city.

Mr. La Guardia always was copy for the newspapermen with whom in recent years he often was on the outs. This squat little man with the high-pitched, squeaky voice, a mop of unruly black hair and a penchant for large black hat was a newspaperman's delight. He was the "Little Flower," "The Hat," "Butch" — he was the man of many accomplishments, of a half-dozen languages and, perhaps not unconsciously, mangler of the King's English.

Advice to Winston.

Anecdotes were innumerable about this son of an Italian immigrant who seven times was elected to the House of Representatives where he once waved a 25c pork chop and a $3 steak to reemphasize the high cost of living in the United States. New York probably will best remember him as La Guardia the fireman, always on hand at fires, directing the firemen, barking orders and, on occasion, handling hose lines.

To the fore in La Guardiana was his advice to Winston Churchill on the Atlantic Charter: "Winston, if I may use the language of, say, Shakespeare or Browning or Shelley or Dante, Gabriel Rossetti or other British classicists, please don't louse it up."

He was self-appointed father confessor and guardian of New York's 7,500,000 citizens. In his last four years in office he never missed a Sunday broadcast — admonishing the citizenry, advising them on current problems, lambasting "chiselling tinhorns" and, during last summer's newspaper strike, fervently reading the Sunday comics.

He used no script, his extemporaneous oratory being filled with dangling sentences, tangled grammer and mispronounced words. He yelled, squeaked, whispered, scolded, hurled sarcasm. He told the people to buy fish when it was cheap, to wear their rubbers on a rainy day, urged housewives not to shake dust mops out of apartment windows. He lectured on good manners.

He threatened a known criminal by name: "we'll throw him in the clink, that's what"— citing case, name and address. To "tinhorns" he said: "Cut it out right now! That kind of monkey business don't go in New York. Not while I'm mayor. Get me?" He praised "good and patriotic" industries, unions and individuals.

Attacked for being a "Jew hater", he challenged his opponent to a debate in Yiddish, making three speeches in that tongue, acquired on the East Side when he entered civic politics. He also speaks Italian, German, French and Croatian, learned in Europe while with the consular service in the early 1900s.

Once Bomber Pilot.

Born in New York December 11, 1882, Mr. La Guardia spent several years in Europe after graduation from high school. Later he graduated in law, becoming deputy attorney-general of New York State. Elected to Congress, he voted for entrance of the United States into the First Great War and enlisted in the air force. A bomber pilot in Italy, he still likes to be called "major."

Following the war, he was reelected to Congress where he spent his time attacking the Ku Klux Klan, making beer on the sidewalks to demonstrate the futility of prohibition and needling his own party, the Republicans. In his stormy years in public office he has used 14 political parties.

In 1929 he made an unsuccessful campaign for mayor of New York bowing to the popular and dapper Jimmy Walker. He came back in 1933, gave Tammany Hall a beating as the Republican-Fusion candidate and took over the City Hall in a major political upset.

While in office he was president of the United States conference of mayors. As chairman of the United States section of the United States-Canada Joint Defence Board he was a familiar figure in Ottawa and Montreal. For a time during the United States' participation in the war he was director of the Office of Civilian Defence.

But New York now turns to William O'Dwyer, the former policeman.

CLAIMS SURPLUS STOCK

Ottawa, Dec. 31 — (CP) — A shortage of sugar in Canada was an "economic monstrosity" as long as surplus stocks exist in South America, Ross M. Brown, acting for what he descdibed as three South American sugar interests, said in a prepared statement here last night. The interests were not identified.

Banks, trust and loan companies rely on newspapers to keep in touch with the public; they spend more than twice as much on daily newspaper advertising as in any other medium.

NEWSPAPER OFFICE BURNS

Newcastle, N. B., Dec. 31—(CP) —The building containing the Union Advocate, a weekly newspaper, was destroyed by fire Saturday. Much of the plant's machinery also was lost and damage was estimated at $15,000. The newspaper was established in 1868.

'STILL CHRISTMAS SEASON'

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Fiorella H. La Guardia, whose 12 years as mayor of New York ends today, said yesterday on his farewell "talk to the people" over Municipal radio station WNYC that it was still the Christmas season and therefore he wouldn't say "a lot of things I wanted to say."

PHILLIPSTON ZION W.I.

The District President, Mrs. A. Mitchell gave a very instructive and interesting talk to the members, at the home of Mrs. Percy Ray. The Tweedsmuir village history was discussed and Mrs. Mitchell advised the convener of historical research to start one at once to be ready for W.I.'s fiftieth anniversary in 1947. She stressed the need for people to realize that the foundation of peace lies with themselves. Another thought was to make the Christmas spirit last through the year and make the day happy for others rather than a day for feasting.

The topic "Scatter gladness, joy and mirth, but forward still that more may be" was ably dealt with by Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson stressing the family circles that would be complete this year for the first time since the war was declared and the chance to cheer the lonely ones that will always be incomplete. After the singing of Christmas carols Mrs. Ralph Sills told the story of the Shepherd, who didn't go.

During the business period a letter was read from the Institute in Australia that has been exchanging with this Institute for some time. This exchange is very interesting.

Ten dollars were voted to the Christmas Cheer fund for British Children.

After a few remarks from the visitors the hostesses served delicious refreshments.

FASHION FLASHES

COLOR marks new snakeskin belt and glove sets. They are seen in such shades as Kelly green, bright scarlet, shocking pink and chartreuse.

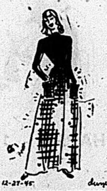
New Beauty is forecast for the crop of Spring hats. Worn posed at a three-quarter angle is a beret in white pique with red, red roses and a black lace veil, indicative of allure and fresh charm.

A good silk suit can be worn almost the whole year round. A good suit of satin, moire or faille is a fine investment since it is quietly dressy on its own, and can be really dressed up for big occasions. Burnished, copper-colored satin makes a handsome suit, with high, collarless closing and intricate seamed detail at the easy armholes. Skirt is slightly flared.

Slim Janes and not-so-slim Jills will be glad that the well-defined waist will be a feature of the new Spring coats. A very smart topper is finely checked in black, white, red and light blue woollen and is belted in black patent leather. A wide belt is drawn tight to cinch the waist. The slim midriff look is also helped by wide, round shoulders and deep armholes. The top part of the bodice is marked by a big-yoke treatment achieved with selvedge bands of the fabric.

It's nice that some pure silk blouses are beginning to appear again. Black silk crepe with superimposed lines of white, primary blue, chartreuse and pink—in a wide, geometrical design—should make an exciting suit companion.

Simple styles in fine fabrics always star with smart women for resort wear. Pure silk shantung in pale green makes a lovely afternoon or spectator sports dress. It is a two-piece model with elbow-length circular capelet in lieu of sleeves, and the deep peplum on the slightly longer skirt that marks most of the new fashions. Both capelet and skirt are scalloped.



By DOLORES BOLAND

It's about time to plan to be warm these long Winter nights, and in gay fashion. Whip up a skirt of checked tweed and a jersey blouse to match a color in the tweed. Sew sequins or beads, the color of blouse, all over skirt.

Believes Liquor Involved In Many Accidents

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario, said he believed 25 per cent of Ontario's traffic fatalities resulted from accidents involving liquor.

More Chic Than Fabric

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THAT fabric restriction order known as L85 has done this frock no harm. Made of a soft, lightweight wool, it uses less than the law allows, and gains chic as it saves fabric.

The sole elaboration is two embroidered discs of palliettes which match the wool's color, and there are lovely colors available. The belt, less conspicuous than is usual this season, is of self fabric.

The gold touch appears frequently in accessories such as the box bag of black satin appliqued all over with gold kidskin leaves. Then there are gloves of black suede with detachable, flared cuffs of gold kidskin. Gold kidskin belts studded with big stones add verve to the simplest frock.

The Marry Go Round

Sparks from the Yule Log

How we mortals love to be fooled! The little gods of whom we're fondest are those who spend their time deceiving us—Dame Fortune, Santa Claus and Cupid.

For eleven months of the year, we may laugh satirically at love and life and the world in general. But at this magic time, something gets into the dullest imagination; the bleakest heart and the weariest pulses quicken their tempo and stir it to a joyous rhythm. That's the well known "Christmas Spirit!"

The dangerous woman in a bachelor's life is not the "temptress" who is trying to lure him to the altar, but the innocent-looking matchmaker who is determined to marry him off, and is always inviting him to dinner to meet some "sweet girl." The average woman simply cannot bear to see an eligible bachelor lying around loose.

It is not always fair to judge a man by his Christmas gift. Because—for 364 days in the year—a man may understand a woman perfectly; but on Christmas Day, she suddenly becomes an anomaly, a mystery —a total stranger to him.

Next to the paralyzing problem of what to give a girl, the most perturbing and irritating thing about Christmas, to a man, is the terrifying thought of what she may give him. Between this Scylla and Charybdis, it is no wonder that so many good husbands, lovers and bachelors begin drowning their sorrows on Christmas Eve!

Many a popular man-about-town, glancing over his Yuletide offerings on Christmas morning, wonders why God gave women so much heart and so little common sense.

Some husbands observe Christmas—and others just close their eyes and cross their fingers until the excitement and danger have passed.

Christmas Day, like the first kiss, is sometimes just a little disappointing. The sweetest part of either is that ecstatic anticipatory time — just before.

Happy New Year!

"THIS IS GOING TO BE THE BEST NEW YEAR'S DAY OF MY LIFE," said a young veteran to us recently, "BECAUSE IT'S THE FIRST ONE AT HOME IN SIX YEARS. LAST NEW YEAR'S DAY I WAS IN A FOXHOLE IN ITALY........"

Last year .... and the year before .... and for four years before that, New Year's Day for thousands and thousands of young Canadian men and women was just another day in which to dream longingly of home; and for those at home.... another day in which to poignantly miss the loved ones who were far away.

How thankful all Canada is that NEW YEAR'S DAY, 1946, finds families re-united, and places at the holiday table which were vacant for so long, no longer vacant! Canadians celebrate with joyful hearts this happiest of New Years!

Yet, in her joy, this country does not forget those who gave their lives in the cause of righteousness.... THEIR NAME LIVETH FOREVERMORE." May the cause for which they died win Everlasting Peace.

GLAMOUR LAUNDRY

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

While modern home-makers have realized for some time the advantage of making the kitchen a gay and cheerful place in which to work, there's many a household still with a needlessly cheerless basement laundry.

Pictured above is one of this kind, bare and strictly utilitarian; a place in which work is no fun at all.

But just look below! Never recognize the old room, would you?

Yet it's exactly the same one, all done up in a brand-new dress and given new, convenient shelves, cupboards and places to put things, like the hamper at left, the camp stool to hold the laundry basket at right, and the tricky business under the ironing board to keep the ironing off the floor.

A colorful paint job on the walls and cupboard, and new asphalt tile on the floor, did the rest.

AFTER: Below, is the same room given a whole new personality with colorful painted walls, floor covered in asphalt tile in a harmonizing three-colored plaid design, curtains at the windows and many new cupboards.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's a Chap Who "Can't Understand" His Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Several weeks before I came into the Navy I met a most wonderful girl on a blind date. She was nineteen and I twenty. We had some very good times together which she seemed to enjoy as much as I.

While I was away I sent her many very nice gifts. She wrote at least once each week and I twice a week at least. About a month ago I was home for several weeks. I saw her often and we had lots of fun together.

One night we had a family dinner (my family) and I wanted her to come, but she wouldn't. She didn't have any particular reason for not wanting to go. This has me stumped. Several other times she had very poor reasons for not going out when I wanted her to. I now know that she went out quite a lot with other fellows. I like her to have a good time, but would like her to be a little more interested in me. I tried to get her to wear my ring, but she would not. She already had a soldier's class ring, although she did not get this until after I left.

Being a sailor, I have met many girls, but none I think as much of as this one back home. She is everything I could want in a wife, but sometimes she has me stumped. I have never been serious with her. Perhaps that is my trouble. We are both old enough to be thinking of getting married but we have never mentioned this to each other.

I like her very much and she likes me, I think, by the way she talks and acts, but I would like for her to like me more. Sometimes I can't understand her.

S. L. S.

Don't you think, S.L.S., that you have perhaps put your finger on the most likely trouble spot yourself, when you say you have "never been serious" with this girl? It could be that she feels as puzzled by your attitude as you say you are about hers. Since, by your own admission, you have never mentioned marriage, she may be wondering if all your letters, visits and gifts really mean business or just reflect a passing fancy on your part.

Her refusal to join in your family party under these circumstances seems to me to indicate that you've been fortunate enough to pick a girl with very good sense. When a man invites a girl to be one of an intimate family gathering, relatives are very likely to take it for granted that she will eventually become a member of the family and the man is taking that opportunity to introduce her. Why should your girl run the risk of giving a false impression and perhaps being put in an embarrassing position?

And why should she give up friendships with other men if you have never even tried to get her to be your "one and only?" For all she knows, you may be making just as many dates with other girls as you are with her.

If, as you say, this girl is just the kind of wife you want, my advice would be to tell her so at once and get it on the record. Don't waste any more time thinking about how you can't understand her. Maybe she can't understand you either.

IT'S ABOUT TIME to have these accessories to relieve that all-one-color look. A length of grosgrain ribbon to pin at neckline and a pair of matching gloves. These to be the color which does most for your eyes. Your largest pin anchors the ribbon.

TAXIMAN AND PASSENGER ROBBED

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP)—Taxi driver John McCleary and a passenger, John W. McKenzie of Vancouver, told police they were robbed of $12 and $7 respectively by three youths who entered the taxi downtown and ordered McCleary to drive to York township.

Just Ahead—A Year of Beauty

Jeanne Crain has made her New Year's beauty pledges.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT HAS been a bad year for the world. Let us be thankful that it has ended. And it is the proper time to take inventory of appearance. If old meanie 1945 has got you down, it is even more necessary than ever to make good looks resolutions, and to keep them.

One must make up for the ravages of anxiety and the toil of the past twelve months. So here goes, lady! Read each one and solemnly say "I will".

Be mindful of the importance of nutrition. Eat at regular hours of simple nourishing foods that will not disturb the digestive motors, or keep you from sleeping restfully at night. Good nutrition has an effect upon the hair, complexion and fingernails as well as the rest of the human mechanism.

Get out of doors every day of your life and, if possible, have a brisk walk of at least one mile to keep your lungs air washed and your figure young. If you must skip your fresh air exercise, do your calisthenics for fifteen minutes, like a good girl.

Don't take for granted that your glorious crown will remain as is; sometimes the years take a toll, bringing grey fuzzers, thinning the growth at the temples. Brush your hair every night of your life; shampoo it every fortnight.

Be not content to put the highlights on your finger nails, neglecting proper care of the pink shells. Anoint them frequently to keep them in good condition and to soften the surrounding flesh so hangnails will not form.

Don't forget to be kind to the little footies. Select shoes with care so you will not be cursed with corns, calloused spots or ingrowing nails. Endeavor to find a shoe salesman who will help you select the correct last.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 28—(AP)—Maybe Paris fashion designers have decreed longer skirts, but they're not going to get away with it, says photographer Bob Coburn.

Nylons are coming back and legs will be in their old shape again, moaned Coburn, director of cheesecake art for Columbia Pictures, and now the Paris modistes are trying to cover them up. He won't take the edict sitting down.

Nudged on by the publicity department, the photographer enlisted Rita Hayworth, Evelyn Keyes, Jinx Falkenburg and other eminently suitable subjects to cable French courtiers in protest.

"We haven't seen good-looking legs to advantage in years," wept Coburn, "and now these designers decide to put a bushel over the most interesting subject in photography."

Brazil's bid for the international movie market is being planned by Robert Chust, who has lined up financing—49 per cent United States money, 51 per cent Brazilian—for a motion picture studio in Rio De Janeiro. The first production will be "Rhapsody in Samba," a spectacle that will be recorded in Portuguese, dubbed in Spanish and titled in English.

At a time when awards are being tossed around, Peggy Ryan would like to throw a bouquet at swooning, clothes-ripping, bobby-soxed youths. She loves 'em.

"They're just fans," she said, "and where would many of us be without them?"

From the 'teen-age front, young Peg informs me the calisthenic type of jitterbug dancing is on the way out and the smooth type of "lindy" in on the upsurge.

Jack Benny may play the Japan United Services Organization circuit to entertain occupation troop next summer if he isn't doing a picture. . . George Montgomery, who weathered Alaskan weather in the services with nary a sniffle, came down with a cold. . . Cathy O'Donnell, who spent a year losing her Oklahoma accent, will need it back to play a midwestern in "Glory to Me". . . Edward Arnold takes a needed vacation to Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies near Calgary next year. . .

In the film palaces. . . "San Antonio" (Warner Brothers—112 Minutes) is again Errol Flynn at his bravest. This time he is battling the lawless forces in Texas. The picture is a rip-snorting western. As usual with horse operas, its best feature is its action.

Hollywood, Dec. 31 (AP)—This week movie town welcomed back the star who has been away to the wars the longest. David Niven returned to Hollywood after six years in his native Britain.

Niven's return was marked by a flurry of parties, principal of them being a luncheon which his boss, Samuel Goldwyn gave on a fir-lined, blue-lighted sound stage. When I met David there, he was more nervous than he ever could have been on a commando raid.

"I may even have to make a speech," he said.

He found out he did not have to make a speech and couldn't eat the corn-fed beef lunch because of worry. I suggested that he consult another Goldwyn employee, playwright Robert Sherwood, sitting nearby. He has written speeches for some important people—including the President of the United States.

But David made his own speech. He told about visiting a field in France where 27,000 boys were laid under white markers. He said those were 27,000 reasons for keeping his mouth shut when folks asked him to tell stories about the war.

He was ordered to bed a few hours after his speech. He has had the flu ever since his arrival.

The last six years hold many memories for him. He left Hollywood Oct. 1, 1939. Goldwyn says Niven faked a cablegram reading: "Return to your regiment immediately. Adjutant." He showed it to the producer and made his escape.

Niven arrived in England Oct. 10 and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the British infantry. He later switched to the commando and was also on Gen. Eisenhower's staff. He served from Normandy through France, Belgium and Holland to Germany.

The actor starts work on a loan-out to Hal Wallis in "The Perfect Marriage" with Loretta Young. Or he will if Wallis can have some clothes for him to wear by that time.

Mrs. Niven and the children will come here in six or seven weeks. David explained the delay: The children's nursemaid is still in the British army manning an anti-aircraft gun at Antwerp. That's what he said anyway.

An advertiser received more than 40,000 requests for a catalogue, each enclosing 10 cents, as a result of one advertisement in Canadian daily newspapers.

MURDER VICTIM

Three hold-up men shot and killed Meyer Tobias, above, when they entered his north Toronto dress shop, and escaped in a car with stolen markers. Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, terms it a "cold-blooded killing, one of the worst in a long time."

Christmas Gifts From St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E.

Christmas Cheer donated by St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. was as follows:

$100.00 to British Children's Clothing Fund; $100.00 to Sailor's and Minesweeper's Fund; $50.00 to Evening Telegram British Children's Christmas Treat Fund; $25. to Overseas Cigarette Fund; $25.00 to Navy League Sea Cadet Fund; $50.00 to I.O.D.E. Endowment Fund; Christmas monetary donations and boxes to the Chapter members boys still in the service.

Three large cartons containing 12 ditty bags, fruit cake, candy, mixed nuts, peanuts, chocolate drinks, sweaters, six, seaboot-stockings, tuckins and helmets and reading materials were sent to the Chapter's newly adopted ship "H.M.C.S. "Gleneagle."

To the Kingston Veterans' Hospital two Stewart-Warner radios were presented.

Mrs. E. J. Neate, president of the Chapter, has received from Medical Superintendent M. E. Gorman, M.B., of the Kingston Veterans' Hospital, a letter acknowledging the Chapter's letter and the radios. Dr. Gorman noted that "it must have been most difficult to get these fine radios and I can assure you that I greatly appreciate your kindness in donating them to the hospital. Nothing you could have sent would have given the boys more pleasure or helped more to make their stay in hospital less tedious and I know that they will be most grateful for them."

Dr. Gorman said he was appreciative of the Chapter's interest in the hospital and only wished that the members could see the preparations which had been made for the veterans who were unable to go home for Christmas. Kingston I.O.D.E. branch had erected Christmas trees in the sunrooms in each ward and gave a special dinner for Christmas Day.

Trig and Trim

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S NOTHING nicer for everyday wear than a smartly fashioned separate blouse and skirt, the twain linked by a dashing belt. It's an outfit that is trig and trim, yet not too tailored. An ideal blouse for this type of costume is this neat Glenwear model. It is of wash-and-dry-in-a-jiffy nylon and has a well-handled bow neckline and easy shoulders.

Presbyterian Church Seeks $2,000,000

Toronto, Dec. 31—The Presbyterian Church in Canada hopes to raise a Peace Thankoffering Fund of $2,000,000.00 in order that all branches of its work may be properly equipped, it was announced today by the Rev. Wilfred F. Butcher, secretary of The Presbyterian Advance for Christ, and Peace Thankoffering.

The Fund will be used to provide new churches and other buildings in Canada and overseas; a sum to aid in the reconstruction of European Protestant churches; forward steps in Missionary activity; strengthening of the theological colleges; increase in the capital of the Pension Fund; and other aid for aged ministers.

There are many signs that the Presbyterian Church is now prepared to advance in all its activity, and it is planned to relate the Peace Thankoffering Fund to the whole onward movement of the Church.

Mosienko Injury Blasts Chicago's N.H.L. Hopes To Head Canadiens for Lead

Fired Winning Goal Against Habitants but Hawks Are Beaten by Rangers

(By The Canadian Press)

Players pressed jubilantly around Bill Mosienko Saturday after the 160-pound right wing on hockey's hottest line fired the shot which felled Montreal Canadiens 5-4. Nothing could stop Chicago Black Hawks now.

Less than 24 hours later, Mosienko slumped to the ice in Madison Square Gardens with injured knee tendons suffered when blocked by defenceman Bill Moe of New York Rangers.

Thus did calamity strike at the height of a seven-game undefeated streak which brought Chicago's month-long objective — leadership of the National Hockey League — within easy grasp.

All they had to do was defeat the tailend Rangers, who hadn't won a game in a month. But Mosienko's injury, crippling the striking power moulded around Bill and the two Bentley Brothers, helped pave the way for a surprise 3-2 victory for New York.

Two goals by Grant Warwick and one by Tony Leswick, all in the first period, brought Rangers their fifth victory in 22 starts and prevented Hawks from closing the one-point margin which separated them from the leading Canadiens. With Mosienko gone, Doug and Max Bentley were held scoreless. Pete Horeck's first-period goal and Alex Kaleta's tally early in the third weren't enough for the Hawks.

Battle to Tie

In Sunday's only other N. H. L. game, Boston Bruins battled Red Wings to a 3-3 tie at Detroit after scoring twice within 37 seconds in the last period.

Don Gallinger and Milt Schmidt produced the tying tallies for Boston after Detroit had built up a 3-1 lead in the first two periods on two counters by Adam Brown and one by Ted Lindsay against Herb Cain's single for Bruins. The deadlock — third straight between these two teams — left them tied for third place three points behind Chicago.

In one of two Saturday games which opened the N.H.L.'c 10th weekend of competition, Bruins shaded Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3 as the Leafs suffered their third straight setback to sink further into fifth place, 3½ games behind Boston and Detroit. Alert netminding by Frank Brimsek, who didn't have a chance on the three shots that beat him, and a two-goal performance by veteran Bill Cowley, helped Boston maintain their seasonal undefeated record against Toronto.

Terry Reardon and Johnny Crawford also scored for Bruins. Nick Metz, Sweeney Schriner and Ted Kennedy were the Leaf marksmen.

Canadiens Outscored

In Montreal Saturday, Chicago outscored Canadiens by one goal in each of the first two periods, watched Montreal tie the count 4-4 with two goals midway thru the third period, and then went ahead for the final time at 17:40 when Mosienko's low shot from close range foiled Bill Durnan.

Maurice Richard with two goals and Buddy O'Connor and Dutch Hiller with one apiece led Canadiens. Centre Max Bentley, league-leading scorer, also had 2. Clint Smith, George Gee and Mosienko fashioned the other tallies for Chicago.

GALT RED WINGS WITHIN GAME OF LOOP LEADER

Defeat Marlboros 1-0, While Young Rangers Take Barrie Flyers

(By The Canadian Press)

While St. Michaels were playing an exhibition series in Winnipeg, Galt Red Wings crept to within one game of the league-leading Collegians in the O. H. A. junior "A" standing Saturday by taking a 1-0 decision from Marlboros at Toronto. It was not until the third period that the issue was settled and to Bill Curik went the credit of the game's only goal.

In the other half of the Toronto matinee bill, Toronto Young Rangers registered their second win of the season by blanking Barrie Flyers 2-0 for the visitors' ninth setback in 14 starts. Bus Gagnon rifled the disc into the enclosure in the second period for the first tally and George Drysdale counted No. 2 soon after the start of the third chapter.

Oshawa Generals went to St. Catharines for the first time this season Saturday night and a tempestuous struggle ensued with the Generals being sent home with the short end of a 5-2 score. The result found both teams tied for third place with seven wins and six losses.

It was not until the second stanza that Falcons went into a 2-1 lead via Tom Smelle and the homesters outscored the motorists 3-1 in the final session. Falcons' scorers were Dawdy, Bury, Peterson and Cameron, in addition to Smelle. Oshawa marksmen were Eric Pogue and Ross Low. The game was repeatedly held up by showers of litter on the ice from the crowd of more the 2,600.

Unbeaten Alabama Trojans in Rose Bowl Favored to Beat

With 13 bowl games scattered over the western and southern states, college football tomorrow is giving 1946 a spectacular start on what is expected to be a sport boom in the United States. Unbeaten Alabama will trot out the team favored to beat the Trojans in the Rose Bowl fixture for which a 90,000 crowd is assured. The only other unbeaten squad, the Oklahoma Aggies, will march into the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans to take on St. Mary's from the West Coast. A throng of 72,000 fans is expected for that contest.

Although overseas forces have dwindled appreciably in recent months, a variety of holiday grid features are being staged between service teams, notably an Atom bowl game, at Nagasaki, Japan.

Louis B. Mayer made a clean sweep of Saturday's inaugural at Santa Anita Park, the California breeders champion stakes, when Honeymoon, Moneybags and Charivari were one-two-three at the finish. The Mayer entry, which paid $2.80 to win, collected $29,165 in prize money.

The eighth annual blue-gray football game before 20,000 fans at Montgomery, Ala., Saturday resulted in a 26-0 whitewash for the northern team of college stars. The fourth period was played under the arc lights because of darkness.

The National Football league played to a record gross attendance of 1,918,631 patrons at the 68 pro grid games during the past season. Green Bay Packers led all teams with a gross attendance of 521,426 at their 14 fixtures at home and around the circuit.

With 124 winners to his credit, Stanley Lipiec, 30, has sewn up the title of champion trainer of the U. S. turf year. Ontario born, he saw race horses for the first time at Long Branch, not far from his father's farm, when he was 11 years of age. Second to Lipiec among the year's trainers is L. Sierra with 99 while Hirsch Jacobs, long a leading trainer ,is third with 95 winners.

With Wally Halder turning in four goals, the University of Toronto Senior hockeyists won their second straight game 8-2 Saturday night from Colorado College Tigers at Colorado Springs. Toronto copped the first exhibition contest 11-2 on the previous night.

24 Head Jerseys Burned in Fire

Aurora, Dec. 31 — (CP) — Twenty-four head of jersey cattle, a large barn, pig pen and the year's crops were destroyed last night in a fire of undetermined origin on the farm of Johnny Coulson, Toronto oarsman who won the diamond sculls several years ago. The fire brigade from this town 20 miles north of Toronto saved the farmhouse and other buildings.

The livestock and crops were property of Steven Risebrough, farm tenant.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

1946

Tonight, sharp at the stroke of twelve, a cherubic, youngster clad in diapers and bearing the figures "1946" will be ushered into the world and with a smiling "O.K. chum, I'll take over from here," nudge a tottering bewhiskered 1945 out of the picture of Time.

He might as a surcease from the blaring horns, gay crowds, dancing bobby-soxers and oldsters, and the general whoopee that is a traditional herald of his arrival, gaze into a magic crystal and dream of what his tenure of activity along the endless road of Time might bring.

He might, from a sports point of view, cock a quizzical eye, wink the other one, and looking deeply into the ball, visualize floodlights in the Exhibition Grounds. But let's take a look.

* * *

"See that smiling gent over in the corner" says his Cherubic Majesty. "That is Parks Commissioner Cleo Colling, who has intimated that the lights are a foregone conclusion."

* * *

The picture changes. He sees a well-lighted baseball field near the Stewart Warner Alemite Grounds with surging crowds cheering players. Across the road beneath the glare of other lights, supporters of softball are yelling as girl athletes cavort around their scene of activity.

* * *

The scene shifts to a fan-packed arena. Beneath the bright lights hockey stars flash over the ice. It is early in the winter. 1946 slyly closes an eye. "It might be, and should be, that those kids are playing on artificial ice. Wait and see," he smiles.

* * *

The picture fades. Then comes a bright sunny scene. Fleecy clouds wisp a blue sky. On the bay, boats large and small dash about in a scene of frenzied activity. Suddenly the crowd-packed shore bursts into roars of acclaim. Trim power-boats ripping over the water at 0 miles an hour turn into the stretch for world title honors.

* * *

It is a regatta scene. "That, too", states his 1946 Majesty, "is a strong possibility."

* * *

The crystal fades into a dull bluish glow then gradually brightens as the picture of a crowded grandstand and bleachers come into view. Roars of acclaim greet slow-moving baseball players who with creaks and groans, but plenty of enthusiasm re-enact their playing days of long ago.

"That", whispers 1946, is also a strong possibility. They are the old boys of the C.O. B.L. from all parts of the district who are here to re-live the grand old days, and pay tribute to a distinguished figure of the district."

* * *

Then in panoramic sequence there flits by, tennis courts, golf links, baseball and softball diamonds, bowling greens all thronged with sports-loving humanity who have turned to their favorite outdoor recreations in an unprecedented post-war boom.

* * *

"1946 will be one of the best sports years in Belleville since my great-great-great grandfather took over years ago," the New Year representative smiled. "But it will need strong men at the helm and proper organization. Major sports will flourish, but there might be a tendency to neglect the activities of the youth of your city along these lines. There are men good and true here who could lend a hand, but they appear to be lethargic. The youngsters of today are the stars of tomorrow, and that applies to citizenship as well. The best foundation for strong sturdy leaders of tomorrow is proper handling and training in their youth. And I know of no better foundation than competitive recreation under the supervision of men who have weathered the storm of life and come through with flying colors."

* * *

At this point the little fellow rose on sturdy legs, stretched and smiled, "I must go and say goodbye to 1945. He did a swell job. He brought us victory and peace of a kind. He brought thousands of boys and girls back home from overseas for Christmas. He has tried to re-arrange the poor old war-weary world which even now is hanging a bit battered, over the ropes. But I guess he didn't have the time."

* * *

"That will be my job. But I won't be able to do it alone. The peace the world wants is far from being won. It is not one man's job but that of every man and nation in this world. If man and nation co-operates, develops tolerance and an unbiased opinion of the other fellow's merits, abilities and possibilities, then who knows, I may go down in history as the best year of all time."

And with a flourish of white arms and legs he disappeared to take up a job fraught with not a little danger, one that will tax the efforts of all, if that "enduring peace" thus far a more or less hazy possibility, is to become one of pleasant reality.

* * *

Rarin' To Go.

Toots Holway's Juniors went through a heavy practice at the arena the other night and appear to be developing into a smart hockey machine. Upwards of thirty youngsters turned out and Toots and his assistants had a hard task in their final selection of the players who will represent the club in the forthcoming Junior O.H.A. group.

* * *

Between the pipes will be seen Dick Fitzgerald with Bill Holway and Doug. Green out there in front of him. The starting forward line will likely be Don Barrett, centre, Jack Wardhaugh and Al Meagher, while assisting will be George Reeves, Jerry Moher. Ron Lyall, Doug. Day, Murray Wardhaugh, Winch Adams, York, Soules and Stew Woods, "Moe" Rollins will be the alternate goalie.

That appears to be a sturdy junior team and should give a good account of themselves in the hockey wars. They start puck hostilities here on Wednesday night against the strong Campbellford squad.

* * *

Arbiters Conclave

Representatives of the northern squads in the Junior O.H.A. grouping here failed to turn up at the scheduled meeting of league referees on Friday eventide. Picton, Trenton and Belleville were here and didn't waste any time. They discussed several matters pertaining to rules, regs. etc., and it has been suggested that a Referee Association be formed. That, dear reader is one for the book.

However, it has strong possibilities and Hizzoner the Umps, can air his opinions with his brother of the whistle at intermittent conclaves of the body. A meeting has been scheduled for next Sunday afternoon at the Arena.

* * *

Splinters

Redmen Intermediates trek to Kingston Wednesday evening, to do Van Horne Series battle with the Kingston Locos. . . They meet the same team in the opening intermediate "A" game at Kingston on Friday. . . This game was originally scheduled for Saturday, but due to circumstances down east was changed to the night previous. . . Rumor has it that Clare Williamson, starry Redmen defence player will be seen in a Locas uniform in the near future. . . Same old story, no job available here so to faraway pastures, which, as far as employment is concerned, are much greener than hereabouts, goes a good hockey player. . .The Reds, 'tis said, have signed a smart Stirling puckist, one by the name of Bastedo who has had plenty of hockey experience. . . Incidentally, the Reds claim they have signed Al. Meagher and Harry Wardhaugh, but have lost Jerry Moher and Don Barrett to the juniors. . . Tsk,Tsk, lads, let's co-operate. . .Gordie Fyfe, starry forward of the Barrie Colts, who is going great guns with that team, played last year for the Hastings Norwood Combines, in the junior OHA group in this district.

A Happy New Year.

And so to all sports fans, and readers in general of this newspaper, with a special flash to Ken J. Colling, down Kingston way, may the forthcoming year be the brightest, happiest and best of all time. May it bring the joy, happiness and contentment a war-weary world so richly deserves. The staff joins us in wishing to all,

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR."

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(By ALAN RANDAL)
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP) — There may be a few challengers, but surely not many, to Harold St. C. Silver's claim that he stands alone as Canada's oldest active curler. The accent is on the active.

At 86, he's been "delivering stones" as the curlers say, for the last 59 years at Halifax Curling Club. In three hours at a recent spiel he delivered more than a ton and a quarter of stones which is a lot of stones though the chances are he was a trifle more spry back in 1910 . when he visited Scoland. with Scotland with a Canuck curling group and did the Old Land up in brown.

The Canadians at that time played three test matches against all-Scotland and won the Lord Retire? Not old Harold St. C. Silver — "not while I'm able to deliver stone."

Now, to get on with more curling . . . the official city handouts about this big curling frolic set for Saskatoon in March refer to it as the "Macdonald Brier." Will anybody bet a little something, an old broom or a worn-out stone, say, that at least up to now, "Macdonald's Brier" was considered correct?

Out Winnipeg way 87-year-old Ed Low renewed a 26-year-old curling feud Christmas Day with son Harry. They've been playing each Christmas since 1919 and though Ed won this year Harry claims an edge on the series.

Canadian sports generally in '46 should show large improvement over the first peacetime sports year after the First Great War. One reason is that Canadian athletes who came home in 1918-19 had, many of them, been through long years of miserable trench warfare that left a heavy mark on them. This time the "dirty fighting" covered a shorter period of time and 20 years' progress had brought forth a lot of newfangled things to cut down ailments.

The voice in the background? That's the regular "Snapshotter," Alan Harvey, muttering from behind his mustard plaster — "Happy New Year!"

KANSAS CITY STILL ON TOP IN U.S. LEAGUE

Scores Pair of Victories Over Omaha Knights During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors consolidated their lead in the United States Hockey League during the weekend with two victories over the third place Omaha Knights. The Omaha team was down 6-4 Saturday and 7-0 in a Sunday shutout.

The first league shutout of the season was marked up to the credit of Kansas' 21-year-old goalie, Doug Jackson. The team also established something of a record with its 11th straight victory.

Dallas Texans and Fort Worth Rangers split the honors on two weekend games, with the Texans winning a Sunday scramble 4-3 and the Rangers taking a Saturday game 5-3. Ross Kopak and Vernon Jones led the Rangers in their Sunday victory, each scoring two goals. Peewee Read's 3 goals for Dallas in the last 12 minutes of play were the high points of the Saturday game.

Fights on the rink and in the bleachers featured a St. Paul game in which the home team defeated Tulsa 7-6. Joe Shack of St. Paul and Red Kane of Tulsa tangled in the third period and the Saints' Bobby Dill and Morris Hamilton of Tulsa were at it hot and heavy seconds later. While the players were scoring up the ice, several fights broke out among spectators and police had to escort the participants out of the arena. The referee succeeded in stopping the players' wrangles without help from the authorities.

It was Tulsa's second defeat of the weekend. They had gone down under the Minneapolis Millers when the latter broke their eight-game losing streak Saturday to pound out a 7-4 victory. Fans gave their longest pplause, however, to Tulsa's Bud Lamarche in the nets who made some sensational saves as the Millers turned in their best hockey of the season.

$4,000 in Cash Taken From Office

Windsor, Dec. 31—(CP)—Loot totalling $4,000 in cash and cheques was taken last night when burglars entered the Red Robin shop on Quellette Avenue, and ransancked the office. An attempt to gain entry to the safe of the Moodery coal company was unsuccessful.

At the Red Robin shop, an iron gate and an inner door were signs that the burglar used a jimmy.

The money and cheques were in a desk drawer in the office and that drawer was forced open.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.)

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Manager Bill Daly claims he has one-third of the crop of white heavyweights in Freddie Schott, Lee Savold and Pat Comiskey. . . The Association of College Baseball Coaches, at its first "annual" meeting in St. Louis next month, will award honorary memberships to a group of old-timers, most of whom have retired from active coaching. . .Joe (Chattanooga) Engel took the simple, direct approach when he picked a name for his new hound dog. He loaded the poor animal with the appellation of "Wrinklepuss".

Hope Springs Eternal Dept.

Lynn Patrick, Rangy Ranger and son of Manager Lester of that cellar-dwelling N.H.L. Club, brushed off a nice long limb for himself in a recent interview and climbed way out on it.

"Honest—we actually played as well against Detroit Wednesday night as we did at any time during the year we led the league. I know how silly that may sound, when you consider we lost, 3-2. But if it hadn't been for Harry Lumley's great saves we would have won by five goals. That's how much we really outskated them."

Coach Frank Boucher contributed: "We're playing well enough to win. Why we're losing is something I just can't explain. . . but the goals are going to start coming our way—and the wins, too."

Ontario's ski trails mean fun for hundreds of friendly visitors from the States every year. We want them to enjoy themselves . . . so they'll keep on coming! Let's do all we can to make their visit a real pleasure!

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. These practical suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman:

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people all about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would really enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came to Canada.
4. Take the time to give any requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The Province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

CAPITALS SHOOT INTO LEAD OF WEST DIVISION

Thump Pittsburgh Hornets Twice Over Weekend; Buffalo Wins Twice

Indianapolis Capitals shot into the lead of the Western Division of the American Hockey League by thumping Pittsburgh Hornets 6-3 at Pittsburgh Saturday and further strengthened their hold on first place last night by edging out Hornets 3-2 in the return engagement at Indianapolis.

In the Saturday fixture the Hornets battled the Capitals to a 3-3 standstill until the last half of the final period when Jimmy Conacher, Gerry Brown and Steve Wochy made it a walkaway by shooting three goals past Goalie Baz Bastien. In the Sunday night win, Leslie Douglas broke up another closely-contested match by his late third period marker on passes from Wochy and Conacher.

Buffalo Bisons swept a weekend series with Cleveland Barons to stretch their winning streak to four games. John Moreck paced the Bison to a 5-3 victory at Cleveland, Saturday, with a brace of goals while Tommy Cooper performed the hat trick performance to help Buffalo turn back Barons 6-3 in the return game."

Gino Rozzini scored three goals as Hershey Bears pounded out a 5-1 victory over St. Louis Flyers Saturday before an approximate crowd of 7,000 home fans but Bears bowed to Providence Reds 5-4 after Oss Knipfel blasted a 40-foot drive past Goalie Lick Damore in the Hershey nets less than six minutes before the end of the game.

St. Louis Flyers, cellar-dwellers in the Western Division, proved superior to their Eastern Division counterpart and edged them out 3-2 before 3,800 spectators. Eddie Brown and Jean Paul Gladu fired the St. Louis counters while Joe Bell potted the sole New Haven tally.

ALLAN CUP SERIES REVIVED; FINALS FOR WEST CANADA

Memorial Cup Series for Hockey's Junior Title to be Played in Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—The Allan cup playoffs for Canada's senior hockey championship, suspended in 1944-45 because of war conditions, will be renewed this season with the final round in western Canada, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced today.

The announcement, sequel to the association's semi-annual meeting here this weekend, said the final round will be played in Vancouver if a British team qualified. Otherwise the final would be played in the "eligible" prairie city.

The memorial cup series for hockey's junior championship has been awarded to Toronto, starting April 13.

The announcement, containing a complicated Allan cup "draw," also said the C.A.H.A. has accepted a British Columbia offer to have the association's annual meeting in Vancouver May 2-4, that past president Frank Sargent and vice-president Al Pickard would supervise western senior and junior play-offs, and that president Hanson Dowell and vice-president Norman Dawe will similarly supervise eastern play-offs, all to be on a point basis.

The Allan cup draw for preliminary competition:

Western Canada

Series A—Manitoba V Thunder Bay all games on Thunder Bay ice.

Series B—Saskatchewan—Alberta winner V series A winner.

Series C—British Columbia winner V series B winner.

Series D—Allan cup finals.

Series B—Series A winner V Ottawa and district, best-of-three, opening March 26.

(If O.H.A. wins series A, first game of series B to be played in Ottawa and rest on O.H.A. ice. If Maritimes wins series A, first game played in Ottawa and rest on O.H.A. ice. In series C if O.H.A. wins series B first game to be on O.H.A ice and rest on home-and-home basis. If Maritimes enter series C all games to be on Quebec ice. Johnny McReedy To Enter School

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 31 — (CP) —Johnny McReedy, hockey star who came out of Winnipeg to make a name for himself in amateur and professional leagues, is going to hang up his skates and go to college. He wants to become a mining engineer.

The 26-year-old player who has been a member of championship teams in Eastern Canada, is in Sydney today with his wife and daughter, visiting relatives. He explained that after the holiday season, he will enter University of Toronto.

Johnny said he has been interested in the hard rock mining industry ever since he played with Kirkland Lake Blue Devils when they won the Allan Cup. He came to Sydney Millionaires when the Cape Breton League was at its peak, later joining Toronto Maple Leafs, playing with them the year they won the Stanley Cup in a bristling series against Detroit Red Wings.

The Winnipeg youngster left the Leafs to join the R.C.A.F. and continued his winning ways in the service.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 872
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

As far back as I can remember, there have been no-trump hounds. If they had a long minor suit, they would bid no-trump. If they had a yen to play the cards, they'd slip in a no-trump bid fast.

With an evenly distributed hand, many players step right into a no-trump contract. Even when they have a biddable suit to show. It is their contention that it belongs in a no-trump contract.

This seems logical enough to those who fail to consider all the angles. But when you dig deep into bidding politics, you begin to get another slant on the subject.

Partners with combined hands that should end in no-trump will wind up there. Starting with a suit bid should not prevent it. If no-trump is where they belong, correct bidding will get there.

Meantime, with a biddable suit, a player should first show the suit. It gives partner a cheaper chance to show what he has. It gives a pair time to learn if a suit contract is better for them.

In the course of events there came this deal:

NORTH
♥9 6 3
♠7 3
♦A 7
♣K J 10 9 6 3

WEST	EAST
♥K 8 4	♥Q 10 5 2
♠J 10 9 8 5	♠A 6 2
♦10 9 8 2	♦K 6 3
♣7	♣A 5 4

SOUTH
♥A J 7
♠K Q 4
♦Q J 5 4
♣Q 8 2

South might have opened with one no-trump and reached the same result. But the bids went like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D.	2 C
2 NT	3 C
3 NT	Pass

The two unassisted bids in clubs by north show the suit is a rebiddable one. Although south has support for it, his tricks are not enough for a raise. His two jacks prompts his stretch to a game in no-trump.

But what I want to show you is a cute defence. It is a clever play by defenders that defeated this contract after west led a heart.

No doubt you can see it without my help. But I'll be back.

Galt Wants Increase In Player Limit For Junior Games

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, following its semi-annual meeting here this weekend, announced today that delegates tabled for discussion at the C.A.H.A.'s next annual meeting a request from the Galt junior team of the Ontario Hockey Association for an increase in the player limit for junior games.

The request came from Al Murray, coach of Galt Red Wings who have won their last 11 games in junior A competition. Murray asked that teams be allowed to dress 14 players, exclusive of sub-goalie, instead of 12 as now allowed.

The C.A.H.A.'s annual meeting will be held in Vancouver in May.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 27

"Spotty wrote me such a happy, funny letter about her Easter trip to Honolulu," Janet said. "It waked me up, suddenly, I mean it really did. I thought how affectionate and forgiving Mr. Fordyce always was, and that perhaps we might have a home together down there someday, in the islands, with Spotty. That's the way it ought to be, and that's the way I hope it will be. He worships Spotty, and Bert—his mother—tells me that he's never quite forgotten his bad Janet. So," she finished sweetly, "you understand, don't you? That we do appreciate your goodness to Spotty, and that you've perhaps done something to reunite a family that was just a little bit off the track. And now, I'm sorry, but I must run and dress."

That was all. Jocelyn was out in the hall again, with nothing to do but find a butler to carry her bags downstairs, and to follow them to the waiting car. She moved through her good-byes to the staff automatically, with a queer numbed feeling inside her, and as she drove away she seemed to be driving into a great void, in which nothing mattered.

With a last gesture of luxury she asked the man to drive her all the way to Sausalito and descended at the gate of Maple Den shortly after one o'clock, weary and dispirited and fighting a maddening impulse to cry. But five minutes in the household of the Partridges were enough to dissipate any self-pity, and to plunge her at once into the roaring life of the household. It appeared that in the middle of Tot's wedding plans for June, Ned Whitehouse, who had for several years been Sissy's beau, had burst in upon the family only an hour earlier with the news that he had been promoted, that he was to be in charge of the Bakersfield office and that he wanted eighteen-year old Sissy.

This had thrown all six sisters into a very ecstacy of excitement, a mad readjustment of plans. Immediate efforts must now be transferred from Tots to Sissy, announcements must be sent to the papers; Sissy must notify the manager of the shoe store in which she worked that she was leaving at the end of the week.

Awakening babies were given their afternoon glasses of milk to an enthusiastic description of their aunt's plans. They were going to have an uncle Ned in three weeks, how did they like that? Sissy dashed back to the store to pay what attention she might to afternoon sales.

It was decided that Sissy herself should tell her father, and as he came in, genial and weary from office hours, half an hour before Sissy did, there was a terrible thirty-minute interval in which all the girls were bursting with the great news, whispering in corners, and exploding into apparently causeless laughter at the slightest word from him.

Eventually Sissy was back, and in his arms, and all the others were gathered about to laugh and cry and exclaim over the youngest bride.

The old doctor kept his arm tight about his fourth daughter; now and then with his free hand he wiped his eyes. Jocelyn, looking at him, benign and gentle and wise, with blooming girls swarming all about him, kissing him, curled at his knee, hanging over the back of his chair, contrasted the parenthood in this shabby house with the other example she had so recently had a chance to study, and wondered once again if just too little money were not, after all, a better condition than much too much.

Ned, of course, came back to dinner. They sat down fourteen to a wild meal of not enough of any one thing to go around, but of plentiful variety. Aunt Nell had expected only seven of them. Jocelyn sat next to her aunt, and gathered details of family news under cover of the wedding chatter.

Aunt Nell paid but a kindly, indifferent attention to such portions of the news from Hill Acres as Jocelyn chose to give her. Norma was going to Honolulu with her mother, was she? Never mind, Jocelyn, you'll get your chance another time, dear. Jocelyn could see that her aunt's mind was already working on the number of presentable napkins that the family could rally for the wedding, the probability that there must be overnight provision for Ned's folks, who lived in Portland.

"Sis," Jocelyn said, "why not have Miss Snyder tighten the upper part of your bridesmaids' skirts and sort of full out the lower part and put rick-rack braid all around? That's what I saw at the Freeman wedding last month, and it was awfully smart."

"Oh, Jocelyn, that sounds like an inspiration!"

"I gave Tots three hundred, and I'll give you three hundred," said the doctor, "but anyone who asks me for more wrings my old carcass dry!"

"Daddy, what an angel you are!"

"Ned wired his mother this afternoon, Mom."

"Sis, don't have it Thursday. Have it Saturday and then all the boys can come."

It was all so good, Jocelyn thought, and so good for her. This joyous, wholesome home talk; these pretty eager sisters outvying each other in suggestions and generosities in some way had the effect of soothing her spirits. These were her own people; this was the world in which to find realities and peace.

After dinner everyone but the brides-elect, Tots and Sissy, who were already planning the newspaper notices that should dignify them into Madeleine and Ellen, flew upstairs to find the bridesmaids' dresses of two years ago, and see what their possibilities were. The other attacked the dishes, put the dining room in order, and were ready with suggestions when the younger girls came downstairs wearing the discussed garments, prepared for criticism.

Jocelyn crouched on the floor at her cousin's knee.

"Look, Aunt Nell! A row of fine tucks, see, to lift it? And then chiffon, fluffing out—"

She had gotten so far when a voice from the open parlor doorway said mildly, "What goes on?"

The world turned upside down in a burst of stars. Her heart stood still, began to race deliriously. She scrambled to her feet, laughing, exquisite, her face April. Philip Fordyce came into the room.

" 'The Dancing Lesson,' by Degas," he said, on a rising inflection. They all laughed, and the girls, more like a high tide of roses than ever, clustered about him and explained that while they had been absorbed in the thrill of Tot's approaching wedding, quite suddenly little Sissy had taken the center of the stage. Eighteen days to her wedding!

Philip entered into the spirit of the occasion wholeheartedly. He took out a notebook and said that if Totos and Sissy had picked their silver patterns yet he would send them each a berry spoon.

"Everyone gets berry spoons," he told them seriously, "and everyone thinks they are perfectly useless. But believe me you can do wonders with a berry spoon. Mush, you know," elaborated Philip, "and milk toast."

They were all in such spirits anyway that they found this irresistibly amusing, and Jocelyn's sweet liquid laughter had in it a note that, for some reason she could not understand, brought tears to her aunt's eyes.

Just how she knew not — for everything had gone rosy and bewildering and vaporous and she was hardly conscious of what she said or did—Jocelyn found herself and Philip Fordyce wandering down the steep garden path to the side gate, and standing there in the dusk.

"I came to say I'm sorry it all broke like this," said Philip. "I telephoned home today to get in touch with you, and found you'd gone. I don't blame you. I know you're angry. But I wanted to say that I'm sorry."

"I'm not angry," said Jocelyn. "I came away because Miss Sanderson didn't leave me in any doubt that that was what I was expected to do. She was kind enough to say she'd say good-bye to you for me."

"Sandy," he said thoughtfully, and for a minute he did not speak again. "Jocelyn," he went on then, "what did they tell you?"

"Why, when you all went to the club last night—" she was beginning, when he interrupted her.

"Clubs," he said briefly.

"Didn't you go to the country club?" she stammered.

"With all of them?" he demanded in turn, equally amazed.

She said you did.

"Sandy did?"

"Well, she may not have said it in so many words. But she said —she certainly implied, that you and the countess were friends again—"

"Friends again!" he interposed on an impatient laugh, as she hesitated. "My dear girl, we've been divorced for fourteen years, and in all that time she hasn't made a friendly gesture toward me! There can't be any talk of a reconciliation between Janet and me; it would be absurd! If I was angry when she walked out on me my mother and a little girl of two, fifteen years ago, I've had cause to be a hundred times angrier since. She kidnapped Norma—oh, we kept it out of the papers, but that was what it amounted to. She left her in Paris with three nurses and five doctors, down with scarlet fever, and went with friends to Cairo.

"I didn't," he added in a more moderate tone, as Jocelyn merely waited in silence, her eyes starry in strengthening moonlight, "I didn't want even to be in the house with Janet overnight. They were all planning to go to the club, I went into town to my club and stayed there. You knew that?"

"No, I—I didn't know that." Suddenly she felt weak and small and helpless, and putting her elbows on the gate rail and covering her face with her hands she began to cry.

Instantly his arms were about her. His kisses on her mouth, his words close to her ear, her whole crying, laughing self leaning against him, safe in his big hold —never had she known such a heaven of ecstasy.

Presently Jocelyn could dry her eyes, and listen and laugh and cry, although she was still shy of words.

"And her coming doesn't make any difference?"

"Why should it? It makes this difference," Philip admitted on second thought, "that we don't go to Honolulu Saturday. She'll probably go and take Norma. And after they're gone we'll be married. You'll come down and visit my mother, and we'll have a little dinner for the few people who matter, and after that we'll be married."

"Oh, but your mother'll hate me!"

"You know my mother. The minute you're established there she'll take you entirely into her confidence, gossip about Janet, go to her card games and dinners, and go off to her place on the Rogue River in July. Nothing matters to my mother except that she's amused."

Pop was reeding his paper and ma was reeding hers, saying, William, do you realize the most critical crisis in the country today is the housing shortage? Do you realize how many homeless people haven't got a dry roof over their heads or a simple floor under their feet? she said.

How many? pop said, and ma said, Countless. And what's more, I've got a practical solution for the problem, she said.

Well, this sounds like good news, pop said. With a slogan like "A home for everybody and everybody at home" you could make yourself national dictater, he said, and ma said, It's simple enough, in fact that's what makes it so practical. Just let me ask you one question, William? When war was declared and so many peaceful men had to be taught to fight, what was the first thing the government did? she said.

It bilt camps that cost billions and were werth millions, pop said, and ma said, Exactly, the government spared no expense to take men out of their comfortable homes and put them in uncomfortable barricks. Well, now that they have no homes at all and not even barricks, why can't the government throw expense to the winds once more and work 24 hours night and day the same as war time until enough new houses are bilt for everybody? I mean nice little houses if possible, but at least houses? she said.

By gollies you're right, that's the most practical idea I've heard on the subject so far, pop said, and ma said, Do you mean it would werk?

My dear, there's not a chance in a million, pop said, and ma said, But William, why not?

It's too practical, pop said.

Being the end of the subject.

H.W. Charlesworth Dies Suddenly At Toronto Home

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—Hector Willoughby Charlesworth, sometimes described as the best known of Canadian journalists, died at 73 as he hoped he would —"in harness."

The tall, light-haired dean of Canadian music and drama critics, who started a diversified newspaper career at 18, attended the Toronto Symphony "Pops" concert Friday night as critic for the Globe and Mail, though he did not feel well.

He died early Sunday. The sudden passing recalled a comment he made on his 40th anniversary in newspaper work:—

"We keep going and then we finish quickly..."

An author of note, Mr. Charlesworth's sonnets are included in "Oxford Book of Canadian Verse." He wrote several books, including "Candid Chronicles" and wrote numerous magazine articles and editorials.

The career that was to make him one of Canada's most colorful newspaper personalities started in 1891 with Saturday Night, Toronto's social and cultural weekly. Successively after that he served with four of the seven Toronto dailies of his time, covering the top news events of his generation.

He was first chairman of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission, now the CBC, created the "Theatre of the Air" and introduced British programs. After four years he retired in 1936 when the Commission was reorganized.

Born in Hamilton

Born at Hamilton of English and Scottish stock, he was educated in Toronto, took private tuition in music, spent three years as accountant and married Katharine Ryan in 1897. Mrs. Charlesworth predeceased her husband in 1944.

It was while working as accountant that he began submitting material to Saturday Night under the pen name 'Touchstone.' The weekly published a notice requesting the anonymous writer to call at the office — and a job for young Charlesworth quickly followed.

A year later he became a reporter for the Toronto World, and in the years that followed went to the News, the Mail and Empire where he became city editor as well as music critic, and finally back to Saturday Night in 1910.

Colleagues often exclaimed at his "incredible memory for names, events, dates and phrases."

His only daughter, Mrs. L. A. Mackay lives in Vancouver and his only son, Lionel V., is an engineer in Bogota, Colombia. A brother, Lionel C., is in Victoria and a sister, Mrs. H. P. Thorneloe, lives in Toronto.

SAYS CONFERENCE

Because of the Big Four veto power on the commission, no basic Allied policy for Japan can be adopted without United States approval.

The secretary emphasized that no atomic energy secrets were disclosed at Moscow and that none would be until effective safeguards are set up.

The subject of atomic energy was placed last on the Moscow conference agenda at Russia's suggestion and discussions were confined to the British-American-Canadian proposal for a control commission set up under the United Nations.

"At no time did we discuss any technical or scientific matters, nor were we asked by the Soviet government about the new weapon," he said.

Australia and New Zealand, or perhaps a little before, I want to send some more out. I just want to keep them popping up here and there, and keep the Japs guessing.

The letter continued:

This, of course, is right down the State Department's alley. To my mind a lot of State Department's suggestions and recommendations are nothing less than childish (don't quote me) and I have practically said so in so many words in the presence of all concerned, but after 13 months they finally got it going."

"LITTLE GLASS EYE" GETS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Scene in the court at Kokohama, Japan, during arraignment of Tatsuo Tsuchiya, former Japanese war prison guard. Tsuchiya — known as "Little Glass Eye" — was convicted of slaying Pte. Robert Gordon Teas om Streator, Ill., and was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. Left to right are: Prosecution Attorney Major Louis Geffen; Prisoner Tsuchiya; an American Nesei interpreter and Major Harold H. Emmons, defence counsel.

An Anxious Moment

He stepped carefully, oh, so carefully, along the ice-sheathed pavement of Bridge Street East. In his hand he clutched a bottle of New Year's cheer.

He slid and slithered along lest the treacherous footing be a means to disaster. Head bowed, he looked neither to the right nor the left.

Then it happened.

A buxom lady, likewise afraid of the precarious footing, came bravely along the street in the opposite direction. There was a bump, a cry, and both slid to the pavement.

The lady's handbag flew through the air and landed in the road. The bottle of cheer described a beautiful parabola while a wide-eyed owner closed his eyes and waited for the crash.

The "Heather Dew" struck a small heap of ice, rolled a few inches and came to rest. The man assisted the lady to her feet. She was unhurt.

He approached his purchase. It lay in the pile of snow, its wrapper intact. Gingerly he picked it up, held it for a moment, shook it, and with a triumphant smile, continued his way along the slippery pavement. It was unbroken.

Prices Board Tightens Clothing Rules

Ottawa, Dec. 31 — (CP) — The Prices Board moved Saturday to tighten the control through which demobilized servicemen get their "civvy" suits on the tight clothing market.

The board announced a new order effective Dec. 31 which "provides a general tightening up" in the use of suit priority certificates issued to servicemen to assure them of at least one civilian suit.

Board officials said the new order consolidated previous orders and amendments of the board and was considered necessary to simplify regulations, regarding purchase of "civvies" by veterans.

The order also abolishes the need for interim suit priority certificates, which were issued to servicemen due to be discharged as they might have a suit on leaving the service. The board said the fact priority certificates now were being issued on commencement of a serviceman's 30-day disembarkation leave precludes further issuance of interim certificates.

Three Robbers Escape After Looting Springbrook Garage

Interrupted as they were making their getaway after looting the Reginald McKeown garage at Springbrook, of a cash register, three unknown men made good their escape early Monday morning with only a few cigarettes for their trouble.

As the men were leaving the garage with the cash register they were accosted by Emerson Reid, nearby barber, who called to them. Firing a revolver the men dropped the cash register and sped southward in an automobile.

According to Provincial Police from Belleville who investigated the breakin, it appeared that three men had driven up in a car, two of them getting out and entering the service station office by way of a rear window as the car drove away to cover the noise.

Later the car drove back as the two were emerging from the office with the cash register.

Disturbed by the noise of the two men leaving the garage, Mr. Reid glanced through his window but was unable to see because of the frosted pane. He pushed up the window and called to the men who dropped the cash register and disappeared in a car after firing one shot from a revolver.

Whether or not the shot was directed at him Mr. Reid could not tell police. He stated he did not know where the shot had gone as he had quickly got out of range.

Although it was still dark when the incident occurred, Mr. Reid was able to see the two men leaving the garage by the lumination of a street light at that point. He was unable, however, to see clearly enough to give police a good description of the men.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 31 — (CP)—The Toronto Stock market staged an active session today and the general price tone was strong. All four groups recorded index gains. The session ended at 12 noon to give brokers' staffs more time to pre-holiday preparations. Volume for the two-hour market was around 1,700,000 shares.

Liquor stocks featured the industrial section. Distillers Corporation Seagram advanced 11 points to 104, Hiram Walker gained 7 3/4 to 116 and Canadian Industrial Alcohol A firmed 2 points to 22. Alcohol B gained 1 3/4. Utilities, senior oils, papers and steels recorded a margin of gains over losses. Canadian Oil gained 7/8 and McColl 3/8. The Winnipeg Electric issues, Consolidated Bakeries, Eastern Steel, English Electric A, B.C. Pulp and Paper, Bruck Silk and Silknit all recorded substantial gains.

Some gold stocks changed hands in volume. Joliet-Quebec sold up to 1.38 and closed holding a small part of the gain. Hasaga firmed about 15 cents on good volume and other golds gaining 5 cents or more included Frobisher, Siscoe, Trans-Resources, Upper Canada, Buffadison, Conwest, Hedley-Mascot, Inspiration, Stadacona and Little Long Lac. Kirkland-Hudson lost 10, O'Brien 5, Preston 5 and Bear 7.

Sherritt-Gordon was again active on a small net gain, Mining Corporation added 10 cents, Labrador 5 and Lake Dufault 2. Nickel and Golden Manitou were other strong base metals.

WALL ST.

New York, Dec. 31 — (AP) — Liquors tried to rally today's New Year's Eve stock market but even the potables eventually slipped and scant stimulation was evident in other departments.

Pre-holiday apathy ruled from the start and declines of fractions to about two points were a shade in the majority near the 4th hour.

Mild profit cashing, year-end tax sales for "cash" and doubts regarding wide-scale labor strife served as the principal handicaps.

Falling tendencies were displayed by Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Kennecott, Schenley, National Distillers and Montgomery Ward. Resistant were American Distilling, Distillers Corp., Woolworth, American Telephone and American Waterworks.

Plus signs were numerous among Canadian issues at mid-day. Hiram Walker at that time was up two points while Distillers Seagrams gained 3/4. Lake Shore was off 1/8.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Dec. 31 —(CP)— Undertone to hogs was stronger and to sheep and lambs weaker and other classes were steady today on the livestock markets. Receipts: Cattle 751, calves 377, hogs 351, sheep 481.

In active trading, cattle were steady. There were no top steers. The best steers offered brought up to 13. Good quality offerings were 12-12.50. Medium 10-11 and common lights 8 up. Heifers 6.50-10.50, a few making 11. Good butcher cows 9.50-10 and common 6.50 up. Canners and cutters 5-6.25. Good bulls 9-10. Bologna bulls 6.50 up.

Veals ranged from 10 to a top of 15.50. Grassers and drinkers in mixed lots 6-9.50, mostly 9.50-9.60. Hogs were around 20 for Grade A. Sows 17-18.

There was a fair percentage of bucks on the lamb markets. Generally, offerings sold on a flat basis from 13-14, mostly 13-13.50. Sheep 3-8.

Question Males In Shaare Chessed Area in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Dec. 31 — (Reuters) —Palestine police today finecombed the Jewish quarter of Shaare Chessed here, removing to a detention camp for further questioning all males between the ages of 16 and 50.

Early reports of the search, which was covered by British troops who cordoned off the area, suggested that some equipment used by Palestine terrorists was found.

The search was covered by machine-gun units, while soldiers watched from rooftops and armored cars and Bren gun carriers patrolled the streets.

Mine detectors were also at work on waste land.

Jerusalem and Tel Aviv have been quiet, but official quarters were increasingly concerned about their inability to track down the terrorists responsible for Thursday's outbreak in which 10 persons were killed and 12 injured.

Jewish leaders have asked for lifting of the Jerusalem curfew, but so far the ban remains in force.

Nellie McClung Reviews Career in Latest Book

By JEAN THOMPSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Women with hobbies have brighter outlooks than those without them, Nellie L. McClung discovered in the early years of her married life in Manitou, Manitoba. Her own double hobby of consuming interest in public life and writing is vividly reflected in The Stream Runs Fast (Thomas Allen), the second volume of her autobiography.

Picking up the thread of her life where the first volume, Clearing the West, left off, Mrs. McClung carried her own story through almost 50 years, from 1896, the year she was married, to 1945 when she wrote the closing chapter of The Stream Runs Fast in her present home at Lantern Lane, near Victoria, B.C. She surveys her work as homemaker, crusader for women's right, Alberta legislator and author of eight books.

The book reflects the rugged life of the prairie and the women who make homes there. It carries with it the atmosphere of the land's "purple twilights, her phantom breezes, the smell of burning leaves, the ripe tints of autumn, the slanting snow . a land of sudden changes of weather and killing frosts."

There are human and heartening incidents — the reading of Dickens' Christmas Carol in Manitou Orange Hall, a draughty place heated by one stove in the middle of the room, the stirring of Mrs. McClung's ambition to be a public speaker after making an address of welcome to a W.C.T.U. convention and the successful petition to the privy council by five Canadian women headed by Judge Emily Murphy to have women declared persons.

No woman who reads The Stream Runs Fast can fail to be stirred by the sincerity and energy with which Nellie McClung approached every adventure and opportunity which her crowded life offered. Rich in experiences of Western Canadian life, this straightforward, modest book traces not only the years but also the growth of a philosophy of life based upon concern for others and the ideal of a better world.

Most of all, the book is witness to the author's conviction that "Canada is destined to be one of the great nations of the world and Canadian women must be ready for citizenship. No nation ever rises higher than its women."

FORMER HERO TO DIE

Paris, Dec. 31 (Reuters)—Jean Giot, 24, hero of Gen. Jacques Phillilpe Leclerc's Chad (Africa) force which ended its campaign in Alsace in eastern France, was sentenced to death on Friday by a Paris court. after one of the strangest purge trials on record.

Charges against him concerned the arrest and torture of 60 French patriots, some of whom appeared in court to give evidence.

The prosecution said that in 1942 Giot joined a special brigade known for its cruelty in hunting down and torturing French patriots. In 1944 he enlisted in Gen. Leclerc's force and distinguished himself in fighting the Germans. Later in the fight for Strasbourg he lost both legs.

In a letter addressed to the court, Gen. Leclerc—who now commands French forces in the Far East—wrote: "Giot's heroic conduct has fully atoned for whatever accusations may be brought against him."

A Thank-You Letter to our Suppliers

Dear Friends:

Nineteen Forty-five, with its triumphs and its troubles, is coming to a close.

Nineteen Forty-six, with its hopes and its promises, is just ahead.

It seemed to us that, as business resumes a more normal aspect, this would be a particularly happy time for us to make some public expression of appreciation to our suppliers for their splendid co-operation in the past difficult years.

You had many problems: Most of you tried to maintain some civilian production along with the production of war necessities all of you have been faced with stringent shortages in materials and labour, while the perplexities and embarrassments of a fair distribution of limited supplies was an added concern. We think you did an outstanding job.

On behalf of our customers, our buyers and our entire Canada-wide organization, we wish you a good New Year with the hope that the same spirit of helpfulness will mark our relationship in the days ahead.

Sincerely,

President
